The man or woman who has occasion to walk on the west side of Water street, from Brock, some distance north, do not stop to pray for harps and halos for the men responsible for the pavement there. Market Prices Take a Raise.

Enquiries made by The Times yesterday, at the local market weigh scales office, brought out the information that four hundred (400) chickens of this county had been weighed there, preparatory to shipment of said poultry to Toronto. If four hundred chickens a day, are sent from Peterborough to Toronto or Montreal, is it any wonder that the average local citizen, as he lifts his fork to mouth, during such operation says to himself, "there's five or six cents more gone!" The market officials when asked the price of pork, said "$7.00 a hundred, a raise of 25 cents since last week." If prices continue to soar like this, those "silver lined" or "heavy, gloomy clouds" will intervene between our citizens and the desires of their natural appetites.

Former Local Girl Honored.

Mrs. (Dr.) Prust, nee Miss Nina Belleghem, of this city, was presented with a handsome tea service and spoons at the meeting of the Grenfell Agricultural Society on Thursday evening. The presentation was made on behalf of the society by His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor, who referred to her valuable services as organist and musical director of the various social functions held during the past four years by the society, and also to the high esteem in which she is held by the community. Mrs. Prust leaves shortly for Edmonton.

Peterborough, in all its history, has never had a subject of either national or international talk, that has excited her thinking people, more than the present coal strike.

A well known newspaper, in yesterday's issue, stated in speaking of a certain Sunday school, noted that a prominent member thereof had been present fifty three Sundays during the year. Now, we have had a long winter, but!

There is a common saying that "it is only after his death that people know public opinion concerning anyone." Yesterday's funeral, and current remarks everywhere heard are sufficient proof of the high esteem in which Dr. Boucher was held in the city.

All the preparations for the grand oratorio choral recital in St. John's church by the choir to-night, at 8 p.m., are now complete. The final rehearsal has been held. Mr. R. J. Devey expresses satisfaction at the quality of the tone and excellent work put in by the choir.

How would a few local citizens, who daily walk the streets of Peterborough and who "toil not neither do they spin," like to be dealt with, [illegible] Chicago man on March 11th. The sentence was because "he was doing nothing," but he must spend six months in the "Bridewell," the windy city's prison.

Proven Oil Lands
Consisting of 240 Acres, King's County,
Coalinga, California, U.S.A.

The wondrful development of the oil industry in California during the last few years is one of the marvels of the age. From a product of about two million barrels in 1899 it has grown to over sixty million barrels in 1911. The oil resources of the state seem to be no less vast than the mineral fields, and, like the latter, they still await their full development. So abundant is the supply that it is reckoned by acres rather than by wells.

Oil is superseding coal for fuel throughout the state. Railroads, factories, gas plants, power plants, sugar refineries, steamships and other industries, depend on oil for fuel entirely. Rapid as has been the increase in production, the consumption has kept pace with it. The California oil industry, only a few years old, has made more money and paid greater profits to the investor on the capital employed than any one branch of business, or any one in-dustry, in the history of the state, for the same length of time. Hundreds of men have been quickly raised from humble means to affluence. Thousands of investors are drawing handsome incomes from their holdings in California Oil Companies. The increase in the value of land has brought fortunes to hundreds more.

The Dominion Oil Company's property consists of patented and proven OIL-BEARING LAND, situated in King's County, California, east of the choppings. Their well is drilled to a depth of 2,180 feet and they have already struck oil which is high gravity, 33 per cent., and a "gusher" is confidently expected on from 400 to 600 feet additional drilling.

The Canadian Coaling Company, which adjoins the DOMINION OIL COMPANY'S property on the north, have their well down about 3000 feet, at which depth the oil came in, and is now producing 7500 barrels per day, which means an income of $8250.00 per day, and their stock is selling at $20.00 per share. This wellnly a short distance from the one now being drilled by the DOMINION OIL COMPANY. Mr. G. W. Warner, who has charge of the DOMINION OIL COMPANY'S development work, and who is without doubt one of the best authorities on oil, predicts that with from 400 to 600 feet further drilling, the DOMINION OIL COMPANY will strike the same flow, and he believes that the Company will get an enormous flow of the light oil, for which there is a ready market at from $1.10 per barrel up.

Producing oil companies' stock listed on California Exchange to March 31, 1910, paid $29,242,803.66 in dividends, and during March, $730,911.26. These companies are capitalized at $99,595.00, with $78,184,548.00 issued, and are actually paying now 1 per cent. per month on issued stock, or 12 per cent. net, to stockholders per year. The total shares sold on Los Angeles Stock Exchange for March was 2,553,923, valued at $1,708,112.35. That oil is a stable business and a sure income producer is demonstrated by the above figures beyond a doubt. The Imperial oil Company has paid $2,000,000.00 or $20.00 per share. Can you do better? The contr of the Union, the largest oil company in California, sold ten years ago for a trifling sum in comparison to its present value. In March it paid its 164th dividend of 50 cents per share, or $124,813.00, or total dividends to date of $6,308,355.15, and its assets are conservatively estimated in excess of $100,000,000.00. Is oil a safe business in California? If you are sure that the company whose stock you intend purchasing is honestly being developed, yes. Therefore you must be careful to see that the officers of the company are of the right calibre.

The Directors of the DOMINION OIL COMPANY, who are all well-known and wealthy business men, have developed the property up to the present time entirely at their own expense. They have encountered oil at the 2200-foot level, which is on its gravity, andd for which they are receiving $1.10 per barrel, but they are drilling right through these sands, for they want to reach the same sands that the Canadian Coalinga, whose property immediately adjoins them on the north, are in. At about 3000 feet they have struck a splendid flow of oil, and they now have a well producing 7500 barrels per day. Surrounded as the DOMINION OIL COMPANY'S property is by big producers, it is an absolutely foregone conclusion that when they have drilled to the same depth as their neighbors, they will have a well equally as good or better.

It is also the intention of the Directors to sink other wells as rapidly as possible; but it is only natural that they want to complete their first well, in order that the profits that will be derived from the sale of the oil will assist in carrying on the development work in connection with the sinking of the other wells.

We have looked into this matter carefully and feel we can conscientiously advise the purchase of [illegible] block of stock as you feel that you can afford, for without doubt, an investment in the DOMINION OIL COMPANY will certainly [illegible] to yourself.

The stock is now selling very rapidly, and as this is an investment of an exceptionally meritorious nature, you cannot afford not to investigate. WRITE US AT ONCE FOR PROSPECTUS and full particulars of the DOMINION OIL COMPANY, which will be mailed to you without any obligation or expense on your part.

SATISFIED POLICY-HOLDER

(Copy)

Toronto, March 1st, 1912.

W. H. HILL, ESQ.,
Manager,
Sun Life Assurance Co.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I wish to thank the Sun Life Assurance Company, through you, for the prompt and very satisfactory settlement of my 15 year Endowment Policy, No. 64345, which matured and was paid me to-day.

I have also a 15 year Endowment maturing to-day in another leading Company.

The contrast, in the results, in favor of your Company is so marked that I want you to know it, but I am at a loss to know how such a difference could honestly occur. When I tell you that the profits in your Company are three and one-third times the profits in the other Company referred to, and this too notwithstanding I paid the other Company $1.15 per year more per $1000 than I paid you, you will realise my inability to comprehend the cause.

This is surely a tribute to the management of the Sun Life, and I am so well pleased I have applied for further insurance with you.

Incidentally, I would like to say a word for your loan privilege. As you are aware, I borrowed some money on my policy, a little over a year ago, which enabled me to obtain a substantial interest in a town site in the Northwest, and you will be pleased to learn that it has already yielded substantial gain and gives promise to pay hundreds per cent., so that it is impossible to fully realise the value of that Policy to me.

I thought as an old Peterborough boy you would be pleased to know I am delighted with the result.

Yours truly,
(Signed) ROBERT E. DOLAN.

A Case of "Have-to"

What Thinkimg Takes Out of Brains must be Put Back by Food

Every one must rebuild, each day a little, in order to keep the body healthy. The daily energy of brain, nerves and muscles destroys some of the cells and these must of course be rebuilt each day.

Now suppose you observe some trouble with the body and that you are slowly going from bad to worse. Wouldn't you accept the evidence as a hint from Mother Nature that either you are doing some hurtful thing, or more likely, that you are not selecting the food which contains the elements Nature requires for the daily rebuilding.

For instance, suppose you have an increasing tendency towards nervousness or perchance "Brain-fag" and Nervous Prostration. Stop the habit or food which may be the cause and use food which you know contains the things required.

Analysis shows the soft, gray filling of Brain and Nerve centres to consist of Albumin, Water and Phosphate of Potash. Now, unless your food contains these elements, you cannot rebuild and make good the daily destruction of this gray substance, a little being broken down each day by brain work and nervous tension.

There is a safe and sure food which can be relied upon and which does contain the required elements for rebuilding.

A trial will prove its worth to the user of

THE GERMAN EMPEROR CANCELS HIS VISITS TO ROME AND VIENNA, THEN CHANGES HIS MIND

EMPEROR WILLIAM CONFERS WITH ENGLISH CHANCELLOR

Authorities in Berlin, Germany Regard Churchills Speech in Naval Construction With Disfavor

German Press Says Practically That Great Britain Must Decide if Increased Fleet is Necessary

Unionist Papers With One Exception Hail Churchills Syeech in House of Commons With Applause

Cologne, Germany, Mar. 19.—In replying to the speech made by Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in the British House of Commons, The Cologne Gazette adopts an unusually sharp tone. It says in substance that Great Britain must decide from the standpoint of her own interests what increase of her fleet is necessary, but that Germany must do the same thing. It continues.

"Germany will hardly ever have a navy equal to that of Great Britain, but if Germany's navy is to be destroyed the victory must cost the enemy so heavily that England will hardly have any resources left to defend her great international interests."

Berlin, Mar. 19.—Misgivings aroused by the announcement of a change in the Emperor's plans, by which he decided to remain at home, instead of visiting the Emperor of Austria and the King of Italy, were quickly allayed this afternoon by another notification issued by the office of the court marshall, which now states that the old arrangements for the Emperor's departure on Friday will now be carried out.

The Emperor after visiting Admiral Von Tirpitz, with the ostensible object of offering him congratulations on his birthday anniversary, which occurs to-day, conferred with Dr. Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial Chancellor, for three quarters of an hour.

The German Empress leaves for Bad Nauheim on April 9th, to undergo an eight-weeks' cure.

SPEECH WAS UNOPPORTUNE.

Public opinion of the speech of Winston Churchill has not yet crystallized, but his references to Germany are regarded in many quarters as highly inopportune in view of the attempts being made to reach an understanding between the two countries. The negotiations which followed on the trip to Berlin of Viscount Haldane, British Secretary of State for War, are being continued, but any big hopes of their success which may have been entertained are gradually failing. The negotiators would now be satisfied in all probability if they could achieve no more than a simple removal of the sources of misunderstanding which have hitherto existed.

CHURCHILL IN NEW LIGHT.

London, Mar. 19.—The Unionist papers, with the exception of the Standard, welcome First Lord of the Admiralty Churchill's speech in the House of Commons yesterday, in bringing in the navy estimates, in which he declared that the battleship programme of this country depended absolutely on that of Germany.

The Morning Post says: "There has been no such exposition of Great Britain's naval policy for many years. The whole speech is a frank, sincere and vigorous attempt to argue with Germany as to the wisdom of carrying on naval competition with England."

The Daily Telegraph says: "Mr. Churchill presented himself in a fresh light, as an administrator of the country's first line of defence, who will permit no party call or threat to deflect him from what he regards as his duty to the nation and to the Empire. He stood forth yesterday as essentially an Englishmpn of courage and resource, but an Englishman with a vivid imagination which enables him to visualize the future and to frame his policy to meet coming developments."

BYERSVILLE POSTMASTERSHIP

It is well known that Mr. W. J. Byers, former Postmaster at Byersville, a southern suburb of the city, was recently dismissed the grounds for his discharge being active partisanship. It is also an open secret that Mr. Byers demanded an investigation, as allowed by law. Whilst the result of this investigation has not, as yet, been published, The Times, yesterday, ascertained, on undeniable authority, that the dismissal was confirmed. At the investigation, Mr. Byer's own witnesses gave very damaging evidence against him. The former postmaster, when called upon for such purpose, refused to go into the witness box on his own behalf.

HEAVY SEIZURE OF VALUABLE JEWELS

CROOKSTON, Minn., Feb. 22. Lying in ahe First National Bank vault at St. Vincent, placed there by the state customs collector last Wednesday, are $5,200 worth of diamonds and other jewels which were shipped by express by Albert Boyce to Mrs. Lena Sneed at Amarillo, Texas. The jewels are held because evidence that they were purchased in the States was not quite complete. If the necessary papers are not received within a few days the gems will be sent to St. Paul for safekeeping.

THE POPULATION IS LESSENING

France's Birthrate Remains Practically Stationery.

Paris, March 20. THE patriotic Frenchman got very little satisfaction out of the census returns which have just been published. They show the population of the country to be practically stationary. As a matter of fact, the total increase in population for the five years since the previous census was taken was only [illegible] or less than one per cent.

Not only is the increase entirely in the urban population, but as a matter of fact the increase in the cities has been considerably gregter than the entire addition to the population.

In 64 out of 87 departments of France the population has decreased. The influx from rural to urban districts is strikingly shown in Ille et Vilaine, where the total population of the department has decreased by 3707 inhabitants, but the town of Rennes has 3732 more inhabitants than five years ago.

The population of the Seine department, which is wholly urban, has increased by 305,424. There are 2,888,110 inhabitants in Paris, an increase of 124,717.

PUBLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions of its correspondents

IS THE CHIEF OF POLICE DOING HIS DUTY?

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I cannot but commend the promptitude with which our excellent Chief of Police in bringing to justice the hotelkeepers and bartenders who make a practice of serving Indians and minors with liquor. But while he is a model in this respect, I cannot compliment him on meting out even handed justice to others who violate the laws of the land. On Wednesday night last four men were the worse of liquor and actually filched a cab standing in front of a local restaurant, and only for the promptness of Officers Kidd and Brown in seizing the horses a more serious charge might be laid at their door. I understand the matter was reported to the Chief, but we have heard nothing more about it. Have officials of the late government any more privileges on the streets than minors or Indians.

PREMIER ASQUITH INTRODUCES MINIMUM WAGE SCALE BILL

London, Mar. 19. Premier Asquith to-day introduced in the House of Commons the Coal Mines Bill, whose intention it is to establish a fixed minimum wage for underground workers.

The Premier explained that the measure was only a temporary one, whose specific purpose was to settle the present difficulty in the coal trade in Great Britain. The enactment will, therefore, be a relief for only three years unless the coal industry wishes to prolong it.

A reasonable minimum wage for the miners with safeguards to protect the owners against slackness and deficiency of output will be settled by district boards. The minimum rate of wages will be retroactive, the men being paid from the date of their return to work at the rate subsequgntly fixed by the district boards.

OUR BI-LINGUAL SCHOOLS

The more the report of Dr. Merchant in regard to bi-lingual schools is looked into and considered the more indignant the English speaking people of Ontario, particulerly Protestants, become. Dr. Merchant found that the scriptures were not read at the opening and closing exercises of any of the public schools, but some of the public schools used Roman Catholic forms of prayer in the opning and closing exercises, and the Roman Catholic catechism is taught during school hours in 38 schools.

The question naturally arises, "Who is responsible for this?" The inspectors must have known the law, and they ought to have known that it was being broken. What will be done with them? What will be done with the schools? There are two things upon which we have a right to insist (1) that the English language be taught in all these schools by compe.ent teachers, and (2) that the Roman Catholic religion be not taught in any public school.

There is an organized and determined effort to extend the area in which the French language prevails, and our French-Canadian fellow-citizens have been misled by some dreamers into thinking that Canada shall ultimately become French. But such dreams can only do harm to our nation. We belong to the British empire, and, with the exception of Quebec, all our Canadian provinces are English-speaking, and must so remain. For any section of Ontario to insist that it has a right to perpetuate any other than English as the official language is to begin a process of disintegration which would only be disastrous, and which the provincial government cannot afford to countenance.

Let the Government settle it once for all, that every child in our public and seperate schools must be taught the English language in some adequate way. And let them settle it also that no public school shall be used to propagate the Roman Cathlic faith.

ALMONTE PHYSICIAN LOSES HIS LIFE IN A TERRIBLE BLIZZARD

Lachute, Que., Mar 19.—Dr. J. B. Menzies, of this town, lost his life during a blizzard under peculiarly sad circumstances. About four p.m. he was called to visit a patient at Harmington, 25 miles distant. After driving 15 miles his horse became utterly exhausted, and he and his man took refuge in a farm house. After a brief rest they determined to push forward on foot, but after covering two miles Dr. Menzies collapsed. His man wrapped his overcoat around him and hurried back for help, but on returning found him dead. Over-exhaustion had brought on an attack of heart failure.

Dr. Menzies had practised in this district for twenty-five years. He was a graduate of McGill. His widow, one son and one daughter survive. The funeral will take place at Almonte, his home town.

AN UNMANLY COURSE

Liberals as well as Conservatives cannot but recognize the remarkable attitude of the Liberal leader at Ottawa on the Manitoba Separate School question. He lacked the courage to declare himself until forced to do so by an extreme Nationalist member. Instead, he did his best to fan the flames of creed and racial strife. As the News puts it, the Liberal press altogether ignores his reactionary course in regard to Alberta and Saskatchewan. It entirely overlooks his backsliding and his subserviency to clerical influence in that connection. It fails to admit that the Manitoba boundary settlement, so happily effected by the Borden Ministry, might have been carried through years ago had Sir Wilfrid Laurier dared to divide Keewatin without imposing Separate Schools on Manitoba as he had imposed them on the two younger sister Provinces.

AMERICAN RAILWAYS HOLD COAL CONSIGNED TO TORONTO

Toronto, Mar. 19. It seems that the American railroads are really responsible for the coal blockade in various parts of Ontario, by stalling consignments of coal on sidings ready for seizure in the event of a strike. The special raid made by the G.T.R. on Sunday, when about 1,500 cars of coal destined for Ontario points were moved out of Black Rock and Fort Erie by a small army of engines, cleared the congestion as far as that railroad was concerned. Every available car was moved and twenty-seven engines stood yesterday waiting for more cars to be brought up for delivery by the American roads. Large though the delivery to Toronto was, it did not satisfy the local dealers. Only about one third of the shipments consisted of the much needed soft coal.

AT MERCY OF U.S. RAILROADS.

The Grand Trunk has cleared itself from blame and the C.P.R. is handling coal as fast as it can get it from the Michigan Central at Hamilton. So attention has been turned to service of the American roads, and the conviction is growing that they are purposely holding back the coal for their own use in case of a strike. And it would appear that if a strike occur, the coal dealers and consumers of Ontario would be at the mercy of the American railroads.

TORONTO LINEMAN ELECTROCUTED BY VOLTAGE FROM LIVE WIRES

Toronto, Mar. 19.—Otto Snider, 45 years of age, of 1 Berkeley Apartments, a lineman in the employ of the Inter-Urban Electric Company, was instantly electrocuted this morning while stringing wires on the Weston road near the Russell Motor Car Company's factory, West Toronto.

Snider was standing at the foot of a pole holding a wire, which in some way came in contact with another, charged with 2,200 volts.

He dropped to the ground immediately, and when his mate, who was on the pole, got down to his assistance, he was quite dead.

AN INQUEST CALLED.

Dr. Clendennan was summoned and pronounced life extinct.

Snider, who was a married man, had been formerly employed with the Hydro-Electric Commission, and only left their employ a week ago.

Dr. Clendennan will open an inquiry at Speirs's undertaking rooms to night.

THE GREAT WAR LORD GIVES EUROPE ANOTHER BAD SCARE

Berlin, Mar. 19.—Emperor William who most unexpectedly announced to-day the postponement of his departure for Vienna, Venice and Corfu, which was scheduled for March 22nd, has again changed his mind.

The reason officially assigned for the postponement was "Difficulties in the sphere of internal politics." This explanation was so indefinite that it might have referred either to the coal strike or, as was more probable, to the conflict now going on in connection with the provision of finances to cover the increases in the army and navy recently decided upon, and which caused the resignation of Adolf Wermuth, formerly Secretary of the Imperial Treasury.

There is a strong disposition here, however, to connect the Emperor's action with the speech delivered yesterday by Winston Spencer Churchill First Lord of the Admiralty, in the British House of Commons. This was strengthened in consequence of the Emperor in the course of the morning paying a long visit to Admiral Albert P. Von Tirpitz, Secretary of the Imperial navy. Immediately after, a number of leading officers of the Admiralty staff assembled in conference the object of which, however, is not disclosed.

REV. I. COUCH LECTURES ON POET WORDSWORTH

Last night a most interesting and instructive evening was spent, by the audience assembled in the Y.W.C.A. assembly room. The feature of the evening was an address on Wordsworth by Rev. Mr. Couch, pastor of George street church. Sheriff Hall very ably filled the chair and introduced the speaker of the evening and also Mr. F. Dawson, who rendered vocal music.

Rev. I. Couch introduced his address on the Poet Wordsworth, by a quotation by Matthew Arnold's immortal works, written in 1850, when Wordsworth died. Whilst sixty years have since passed, the poet's words still touch the people—Wordsworth was a poet freighted with spiritual insight, meditation, and moral fervour. By instinct he was a moralist. His verse was pessimistic, and emotional. When he referred to the loss of his children he was visibly moved. He was rejected and derided by con current literateurs. Still he leaves a large volume of beautiful poetry. Wordsworth spoke to the intellect of his readers. The lover of Wordsworth recalls the Highland girl, the daffodil and a hundred other scenes. The poet never forgot the Castle at Cockermouth. In 1778 he was sent to Hawkeshead Grammer School. In 1787, the poet went to reside at St. John's College Cambridge. In 1795, he made his first home at Racedown, Dorset, when he began his long career."

The gifted speaker received a hearty vote of thanks for his most interesting address.

REVIVAL OF BOXING

The London Referee has Much to Say on the Subject

The subject of boxing is attracting attention everywhere. The London Referee says:—It is satisfactory to find the big reviews concerning themselves with boxing. Lately I commented on Mr. Osborn's admirable paper in the Fortnightly. This month there is one in the National by Mr. Harold Claughton, who dwells on the benefits which are derived from the sport, especially in the East End of London. Away down beyond Shoreditch disputes are often settled by fists instead of the sarcasms by which we usually round off our little controversies in the west, and nothing so strongly inculcates the principles of fair play as the ring. That is one of its strong points, and the lesson which it teaches in the difficult art of keeping your temper is another. As Mr. Claughton remarks: "For brutality go to the streets—not to a boxing show or a club-room—. For chastity—if a man is living intemperately he will not risk the ring; or should he, the contest will be stopped in half a minute. For foul language—an oath in the ring would be as out of order as a bird of paradise in Bermondsey." All this is true. The boxer who is to succeed must lead a wholesome life, and if he is in the right groove he cannot help imbibing principles which oblige him to "play the game" generally. There is something, perhaps, to be said for what Mr. Claughton calls "an ultimate authority, coordinating and controlling British boxing and boxers throughtout the land." Such an organization, he thinks, "would for a sponsor with whom the authorities would readily co-operate."

As regards amateur boxing in England, the writer continues, the Amateur Boxing Association does its work in a way which is eminently satisfactory to all concerned, and the healthy influence of the National Sporting Club extends far beyond the confines of Covent Garden. We have, however, no adequate control of professional boxing, and it is for this reason that there is some danger the sport may get an undeservedly bad name; for those who are not better informed may be apt to imagine that what takes place at any hall a casual promoter may be able to hire is characteristic of boxing at headquarters and at resorts whose managers strive so far as possible to follow the path along which the N. S. C. leads.

MOTOR CAR ON SKIS

A Novel Conveyance Built for Count de Lesseps

There are characteristics suggestive of the automobile, the areoplane, the motor-boat, and the cutter, [illegible] mechanical sleigh that has been manufactured in France for the Count de Lesseps, for use in Canada. As the count is an accomplished areoplanist as well as an automobilist, and the [illegible] to his order by the designer of the Chauviere laminate areoplane propeller, it is not strange that so many features from different sources should have been combined in the attempt to produce a succesful and satisfactory mechanical sleigh. The automobile hood of the body blends neatly into the boat-shaped body, which terminates in a stern with a cutter effect that carries the two-bladed areoplane screw. There is room for two persons in the front seat, and a third passenger can be accommodated in a single seat behind them. The frame of the machine is of wood, and there are no springs between it and the flat, ski-like runners. The forward runners can be turned by the steering-wheel as in an automobile. A light, four-cylinder motor of aeronautical type furnishes the power. The forward end of the propeller shaft is connected with the rear end of the driving shaft by a chain and sprockets that reduce the engine speed of 1,200 revolutions per minute to 900 revolutions for the propeller. Instead of the usual automobile change-speed gearing there is a marine type reverse gear. For use in stopping there is a binged bar under the centre of the body which has strong iron teeth, which can be raised or lowered into contact with the ground or ice by means of rods and a lever.

BOXING IN CURRICULUM

From Lexington comes this despatch:—"The uplift in boxing continues. President Henry S. Barker of the State University of Kentucky, announces a course in boxing will be added to the college curriculum. Prizes for college champions in the featherweight, middleweight and heavyweight classes will be provided by the faculty. By the inauguration of the boxing course President Barker hopes to eliminate the practice of carrying pistols among the students, and to inspire a spirit of physical prowess in the collegiate body."

Guelph, March 16.—At St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church the pastor, Rev. H. E. Abraham, has announced the result of voting on Church union. The vote of the people of St. Andrew's was decidedly against the union, but there is apparently a lot of indifference being manifest as only about fifty per cent. of those entitled to vote did so. The ballot submitted to the Presbyterians is slightly different to that of the Methodists.

[illegible] Who Was Buried in Westminster Abbey

Few people are aware of the fact that a [illegible] buried in Westminster Abbey [illegible] Broughton [illegible] It is stated [illegible] of the British [illegible] was buried in the [illegible] in 1789. Late in life Broughton became a Yeoman of the [illegible] on the wall [illegible] with this tablet [illegible] Mrs. Elizabeth Broughton, died [illegible] 7, 1784, aged 59 years. [illegible] Mr. John Broughton, one of [illegible] of the Yeomen of the Guard, died [illegible] 8, 17[illegible], aged [illegible] years." The gravestone also has [illegible] but there is a blank between the name and the year. It is stated that but for the objection of the Dean [illegible] would have been filled with the words, "Champion of England."

Broughton was born in 1704, and was the first winner of Doggett's Coat and Badge. He made his first appearance as a pugilist at George Adam's famous booth at the Adam and Eve in Tottenham Court road. Later he set up an establishment of his own, and maintained his ascendency for many years, being eventually unexpectedly beaten by Slack in April, 1750, at Birmingham. Broughton made his own rules, which lasted from 1743 until 1838, when, after the contest between Owen Swift and Brighton Bill, the "New Rules of the Ring" came in. Broughton's rules are of more than ordinary interest, and were as follows:—

That a square of a yard be chalked in the middle of the stage; and every fresh set-to after a fall, or being parted from the rails, each second is to bring his man to the side of the square, and place him opposite to the other; and till they are fairly set-to at the lines, it shall not be lawful for the one to strike the other.

That, in order to prevent any disputes, the time a man lies after a fall, if the second does not bring his man to the side of the square, within the space of half a minute, he shall be deemed a beaten man.

That no champion be deemed beaten unless he fails coming up to the line in the limited time; or that his own second declares him beaten. No second is to be allowed to ask his man's adversary any questions or advise him not to give out.

That, to prevent disputes, in every main battle, the principal's shall, on the coming on the stage, choose from among the gentlemen present two umpires, who shall absolutely decide all disputes that may arise about the battle; and if the two umpires cannot agree, the said umpires to choose a third, who is to determine it.

That no person is to hit his adversary when he is down, or sieze him by the ham, the breeches, or any part below the waist; a man on his knees to be reckened down.

VANCOUVER HARNESS RACING

Apparently the conduct of harness-racing is satisfactory at the Vancouver Exhibition. They encourage it on the Pacific coast, while Toronto Exhibition has abandoned it entirely. All kinds of horses are provided for in the speed program at Vancouver, and the list of stakes and purses totals twenty thousand dollars. Two stakes are of $3,000 and two of $2,000 each.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE STORY

The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian says:—A new and characteristic story of Florence Nightingale reaches me. She was a great admirer of Harriet Martineau, but Miss Martineau's inclination towards Atheism was a cause of regret and grief to her. When the news came of the authoress's death in unbelief, and friends, shocked and stern, were making remarks about her sad end and her lost soul, Florence Nightingale smiled as she said, "How glorious must have been her surprise when she woke in Paradise to find she had been mistaken."

THE WOODBINE

A $10.000 Plate With 100 Entries is Predicted ere Long

Entries for the King's Plate this year will probably run about the same in number as last year, but there is every reason to anticipate next season the beginning of an increase that will bring the number of nominations to a hundred before many years have passed. Now that two-year-old winners are eligible and the value of the Plate is mounting, and the position of the turf in Canada becoming unassailable, we may look for a $10,000 Plate, with a hundred entries. I have already come across several men who have no horses, but who are in the market for Province-bred yearlings, which they would race next season, and put in the Plate the following year. The value of horses foaled in Canada is bound to be vastly added to by the enlarged opportunities offered them. Coming back to the race to be run on the 18th of May—not far away, in spite of all the snow now on the ground—two owners who were not interested last year are likely to figure largely in the outcome. Up [illegible] Barn [illegible] D[illegible] stable shelters four or five elegibles, from which Trainer John Nixon will probably [illegible] Tropaeolium [illegible] would be [illegible] owners to have [illegible] other owner not [illegible] ther a newcomer to the guineas, [illegible] one [illegible] first [illegible] attempt [illegible] Mr. Charles Crew [illegible] Halfway House, on the Kingston Road. His jacket will be carried by the three-year-old filly Amberite, by Martimas-Lyddite. A full sister to Shimonese and Powderman, she is better furnished and more forward than either of these at the same age. Her work last fall was perhaps not as fast as anticipated, but it was not her limit and she was always master of her workmate. The very useful Kilo, which won the Quebec King's Plate for Mr. Kenneth Dawes, and followed that up by a vitcory in a selling race from which he went to the Crew stable. One would expect to find Amberite in the Valley Farm stable, and the fact that she is not is one evidence of the bona fides of the annual public sales of the Valley Farm stock. The filly was bid up to $1,000 for the racing stable, which was, and is, quite distinct from breeding interest, and there Col. Hendrie stopped. That was the limit, but Charlie Crew was willing to go still higher. He bid 1,050, and became the owner of a very likely winner of a richer King's Plate than any yet run. It will not be an unpopular victory, you may be sure, if the King's [illegible] has this year to present the guineas to a man who had pluck enough to pay the record price for a Province-bred yearling—The Globe.

THE LACROSSE OUTLOOK

Some Healthy Rivalry Between the Eastern and Western Clubs

What lacrosse players will be seen at the Coast and in the big league in the East during the coming season is far from being definitely settled and will probably remain so until the period of the annual migration takes place. One fact remains, however, and that is that there will be some healthy rivalry between the Eastern and Coast clubs, and the league which flourishes the largest want will be the one to win out. Following the announcement that the Eastern clubs had decided on a salary limit came an awakener that this clause had been perpetrated more for a joke than for any other purpose and that the Eastern magnates would be as keen figures in the market as Con Jones or any of the other clubs at the Coast. All of which looks pretty soft for the player. However, the fact that there is to be a merry war is not to be disguised. With the Minto Cup in the possession of Con Jones, who spent thousands of dollars to bring it to this city, it is not to be expected that now that he has the cup in his possession he will let it slip away from him without a struggle. On the other hand, the East has been so long separated from this famous piece of jewelry that the clubs in that part of the country would go to almost any length to have it brought back again. All of which indicates that there will be a scramble for another fight for the pennant, champion team, and a fight in which the size of the bank-roll will be the deciding factor.—Saturday Sunset.

FLIGHT BETWEEN SPIRES

According to a telegram from Pau the aviator Vedrines, who has made many flights recently over Pau and the neighborhood, has just accomplished a daring feat in flying. He flew between the two spires of the church of St. Jacques which are only a distance of 42 ft. apart.

Lindsay Post is certainly in error as to dismissals on the Trent Canal. That journal says "The Conservative Government has made a clean sweep of the canal officials appointed by the Liberal government, the only one remaining being Mr. J. H. McClellan." This is absolutely incorrect. Mr. McClellan has many of his former colleagues still with him on the canal staff.

MAKING HENS LAY

Prof. Elford Tells What a Quebec Woman Has Done

Prof. Elford, Macdonald College, Quebec, says: For the future of the poultry industry we must look to the farmer. No. 100-acre farm should be without 100 hens. These 100 hens should yield at least $350 a year. I have no sympathy with the man who says poultry does not pay when he gives his fowl no care whatever.

As a sample of what poultry can be made to yield, I will tell you what Mrs. Shepherd, a lady living near Montreal, has done. From a flock of 40 hens she has a revenue of $300 a year. She keeps a good uniform lot of pure bred hens. She makes a specialty of winter eggs and [illegible] the best price for a fancy article. In the spring she sells eggs for hatching. Her cockerels are sold for breeding purposes. She changes her hens every year, believing that pullets make the best winter layers.

When I was a boy on a farm in Huron county, Ontario, the poultry were considered a bother and were left to the women folk. Then, hens were not expected to lay in the winter. On that farm to-day there is one of the [illegible] poultry plants in Ontario. About $1,500 worth of poultry produce is marketed [illegible]. This [illegible] some idea of the possibilities [illegible] poultry [illegible].

THE PRODUCTION OF EGG

Some Good Hints on Getting the Hens to Work

Along about November it is more than probable that fresh eggs will be in fairly strong demand, and which, if the experience of other years be any guide, continue so during winter. Of course everyone who keeps hens wants to profit by this condition, but the difficulty is in getting the hens started to lay. Early pullets are seldom depended upon to produce all the eggs and the idleness of the older hens is excusable on account of their moulting at a time when the market for eggs is strong is one of the features of poultry-keeping that needs remedying. The intensive operator meets the difficulty by conquering the hens to moult in late summer, and thus [illegible] stock down to business early in the fall. To accomplish this he reduces the feed allowance to the minimum for a week or ten days, and also limits the range for exercise. At the end of this time the birds are quickly brought back to full feed, which has the effect of causing them to shed their feathers, after which laying soon begins. The experiment is so simple and has proved so effective that it is well worth trying, even [illegible].

Last Friday, so The Times was told yesterday, a boy belonging to the big congregation of George Street Church, [illegible] members of that Church. The Church member wanted to find out some particulars about an alleged fault committed by a friend of the boy. The latter turned to the elder, and asked, "you know that there is a pump in our Church grounds, that supplies splendid drinking water?" The member, somewhat surprised at the question, replied, "Yes, why?" "Well, you had better go out and try that pump, you can't pump me about Willie."

Proven Oil Lands
Consisting of 210 Acres, King's County,
Coalinga, California, U.S.A.

The wondful development of the oil industry in California during the last few years is one of the marvels of the age. From a product of about two million barrels in 1899 it has grown to over sixty million barrels in 1911. The oil resources of the state seem to be no less vast than the mineral fields, and, like the latter, they still await their full development. So abundant is the supply that it is reckoned by acres rather than by wells.

Oil is superseding coal for fuel throughout the state. Railroads, factories, gas plants, power plants, sugar refineries, steamships and other industries, depend on oil for fuel entirely. Rapid as has been the increase in production, the consumption has kept pace with it. The California oil industry, only a few years old, has made more money and paid greater profits to the investor on the capital employed than any one branch of business, or any one industry, in the history of the state, for the same length of time. Hundreds of men have been quickly raised from humble means to affluence. Thousands of investors are drawing handsome incomes from their holdings in California Oil Companies. The increase in the value of land has brought fortunes to hundreds more.

The Dominion Oil Company's property consists of patented and proven OIL-BEARING LAND, situated in King's County, California, east of the choppings. Their well is drilled to a depth of 2,480 feet and they have already struck oil which is high gravity, 33 per cent., and a "gusher" is confidently expected on from 400 to 600 feet additional drilling.

The Canadian Coaling Company, which adjoins the DOMINION OIL COMPANY'S property on the north, have their well down about 3000 feet, at which depth the oil came in, and is now producing 7500 barrels per day, which means an income of $8250.00 per day, and their stock is selling at $20.00 per share. This wellnly a short distance from the one now being drilled by the DOMINION OIL COMPANY. Mr. G. W. Warner, who has charge of the DOMINION OIL COMPANY'S development work, and who is without doubt one of the best authorities on oil, predicts that with from 400 to 600 feet further drilling, the DOMINION OIL COMPANY will strike the same flow, and he believes that the Company will get an enormous flow of the light oil, for which there is a ready market at from $1.10 per barrel up.

Producing oil companies' stock listed on California Exchange to March 31, 1910, paid $29,242,-803.68 in dividends, and during March, $730,911.26. These companies are capitalized at $99,595.00, with $78,184,548.00 issued, and are actually paying now 1 per cent. per month on issued stock, or 12 per cent. net, to stockholders per year. The total shares sold on Los Angeles Stock Exchange for March was 2,553,923, valued at $1,708,112.35. That oil is a stable business and a sure income producer is demonstrated by the above figures beyond a doubt. The Imperial oil Company has paid $2,-000,000.00 or $20.00 per share. Can you do better? The contr of the Union, the largest oil company in California, sold ten years ago for a trifling sum in comparison to its present value. In March it paid its 164th dividend of 50 cents per share, or $124,813.00, or total dividends to date of $6,768,355.15, and its assets are conservatively estimated in excess of $100,000,000.00. Is oil a safe business in California? If you are sure that the company whose stock you intend purchasing is honestly being developed, yes. Therefore you must be careful to see that the officers of the company are of the right calibre.

The Directors of the DOMINION OIL COMPANY, who are all well-known and wealthy business men, have developed the property up to the present time entirely at their own expense. They have encountered oil at the 2200-foot level, which is on its gravity, andd for which they are receiving $1.10 per barrel, but they are drilling right through these sands, for they want to reach the same sands that the Canadian Coalinga, whose property immediately adjoins them on the north, are in. At about 3000 feet they have struck a splendid flow of oil, and they now have a well producing 5000 barrels per day. Surrounded as the DOMINION OIL COMPANY'S property is by big producers, it is an absolutely foregone conclusion that when they have drilled to the same depth as their neighbors, they will have a well equally as good or better.

It is also the intention of the Directors to sink other wells as rapidly as possible; but it is only natural that they want to complete their first well in order that the profits that will be derived from the sale of the oil will assist in [illegible] of the development work in connection with the sinking of the other wells.

We have looked into this matter carefully and feel we can conscientiously advise the purchase of as large a block of stock as you feel that you can afford, for without doubt an investment in the DOMINION OIL COMPANY will certainly turn out to be profitable to yourself.

The stock is now selling very rapidly, and as this is an investment of an exceptionally meritorious nature, you cannot afford not to investigate. WRITE US AT ONCE FOR PROSPECTUS and full particulars of the DOMINION OIL COMPANY, which will be mailed to you without any obligation or expense on your part.

Toronto, March 1st, 1912.

W. H. HILL, ESQ.,
Manager,
Sun Life Assurance Co.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I wish to thank the Sun Life Assurance Company, through you, for the prompt and very satisfactory settlement of my 15 year Endowment Policy, No. 61345, which matured and was paid me to-day.

I have also a 15 year Endowment maturing to-day in another leading Company.

The contrast, in the results, in favor of your Company is so marked that I want you to know it, but I am at a loss to know how such a difference could honestly occur. When I tell you that the profits in your Company are three and one-third times the profits in the other Company referred to, and this too notwithstanding I paid the other Company $1.15 per year more per $1000 than I paid you, you will realize my inability to comprehend the cause.

This is surely a tribute to the management of the Sun Life, and I am so well pleased I have applied for further insurance with you.

Incidentally, I would like to say a word for your loan privilege. As you are aware, I borrowed some money on my policy, a little over a year ago, which enabled me to obtain a substantial interest in a town site in the North-west, and you will be pleased to learn that it has already yielded substantial gain and gives promise to pay hundreds per cent., so that it is impossible to fully realize the value of that Policy to me.

I thought as an old Peterborough boy you would be pleased to know I am delighted with the result.

Yours truly,
(Signed) ROBERT E. DOLAN.

Capitol Hill

One of Calgary's close-in residential sub-divisions. City water is now in the adjoining divisions and sewer system is to be installed this spring. We expect these improvements in Capitol Hill this summer. Street car service is at present within two or three blocks of Capitol Hill. The City of Calgary has purchased Block 68, Capitol Hill, on which to build a large public school. A number of nice homes have already been built in Capitol Hill, and many more are in course of construction.

Lots in this sub-division are selling in pairs at $250 to $350 per lot. We offer you one block of forty lots, close to Block 68 at $210 per lot, on terms of Third Cash and Balance four, eight and twelve months, with interest at 8 per cent. on deferred payments. This block will readily sell for $300 per lot, or more, within the next six months. The block is high and level, and every lot is perfect. This is a gilt-edged investment. If you cannot handle it alone have some friend join you.

PRICES ARE STILL SOARING.

The Department of Labor's wholesale prices record up to date shows a still higher level for February than for January, notwithstanding that the latter month was reported as having seen the highest prices since 1882-4 and possibly since 1873. The index number rose during February from 131.4 to 134.3, these being percentages of the average level of prices during the last decade of the last century. The upward movement was largely the result of advances in grains, animals and meats, dairy products and potatoes. Retail prices were also upward, especially in the food products derived from the lines above mentioned.

Victoria County is now looking for, and expecting another Senatorship. Victoria will not require a car load of nerve tonic for some time.

Members of Parliament have now to "nip-up" or get busy with copies of their speeches, delivered on the floor of the house. By the new regulations, the time allowed for the revision and correction by members of their speeches shall not exceed twenty-four hours after the delivery of the daily issue to the House; and that all corrections shall be sent to the Debates office within that time. That promptly on the expiration of the twenty-four hours the proof sheets shall be sent to the Printing Bureau, where the corrections shall be made and the final proofs shall be read for the book form; and the work shall be then forthwith printed and constitute the Revised Edition.

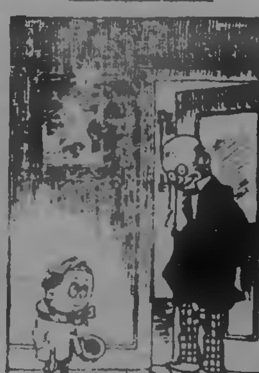
THE BISHOP'S TEA PARTY.

A story is told of the practical resourcefulness of the late Bishop Wordsworth of Salisbury. An unexpectedly large party came to an "at home" at the Palace, and a crush was feared round the tea tables if all made a rush for them at once. His Lordship grasped the situation, and prevented one hundred squeezing into a room suitable for thirty by saying during a pause in the conversation: "Will all ladies over forty kindly go down to the tea room?" A limited number responded.



A BIG ONE.

Kid—Gee, Doc, this boil is as big as a half dollar now.

Dr. Doyle—Don't worry over a little thing like that. I had one last week that was three times as big as that.

Kid—What! As big as a dollar and fifty cents."

Water Street Pavements Low.

The man or woman who has occasion to walk on the west side of Water street, from Brock, some distance north, do not stop to pray for harps and halos for the men responsible for the pavement there. It must be several inches lower than the extreme height of the roadway. This pavement causes pedestrians to seek the mushy safety of the roadway or to think of establishing an ark or ferry service.

PLEA FOR BOYS IN OUR HOMES

Foster and Develop the Love of Home Which Often Lies Dormant in Boys' Hearts

It is deplorable that all mothers cannot be made to realize how important the atmosphere of a boy's room becomes to him as he grows from boyhood into manhood. They seem to think that anything is good enough for the boys, providing it is dark enough not to show dirt, and sufficiently substantial to stand the wear and tear to which it will be subjected.

Sometimes the furnishings are not even selected for those admirable qualities, but are taken haphazard from the leftovers as occasion seems to demand, and the consequence is that boys are brought up with the idea that their own room is the one place in the home that is utterly void of that personal touch which goes so far toward making "atmosphere." This thought remains permanently fixed in their minds as one of the disagreeable features of their boyhood.

Boys should have an opportunity to exercise their own judgment and taste to a certain extent, because they can always be guided by a tactful mother in order to avoid any glaring blunders, and this would undoubtedly afford great opportunities for the development of any special ideas or natural aptness they may have in decorating and furnishing that would be a great benefit to them in later years.

So many young men seem to be so utterly devoid of any artistic ideas in regard to decoration or furnishing, and possess only a crude conception of what constitutes good taste in such matters. Generally speaking, that phase of a boy's education is greatly neglected. If his surroundings are all that they should be, then his difficulties in that direction are materially lessened. If the circumstances are not so favorable, however, no amount of time or trouble would be wasted in trying to develop their ideas along those lines. They are quite likely to have pronounced ideas in regard to colors and grouping, and, as they grow older, if not corrected, it generally takes the form of a love for brilliant colors, glitter and gauds, and all the impossible combinations that appeal to the uneducated taste.

Many times one sees a young married couple trying to adjust their widely divergent ideas in regard to the furnishing and decorating of their home. This difficulty would have been avoided if the same attention had been paid to the boy's education in furnishing and decorating during his formative years, as has been given to the girl's as a matter of course. Encourage your boys to make a study of good pictures.

Never go into a boy's room and change the position of any articles of furniture to suit your own ideas without first having a consultation with the occupant of the room. There is nothing one can do which will produce a greater feeling of insecurity in regard to one's goods and chattels, than this habit which is so strong in some mothers. Let the boy have the feeling that that particular spot is his own inviolate place, where he is small master of all he surveys. Nearly all boys will respond to the feeling of responsibility by an increased manliness and interest in their home life and the proper care of their furnishings.

If it is at all possible, provide a small iron cot in place of a bed. This should be covered with denim or some of the inexpensive cotton stuffs, and, with several prettily covered pillows thrown carelessly around, the result is always pleasing to the boy.

Let us do anything and everything we can to foster and develop the love of home, which very often lies dorment in our boys' hearts. And at the same time we should cultivate their artistic sense in every possible way, while we are educating them in all the cardinal virtues. It is only by giving them a sense of proprietorship in their homes that we may be able to exert the necessary influences over their future lives that is the fondest desire of parents.

Give the boy his own place of refuge, teach him to keep it tasteful and tidy, and this responsibility will engender habits of neatness that will last him all his life. When mother goes to see her boy, let her always tap at the door and ask if she may come in. This little courtesy will teach him that he is also a full-fledged member of the family, with his own interests and privileges, and the result will be the making of a very satisfactory man.—Charlotte Wharton Ayres.

THE VALUE OF LOVE

It Forgives Wrongs Again and Again and Then Again

If you always think sweet thoughts and dwell on love, then you need never fear anything in this world. Begin to practise love. Love will prevent you from making foes whose evil influences may bar your way in life. Love is the key to success, the royal road into the hearts of all. If you want to get on in the world, learn to be good-tempered and to love. If you "get on" without love, you will never really know what happiness is. Make your resolution to-day. "I will not be easily offended, nor proud, nor conceited. I will never actively resent bad treatment, but I will endeavor to be gentle and patient, and try to do good to those who wrong me." Love is patient, gracious, long-suffering, and forgives wrongs again and again.

NEED OF FRESH AIR

The need of fresh air in the home should not be forgotten. This is not meant to apply merely in a physical sense. Widen the interests of the family by reading, by visiting with your neighbors, by taking a trip, if possible, to one of the great cities. Fill the home with fresh air, and fill the life with fresh interest.

THE OLDEST FLAG

The flag of Denmark, a plain red banner bearing on it a white cross, is the oldest flag now in existence. For 300 years both Norway and Sweden were united with Denmark under this flag. In the year 1219 King Waldemar of Denmark, when leading his troops to battle against the Livonians, saw, or thought he saw, a bright light in the form of a cross in the sky. He held this appearance to be a promise of Divine aid, and pressed forward to victory. From this time he had the cross placed on the flag of his country, and called it the Dannebork—that is, strength of Denmark.

COURTING A VOICE

Telephone Girl Pursued by Lover Who Finally Married Her

A romantic story of the courtship and marriage of a telephone girl comes from St. Louis, where Mr. William McCalpin married Miss Viola Kortkemp, a young lady employed at the St. Louis telephone exchange. The marriage was the result of a courtship induced by the sweet voice of Miss Viola.

Mr. McCalpin, who is one of the managers of the Waters Pierce Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Trust, whilst telephoning from his office was fascinated by the voice that answered his call, and after several unnecessary calls, for the purpose of listening to the enchanting voice, he introduced himself and asked to be allowed to visit her and "get acquainted." Miss Kortkemp was taken aback by such "rapid" methods, and invariably "rung off" when her admirer persisted, and at length, to escape the chaff of her fellow operators, she obtained her transference to another exchange. Not to be beaten, her admirer set himself to hunt her down, and after a lapse of over two years he was successful.

Calling up a client on the telephone, he heard the long-sought voice from the exchange. He did not waste any time, for in response to the request, "Number, please," he said, "I am William McCalpin. Don't move. I am coming out to get you, and I am coming right away." The sweet, but astonished voice asked for enlightenment, and Mr. McCalpin repeated his former proposal. Persistence of this sort was bound to impress the lady, and after a moment's consideration the voice gave her name and address and permission for her admirer to call upon her father for an orthodox introduction.

Mr. McCalpin immediately went to see the father, who was the chief of the fire brigade of University City, and he consented to introduce Mr. McCalpin, with the happiest results. The "Voice" was quite up to expectations, and the oil man gave an equally good impression. He insisted upon immediate marriage, as he declared that he had been courting her for two years, and again his persistence won, and the young couple were married. Mr. McCalpin is no ta millionaire, but as he is connected with the famous "octopus" it will probably not be long before he becomes one.

CHANGING THE WORLD

Look Around You and Examine Your Environment Occasionally

"You cannot change the world; only yourself."

The above saying is apt to be a little misleading. For though the world is so vast, huge, and complex that to change the whole of it in any way would require powers far greater than most of us possess, yet, on the other hand, by changing ourselves we do much towards changing the world. "He who reforms himself has done more to reform the community than a crowd of noisy, impotent talkers." Few of us properly realize the greatness of the influences which we exert, very often unconsciously, on all with whom we are constantly in contact.

When you change yourself, you cannot help but change your influence, and your influence changes others to some extent, and thus changes their influence, too and so on, like the ripples caused by a stone flung into a pond. So if you reform yourself, you are taking a hand in the great task of reforming the world.

"Your world" is your mission-ground. "Your world" is the place where your best work is needed. Your friends, your workmates, above all, your family, are the people who are the most affected by you. To reform yourself is hard, but it is not a hopeless task.

You can alter your whole outlook on life. If you are inclined to be sad and gloomy, you can, by persistently forcing yourself to think cheerfully, in time develop the habit of cheerfulness to such an extent that it becomes second nature to you.

Look around you, and examine your world occasionally. See where a change for the better is most needed, and set to work at once to make that change. Here is one, perhaps, who needs cheering up; go and cheer him. Here is one who seems to want advice; give it to him. Here is one who requires help; let him have any such help as lies in your power to give.

But, above all, look to yourself. Reform, like charity, should begin at home.—Budget and Family Journal.

NEWSBOY TO OPERA SINGER

Plenty of romance has been crowded into the twenty-seven years of the life of Mr. H. Nevada Landino, who ten years ago was a New York newsboy, and is now a grand opera tenor singer. Mr. Landino has said that at Cleveland he filled up his spare time by shoe-blacking, while later on he worked side by side at cigarette-making with Rosa Pastor, of Whitechapel, who afterwards married a millionaire. To be slapped on the back by Mascagni, who said "Bravo!" is another incident that the tenor recalls with pride. Landino speaks four languages—German, French and Italian, in addition to English; he has a repertoire of two hundred songs, and knows twenty operas, twelve of which he can sing without rehearsing.

"DERBYSHIRE'S GRAND OLD MAN"

Known by many as "Derbyshire's Grand Old Man," Mr. Edward Mason Wrench, of Baslow, celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday recently. Not only in medicine and surgery has Mr. Wrench made a name for himself, but he also had a distinguished career as a soldier during the stirring times of the Crimean War and Indian Mutiny. In the former he did duty in the trenches, and was present at the three assaults—one on the Quarries and the others at the Redan—and on the last occasion that the assault party went down to the trenches only half returned to the camp uninjured.

POTATOES THAT HUSTLE

Planted on June 7th, Ready for Digging on August 27th.

The Ontario Colonization Bureau has received a letter from one of their new settlers at Cochrane, 423 miles north of Toronto, with a beautiful basket of potatoes, which were shown at the National Exhibition. The land was cleared on June 1st of this year, the seed planted on June 7th, and the crop due on August 27th.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

ESKIMOS SEEK HIGHEST PRICES

The Northern Huskies are No Longer Giving Things Away, and Demand Top Money

A lady tourist who was making a collection of native curios at Fort McPherson, the most northerly fur-trading post in Canada, had provided herself before leaving civilization with a small outfit of beads, needles, etc., in the hope of bartering them to good advantage with the aboriginals. Seeing some ivory carvings in a "husky" tent this lady intimated that she wished to acquire them, and offered in exchange first a few packages of needles, and then some beads, both of which were inspected and decorously handed back to her with a shake of the head.

After some talking the Esquimaux said her would sell for a pipe and some tobacco. This looked easy, as the curios were cheap at $6 to $7, and the lady went to the Hudson Bay Company's store and bought $1 worth of tobacco and a 50 cent pipe. These were handed to the "husky," who courteously looked them over, and then handing the pipe back remarked "Tobacco good, pipe no good." The upshot was that the lady had to invest $5 in a pipe to obtain the coveted curios.

The most sought for articles of Esquimaux manufacture is the ivory cribbage board, made out of a walrus tusk. These make both useful articles and handsome ornaments. The sides and ends art usually covered with carvings of wild animals, such as walruses, whales, foxes, wolves, etc., and the work is in many cases extremely well executed.

A few years ago these cribbage boards could be bought for a comparatively trivial sum, but now, owing to a number of tourists having paid absurd figure for them, the price has mounted to an almost prohibitive figure, from $50 to $100 being asked for almost any specimen, while for an unusually well-carved board an Esquimaux will not accept less than $125.

Other sought-after articles produced by the "huskies" are bead and shell earrings, soapstone candlesticks, sealing spears, ivory fishhooks and sinkers, and patchwork mats manufactured from a mixture of splices of wild goat, seal and deerskins sewn together in a regular and not unbeautiful pattern.

The trade with the Eskimo is conducted on somewhat different lines to that with the Indians. For a number of years past whaling schooners hailing from San Francisco have made their winter quarters at Herschel Island, so as to be ready to commence hunting these valuable mammals as soon as open water appears. Their crews have dealt largely with the Eskimos in furs and curios, paying small prices and in return selling them flour, bacon, tea, etc., for considerably less than the mere cost of transporting such articles into the country by the McKenzie River route. However, the schooner owners, finding that but little of the profit accruing from the transactions found its way into their pockets, have largely put a stop to the carrying of goods for trading purposes.

As a result a considerable number of the Eskimo make their way by first open water from Herschel Island and the country east of the McKenzie River delta to the trading posts on the lower [illegible]. On arrival they barter their fu[illegible]hatever pleases them, and then [illegible]hing special—a sewing machine, steam tug, or what not—catches a husky's eye, and he at once wishes to purchase it. If it is not for sale he at once orders one like it to be brought in next year. This the trader interested agrees to accomplish, and the question of price then comes up. Now the price is not put to the native in dollars, as that would not involve a sufficiently remunerative transaction. Instead the trader says in taking an order for a phonograph, for instance, "You must bring me five lynx skins, twenty white foxes, and two mink." "Very good," replies the husky, and the deal is closed. He arrives at the post the following summer with the pelts called for, and he is an angry man if his phonograph has not turned up.

A short time ago an Eskimo purchased a steam tug which he is now an expert in operating, and was charged therefor 100 white foxes, two No. 1 silver foxes, thirty lynx and fifty mink. As the [illegible] cost but $1,200 at the point [illegible], the transaction was by [illegible] profitable.

A MOTHER'S CARES DESTRUCTIVE TO HEALTH

ANAEMIA, BAD BLOOD, HEADACHES, AND LASSITUDE VERY COMMON.

Mrs. Wilkinson's Letter Gives Advice That Every Mother Can Well Follow.

From her home in Newton where she resides with her large family, Mrs. Wilkinson writes: "For years I was pale, anaemic and lacking in vitality. I was a constant sufferer from indigestion, and the distress and pain it caused me, coupled with ever-increasing anaemia, made me weaker day by day. Constant headaches, specks before the eyes and attacks of dizziness made me feel as if life were not worth living. My constitution was completely undermined and the constant pallor and dullness in my eyes showed what a sick woman I was. I began to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills and the improvement, although slow, was sure.

"I gradually got back my strength and my appetite grew much stronger, and I enjoyed my meals thoroughly. I felt happier and more contented and the sickly pallor of my face was replaced by a bright, rosy color, which proved that a strong medicine was at work. In a few months Dr. Hamilton's Pills brought me from a condition of deathly pallor to robust health."

You can obtain the same results by using Dr. Hamilton's Pills—beware of the substitutor that offers you anything except Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all dealers or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS.

According to the record of industrial accidents kept by the Department of Labour, 61 persons were killed and 178 injured during February, 1912. This record compares very favourably with that of January, when 86 workmen were killed and 214 injured. Compared with February 1911, the record is still more favourable, as 93 were killed and 197 injured in that month. The worst disaster of the past month was the premature explosion of dynamite on construction work near Fort Frances, Ont., on the line of the Canadian Northern Railway, by which 13 construction hands were killed and six others seriously injured.

STRIKES DURING FEBRUARY.

The strike situation in Canada continues on the whole favourable according to the latest reports of the Department of Labour. Few disputes of importance occured during February, the one affecting most employees being that of the cloak and garment workers in the employ of T. Eaton Company, Toronto and Montreal. About 600 employees were affected by this dispute. Altogether there were about twelve strikes in existence during February affecting about 50 firms and 1,200 employees.

The loss of time in working days was approximately 10,000 compared with 12,000 days lost from the same cause during January, and over 32,000 days lost in February, 1911. Eight strikes remained in existence at the close of the month.

Editorial Notes

Some of our citizens may remember that the Council passed a by-law prohibiting men from spitting in public places. A very wise and sanitary law. It is of interest, in this connection to note that detectives in New Orleans, La., have been detailed to ride on the street cars and arrest all violators of the anti-spitting law. This action was taken following a request of the Louisiana Anti-Tuberculosis League, of which Dr. G. Farrar Patton is president.

The subjoined clipping from the Trenton Advocate, gives good food for reflection. The paragraph says: "He thought the fire was out and to revive it took the gasoline can and threw in a little of the fluid. A flash, the can was at the ceiling and Mr. Smith was surrounded by an atmosphere filled with flame, his clothes were afire, and he was in a fair way to incineration." If people will use coal oil or gasoline on their fires, the brigade will be kept busy.

Peterborough is fortunate in many respects. One item of our good luck, however, may not present itself to the average citizen. That is we have no negroes in our community. Now the "cullud brother" may be a hard working, temperate, respected citizen, but other towns and cities are welcome to him. One little extract from an American paper, will go to prove the above contention, viz: "The negroes of Lake Charles are in a state of most extraordinary excitement, over a murder and the attempted assassination which occurred within one block of the place where the five members of the Broussard family were murdered by the negroes about five weeks ago. All last night the police force and deputy sheriffs searched the northern part of the city, with some hope of finding a clue which would lead to the arrest of the negroes who committed this outrage."

There is no denying the fact that taxes, in this city, are quite as high as the average property owner or tenant, who pays said taxes, desires. The local taxpayer does not lose many hours sleep whilst thinking over how the city might increase either the rate or the assessment. To the contrary the average ratepayer, if the subject of taxes enters his mind at the time of his Beauty sleep is apt to turn over, groan and switch that subject from his thinking machine. In this connection it is of interest to note that the Ontario government has under consideration an amendment to the Municipal Act, as follows: "To render valid a by-law for granting a bonus in aid of a manufacturing industry the assent of three-fourths of all the members of the council and of two-thirds of the ratepayers who actually vote on the by-law shall be necessary."

DEFENDS BOXING

A London Vicar Says There is Nothing Like it

Rev. A. Newman Guest, "the fighting vicar" of Stanbury, Buckinghamshire, recently arranged a friendly spar on the village green with an army reservist of local fame, who offered to "take on the vicar." Unfortunately, the contest aroused such enthusiasm in the locality that enterprising villagers made books on the event, and the betting became fast and furious. People for miles around expressed [illegible] intention of being present, [illegible] fearing [illegible] much [illegible] regretfully decided to abandon the fight. The vicar, giving a London paper his views on boxing in relation to the morals and physique of Englishmen, said:

LONGBOAT'S PURSE

The Indian Secured About $500 in His Glasgow Race

Tom Longboat got $375 and a percentage of the gate receipts, probably $500 in all, for winning the fifteen challenge race at Glasgow. The Indian went away at a red-hot clip, and tried to lose them all the first two miles. He did get about thirty yards but they brought him back in three miles. He led the bunch up to six miles, and at seven and a half led by 60 yards. Kohlemainen loosened up at nine miles, caught the Indian, and led to the thirteenth mile. Then the Indian came to life again, and from then on set a stiff pace. The Finn was right with him until the stretchhead where the Redskin cut loose his wonderful sprint and came home a winner by two feet in the world's record time of 1.20.04 2-5. The world's record up to that time was Fred Appleby's 1.20.04 3-5, made at Stamford Bridge, in England, on September 22, 1894, while the latter was an amateur. The world's professional record was held by Jack Price, who, on August 19, in 1910, ran the fifteen miles in Glasgow on the same track in 1.21.40. The Indian's new world record is all the more creditable when it is remembered that he made the journey in a snow storm.

CURIOUS MASCOTS

Singers Who Have Real Faith in Such Company

Madame Patti, who has enraptured all music-lovers, places great belief in an old doll, called "Henriette," which she has treasured as her special talisman since she was seven years of age.

Another great singer with a firm faith in mascots is Madame Alice Esty, and she never sings in public without wearing a small green heart attached to a delicate necklace of gold.

The Shah of Persia and a small table, upon which are five splendid portraits, are quite inseparable. This mascot accompanies him everywhere and is placed close to his pillow while he sleeps. The portrait consists of himself, the late King Edward and his Consort, and the Tsar and Tsaritsa of Russia. The late Baroness Burdett-Coutts was almost convinced that good luck would desert her if she parted with a lucky guinea. This coin was given to her grandfather, who dressed rather carelessly, by a benevolent old gentleman who had mistaken the former for one seeking charity!

Among ladies in French society there is a great desire to possess for "luck" bits of the hangman's rope, and applications are frequently made—but without success—to influential Britons connected with the Home Office to obtain such unpleasant relics from the hangman!

THE NEED OF MEN

Work in Every Field Not Only Remains But Increases

More men are needed in the world to-day than ever before, because there is more to do—more different things to make, more actual people to support. Fifteen years ago the bicycle makers would have been frightened into bankruptcy if you had told them that in 1910 their trade would have almost disappeared. But what do we see now? The coming of automobiles has given work to all the bicycle men and thousands more. And it is so in other businesses and professions. The point to remember is that, while the form of work changes, the work in every field remains, and even increases. The real claims are not all taken up. Alexander the Great was only a fool when he wept because there were no more worlds to conquer. He didn't use his eyes to see with, but only to weep with.

POPULAR THOUGH POOR

"Be forgetful of self; think, and think kindly, of others."

"Say a kind rather than a smart thing."

"Be ready to help whenever you can."

"Give others credit for doing and knowing something."

"Be courteous to all, in or out of business."

"Don't talk scandal."

"Pay what you owe, and never borrow money."

Old Age Pensions

Following the removal of the pauperism disqualification, 10,938 persons in London alone received old-age pensions.

Priests as Cab-Drivers

Since the disestablishment of the Church in France, many former priests have taken up the occupation of cab-drivers in Paris.

THE ASPIRING CHAUFFEUR

Chug, chug! Plonk, plonk! Choo choo!

The motor-car dashed along the road at a tremendous speed, missed a woman by a split hair's-breadth, bumped over her less fortunate dog, and came to an abrupt halt.

"Dear me!" said the chauffeur, alighting.

The woman said more than "Dear me!" In fact, what she didn't say isn't worth printing.

"Can I—er—replace your dog?" suggested the chauffeur, getting in a word edgewise at about 3.45.

For a brief moment the woman regarded his [illegible] features. Then she retorted freezingly:

"You flatter yourself!"

A COMMON COMPLAINT

[illegible] asked the Army doctor.

The recruit, who had been on the sick list ever since he had enlisted, shook his head sorrowfully.

"I dunno," he replied.

"You look well enough," commented the doctor. "How's the appetite?"

"I'd match an elephant at meals," answered the recruit. "It ain't that kind of illness, sir."

"Then I'm hanged if I know what kind it is!" exclaimed the Army medico. "How does it affect you?"

"Well, I eats well, and I drinks well, and I sleeps well," replied Thomas Atkins, rubbing his nose thoughtfully; "but directly I hear the word 'work,' I come all of a tremble!"

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE STORY

The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian says:—A new and characteristic story of Florence Nightingale reaches me. She was a great admirer of Harriet Martineau, but Miss Martineau's inclination towards Atheism was a cause of regret and grief to her. When the news came of the authoress's death in unbelief, and friends, shocked and stern, were making remarks about her sad end and her lost soul, Florence Nightingale smiled as she said, "How glorious must have been her surprise when she woke in Paradise to find she had been mistaken."

Study the Location of

OAKLAND PARK

Oakland Park is located east of the Red River, just beyond the present north limits of the city of Winnipeg. It is about half way between the city limits and the line which, it is stated, the Canadian Pacific Railway will build across the north of the city to relieve the terrible freight congestion now confronting them. Whether that line is built or not, Northeast Winnipeg is now and will be the industrial part of the city; and Oakland Park will be the location par excellence for the homes of the better class of the future industrial army of Winnipeg.

Oakland Park runs between the Bird's Hill Road and the Main line, C.P.R. Its lots are well located, treed, on roads that are graded and used to-day, and the street car line passes the property.

Now Figure the Price of these Lots:

The prices asked for Oakland lots, from $4.00 to $14.00 per foot, are away down in comparison with other properties equally well located. They form Winnipeg's BEST investment to-day.

AN HOUR'S OVERTIME

"I see you claim one hour's overtime, Bill," said the employer. "How's that? I thought no one worked over time last week."

Bill passed a horny hand across his mouth.

"Quite right," he replied. "One hour's my due."

The master regarded him suspiciously.

"Come when was it?" he inquired.

"Last Thursday," responded Bill. "I was sent up to your own house to help shake the carpets."

"Yes, I remember that distinctly," cut in the boss. "But you got off a six sharp."

"Ah, that's true as far as it goes," assented the man. "But your missus give me half a meat pie to take home and that there hour is for bringing the dish back!"

A quaintly-worded notice is often more effective than one framed in more official terms. At Aber Falls is a notice regarding the slippery condition of the rocks, making climbing dangerous. The notice concludes as follows:—

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

WHEN WOMAN WINS.

'Twas in the year 2011, and the intrepid general was rallying her wavering female troops.

"Women," she cried, "will you give way to manly fears."

A timid murmur ran through the ranks.

"Shall it be said we are clothed in male armour?" shrieked the leader.

The murmur grew more confused.

"Will you," came the taunting cry from their gallant general, "show the white feather at this time of the year, when feathers are out of fashion?"

The effect was wonderful, astounding, marvelous!

"Never!" roared her noble followers, "Never!"

And forming themselves rapidly into battle array, they once more hurled themselves relentlessly upon the enemy.

Just the same.

They had been quarreling, and were indulging in bitter recriminations.

"You can't say I ever ran after you," sobbed the woman.

"True," the man assented. "And you can't say the trap ever runs after the mouse either, but it gathers him in just the same."

HOW TO WALK ON WATER.

Sir Joseph Ward, the Premier of New Zealand, who went to London to attend the Imperial Conference and the Coronation, tells the story of a Maori "witch doctor." The man claimed that he was able to walk upon water, and one day a group of his followers went with him to a lake in order that they might see him perform the miracle. When they reached the water's edge, the "witch doctor" turned to those about him. "Do you all believe that I can walk on the water?" he demanded, in solemn tones.

"Yes, yes," was the reverent answer, "we do believe."

"Then," was the calm reply, "there is no need for me to do it," and walked away.

This reminds us of an interrupter at one of Dr. Torrey's meetings, asking him whether he could walk on water. "I can walk on water," said the famous evangelist, "better than my friend can walk on whisky."

"TOM BROWN'S" BIRTHDAY

The Hero of the Famous Fight Preaches Every Sunday

The hero of one of the finest books for boys ever written has celebrated the eighty-seventh anniversary of his birthday. The Rev. Augustus Orlebar, vicar of Wellington, Bedfordshire, for nearly fifty-three years, is the original of Tom Brown, whose fight with "the Slogger" is so vividly described in "Tom Brown's Schooldays." Mr. Orlebar remembers the encounter very well.

It is not claimed that he represents Tom Brown in any other respect, but he was the Rugby boy who at cover-point caught out the redoubtable batsman in the cricket match against the Marylebone team described in the same story. Hughes, afterwards the judge, was captain of the eleven when he put Orlebar into the team, and Orlebar himself was captain when Dr. Arnold died in 1842.

Despite his age, Mr. Orlebar, as he has always done, enjoys good health. He preaches every Sunday and looks after the Parish generally. Mr. Orlebar is a non-smoker, but not a teetotaler.

GREATLY EXAGGERATED

She had been at the seaside and in the country for the holidays, and her industrious fiancé had been working and waiting for her during the long, long days. Now she had returned, and he had been hearing many things of her, and was sore displeased.

"They tell me," he said, painfully, "that you flirted desperately with no fewer than six men."

Her cheeks flushed and her eyes blazed. "Who told you that?" she asked, angrily.

"Several people. It has been common talk."

Her anger gave way to sobs. "Oh, Frank," she pleaded, as she flung herself on his neck, "it isn't true—it isn't true."

A great load was lifted from his heart. "No, Frank," she went on, "it isn't true; there were only four."

BELOW THE SALT

Servants are becoming so particular nowadays, writes Rosaline in Black and White, that when a certain mistress asked her departing cook if she had got a good place to go to, it was not wholly surprising that the latter should reply: "Oh, yes, Mem; the lady seems all right. Before I decided, I looked her up in Kelly."

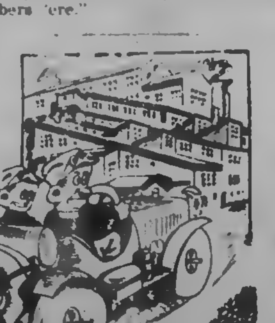
A LIMITED COLLECTION

They tell in London a story of an elderly lady who, while sight-seeing, visited Westminster Abbey. After looking about for some time with an air of eager curiosity, she approached a verger. "I wonder if you can help me?" she asked, hopefully. "I am looking for the grave of King Edward II."

"Sorry, ma'am," said the verger apologetically, "but we 'aven't got Edward II."

"But," protested the visitor, "I understood that the Abbey was the burial place of kings."

"So it is, ma'am, in a way," returned the verger, "but we only 'ave the odd numbers 'ere."



SURELY DO.

Visitor—What do they make in all these mills around here?

Willie—Noise.

Been in Every Prison.

Abraham Lincoln was exceedingly astonished one day as he was inspecting a prison at Washington, by a prisoner exclaiming:—

"How are you, Mr. President? I am glad to see you. I believe that you and I have been in every gaol in the Union."

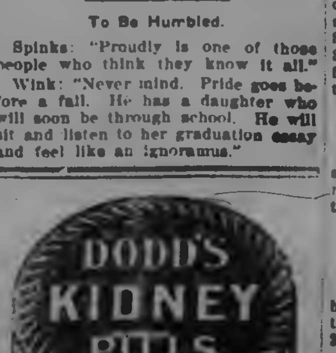
"This and the gaol at Springfield are the only ones I was ever in in my life," replied Lincoln.

"Very likely," responded the "gaol-bird," "but I've been in all the rest."

To Be Humbled.

Spinks: "Proudly is one of those people who think they know it all."

Wink: "Never mind. Pride goes before a fall. He has a daughter who will soon be through school. He will sit and listen to her graduation essay and feel like an ignoramus."



YOUNG THOUGH OLD

Maxims Which Will Help You to Carry Youth Into Age

Expect a good long, useful life.

Hold your thoughts persistently.

Simply refuse to grow old by counting your years or anticipating old age.

Refrain from all kinds of stimulants and sedatives; they will shorten your life.

One of the best preventatives of old age is enthusiasm and interest in affairs of the day.

Keep in the sunlight; nothing beautiful or sweet grows or ripens in the darkness.

Avoid fear in all its varied forms of expression; it is the greatest enemy of the human race.

Nature is the great rejuvenator; her spirit is ever young. Live with her; study her; love her.

Avoid excesses of all kinds; they are injurious. The long life must be a temperate, regular life.

Contemplate beauty in all its forms, and you will drive everything that is ugly out of your life.

Keep mental cobwebs, dust and brain ashes brushed off by frequent trips to the country, or by travel.

Don't allow yourself to think on your birthday that you are a year older, and so much nearer the end.

Never look on the dark side; take sunny views of everything; a sunny thought drives away the shadows.

Be a child; live simply and naturally, and keep clear of entangling alliances and complications of all kinds.

Cultivate the spirit of contentment; all discontentment and dissatisfaction bring age-furrows prematurely to the face.

Keep your mind young by fresh, vigorous thinking, and your heart sound by cultivating a cheerful, optimistic disposition.

Don't live to eat, but eat to live. Many of our ills are due to overeating, to eating wrong things, and to irregular eating.

Don't be too ambitious; the canker of an overvaulting ambition has eaten up the happiness of many a life and shortened its years.

Throw aside your dignity, and romp and play with children; make them love you by loving them, and you will add years to your life.

Think beautiful thoughts—harmony thoughts, beauty thoughts, truth thoughts, thoughts of innocence, of youth, of love, and of kindness.

BRIGHT SAYINGS

Mrs. Nellie L. McClung:—A home can never be replaced by anything else.

Ernest Thomson Seton:—There is little doubt that few men live their full term.

Marion Harland:—There is a closer connection between cooking and conduct than is often admitted.

Dr. James W. Robertson:—No children should be allowed to leave school before they are sixteen years of age.

Arthur Stringer:—Much that has been written might have remained unwritten, and the world no worse off.

Dr. Woodrow Wilson:—If political power becomes divorced from knowledge and sense of duty it will be disastrous.

Capt. Clive Phillips-Woolley:—There are some orators to whom the discharge of a certain number of speeches is necessary for health.

Principal Schurman:—The cause of temperance can be fostered and pushed forward better by educational work than by anything else.

Agnes C. Laut:—When women have got over their want of confidence in their own sex the number of women doctors will largely increase.

Mrs. Margaret Scott:—The most thankful, joyful, and glad-hearted people we come across are often those who have least in this world to make them happy.

Premier Botha:—On broad national lines, with aspirations and ideals in harmony, Canada is moving rapidly ahead—east and west, in city, town, and in prairie. South Africa will do likewise.

SEA SERPENT COMES ASHORE

Peculiar Find Off the Coast of Vancouver Island

The skeleton of a sea serpent recently washed ashore on Catala Island, off Vancouver Island coast, was brought to Seattle to be prepared for shipment to the Smithsonian Institute Museum. The denizen of the deep seas had been dead but a short time. If real live specimens of this species of semi-fish and semi-serpent are still inhabitants of the North Pacific, Herbert Webb and party from the Washington State University will attempt to find them.

Captain J. T. Walbran, of the United States revenue service, saw the strange creature through his glass and went ashore in a small boat. The skeleton is sixteen feet long and twelve inches in diameter. The eyes are still in their sockets and are as large as apples. The top of the head was still covered with coarse brown hair. The teeth, about an inch long, are like miniature saws, and are hinged where they attach to the jawbone, thus enabling them to work cross-wise after the manner of scissors. The skeleton is one of the most remarkable ever found on the Pacific coast, and is a specimen of a rare and strange sea monster. Chinamen at Seattle state that on the coast of South China smaller, but similar, fish are seen during the season when typhoons are prevalent.

THE OLDEST FLAG

The flag of Denmark, a plain red banner bearing on it a white cross, is the oldest flag now in existence. 300 years both Norway and Sweden were united with Denmark under this flag. In the year 1219 King Waldemar of Denmark, when leading his troops to battle against the Livonians, saw, or thought he saw, a bright light in the form of a cross in the sky. He held this appearance to be a promise of Divine aid, and pressed forward to victory. From this time he had the cross placed on the flag of his country, and called it the Dannebork—that is,

MAKING BREAD IN MANY WAYS

A Few of the Numerous Methods By Which It Is Manufactured

In visiting Greece I was struck with the primitive ovens built behind most of the houses in small towns, says a Greece letter in the Bakers' Weekly. They were like large beehives, built of clay; they were evidently solid up to the sole, then had the arched roof over with a door at one side. They are heated with fires of straw and twigs.

In some places we find holes dug in the earth and lined with stones in which a fire is kept burning until sufficient heat is raised, the bread being then put in and a stone laid over the opening, with a fire on it to keep up the cooking heat.

In these ovens, we are told, the South Sea Islanders bake their bread-fruit, yams and roast pork, and doubtless they answer the purpose very well. In some eastern countries fire is put into a large earthen jar with small mouth and sloping sides, the cakes of bread being stuck on the outside of the jar to bake.

Then we know the old fashioned girdle, so much used in old Scottish houses, on which scones, bannocks and oatcakes are fried. This is also employed in Scandinavia for baking the universal "Flad brod," and it is also in use in many other countries in various shapes.

In Cornwall the old kettle style of oven is still used for home baking, the dough being laid on the hot hearthstone with a large round iron pot inverted over it. Fire outside of this keeps up the baking heat and the Cornish "kettle bread" is very good eating indeed, even if it is a little puddingly in the centre sometimes.

Even more primitive means of baking have to be used sometimes, as when the Austrian digger rolls up his "damper" in leaves and covers it with hot ashes to bake; but still all methods from hot stones to draw plate ovens are used for the one great purpose, to make bread, and the variety of means used for this end goes to show the universal importance of that article. Regular bakehouses with proper ovens seem to have been in use however, for hundreds of years, and doubtless many relics of them are still in existence.

A LIBEL ON THE EAST

A famous impresario of Italian opera had arranged to open at Covent Garden about the middle of May; but, after having made his intention public, something caused him to alter his arrangements, and he announced the opening for the beginning of May.

The day his advertisement appeared he met the proprietor of a well-known "gaff" then situated in Whitechapel, who exclaimed:

"You have done a nice thing for me, making your season a fortnight earlier!"

"What difference can it make to you?" cried the West-ender. "Your audience won't patronize my theatre."

"No," replied the "gaffer"; "but they'll be outside it picking pockets!"

MILK POINTS

Don't keep milk where it will be warmer than 50 degrees.

Don't leave it in an open dish or pan.

Don't put it in the bottom of the refrigerator.

Keep the cow's tail still by banishing flies. A simple spray will do it.

Strain all milk thoroughly. Germs cling to the dirt particles and may thus be eliminated.

Sterilize all crocks, pails, cans and bottles by boiling.

A local citizen yesterday remarked to a Times' reporter: "I only wish notes in the banks would dissolve as quickly as the snow melts to-day.

Peterborough, in all its history, has never had a subject of either national or international talk, that has excited her thinking people, more than the present coal strike.

A well known newspaper, in yesterday's issue, stated in speaking of a certain Sunday school, noted that a prominent member thereof had been present fifty three Sundays during the year. Now, we have had a long winter, but !

How would a few local citizens, who daily walk the streets of Peterborough and who "toil not neither do they spin," like to be dealt with, as was a Chicago man, on March 17th. The sentence was because "he was doing nothing," but he must spend six months in the "Bridewell,"

GERMANY AT OLYMPIA

One Hundred and Sixty Athletes and Their Friends Leave on Steamer

Difficulties have arisen in connection with the sending of the 160 German champions who are to enter the lists for the Fatherland at the Olympian Games to be held in Stockholm. When the agent of the German Athletic Union went lately to the Swedish capital, he could find only sixty bedrooms available for the champions, with a charge of $2.50 a day for bed and breakfast, $2.50 for other meals and the necessity, moreover, of sleeping two and three in a room. Under the circumstances the Union hit upon the happy idea of chartering a steamer and converting it into an hotel which can also be used to lodge part of the three thousand German guests who, it is estimated, will attend the sports. The 160 German champions will be all clad alike in yachting blue, with a blue cap sporting the Imperial colors. The Germans are very confident of carrying off no small share of the prizes, though they regret not having followed Norway's example, which has engaged a trainer at a half-year's salary of $5,000.

ARMED AIRSHIPS

An Inventor Devises a New Weapon for Aviators

Many well-known people in England have signed a protest organised by the International Arbitration League against the use of airships in war. Among other things the protest says:

"We appeal to all Governments to foster by every means in their power an international understanding which shall preserve the world from what will add a new hideousness to the present hideousness of warfare.

"Without universal agreement, no single Power can stay its hand: every day of ingenuity and every pound of money spent diminishes the chance for such agreement.

"The occasion is unique. The civilised world is now alive to the ghastliness and economic waste of war; the Hague Conference is an established fact. For the first time, in the face of a new development of the arts of fighting, nations possess both the conscience and the machinery necessary to check that development effectually.

"All civilisation protests its desire for peace and goodwill; protests its wish to reduce the already grievous burden of armaments. Unless its protestations be those of a hopeless hypocrite, it cannot stand and watch the conquest of the air, that most glorious of men's mechanical achievements, callously turned to the usages of destruction; it cannot idly acquiesce in a new departure that must heavily increase this burden of armaments."

As if to lend force to the protest comes the news that the French War Office is examining and will probably adopt a new bullet for use in war time by aviators. It is a kind of round steel pencil, about six inches in length, with a conical tip. The other end of it carries a little device in the form of a cross, which causes the bullet to fall perpendicularly.

These projectiles can be thrown by handfuls from an aeroplane passing over a body of troops, and the damage they would do is enormous.

ACTRESS AND LIONESS

A young actress, Mlle. Julienne Leecanche, had a terrible experience at Rouen in a cage containing two lionesses. She insisted on entering with the man who went to feed the animals. Hardly had she crossed the threshold when one of the lionesses sprang at her, felling her to the ground. The lioness began to claw the young woman's head and shoulders. With a struggle the actress got her arm free and the lion tamer drove the animal into a corner. Mlle. Leecanche was taken to hospital in a serious condition.

IN CANADA

"Love, Laughter and Life"

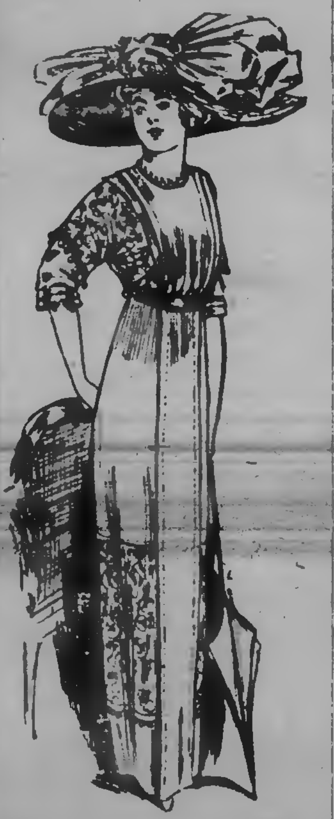
OUTPOSTS OF THE HOME

It is one of the most elemental principles of warfare that a body of soldiers who are encamped or resting shall be protected from surprise by means of outposts. Outposts are small bodies of men detached and pushed outwards to keep watch. On the approach of an enemy they immediately give the alarm, and, unless otherwise ordered, do their best to hold the foe at bay until the whole camp has had time to get under arms.

This is a principle that might well be applied to our everyday lives. In the great campaign that is waged daily in millions of homes, with family love and happiness as the prize of victory, every household is like a camp, and requires to be carefully guarded, lest there should penetrate ill-humor, jealousy, temper, selfishness, or any other of the host of enemies that surround it, watchful and eager to step in and work havoc with the well-being and happiness of the family. So long as all these deadly foes are kept well at a distance, they will have but little opportunity of doing harm; but once let them get to close quarters, as it were, and there is no knowing what disaster may result. The worst might happen, and the happiness of the home be wrecked.

Each of us, then, is responsible for the safety of his or her own particular portion of the home camp. So long as each one keeps the fierce foes of jealousy, strife, irritability and selfishness out of his own soul, he is doing his duty nobly and well.

Watch yourself. Keep strict sentry-go on your own temper, and as soon as you detect in yourself the slightest leaning towards grumbling, discontent, egotism, or ill-humor, take strong measures to repel it. Don't let the enemy through, or it may be fatal to the happiness of your home. If you find you have not the strength to drive them away yourself, "alarm the camp," get your family to help you crush in yourself these disturbing tendencies. Don't be afraid to talk about your faults. "Open confession is good for the soul." Keep out the enemy at all costs!



A SMART STREET COSTUME

The model here shown is of old blue pongee and linen lace dyed to match. The combination is very rich and distinctive in style. The sleeves and edge of the jacket and lower edge of the band of lace on the skirt are bordered with a narrow band of blue silk and finished with silk grelots in a shade of blue to match.

The hat is a graceful shape of black crin, trimmed with large flat loops of soft silk in old blue, and a wreath of pink roses.

A WOMAN ON WOMEN

A woman can say "No" and stick to it for a time. She can also say "No" in such a way that it means "Yes." She can sharpen a lead pencil if you give her plenty of time, and pencils. She can walk half the night with a noisy baby in her arms without once complaining. She can appreciate a kiss from her husband seventy-five years after the marriage ceremony has taken place; suffer any abuse and neglect for years which one touch of kindness or consideration will drive from her recollection. A woman can do almost anything or everything, and do it well. She can make the alleged lords of creation bow down to her own sweet will, and they will never know it. Moreover, she can tell when a man is in love with her before he knows it himself.

A SEWING-MACHINE WRINKLE

A hand sewing-machine is often very apt to slip about on the table. To obviate this, all that is necessary is to place a couple of the old-fashioned gelatine lozenges, slightly moistened, under each corner of the base board. In a few seconds the machine will be found to adhere to the table and equal a stand-machine in firmness.

Baked Roly-Poly

One pound of flour, half a pound of dripping, four ounces of currants, a cupful of syrup, one teaspoonful of baking-powder. Rub the dripping into the flour, add the baking-powder, and mix to a stiff dough with a little cold water. Roll out, spread the syrup over, and scatter the currants on this. Roll up like a roly-poly, and bake in a moderate oven for about an hour. When half done brush over with milk. It gives the pudding a nicer appearance. This is a very economical pudding for a large family, and a nice change from a boiled one.

Judging by the report of the supplementary estimates, it would be dangerous for a Peterborough marksman to fire off a gun in Ottawa. He would likely kill or wound some kind of private secretary.

Practical Dairyman, a paper with a self explanatory title, gives pictures of cows that have given as high as ten thousand, eight hundred pounds of milk. And still milk in this city sells at 7 cents, and butter at any old price

HOME HINTS

Useful Facts for the Thrifty Canadian Housewife

To clean a "fishy" frying-pan, fill with cold water, and place on the fire to boil. When boiling, put a red hot cinder in, and then wash in the usual way.

Clothes in the Kitchen

Clothes should never hang in the kitchen longer than is necessary for airing them, for unpleasant odors of cooking will get into them, and cannot be got rid of without washing.

A Wise Precaution

Before taking a house, no matter of what size, have the drainage thoroughly inspected by the local inspector. It will not cost you very much, but you may save a doctor's bill, as typhoid and diphtheria often result through neglect of this precaution.

Kitchen Cupboards

Get two or three orange boxes with partitions, stand them on end, side by side, and nail them together. On the top put a piece of thick oil-cloth. This makes a good shelf on which to stand pots and pans, and on the shelves beneath many things can be stored.

To Wash a Knitted Coat

Put the coat into an old pillow-case, and dip it into warm soapsuds. Squeeze, but do not rub, until all dirt disappears; then rinse in several clean, lukewarm waters to get out all the soap. Squeeze out some of the water, and lay the coat in the sun to dry.

Stair Cleaning

When sweeping stairs, every housewife knows the trouble it is to get the dust out of the corners. If triangular-shaped pieces of wood are cut and fixed into the corners, a great deal of time may be saved when cleaning, as dust cannot get in. The pieces of wood should be painted to match the stairs.

A Cake-Making Secret

The secret of making good cakes is to mix them with as little moisture as possible, and have the dough firm and stiff. Large cakes need a moderate oven; small ones do better in a brisk one; and when they have risen the heat must be slackened off, so that the interior of the cake may be thoroughly done.

An Economical Stew

Cut one pound and a half of shin of beef into small pieces, dip each piece into flour, pepper and salt, and put into a stewing-jar. Fill up with chopped vegetables, the greater variety the better; do not add any water. Put on the cover, tie it over with greased paper, and set the jar in a moderate oven for about six hours.

Flat Cake

When you are making bread, save a pound of dough; work into it two ounces of lard, the same of currants, and an ounce of sugar. Knead all together, and form into a flat cake upon an old plate. Score across the top, and bake for three-quarters of an hour. Ten minutes before the cake is done brush it over with milk, and scatter brown sugar over it. This is a very inexpensive cake for tea.

Cocoa Blanc Mange

Mix together one tablespoonful of cocoa, three tablespoonfuls of cornflour, and two tablespoonfuls of castor sugar. Stir these gradually into a quart of cold milk, put into an enamelled saucepan, and boil for a quarter of an hour, stirring all the time. As soon as it begins to thicken take the saucepan off the fire, and beat the mixture thoroughly; then let it simmer only. Pour into a wet mould to set.

Hints for the Laundry

Articles that have been put away rough dried, when required again are often extremely tiresome to iron, owing to the difficulty of getting them properly damped. If, however, they are well sprinkled, rolled up tightly, wrapped in a damp cloth, and then in a newspaper, and placed for a few minutes in a cool oven with the door open, the heat will cause the steam to rise through the material, and thoroughly soften it, and the articles can then be ironed with perfect ease.

KING AND HIS CHILDREN

His Majesty Finds His Chief Relaxation Among the Children

In his own home, and especially in the nursery of his children, the King has always found his chief relaxation. He dislikes functions which take him away from those whom he loves best in the world. Nothing pleases him more than to be able to steal an hour from the duties of State in order to take part in the innocent amusements of the nursery. From the birth of his first child he has always been delighted to bring home toys, chiefly of the mechanical order. He is regarded by the children, indeed, as the greatest living expert in the art of constructing mimic fortifications and in the manoeuvring of toy soldiers.

The story goes that on one occasion one of his children was asked which he liked best, his father or his mother. The boy replied, "I like them both the same"; then he added, after a moment's reflection, "I think dadda spoils me most." It is not only in their games, but in their education, that the King has taken the keenest personal interest in the upbringing of his little ones.

A story was told that once, while at Balmoral, the Prince of Wales was away for a few days on a visit to London to do some shopping. The children, even on holiday in the Highlands, were kept under firm but kind discipline by their mother. "While she was away, however," says a lady who was at Balmoral at the time, "the Prince of Wales had his sons and daughter to himself. He romped with them, and they had the time of their lives."

The same lady is the authority for a pretty story with respect to King Edward's partiality for his granddaughter, the Princess Mary. The Royal party were travelling southwards, by special train, of course. The children had a saloon carriage to themselves. The little Princess, however, found her way to the saloon of her grandfather and grandmother and there remained. When Prince Edward attempted to follow her, he was firmly checked, and had it impressed upon him that his sister was a privileged person with the King, and was allowed liberties that were not meant for boys.—From "King George and Queen Mary," by Henry Warwick.

CATS IN JAPAN

In the Beginning the Felines Were Only for the Best Homes

According to the Japanese, the domestic cat appeared in their country at a relatively recent epoch, having travelled from China with the missionaries of Buddhism. In the middle of the sixth century of the Christian era sacrifices were offered to the cat, which was known by all as "the guardian of the manuscripts."

"The guardian of the manuscripts" kept away the mice, which otherwise would have eaten the [illegible] rolls. In some instances placards were set in conspicuous places among manuscripts as a warning to the mice: "Beware! The cat is here. She drives the mice." Portraits of cats were also placed in parts frequented by mice.

The cats were revered. For a long time they were kept in the temples. But their beauty, their general desirability and the charm of their grace, affection for man, and adaptability to human conditions, so appealed to the layman that one by one very gradually their kittens were permitted to leave the temples and to become the pets of the nobility. After entering the families of the high officials of the empire they won their way into humbler households.

PERILS OF BOTANY

A particularly exciting episode in the career of that veteran botanist, Sir Joseph Hooker, who recently celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday, occurred when, some sixty years ago, he undertook a mission to unfamiliar regions in India, penetrated the Himalayan fastnesses, and, being detected botanizing on the Tibet border, was seized, imprisoned, and beaten, and came very near losing his life. It is to Sir Joseph that we owe our knowledge of the flora of the Antarctic, and seventy years have passed since he visited the South Polar regions.

STORIES OF A BISHOP

A hundred and one stories are told concerning Dr. Glyn, the Bishop of Peterborough, who was recently presented with a magnificent cope by the clergy and laity of his diocese. A rich and benevolent millionaire was once boasting to Dr. Glyn of the amount he gave annually in charity, as though he was certain it would secure him one of the best seats in Paradise. "Well," remarked the Bishop, on hearing the amount, "that is the largest insurance against fire I have ever heard of."

A SPORTING PRINCE

Polo and hockey player, cyclist, motorist, yachtsman, and steeplechase rider, the German Crown Prince is steadily acquiring a reputation as an all-round sportsman. An enthusiastic admirer, indeed, has predicted that he will make the German nation the first sporting people in the world. The Prince has had many adventures and curious experiences, and only a few months ago, during his visit to India, while on a motoring tour from Lucknow, lost his way completely. Eventually his car broke down in the wilds, and he had to return to civilization by means of a devious cross-country journey by boat, carrier, and rail, having meanwhile missed an important official fête which had been organized in his honor.

About Actresses

Ellen Terry was one day talking about the many women who asked her to help them get on the stage, when she said: "Every woman under thirty imagines that she is an actress. And every actress believes that she is under thirty."

RABIES, HYDROPHOBIA

A History of the Disease and How to Treat It

During the past year many cases of rabies have been reported in Canada which have caused much loss of live stock, and, in several localities, people have been bitten.

This is one of the oldest diseases known. In the fourth century B. C. it was described by Aristotle, who wrote: "Dogs suffer from a madness which puts them in a state of fury, and all the animals that they bite when in this condition become also attacked by rabies."

The season of the year makes very little difference, as the disease is just as prevalent in winter as it is in summer. This seems contrary to the idea of many people, who think that July and August, "dog days," are the only time that dogs are subject to rabies.

Cause

Rabies is caused in nearly all cases by the bite of a rabid animal. It is possible to contract the disease from the saliva, the tears from the eyes, or the milk of a rabid animal. The rabid dog is a source of danger a few days before the symptoms of the disease appear, but in no case before he was bitten by a rabid animal, or otherwise innoculated. Hot weather, lack of water or ill treatment will never in themselves produce rabies.

The dog is the principal source of which rabies is spread over the country.

Symptoms

The symptoms seldom develop in less than fourteen days after the animal was bitten—most commonly three to six weeks—but they may not show for six months to a year. Not all animals bitten develop the disease. It depends somewhat upon the part of the body which was bitten. In man there is less danger if bitten through the clothing than upon the bare parts of the body. It is not uncommon for the symptoms to develop in less than two weeks when bitten upon the head. The symptoms show, in one of two forms—furious or dumb.

Furious Rabies

With the furious form the dog is at first noticed to seek the company of his master more than usual, or he will hunt dark, secluded places. Sometimes he will make sudden starts towards objects. These conditions last for a day or two. Later he becomes restless, and will often travel twenty to thirty miles in a day. While he is on this trip he is very likely to bite cattle, hogs, and dogs often passing horse and man, unless they interfere with his course. He will usually return home unless he is killed. During this period he is irritable, seldom eating or drinking, not because he does not want food or water, nor because he is afraid of water, for he is not, but from the fact that his throat is paralyzed and he cannot swallow. Often he will force sticks and stones [illegible] efforts to satisfy [illegible] hunger and thirst. This period of irritation lasts for two to three days, followed by a period of paralysis which has already taken place in the throat, as shown by the voice, which has already changed to a prolonged howl, and the inability to swallow. This is followed by paralysis and death, the entire symptoms lasting from four to ten days.

Dumb Rabies

The dog seeks his master's company or may hide in dark places, being unable to eat or drink, the lower jaw drops down and the tongue protrudes, which may swell and turn dark. This condition is followed by paralysis and death in four to ten days after the first symptoms appear.

Symptoms

Cattle are prone to chase chickens dogs, and may run at a man, whom they are less apt to attack. Often falling down from no apparent cause twitching of muscles, inability to eat, due to paralysis, often showing signs of sexual excitement even when pregnancy is well advanced, but seldom biting. These symptoms are followed by paralysis and death.

The horse is often more vicious than cattle, biting anything within reach, and shows many of the symptoms shown by cattle.

Diagnosis

This is made from microscopic examination of the brain, which shows small round or oval bodies from 1-25,000 to 1-1,000 of an inch in diameter. They have never been found unless the animal has been inoculated with rabies virus. There are also changes in the nervous ganglia in the last stage of rabies, but this manner of diagnosis is more uncertain and of little use in the early stages of the disease. Sticks and stones may be found in the stomach of a rabid dog.

Treatment

This consists of a preventative treatment (Pasteur), which must be taken before the symptoms have developed. In order to be effective it should be taken within a few days after having been bitten by a rabid animal. The treatment may also be given to valuable domestic animals.

NINE HEALTH COMMANDMENTS

1. Keep windows open day and night.
2. Do not spit.
3. Breathe through the nose by keeping the mouth shut.
4. Drink pure water.
5. Eat slowly, take well-cooked meals, and cultivate regular habits.
6. Wear loose clothing of seasonable material.
7. Take regular open-air exercise, in sunshine if possible.
8. Wash the whole body at least once a week.
9. Work but do not worry.

A balanced ration is just as essential for poultry as it is for other live stock. A few crumbs from the table or an occasional feed of corn will never produce profitable fowl. It pays to feed a balanced ration.

BRAINS IN DUPLICATE

Facts About the Curious Working of Your Thinking Faculties

Have you ever thought of how your brain works? Most people imagine that their brains work as a whole, but modern science says this is not so. The newest theory is that the brain is for all the world like a big department store. When ribbons are wanted it is only the ribbon department that is concerned. Similarly your brain has innumerable tiny niches, corresponding to your various accomplishments and branches of knowledge, from billiard playing to reading French. When you start to study a foreign language, or a musical instrument, you are literally carving a new niche in your brain.

The brain is like a big department store in another way—a store supplied with water-pipes running to each department. In the brain these are represented by a maze of tiny arteries carrying blood. Just as the water-pipes on one particular floor might burst and ruin the goods in that department alone, so if the walls of an artery in the brain are weakened by poisoned blood, the blood may burst through and ruin that particular niche. Many a man has risen in the morning to find that he has, say, forgotten how to read. Or if the damage is less wide, he may have forgotten how to read his own language, and still be able to read any other language he knows. This might also happen as the result of an accident. You might lose the use of a small part of your brain, and yet have the rest of your faculties intact.

Even in the niches there are fine sub-divisions. The various parts of speech, for instance, are arranged in a language niche like books on a shelf. And just as the books on a shelf may be squeezed so tight that none of them will come out, so a tumor on a language shelf may jam all the grammatical parts of speech so that the patient is dumb. It is known that on that shelf the verbs are placed first, the pronouns next, the prepositions and adverbs next, and the nouns last.

The reason is that our verbs are the things we learn first, long before nouns. A baby sees long before it knows it sees. The nouns that we learn last, and so forget soonest, are people's names. That is why old people have such bad memories for names.

Everybody, it is now known, has two brains. They sit side by side, and are exactly alike, but while the niches in one are crammed with various sorts of knowledge, those in the other are blank and empty. A right-handed man thinks with the left side of his brain, a left-handed man with the right. The only use each of us makes of our dummy brain is to control the movements of the opposite side of the body—the weaker side. It knows nothing. It learns nothing. You could have it cut away without lessening your mental power. Many a man has had this done. [illegible] can teach it. A man with his utterance niche ruined struggles in vain to use the reserve one. It is too old to be taught. But many a child has been struck dumb and has taught its other brain. It has, however, to start all over again with "Mamma" and "Dadda," even at the age of nine or ten.—Answers.

HOW TO TREAT A WIFE

A Scottish Judge's Remarks on This Subject

In a Glasgow divorce action the decision of the case, his Lordship said, depended on the standard of conduct on the part of a husband towards his wife which would entitle the wife to judicial separation. A husband was bound in law to treat his wife as a gentleman should, or to put it otherwise, reasonably, considerately, and sympathetically, with the result that if he failed to do so his wife could get judicial separation from him, then in this case it was clear that the pursuer would be entitled to the remedy she asked. From the first she was not treated with reasonable consideration. Instead of humoring her and making allowance for her and paying her special attention, the defendant seemed to have kept up his bachelor habits, with the result of mutual unhappiness, for which, although not without provoking language and unreasonable expectations and exactions on her part, he seemed to have been mainly responsible. But to succeed in her demand it was common ground that the pursuer must prove treatment on the part of the defender which had produced substantial injury to her health, mental or physical. His Lordship found no such evidence. He thought it right to add the hope that the parties would, in their own interests and for the sake of their child, now resolve to let bygones be bygones. Nothing had happened on either side, or on the part of the relatives of either party, to prevent the resumption of conjugal relations. Nothing was to be gained on either side by going further with the action.

Did Well in Prison

"Penal servitude must be a healthy state of things," remarked the Recorder of Birmingham to a prisoner, "or you would not look so well on it after thirty-six years of it." The man was ordered to be imprisoned for one day.

He Was Jilted

A man of 75, who sued a woman of 63 at Swaffham, Norfolk, for the return of $35 and some furniture, said that after he had entrusted the money and things to her, with the idea of getting married, she jilted him and married another.

ANCIENT BULLION

Portion of Soudan Treasure Trove for Ontario Museum

Charles T. Currelley, director of the new museum of Toronto University, has received word that a good sample of the treasure trove of royal bullion, brought to light recently by Professor Garstang, of Liverpool University, England, in the course of his excavations at the ancient City of Meroe, in the Soudan, Africa, which existed about the time of Christ, was on its way to the museum. The bullion belonged to the ancient kings. Mr. Currelley related the very interesting circumstances associated with this sensational find. "Shortly after the time of Christ," he said, "the Soudan had a sudden burst of energy and greatness that those who have followed the Mahdi and Khalifa in recent times can understand, at least, to some extent. The great centre of this period was the town of Meroe, in the Soudan. Here great monuments were built and work was done that is surprisingly skilful and beautiful, though, of course, it is impossible to say how much of it was actually done by the Etheopians, or the Soudanese themselves, or how far it was the result of imported slave or free labor from Northern Africa, or, in fact, from anywhere on the Mediterranean. For some time Professor Garstang, of Liverpool, has been carrying on most sucessful excavations at Meroe, and last year the Royal Ontario Museum received, through the kindness of Mr. Robert Mond, of London, England, who is partially financing the expedition, some exquisite pieces of the ceramics of this period. This last winter Professor Garstang discovered the ancient treasure house of the Kings of Meroe, and there was still in the place a quantity of the royal bullion in gold nuggets, dust, etc., to the value of many thousands of dollars. It is probable that this new gift of a portion of bullion is also through the kindness of Mr. Mond.

"One is apt to speculate as to what happened to that ancient Minister of Finance and to the whole staff of clerical and manual helpers, or in any way why a large mass of such portable treasure should have been left for nearly 2,000 years. At any rate, we are very glad that a part of it will find a home in Toronto"

Mr. Currelley added that the records of ancient history threw very little light on the existence of the City of Meroe. There is a script at the ancient site of the once great city, and two men have been working on it, but so far have not been able to make head or tail out of it.

ECONOMY OF GOOD ROADS

The Cost of Haulage is Enormously Decreased

The value of good roads becomes evident when we look at the financial side of the problem. The cost of hauling one ton one mile is nine cents in Germany and twenty-five cents in the United States; the difference is largely one of road bed. If we apply these figures to hauling, say, 5,000 bushels of wheat five miles, the cost in Europe would be $67.50, in the United States $187.50, or $120 more. It will be safe to say that where 5,000 bushels of wheat is raised, as much more hauling will be done which would represent another $120, or $240, the extra outlay caused by poor roads. This is only one item. Good roads increase the value of the land—$5 an acre is putting it too low, but at that it amounts to $1,600 for a half section—then the convenience and the ability to market at any time, so that advantage can be taken of the highest prices. The man in town realises the value of good roads, and he gets them. He paves the sidewalks and streets. He knows that they will increase his business, his comforts and social advantages, but no more so than in the country for the farmer.—North Dakota Agricultural College.

THE HIGHEST DIGNITY

There joined the police force of London a young Scotchman but recently arrived from his native land. Being detailed one day to block the traffic on a certain thoroughfare where members of royalty were expected to pass, he was accosted by a lady hurrying to keep an appointment who thrust her head from the carriage window to remonstrate with him over the delay. "I canna let you pass, ma'am," answered the man of the baton. "But, sir, do you know who I am. I am the wife of a Cabinet Minister." "It disna mak no difference, ma'am," he answered. "I couldn'a let you pass if you were the wife of a Presbyterian minister."—Presbyterian Standard.

His wife pre-deceased him by some years. Several children are left to mourn his loss. Particulars as to funeral were not available last night, but will be given in to-morrow's issue.

A New Dairy.

The Villiers Dairy Co. has been formed to operate the Villiers cheese factory. In the charter applied for, the capitalization is placed at $10,000 and the provisional directors are Messrs. Frank Elmhurst, president; Thos. Shearer, Alex. Wood, A. Harris and Thos. Fox. Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie of this city has been appointed managing director for the time being.

Face Burned by a Celluloid Shield.

Those who wear celluloid collars, eye shades or other articles of this inflammable substance, should be cautious about fire, even the flame of a match. A few days ago, Mr. J. A. Derbyshire, Brockville, whilst in the office of the Dairy Expert, Mr. Dan. Derbyshire, who is well known here, was wearing a celluloid shield to protect his eyes. Whilst lighting his pipe the shield caught fire and Mr. Derbyshire had his face badly burned.

Young People at Springville.

Whilst the young people of Knox church were on their trip to Springville, Monday night, they had a good experience of bad roads. However, the hearty welcome accorded by the Y.P. of Springville church recompensed them for their experience on the road. Among those who took part in the musical program rendered were: Miss Shepard, Mr. Anderson, Miss Fair, Miss Davis, Mr. Dixon, Miss Peters, Mr. Lorimer, and Miss Chiles.

Fire Alarm Trouble Found.

A serious condition was reported to The Times yesterday as regards fire alarms. It seems that the mechanism connecting the town clock with the fire alarm system and the large bells refused to respond when a call was rung in from an alarm box. Chief Howard and some mechanics have worked hard to get this important difficulty eliminated. They ascertained that the trouble was caused by other wires crossing the wires leading to the fire alarm system.

Shantymen Fined For Indulging.

Unfortunately some men coming from the shanties, after a winter spent amid the snow covered wilds, and after listening to nothing more exciting than the wind sighing through the pines, on their arrival, when such goods are to be procured, indulge in the cup or glass, that not only cheers, but inebriates. Fred Eastland and Thos. Flannagan kept strictly to this tradition and got tight. At yesterday's police court, they paid $2 each for following said tradition and also had to submit to a well worded and kindly address of warning by Magistrate Dumble.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Harry Phelan, collector of Inland Revenue, was in Lindsay yesterday on business.

Mrs. Geo. Hatton, Monaghan road, has gone to Toronto, where she will spend a few days the guest of friends.

Lindsay Post: Mr. Lundy, representing the Peterboro Shovel & Tool Co., was in town to-day on business.

Mrs. L. Pickering, of Lindsay, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Anderson, 267 Concession street, Peterborough.

Mrs. John Gemmel and Miss Dolly Comstock are visiting Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Cant, South Water street, Galt.

Lindsay Post: Mr. Fred Garden of the Garden Printery, Peterborough, was in town to-day on business.

The Times had the pleasure of a call yesterday from Mr. John J. Rose, representing the Robt. Redford Co., Limited, steamship agents, of Montreal. "Jack," as he is known by his many friends in Peterborough, looks well, and reports business booming. In his visit to The Times he was accompanied by his old friend Mr. Wm. Snowden, who acted as guide and interpreter.

An item appeared in an evening contemporary to the effect that Mrs. A. W. Cressman, who with Mr. Cressman is spending a few weeks in Florida, is dangerously ill. There is no truth whatever in the statement; Mrs. Cressman is only slightly indisposed, the result of a severe cold. Her hosts of friends will be pleased to learn that she is now recovering and expects to start for home in the course of a week or two.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

Peterboro had a reminder yesterday that spring may be on the way.

The Togaballa Basket ball Club held a practice last night at the Y.M.C.A.

"All quiet," was the news given The Times by the Fire Hall last night.

St. Patrick's Day was celebrated in Ennismore by a successful concert held in St. Martin's Hall.

Manvers township is arranging to build a new town hall at Bethany, to replace the one destroyed by fire last fall.

Shantymen should keep to the straight and narrow path they traversed whilst in the woods, as far as temperance is concerned.

About fifty people attended the very enjoyable At-Home held in the West End Club. Miss Gladman, in her usual style supplied the dance music.

Thunder was heard yesterday, another reminder that the spring zephyrs will soon be playing round the feathers and furbelows of Peterborough's fair sex' hats.

Lindsay Post: Peterborough had to pay Berlin $500 for the release of "Old Folks" Templin, who will manage the Electric City ball team in the Canadian League this season.

At the conclusion of the entertainment at the Grand Opera House on Monday night, the Four Leafed Shamrock Company, with a few friends, enjoyed a supper at Hooper's Palm Garden.

The largest and best Vacuum Carpet Cleaner in the city can be rented by the day. Just the thing for Spring house cleaning. For particulars Phone No. 274.

The good people of this city and county will hope that Rev. I. R. Hicks, the "long distance weather profit" is wrong. He prognosticates that we will have severe storms and a hot summer.

Yesterday about noon hour there was a short flurry of snow. At 5 p.m. on the same day of March, 1911, according to a diary kept by Mr. Edgerton Hartley, there was a similar snow fall.

The Young People of Gilmour Baptist church, on the evening of March 18th, gave a very successful Irish Evening. The school was appropriately decorated and a splendid musical program rendered.

One solitary drunk passed the hours away last night at the Police Station. The only remarkable circumstance about this, was his sonorous snoring. He would take a medal for beating a fife and drum band for noise, in that respect.

DOMINION FAIR A BIG EVENT

The Exhibition of 1912 to be a Record Breaker

The decision of the Federal Government to hold the Dominion Fair in Ottawa this year, at once turned the attention of stock breeders, manufacturers and exhibitors in general, all over Canada, to the coming Central Canadian Exhibition. The special grant of $50,000 from the government has already brought extra amounts from the regular sources of maintenance. Every department of the Fair will be improved from 100 to 200 per cent. Live stock and other premiums are to be at least doubled, and a similar policy will be followed in securing attractions.

On learning of the Dominion grant the Fair managers set to work enthusiastically. The first thing was to extend the dates, taking an extra Saturday into the Exhibition period. The Fair will open on Thursday, September 5th. The first two days will be for preparation, and Saturday, September 7th, will see the event in full swing. It will continue till Monday, September 16th, inclusive.

The management has started off with completing arrangements for the erection of a $90,000 machinery hall. The building will be 144x384 feet, made of brick, fire-proof, and of architectural design to conform with the other handsome edifices on the grounds. This means that the large number of manufacturers of farm implements and other machinery who have deferred coming to Ottawa will have to be on hand at the 1912 Fair and add much to its educational value. It is too soon to speculate on the special attractions, but it is known that the directors are negotiating through Col. Lowther of the Govenor-General's staff to secure the famous band of the Scots Guards for open air concerts.

The broad scale on which the Dominion Fair is to be conducted has necessitated beginning the work of preparation months before the usual time. The enlargement of the prize lists means a lot of carefull revision and several important changes will be announced later. Inquiries are pouring in already from all parts since the special nature of the Fair became known. As far as amusements and exhibits are concerned it will simply be a matter of selecting the best from a great host.

COAL OPERATORS NOW SAY THE STRIKE WILL NOT LAST

New York, Mar. 18.—The belief that a suspension of work in the anthracite coal mines on April 1 because of the deadlock between the operators and mine workers over the working conditions will not be continued long, and that a settlement will be reached, was expressed by coal operators here to-day. It was pointed out that a similar situation existed when the agreement of the mine workers expired before. There was a refusal of the mine workers' demands, followed by a suspension and later negotiations were opened and the old agreement renewed.

SPAIN REJECTS FRENCH DEMANDS IN MOROCCO

Paris, March 18.—The Spanish government's reply to the last French note on the subject of Morocco is a flat rejection of France's request for territorial compensations in that country. Spain merely offers what amounts to a rectification of the frontier from which France would gain nothing.

The Temps says that if this is Spain's last word on the subject of Morocco it is difficult to foresee what will be the next step in the negotiations.

THOUGHTLESS.

From The Houston Post.

"Your Honor," said the arrested chauffeur, "I tried to warn the man, but the horn wouldn't work."

"Then why did you not slacken the speed rather than run him down?"

A light seemed to dawn upon the prisoner. "That's one on me, I never thought of that."

ENGLISH COLLIERS PREPARE TO CALL PRESENT STRIKE OFF

Opposition to Minimum Wage Bill May Become Very Vigorous, But Bonar Law May Introduce an Amendment

The Officials of the Scottish Unions Received Telegraphic Instructions From London to Make Arrangements

Strikers May Return to Work in the British Coal Pits on the Morning of March 25th

London, Mar. 20.—The strike of the coal miners became more of a national problem to-day following conferences held by the miners union committee and the committee of the operators. While these conferences were separate, their conclusions were the same. Both severely criticized the proposed minimum wage scale bill of the Government, and feared that the bill was so framed as to defeat its purpose.

In a statement issued after the conference, the committee of the operators said that the bill contained no guarantees that the miners would live up to its provisions. They insisted that it utterly failed to protect the employer from miners who failed to work faithfully, and that it was so loosely drawn that unending litigation over its provisions was certain. The miners' committee also insisted that it was inadequate in that the only recourse that a miner [illegible] was a civil suit against the employer, which would cost more than it would be worth.

Meanwhile the Government officials are preparing to get the bill through the House and signed by the King, not later than Saturday.

LAW'S DESTRUCTIVE CRITICISM

New York, Mar. 20.—A cable to the Tribune from London says:

The Unionist leader, A. Bonar Law appeared at yesterday's debate on the introduction of the Minimum Wage bill as a plain business man among demoralized dreamers and opportunists. Mr Asquith had preceded him in a speech which disclosed weariness of mind and lack of concentration. He failed to explain his bill with any degree of lucidity, and virtually confessed that it was a makeshift reluctantly adopted by the Government because negotiations to end the big strike had proved futile, and that it would be tentatively applied for three years.

The Prime Minister disappointed his radical followers with the feebleness of his argument.

BOURASSA AND HIS PROPOGANDA

Well, Mr. Bourassa has been out gunning and his game bag is empty. This energetic and somewhat dogmatic politician, thought that the tail could wag the dog. In his opinion, Canada was the dog and Quebec, dominated as he thought by himself, was the tail. To return to the original metaphor, Bourassa went gunning after the Right Hon. Mr. Borden, thinking, with the Nationalist party as ammunition, he would cripple, if not destroy, the Conservative party. That party, however, on the Separate School question, for Manitoba, was proof against Mr. Bourassa. In fact, most of Mr. Bourassa's shot and shell rebounded against him, as a majority of the Nationalists and a majority of the Liberals voted for allowing Manitoba to manage her own school affairs. Mr. Bourassa was fortunately foiled in his desire to thrust Separate Schools on that Province. The right cause must prevail ! !

MINERS' FEDERATION STRONGLY DENOUNCE THE ASQUITH BILL

The Demand That the Wages be Fixed Now Instead of By District Boards

London, Mar. 20. The Miners' Federation has adopted resolutions denouncing the Asquith bill and demanding that it be amended so that it would fix the absolute minimum earnings of every adult working underground at five shillings daily and two shillings for boys.

The resolutions further demanded the inclusion of the district schedules which Premier Asquith has already stated would be impossible.

Considerable numbers of miners have already resumed work in some of the Scottish coal fields. These, however, are all non-unionists and the police are having serious trouble in protecting them from assaults by the trade unionists.

There appears to be a daily augmenting desire in the whole of the coal fields of the United Kingdom to see a settlement of the dispute and this will aid in bringing about a prompt resumption of work when an agreement has been reached.

Fresh trouble however, is threatened to-day, the Colliery Surfacemen's Federation having notified the members of the Labor Party in the House of Commons that unless the minimum wage bill provides also a fixed minimum for the surfacemen the dispute will not be settled.

An exodus of strikers from British ports for America is taking place. The owners hope to obtain cargoes of American coal for the Mediterranean.

RAILWAY MEN MAY STRIKE.

James Henry Thomas, the Labor member of Parliament for Derby and organizing secretary of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, confirms the report that the railroad men intend to submit a new national program to the railroad companies early in the month of May, but he would not commit himself as to whether the men intend to strike if their demands are not conceded.

According to later reports issued by the railroad companies the decline in traffic receipts during the past week amounted to $2,855,000 as compared with the same week last year.

DEALERS SAY CANADIAN LINES ARE MAKING A BIG BLUFF

Toronto, Mar. 20.—That the Grand Trunk Railway was putting up a bluff when announcing to the Toronto Board of Trade that it had over a score of engines standing at the American boundary waiting for cars of coal to haul, is the opinion of Mr. A. R. Gibson, assistant manager of the Conger Coal Company.

"At the same time those twenty-seven engines were supposed to be standing at the boundary waiting for coal, there were 3,800 cars at Black Rock ready for the Grand Trunk to haul," said Mr. Gibson this morning.

"It was all talk that Mr. Farrell gave the Board of Trade on Monday about the Grand Trunk having cleaned up all the cars at Black Rock and Fort Erie, which was consigned to Ontario points.

"I have it from an official of the Lehigh Valley Railway, who was in Toronto yesterday, that the car checker's figures show that 3,800 cars are standing at Black Rock ready for the Grand Trunk to haul. The Delaware, Lackawanna, and Western Railway has a double track between Black Rock and East Buffalo, and the second track all the way has been filled up with cars of coal. Those are the facts as against talk. I don't doubt but what the intentions of the railway are good, but actions would speak louder than words."

MOSS PARK RINK FOR BOY'S CLUB

Mr. C. J. Atkinson Outlines His Plans for New Down Town Work.

Toronto, Mar. 20.—The scheme for a new Boys' Club was outlined last night by Mr. C. J. Atkinson at the dinner tendered him at the National Club by Mr. Noel Marshall.

The purchase of Moss Park Rink for $60,000 and the complete reorganization and redecoration of this building the committee thought would be the first step.

Wiring for electricity, the installation of shower baths and a moving picture machine, and the establishing of a gymnasium and printing plant all constitute features meditated to cost about $6,000. The yearly cost of maintenance was estimated at $7,000. Thus the first year's expenditure would equal $13,000.

THIS SUFFRAGETTE GETS 6-MONTH TERM

Ellen Pitfield, Who Tried to Burn General Post Office, Sentenced To-day.

London, Mar. 20. Ellen Pitfield, the Suffragette who attempted to set fire to the General Post Office in London on the evening of March 3rd by throwing a bundle of paper saturated with petroleum into the building, was sentenced to-day at the Old Bailey Sessions to six months' imprisonment in the second division. This means that she will be accorded many privileges which are not granted to ordinary prisoners.

The judge explained that the sentence would have been more severe except for the fact that she was in ill-health.

SHOE MACHINERY DIRECTORS ON TRIAL.

Five Plead Not Guilty When Arraigned—Ask for Another Hearing.

Boston, Mass., Mar. 20.—Sidney W. Winslow, president; William Barbour, Geo. W. Brown, Edwin P. Hurd and Elmer P. Howe, directors, of the United Shoe Machinery Company, who are under indictment upon the charge of maintaining a monopoly in interstate shoe machinery business, pleaded not guilty when arraigned to-day in the United States District Court. They were held in $10,000 each for trial at a date not yet fixed.

The defendants, in view of the recent decision of United States Supreme Court sustaining an unrestricted patent monopoly, requested to be given another hearing before a time for their trial should be fixed. The request was granted.

HERMENEGILDE BOULAY, M. P. APOLOGIZES FOR HIS SPEECH

Ottawa, Ont., Mar. 20. Hermenegilde Boulay, M.P., for Rimouski, this morning apologized for having in his speech on the Manitoba Boundary bill, referred to Dr. Sproule, the Speaker, as one inspired by sectarian hatred and fanaticism and then withdrew from the Chamber in a hurry.

Premier Borden congratulated the hon. member upon having made a manly apology and moved that the passage in question be expunged from the reports of the House.

Mr. Speaker said that he had not noticed the reference owing to his unfamiliarity with the French language and added that he accepted the apology. But the motion for the expunging of the paragraph was left over until to-morrow.

KAISER DINED BY FRENCHMEN

German Emperor Visited French Soil in Berlin for Second Time.

Berlin, Mar. 20. The Emperor last night dined at the French Embassy with the Ambassador and Mme Jules Cambon. This was the second time his Majesty had visited "French soil" in Berlin in three years. Last night's visit was intended to place the seal upon the Franco-German Morocco convention, which has just been signed.

The imperial Chancellor, the Foreign Secretary, and the chief of the general staff were in the suites of the Kaiser, for whose entertainment M. Cambon, provided a one-act comedy entitled "La Caprice," which was performed by some distinguished Parisian players.

85 MEN KILLED BY EXPLOSION

San Bois Coal Company's Mine Is Reported to be on Fire.

Fort Smith, Ark., Mar. 20. A telephone report says that San Bois Coal Company mine at McCurtain, Okla., was blown up by gas to-day, and is now on fire.

Eighty-five men are believed to have lost their lives.

The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions of its correspondents.

MR. BAILEY DISPLEASED.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir, I have seen the ex-postmaster going in and out of the P. O. smoking a pipe, and I have frequently been disgusted at Detective Newall standing in the post office with a dirty pipe in his mouth.

Yours,

W. A. Bailey.

THE SUFFRAGETTE MOVEMENT.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir, Every reader of your bright morning paper must be more or less acquainted with the present Suffragette movement in England. Mr. Editor, any thinking man or woman must be thoroughly disgusted with the actions of those fanatical, hysterical parodies in the name of "woman." We will leave out the sacred name of mother and wife. Just consider Sir, England is now in the throes of the most desperate conditions she has ever faced since 1588, when she was threatened by invasion of the Spanish Armada; whilst England is threatened with actual starvation for the lack of coal, which means closing of her industries and impossibility of transporting her food supplies, these crazy females do all they can to bother and embarrass the already overburdened authorities. The main difficulty is that the Suffragettes who make the trouble are not the wives, widows or daughters of the working man, or, in many cases, workers themselves. They are led by and largely composed of educated aristocrats. If such women, in England's time of trial, persist in trying to annoy the government and the police, they run the risk of pulling down the wall of deference that man pays to decent women.

THE CHEESEMEN MEET

Small Attendance of Members of the Cheese Board Yesterday.

A meeting of the local cheese board was held yesterday afternoon in the Council Chamber. Although it was the annual meeting, the number of salesmen present was so small that regular organization and election of officers was not proceeded with.

On motion of Mr. E. Hawthorne, seconded by Mr. G. W. Mann, it was decided to call the first sales on Wednesday, May 15th.

Mr. Barr remarked that owing to the small supplies and prevailing good prices, the first make would likely bring a good price and the early opening will please the buyers. Mr. Mann said that for the same reasons, factories would probably open earlier.

The factories represented were: Warsaw, by Mr. Ed. Hawthorne; East Emily, by Mr. W. C. Switzer; Central Smith, by Mr. J. A. McGregor; Keene, by Mr. M. Smithson; Trewern by Mr. G. W. Mann; Myrtle by W. H. Crough; and Bensfort by Mr. John Riddell.

Mr. Switzer, president of the Board presided.

SOFT COAL MINERS MEET

Workers Want $1.05 a Ton, While Employers Offer 10c Less Than Present Rate

Cleveland, O., Mar. 20.—A difference of twenty cents a ton in the wage sought and that offered confronts a joint conference of mine operators and mine workers here to-day. The mine workers want $1.05 a ton for coal they get out, while the operators meet them with a counter proposal that the payment be 85c, which is ten cents less than the miners receive under the agreement which expires on March 31.

Sixty four men, thirty-two operators and thirty-two mine workers representing the bituminous coal fields of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, are delegates to the conference. They came to reach an agreement if possible but both sides appear determined not to yield upon the major points involved. A long suspension of work, beginning April 1st, if not a general strike is regarded as inevitable.

Announcement was made for the operators last night, after they had conferred, that they were unanimously agreed to stand by their demand of a ten cent reduction.

A GIRL SUICIDE

Her Body Found at the Dam at Port Hope To-day.

Port Hope, Ont., Mar. 20. The body of a young girl about 20 years of age was discovered floating below the electric light dam this morning, and the remains were identified as that of Myrtle Little, an employee at a local hotel. The body had only been in the water a short time, and it is supposed to be a case of suicide.

A STRIKING NE TEMERE CASE IS REPORTED FROM BELFAST

Man Called Himself a Bachelor, and Tried to Marry Again Because Church Separated Him From His Protestant Wife---Court Convicts Man, But Lets Him Go

Belfast, Ireland, Mar. 20.—At the Belfast Assizes John Diamond was indicted for making a false declaration. He informed the registrar for marriages that he was a bachelor, when applying for a license to marry. It transpired that he had a wife in Donegal. The clergy is alleged to have separated him and his wife, he being a Roman Catholic and his wife a Protestant. Accordingly Diamond says he believed he was not legally married.

Diamond was convicted, but was let go on suspended sentence, or, as the English public put it, "discharged on probation."

STRIKE BREAKERS ATTACKED BY MEN FROM EATONS BIG STORE

Men Who are Out at Eaton's Used Missiles and Pieces of Iron as Weapons—One Was Badly Injured.

Toronto, Mar 20.—Two workmen were attacked by a gang of about 30 of Eaton's strikers at the corner of University avenue and Agnes street shortly before eight o'clock this morning, with the result that several minor injuries were inflicted and warrants for the arrest of four of the attacking party have been sworn out.

The two men were on their way to the factory when the mob, armed with different kinds of weapons, including pieces of iron, rushed at them from behind a corner. The fight was hot and short, the appearance of the police putting a stop to it. One of the two men attacked, sustained a wound in the forehead which had to be dressed, but he grasped the piece of metal with which the striker had hit him. The crowd dispersed, but the two men immediately went to the police headquarters and swore out four warrants for aggravated assault.

The arrests will probably be made this afternoon.

THE POOR PEOPLE IN LONDON SUFFER FROM COAL SHORTAGE

London, Mar. 20. The distress throughout the whole of the industrial districts of the United Kingdom as a result of the national coal strike which has thrown 1,000,000 miners and over 1,500,000 other workmen out of employment is most acute. While the delegates of the miners and of the mineowners are discussing with [illegible] the minimum wage bill, women, children and the workers themselves in many places are suffering from the most extreme poverty and appeals are constantly reaching London, which appears to be the least affected of the large cities, for assistance.

The Earl of Harrowby, who has just made a long tour of the potteries district in Staffordshire, in asking for funds, says that acute distress exists among all ranks of the pottery industry. Thousands of children in the chief centres of the district are being fed from charitable funds. In this region alone, 20,000 miners are on strike, and the lack of coal thus caused has thrown out of work 60,000 potters to whose number must be added thousands of general laborers, porters, railroad men and bargemen, who depend for their livelihood on the output of the potteries.

FEEDING SCHOOL CHILDREN.

The prevailing conditions in the Erewash Valley, the great hive of industry, stretching from Nottingham to Chesterfield, serve as an example of the state of affairs in similar districts elsewhere. Here 75 per cent. of the workers in all trades are idle and unlike the miners, as these men have no strike pay, the families are thrown on charity, which is being distributed very extensively. The Mayor of Ilkeston, the largest town in the valley, yesterday received applications from no fewer than 400 families for assistance and in one of the elementary schools out of 600 scholars 400 are being fed by the teachers.

WALES AND LANCASHIRE SUFFER.

Wales is suffering equally with England. Only three tinplate mills are working in the whole country and every other industry is affected.

The cotton mills are slowly closing throughout Lancashire and the last cargo of coal has now been shipped from Newcastle to the South of England. What railway traffic returns are available for the past week show a decline of receipts amounting to $810,000, in addition to $2,500,000 for the previous week.

BISHOP LANGEVIN SILENT ABOUT A CATHOLIC PARTY

Winnipeg, Mar. 20. A large number of delegates met in St. Boniface in a French-Canadian convention to further consider the project of forming a Catholic party, primarily to prevent the elimination of Separate Schools in the new section of Manitoba. There was considerable discussion, but no definite steps were taken towards organization. While the constitution last week, as announced by circular, had the sanction of the ecclesiastical authorities, Archbishop Langevin has been urged repeatedly by the press of the West, since then to assert positively that the movement for a Separate Catholic party was with his sanction or to disavow the same. He has remained silent up to the present.

Catholics all over the west are determined to preserve the school rights they now possess though many influential members of the church deprecate a separate party organization as calculated to provoke reprisals.

GAVE THE REASON.

With the luxurious ease of a millionaire, James lay comfortably on three chairs and a pillow in the pantry at half-past four in the afternoon, reading a novelette.

At the end of each paragraph he took a munch of his mistress's currant cake, and at the bottom of each page a pull at his mistress's soda water, but he did not hear the footstep on the stair.

The story became tenser, the cake smaller, the bottle empty and the step came nearer.

"James!"

The butler jumped up, a guilty blush suffusing his countenance. It was the mistress of No. 4.

"James," repeated the lady, angrily "how is it that whenever I come into the pantry I find you idling your time away, sprawled out reading a newspaper or something?"

The butler glanced reproachfully at his mistress's feet.

"Well, ma'am," he answered, speaking broadly, ma'am, I should say it was on account of them old rubber-soled shoes!"

NOT FORGETTING THE ASS.

For many long, weary hours the jurymen had been locked in the room trying to agree upon their verdict. The judge had sent messages to them but in vain.

There was only one man who refused to agree with the remaining eleven. They argued with him, pleaded, threatened and implored, but in vain.

For the twentieth time the usher came to the door and asked if they had agreed yet.

"No!" bawled the foreman. "And we're not likely to for some time with this —"

"Perhaps I had better bring supper to you, sir," suggested the usher. "Shall I bring twelve suppers?"

Once more came an angry negative from the man inside the room.

"No!" the foreman bawled. "Bring eleven suppers and one feed of hay—or thistles."

ONLY ONE MAN WORRIED.

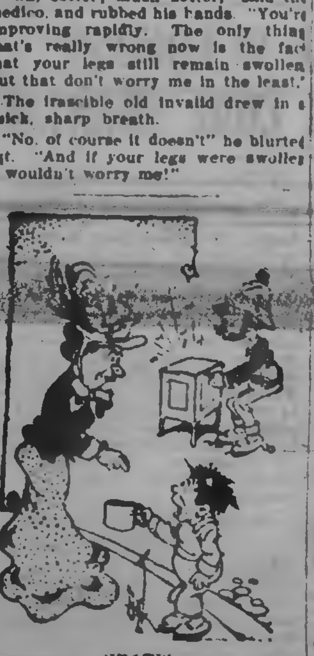
The doctor had just concluded his daily examination, and the gouty old gentleman felt none too pleased.

"Well," he asked, in the manner of one who demands an ultimatum, "how do you find me to-day, eh? Better or worse?"

"Oh, better; much better," said the medico, and rubbed his hands. "You're improving rapidly. The only thing that's really wrong now is the fact that your legs still remain swollen. But that don't worry me in the least."

The irascible old invalid drew in a quick, sharp breath.

"No, of course it doesn't" he blurted out. "And if your legs were swollen it wouldn't worry me!"



GRATIS.

Old Lady—Young man, I hope your father won't spend this money for whiskey.

Kid—Oh, no, ma'am, we play in front of a beer saloon and git all de booze he wants for nothin'.

TOO GREAT A SACRIFICE.

For half an hour they had lingered over their good-bye. But at last Robert rose to go, and this time he meant it.

"So soon, Robby dear?" sighed Mollie. "Couldn't you stay just a little longer? Must you really go?"

"I must, darling, though I would give ten years of my life, or sacrifice everything I have to stay for one short hour with you."

"But—but why, dear?" she begged. "Why have you to go so early to-night?"

"Because, dearest," he answered sadly but resolutely, "it's our Union meeting to-night, and if I don't go I shall be fined four cents."

MORE CHARITABLE.

He stepped from the stairs leading to the cells into the dock as though to the manner born. Did he want the gaoler to show him where to stand? Not he!

He gazed up at the familiar face of the magistrate, and half smiled. But his worship's face wore a frown.

"This is the seventeenth time I've seen you in the dock," said the cadi sternly.

This was not the sort of reception he had expected. He was hurt.

"Well, yer worship," he said sadly, "I've seen you sittin' in that chair for eight years, but I've never thought of complainin'!"

The Crafty Creditor.

"Sorry, old man—bad tooth?"

"No—dentist owes me money—can't get near him—trying new scheme."

Returned The Poem.

"I submit a piece of poetry (pardon the allegation)," wrote a budding poet to the Editor this week. The allegation was pardoned, but the poem was returned.

FIRST BOXING RULES

Boxer Who Was Buried in Westminster Abbey

Few people are aware of the fact that a pugilist was buried in Westminster Abbey. In an article of much interest in "London Stories," it is stated that Jack Broughton, sometimes co- [illegible] Broughton became a Yeoman of the Guard, and the inscription on the wall shield reads: "Beneath this tablet lie the remains of Mrs. Elizabeth Broughton, died Sept. 7, 1784, aged 59 years. Also of Mr John Broughton, one of His Majesty's Ushers of the Yeomen of the Guard, died July 8, 1789, aged 86 years." The gravestone also has an inscription, but there is a blank between the name and the year. It is stated that but for the objection of the Dean, this would have been filled with the words, "Champion of England."

Broughton was born in 1704, and was the first winner of Doggett's Coat and Badge. He made his first appearance as a pugilist at George Adam's famous booth at the Adam and Eve in Tottenham Court road. Later he set up an establishment of his own, and maintained his ascendency for many years, being eventually unexpectedly beaten by Slack in April, 1750, at Birmingham. Broughton made his own rules, which lasted from 1743 until 1838, when, after the contest between Owen Swift and Brighton Bill, the "New Rules of the Ring" came in. Broughton's rules are of more than ordinary interest, and were as follows:—

That a square of a yard be chalked in the middle of the stage; and every fresh set-to after a fall, or being parted from the rails, each second is to bring his man to the side of the square, and place him opposite to the other; and till they are fairly set-to at the lines, it shall not be lawful for the one to strike the other.

That, in order to prevent any disputes, the time a man lies after a fall, if the second does not bring his man to the side of the square, within the space of half a minute, he shall be deemed a beaten man.

That no champion be deemed beaten unless he falls coming up to the line in the limited time; or that his own second declares him beaten. No second is to be allowed to ask his man's adversary any questions or advise him not to give out.

That, to prevent disputes, in every main battle, the principal's shall, on the coming on the stage, choose from among the gentlemen present two umpires, who shall absolutely decide all disputes that may arise about the battle; and if the two umpires cannot agree, the said umpires to choose a third, who is to determine it.

That no person is to hit his adversary when he is down, or sieze him by the ham, the breeches, or any part below the waist; a man on his knees to be reckoned down.

VANCOUVER HARNESS RACING

Apparently the conduct of harness-racing is satisfactory at the Vancouver Exhibition. They encourage it on the Pacific coast, while Toronto Exhibition has abandoned it entirely. All kinds of horses are provided for in the speed program at Vancouver, and the list of stakes and purses totals twenty thousand dollars. Two stakes are of $3,000 and two of $2,000 each.

New York, Mar. 18.—The belief that a suspension of work in the anthracite coal mines on April 1 because of the deadlock between the operators and mine workers over the working conditions will not be continued long, and that a settlement will be reached, was expressed by coal operators here to-day. It was pointed out that a similar situation existed when the agreement of the mine workers expired before. There was a refusal of the mine workers' demands, followed by a suspension and later negotiations were opened and the old agreement renewed.

THE WOODBINE

A $10,000 Plate With 100 Entries is Predicted ere Long

Entries for the King's Plate this year will probably run about the same in number as last year, but there is every reason to anticipate next season the beginning of an increase that will bring the number of nominations to a hundred before many years have passed. Now that two-year-old winners are eligible and the value of the Plate is mounting, and the position of the turf in Canada becoming unassailable, we may look for a $10,000 Plate, with a hundred entries. I have already come across several men who have no horses, but who are in the market for Province-bred yearlings, which they would race next season, and put in the Plate the following year. The value of horses foaled in Canada is bound to be vastly added to by the enlarged opportunities offered them. Coming back to the race to be run on the 18th of May—not far away, in spite of all the snow now on the ground—two owners who were not interested last year are likely to figure largely in the outcome. Up at Barrie the Dyment stable shelters four or five elegibles, from which Trainer John Nixon will probably make Heresy and Tropaeolum his choice. Either one would be good enough for most owners to have in the Plate. The other owner not altogether a newcomer to the guineas, but one whose first serious attempt is now being made, is Mr. Charles Crew of the Half-way House, on the Kingston Road. His jacket will be carried by the three-year-old filly Amberite, by Martimas-Lyddite. A full sister to Shimonese and Powderman, she is better furnished and more forward than either of these at the same age. Her work last fall was perhaps not as fast as anticipated, but it was not her limit, and she was always master of her workmate. The very useful Kilo, which won the Quebec King's Plate for Mr. Kenneth Dawes, and followed that up by a vitcory in a selling race from which he went to the Crew stable. One would expect to find Amberite in the Valley Farm stable, and the fact that she is not is one evidence of the bona fides of the annual public sales of the Valley Farm stock. The filly was bid up to $1,000 for the racing stable, which was, and is, quite distinct from breeding interest, and there Col. Hendrie stopped. That was the limit, but Charlie Crew was willing to go still higher. He bid 1,050, and became the owner of a very likely winner of a richer King's Plate than any yet run. It will not be an unpopular victory, you may be sure, if the King's uncle has this year to present the guineas to a man who had pluck enough to pay the record price for a Province-bred yearling—The Globe.

THE LACROSSE OUTLOOK

Some Healthy Rivalry Between the Eastern and Western Clubs

What lacrosse players will be seen at the Coast and in the big league in the East during the coming season is far from being definitely settled and will probably remain so until the period of the annual migration takes place. One fact remains, however, and that is that there will be some healthy rivalry between the Eastern and Coast clubs, and the league which flourishes the largest wallet will be the one to win out. Following the announcement that the Eastern clubs had decided on a salary limit came an awakener that this clause had been perpetrated more for a joke than for any other purpose and that the Eastern magnates would be as keen figures in the market as Con Jones or any of the other clubs at the Coast. All of which looks pretty soft for the player. However, the fact that there is to be a merry war is not to be disguised. With the Minto Cup in the possession of Con Jones, who spent thousands of dollars to bring it to this city, it is not to be expected that now that he has the cup in his possession he will let it slip away from him without a struggle. On the other hand, the East has been so long separated from this famous piece of jewelry that the clubs in that part of the country would go to almost any length to have it brought back again. All of which indicates that there will be a scramble for another fight for the pennant, champion team, and a fight in which the size of the bank-roll will be the deciding factor.—Saturday Sunset.

FLIGHT BETWEEN SPIRES

Some of our citizens may remember that the Council passed a by-law prohibiting men from spitting in public places. A very wise and sanitary law. It is of interest, in this connection to note that detectives in New Orleans, La., have been detailed to ride on the street cars and arrest all violators of the anti-spitting law. This action was taken following a request of the Louisiana Anti-Tuberculosis League, of which Dr. G. Farrar Patton is president.

DOMINION FAIR A BIG EVENT

The Exhibition of 1912 to be a Record Breaker

The decision of the Federal Government to hold the Dominion Fair in Ottawa this year, at once turned the attention of stock breeders, manufacturers and exhibitors in general, all over Canada, to the coming Central Canadian Exhibition. The special grant of $50,000 from the government has already brought extra amounts from the regular sources of maintenance. Every department of the Fair will be improved from 100 to 200 per cent. Live stock and other premiums are to be at least doubled, and a similar policy will be followed in securing attractions.

On learning of the Dominion grant the Fair managers set to work enthusiastically. The first thing was to extend the dates, taking an extra Saturday into the Exhibition period. The Fair will open on Thursday, September 5th. The first two days will be for preparation, and Saturday, September 7th, will see the event in full swing. It will continue till Monday, September 16th, inclusive.

The management has started off with completing arrangements for the erection of a $90,000 machinery hall. The building will be 144x384 feet, made of brick, fire-proof, and of architectural design to conform with the other handsome edifices on the grounds. This means that the large number of manufacturers of farm implements and other machinery who have deferred coming to Ottawa will have to be on hand at the 1912 Fair and add much to its educational value. It is too soon to speculate on the special attractions, but it is known that the directors are negotiating through Col. Lowther of the Govenor-General's staff to secure the famous band of the Scots Guards for open air concerts.

The broad scale on which the Dominion Fair is to be conducted has necessitated beginning the work of preparation months before the usual time. The enlargement of the prize lists means a lot of carefull revision and several important changes will be announced later. Inquiries are pouring in already from all parts since the special nature of the Fair became known. As far as amusements and exhibits are concerned it will simply be a matter of selecting the best from a great host.

INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS.

According to the report of industrial accidents kept by the Department of Labour, 61 persons were killed and 178 injured during February, 1912. This record compares very favorably [illegible] when [illegible] Compared [illegible] February 1911, the record is still more favourable, as 93 were killed and 197 injured in that month. The worst disaster of the past month was the premature explosion of dynamite on construction work near Fort Frances, Ont., on the line of the Canadian Northern Railway, by which 13 construction hands were killed and six others seriously injured.

Paris, March 18.—The Spanish government's reply to the last French note on the subject of Morocco is a flat rejection of France's request for territorial compensations in that country. Spain merely offers what amounts to a rectification of the frontier from which France would gain nothing.

Proven Oil Lands
Consisting of 240 Acres, King's County,
Coalinga, California, U.S.A.

The wondrful development of the oil industry in California during the last few years is one of the marvels of the age. From a product of about two million barrels in 1899 it has grown to over sixty million barrels in 1911. The oil resources of the state seem to be no less vast than the mineral fields, and, like the latter, they still await their full development. So abundant is the supply that it is reckoned by acres rather than by wells.

Oil is superseding coal for fuel throughout the state. Railroads, factories, gas plants, power plants, sugar refineries, steamships and other industries, depend on oil for fuel entirely. Rapid as has been the increase in production, the consumption has kept pace with it. The California oil industry, only a few years old, has made more money and paid greater profits to the investor on the capital employed than any one branch of business, or any one in-dustry, in the history of the state, for the same length of time. Hundreds of men have been quickly raised from humble means to affluence. Thousands of investors are drawing handsome incomes from their holdings in California Oil Companies. The increase in the value of land has brought fortunes to hundreds more.

The Dominion Oil Company's property consists of patented and proven OIL-BEARING LAND, situated in King's County, California, east of the choppings. Their well is drilled to a depth of 2,480 feet and they have already struck oil which is high gravity, 33 per cent., and a "gusher" is confidently expected on from 400 to 600 feet additional drilling.

The Canadian Coaling Company, which adjoins the DOMINION OIL COMPANY'S property on the north, have their well down about 3000 feet, at which depth the oil came in, and is now producing 7500 barrels per day, which means an income of $8250.00 per day, and their stock is selling at $20.00 per share. This wellnly a short distance from the one now being drilled by the DOMINION OIL COWPANY. Mr. G. W. Warner, who has charge of the DOMINION OIL COMPANY'S development work, and who is without doubt one of the best authorities on oil, predicts that with from 400 to 600 feet further drilling, the DOMINION OIL COMPANY will strike the same flow, and he believes that the Company will get an enormous flow of the light oil, for which there is a ready market at from $1.10 per barrel up.

Producing oil companies' stock listed on California Exchange to March 31, 1910, paid $29,242,803.68 in dividends, and during March, $730,911.26. These companies are capitalized at $99,595.00, with $78,184,548.00 issued, and are actually paying now 1 per cent. per month on issued stock, or 12 per cent. net, to stockholders per year. The total shares sold on Los Angeles Stock Exchange for March was 2,553,923, valued at $1,708,112.35. That oil is a stable business and a sure income producer is demonstrated by the above figures beyond a doubt. The Imperial oil Company has paid $2,000,000.00 or $20.00 per share. Can you do better? The contr of the Union, the largest oil company in California, sold ten years ago for a trifling sum in comparison to its present value. In March it paid its 164th dividend of 50 cents per share, or $124,813.00, or total dividends to date of $6,308,355.15, and its assets are conservatively estimated in excess of $100,000,000.00. Is oil a safe business in California? If you are sure that the company whose stock you intend purchasing is honestly being developed, yes. Therefore you must be careful to see that the officers of the company are of the right calibre.

The Directors of the DOMINION OIL COMPANY, who are all well-known and wealthy business men, have developed the property up to the present time entirely at their own expense. They have encountered oil at the 2200-foot level, which is on its gravity, andd for which they are receiving $1.10 per barrel, but they are drilling right through these sands, for they want to reach the same sands that the Canadian Coalings, whose property immediately adjoins them on the north, are in. At about 3000 feet they have struck a splendid flow of oil, and they now have a well producing 7500 barrels per day. Surrounded as the DOMINION OIL COMPANY'S property is by big producers, it is an absolutely foregone conclusion that when they have drilled to the same depth as their neighbors, they will have a well equally as good or better.

It is also the intention of the Directors to sink other wells as rapidly as possible; but it is only natural [illegible] well, in order that the profits that will be derived from the sale of the oil [illegible] development [illegible] ing of the other wells.

We have looked into this matter carefully and feel we can conscientiously advise the purchase of as large a block of stock as you feel that you can afford, for without doubt, an investment in the DOMINION OIL COMPANY will certainly turn out to be profitable to yourself.

The stock is now selling very rapidly, and as this is an investment of an exceptionally meritorious nature, you cannot afford not to investigate. WRITE US AT ONCE FOR PROSPECTUS and full particulars of the DOMINION OIL COMPANY, which will be mailed to you without any obligation or expense on your part.

Toronto, March 1st, 1912.

W. H. HILL, ESQ.,
Manager,
Sun Life Assurance Co.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I wish to thank the Sun Life Assurance Company, through you, for the prompt and very satisfactory settlement of my 15 year Endowment Policy, No. 64345, which matured and was paid me to-day.

I have also a 15 year Endowment maturing to-day in another leading Company.

The contrast, in the results, in favor of your Company is so marked that I want you to know it, but I am at a loss to know how such a difference could honestly occur. When I tell you that the profits in your Company are three and one-third times the profits in the other Company referred to, and this too notwithstanding I paid the other Company $1.15 per year more per $1000 than I paid you, you will realize my inability to comprehend the cause.

This is surely a tribute to the management of the Sun Life, and I am so well pleased I have applied for further insurance with you.

Incidentally, I would like to say a word for your loan privilege. As you are aware, I borrowed some money on my policy, a little over a year ago, which enabled me to obtain a substantial interest in a town site in the Northwest, and you will be pleased to learn that it has already yielded substantial gain and gives promise to pay hundreds per cent., so that it is impossible to fully realize the value of that Policy to me.

I thought as an old Peterborough boy you would be pleased to know I am delighted with the result.

Yours truly,
(Signed) ROBERT E. DOLAN.

PRICES ARE STILL SOARING.

The Department of Labor's wholesale prices record up to date shows a still higher level for February than for January, notwithstanding that the latter month was reported as having seen the highest prices since 1883-4 and possibly since 1873. The index number rose during February from 131.4 to 134.3, these being percentages of the average level of prices during the last decade of the last century. The upward movement was largely the result

From The Houston Post.

"Your Honor," said the arrested chauffeur, "I tried to warn the man, but the horn wouldn't work."

"Then why did you not slacken the speed rather than run him down?"

A light seemed to dawn upon the prisoner. "That's one on me, I never thought of that."

CALGARY

The City Of Opportunity

Capitol Hill

One of Calgary's close-in residential sub-divisions. City water is now in the adjoining divisions and sewer system is to be installed this spring. We expect these improvements in Capitol Hill this summer. Street car service is at present within two or three blocks of Capitol Hill. The City of Calgary has purchased Block 68, Capitol Hill, on which to build a large public school. A number of nice homes have already been built in Capitol Hill, and many more are in course of construction.

Lots in this sub-division are selling in pairs at $260 to $350 per lot. We offer you one block of forty lots, close to Block 68 at $210 per lot, on terms of Third Cash and Balance four, eight and twelve months, with interest at 8 per cent. on deferred payments. This block will readily sell for $300 per lot, or more, within the next six months. The block is high and level, and every lot is perfect. This is a gilt-edged investment. If you cannot handle it alone have some friend join you.

There is no denying the fact that taxes, in this city, are quite as high as the average property owner or tenant, who pays said taxes, desires. The local taxpayer does not lose many hours sleep whilst thinking over how the city might increase either the rate or the assessment. To the contrary—the average ratepayer, if the subject of taxes enters his mind at the time of his Beauty Sleep is apt to turn over, groan and switch that subject from his thinking machine. In this connection, it is of interest to note that the Ontario government has under consideration an amendment to the Municipal Act, as follows: "To render valid a by-law for granting a bonus in aid of a manufacturing industry the assent of three-fourths of all the members of the council and of two-thirds of the ratepayers who actually vote on the by-law shall be necessary."

Mother and Child Both Dead.

Mrs. Godfrey, of Mark street, East City, formerly of Otonabee, and a daughter of Mr. Lancaster of Otonabee, passed away on Tuesday afternoon, three hours after the little one was born. The child also died yesterday morning. Messrs. A. Comstock & Sons will conduct the funeral, which will be held from the family residence at 2 p.m. to-day. Rev. Robt. Pogue will hold the services. The bereaved parents have only been a short time in the city. Mr. Godfrey was a member of the Church of England, whilst the deceased was a communicant of St. Paul's.

KING AND HIS CHILDREN

His Majesty Finds His Chief Relaxation Among the Children

In his own home, and especially in the nursery of his children, the King has always found his chief relaxation. He dislikes functions which take him away from those whom he loves best in the world. Nothing pleases him more than to be able to steal an hour from the duties of State in order to take part in the innocent amusements of the nursery. From the birth of his first child he has always been delighted to bring home toys, chiefly of the mechanical order. He is regarded by the children, indeed, as the greatest living expert in the art of constructing mimic fortifications and in the manoeuvring of toy soldiers.

The story goes that on one occasion one of his children was asked which he liked best, his father or his mother. The boy replied, "I like them both the same"; then he added, after a moment's reflection, "I think dadda spoils me most." It is not only in their games, but in their education, that the King has taken the keenest personal interest in the upbringing of his little ones.

A story was told that once, while at Balmoral, the Prince of Wales was away for a few days on a visit to London to do some shopping. The children, even on holiday in the Highlands, were kept under firm but kind discipline by their mother. "While she was away, however," says a lady who was at Balmoral at the time, "the Prince of Wales had his sons and daughter to himself. He romped with them, and they had the time of their lives."

The same lady is the authority for a pretty story with respect to King Edward's partiality for his granddaughter, the Princess Mary. The Royal party were travelling southwards, by special train, of course. The children had a saloon carriage to themselves. The little Princess, however, found her way to the saloon of her grandfather and grandmother and there remained. When Prince Edward attempted to follow her, he was firmly checked, and had it impressed upon him that his sister was a privileged person with the King, and was allowed liberties that were not meant for boys.—From "King George and Queen Mary," by Henry Warwick.

CATS IN JAPAN

In the Beginning the Felines Were Only for the Best Homes

According to the Japanese, the domestic cat appeared in their country at a relatively recent epoch, having travelled from China with the missionaries of Buddhism. In the middle of the sixth century of the Christian era sacrifices were offered to the cat, which was known by all as "the guardian of the manuscripts."

"The guardian of the manuscripts" kept away the mice, which otherwise would have eaten the precious papyrus. In some instances placards were set in conspicuous places among manuscripts as a warning to the mice: "Beware! The cat is here. She drives the mice." Portraits of cats were also placed in parts frequented by mice.

The cats were revered. For a long time they were kept in the temples. But their beauty, their general desirability and the charm of their grace, affection for man, and adaptability to human conditions, so appealed to the layman that one by one very gradually their kittens were permitted to leave the temples and to become the pets of the nobility. After entering the families of the high officials of the empire they won their way into humbler households.

PERILS OF BOTANY

A particularly exciting episode in the career of that veteran botanist, Sir Joseph Hooker, who recently celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday, occurred when, some sixty years ago, he undertook a mission to unfamiliar regions in India, penetrated the Himalayan fastnesses, and, being detected botanizing on the Tibet border, was seized, imprisoned, and beaten, and came very near losing his life. It is to Sir Joseph that we owe our knowledge of the flora of the Antarctic, and seventy years have passed since he visited the South Polar regions.

STORIES OF A BISHOP

A hundred and one stories are told concerning Dr. Glyn, the Bishop of Peterborough, who was recently presented with a magnificent cope by the clergy and laity of his diocese. A rich and benevolent millionaire was once boasting to Dr. Glyn of the amount he gave annually in charity, as though he was certain it would secure him one of the best seats in Paradise. "Well," remarked the Bishop, on hearing the amount, "that is the largest insurance against fire I have ever heard of."

A SPORTING PRINCE

Polo and hockey player, cyclist, motorist, yachtsman, and steeplechase rider, the German Crown Prince is steadily acquiring a reputation as an all-round sportsman. An enthusiastic admirer, indeed, has predicted that he will make the German nation the first sporting people in the world. The Prince has had many adventures and curious experiences, and only a few months ago, during his visit to India, while on a motoring tour from Lucknow, lost his way completely. Eventually his car broke down in the wilds, and he had to return to civilization by means of a devious cross country journey by boat, carrier, and rail, having meanwhile missed an important official fête which had been organised in his honor.

About Actresses

Ellen Terry was one day talking about the many women who asked her to help them get on the stage, when she said: "Every woman under thirty imagines that she is an actress. And every actress believes that she is under thirty."

Outcome of Local Power Meeting.

Mr. Walter Ressor, of the Light, Heat & Power Co., Lindsay, has been in receipt of a letter from Mr. W. Munro, secretary of the Central Water Conservation Association, which met recently in Peterborough. Mr. Munro asked Mr. Ressor to furnish Mr. Munro with a list of names of local citizens directly interested in the project.

Lindsay Post says this will be entirely satisfactory in so far as Lindsay is concerned.

LITTLE NELL

"God bless dadda, mamma, George, Elsie, an'—an' the wee dog ablow the bed," and then there was a long pause.

The little boy raised his head from his mother's lap and showed a very red face.

"What wee dog, John?" asked mamma Fulton.

John looked round, but Elsie and George had left the kitchen. He tried to speak, but instead of words came tears.

Mamma Fulton took his hand, raised him up, and led him to the room. A moment later she called, "Dadda, come here a minute."

Dadda Fulton laid down his paper, and walked to the room.

"Just see what's under the bed," said Mamma Fulton.

He went down on his knees and looked under the boy's bed. There was a little black heap near the wall. He crawled under the bed, took hold of it, and dragged it into the light.

"Who brought this here?" he asked, somewhat sternly.

All the children were now crying. George was the eldest—he was a plump little fellow of nine—and the others looked to him to reply.

"Oh, dad, it was lyin' doon in the close; it couldna walk, and some big boys were tormentin' it, so we were giein' it a wee rest—jist till the mornin'."

Dadda looked closely at the little terrier, with its coat and legs all splashed with mud, and saw that one of its paws was stained with blood. He lifted up the dog tenderly, carried it to the kitchen, and placed it on the rug before the fire. He gave it some food, and then it lay down as if it could keep awake no longer.

The children were satisfied, and went to bed happy.

The little dog was very lame, and was allowed to stay with the Fultons until it could run about with comfort.

Nell, as the children named her, was given a good bath in the wash-house. She lost her torn and tattered look, and became trim and smart. She and the children were soon fast friends. They loved to gather round the fire and play on the hearthrug.

As the days passed Dadda and Mamma Fulton began to look seriously at Nell. They were very poor, and had no money for a dog license, so they had to make up their minds to send Nell away. They often talked of the matter when the children were asleep without being able to decide what to do.

"I hate tae disappoint the weans," said Dadda Fulton, "but Nell must go."

It was Saturday afternoon. The dinner dishes had been washed and put away. George, Elsie, and John were given their weekly halfpennies and sent out to spend them. Nell was not allowed to go with them, so she curled herself up in front of the fire and blinked at the dancing flames.

Dadda Fulton put on his cap, took her in his arms, and went out. When he reached the closemouth he looked about to see if the children were near. Ah, there they were on the other side of the street looking at the good things in the window of a sweetshop and wanting to buy the lot.

He hurried down the street and was soon out of sight. He walked on for a long time till he reached Glasgow Cross. Then he put Nell down near King William's Statue and ran away.

Nell did not waste a minute, but followed him at once. Dadda Fulton tried to slip into the underground railway station, but Nell was too sharp for him. She soon caught up to him and trotted by his side.

The Cross was very busy. Men and women were standing about or jostling each other on the pavement. Cars, vans, lorries, and barrows were passing from every corner.

Dadda Fulton tried to get away from Nell in the crowd, but she kept too close to him. At last, feeling like one who has done something very wrong, he jumped on a car going east and hurried upstairs. When he reached the top he turned and saw poor Nell standing at the Cross and gazing after the car as if she did not know what to do. She was such a forlorn-looking little creature that Dadda Fulton felt very miserable at having deserted her.

He was very quiet that afternoon as he sat in his wooden armchair with his feet on the fender and a newspaper in his hand.

Mamma Fulton had gone out to buy the Sunday dinner.

Suddenly there was a great noise on the stair. He rose and opened the door. In rushed the three children—Elsie crying, John spluttering with excitement, and George carrying Nell—poor, dirty, battered Nell.

"What's this?" asked Dadda Fulton.

"Oh, dadda," began Elsie.

"Elsie was nearly rin ower," cried John.

"Ay, but Nell saved her," said George, with a smile and a pat for the little dog.

When the children were quieted, the whole story was told.

Elsie had been crossing the street, careless of the horse and van coming rapidly towards her. She would have been knocked down had not a little dog given a bark and jumped at the horse's nose. The horse had turned aside and Elsie was saved, but Nell's forelegs were badly crushed.

Brave little Nell! Her glistening eyes showed the terrible pain she was suffering.

It took a long time to put her right again. At first Dadda Fulton had little hope of being able to save her. But she was saved, although she was never as sound in her limbs as before the accident. However, though lame and not beautiful, to Elsie, George, and John she was the dearest little doggie in all Glasgow.

As a decoration for her bravery, a nice blue ribbon was tied around her neck, and this she wore to the end of her days.

There was now no thought of putting her away. A license was bought, and Nell became one of the family.

BRAINS IN DUPLICATE

Facts About the Curious Working of Your Thinking Faculties

Have you ever thought of how your brain works? Most people imagine that their brains work as a whole, but modern science says this is not so. The newest theory is that the brain is for all the world like a big department store. When ribbons are wanted it is only the ribbon department that is concerned. Similarly your brain has innumerable tiny niches, corresponding to your various accomplishments and branches of knowledge, from billiard playing to reading French. When you start to study a foreign language, or a musical instrument, you are literally carving a new niche in your brain.

The brain is like a big department store in another way—a store supplied with water-pipes running to each department. In the brain these are represented by a mass of tiny arteries carrying blood. Just as the water-pipes on one particular floor might burst and ruin the goods in that department alone, so if the walls of an artery in the brain are weakened by poisoned blood, the blood may burst through and ruin that particular niche. Many a man has risen in the morning to find that he has, say, forgotten how to read. Or if the damage is less wide, he may have forgotten how to read his own language, and still be able to read any other language he knows. This might also happen as the result of an accident. You might lose the use of a small part of your brain, and yet have the rest of your faculties intact.

Even in the niches there are fine sub-divisions. The various parts of speech, for instance, are arranged in a language niche like books on a shelf. And just as the books on a shelf may be squeezed so tight that none of them will come out, so a tumor on a language shelf may jam all the grammatical parts of speech so that the patient is dumb. It is known that on that shelf the verbs are placed first, the pronouns next, the prepositions and adverbs next, and the nouns last.

The reason is that our verbs are the things we learn first, long before nouns. A baby sees long before it knows it sees. The nouns that we learn last, and so forget soonest, are people's names. That is why old people have such bad memories for names.

Everybody, it is now known, has two brains. They sit side by side, and are exactly alike, but while the niches in one are crammed with various sorts of knowledge, those in the other are blank and empty. A right-handed man thinks with the left side of his brain, a left-handed man with the right. The only use each of us makes of our dummy brain is to control the movements of the opposite side of the body—the weaker side. It knows nothing. It learns nothing. You could have it cut away without lessening your mental power. Many a man has had this done.

Only a child can teach it. A man with his utterance niche ruined [illegible] tries in vain to use the [illegible]. It is too old to be taught. But many a child has been struck dumb and has taught its other brain. It has, however, to start all over again with "Mamma" and "Dadda," even at the age of nine or ten.—Answers.

HOW TO TREAT A WIFE

A Scottish Judge's Remarks on This Subject

In a Glasgow divorce action the decision of the case, his Lordship said, depended on the standard of conduct on the part of a husband towards his wife which would entitle the wife to judicial separation. A husband was bound in law to treat his wife as a gentleman should, or to put it otherwise, reasonably, considerately, and sympathetically, with the result that if he failed to do so his wife could get judicial separation from him, then in this case it was clear that the pursuer would be entitled to the remedy she asked. From the first she was not treated with reasonable consideration. Instead of humoring her and making allowance for her and paying her special attention, the defendant seemed to have kept up his bachelor habits, with the result of mutual unhappiness, for which, although not without provoking language and unreasonable expectations and exactions on her part, he seemed to have been mainly responsible. But to succeed in her demand it was common ground that the pursuer must prove treatment on the part of the defender which had produced substantial injury to her health, mental or physical. His Lordship found no such evidence. He thought it right to add the hope that the parties would, in their own interests and for the sake of their child, now resolve to let bygones be bygones. Nothing had happened on either side, or on the part of the relatives of either party, to prevent the resumption of conjugal relations. Nothing was to be gained on either side by going further with the action.

"Penal servitude must be a healthy state of things," remarked the Recorder of Birmingham to a prisoner, "or you would not look so well on it after thirty-six years of it." The man was ordered to be imprisoned for one day.

Market Prices Take a Raise.

Enquiries made by The Times yesterday, at the local market weigh scales office, brought out the information that four hundred (400) chickens of this county had been weighed there preparatory to shipment of said poultry to Toronto. If four hundred chickens a day are sent from Peterborough to Toronto or Montreal, is it any wonder that the average local citizen as he lifts his fork to mouth, during such operation, says to himself, "there's five or six [illegible]

SALT FOR MANGOLDS

Best Results Obtained From Use of 10 Per Cent. Per Acre

That application of salt in addition to other fertilizers is useful for the mangold crop is generally acknowledged, but what is the most suitable quantity to apply is a question upon which there is considerable difference of opinion.

To obtain definite information on this point, the Harper-Adams Agricultural College has been conducting experiments for three years with quantities per acre of 2½ cwt., 5 cwt., 10 cwt. and 15 cwt. respectively.

The salt was applied in the middle of April and thoroughly worked into the soil by cultivating, harrowing and rolling three times before rowing up, the ridges being again split before sowing.

Special care has to be taken to ensure the salt being completely mixed with the soil, otherwise the seed is liable to be damaged.

The dressings were made across all the manurial and variety trial plots, and the weights are the average of the different plots. The result was the following:—The application of—

2½ cwt. produced an average increase, about 4 tons roots;

5 cwt. produced an average increase, about 5½ tons roots;

10 cwt. produced an average increase, about 8½ tons roots;

15 cwt. produced an average increase, about 4 tons roots.

The big application of 15 cwt. was tried for the first time last year, just to see what the effect would be.

The experiment seems to demonstrate that the quantity of salt that can be used with the best result is 10 cwt. per acre.

HORSES IN WINTER

Can be Kept on Straw as Well as on Hay

Professor J. H. Sheppard, of the North Dakota Agricultural College, answering a question recently about wintering horses on straw, says:

The North Dakota station did a considerable amount of work in horse feeding a number of years ago and made extensive trials with oat straw, as compared with hay, for roughage. In the trial it was found that some horses did about as well on it as they did on hay. While others were very much harder to carry, chiefly because their appetites for roughage were too light to cause them to eat enough of it. Aside from those dainty animals there was little trouble in keeping them up on oat straw as roughage.

The oat straw used was that of a normal season, which was coarser and more woody than that which had been obtained this year. The trial consisted of a period of sixty days' feeding with oats as the grain ration against a similar period with oats and hay, and sixty days' feeding with a mixture of half and half bran and shorts by weight with hay compared with sixty days' feeding bran and shorts with oat straw.

During the first thirty days winter conditions were present and the horses were used only about enough for good exercise. During the second thirty days they were worked at harrowing, discing and seeding and had nearly all of that work the last half of the month. The horses receiving oats and hay as a ration required nine and one-third pounds of oats with hay to carry them, while those on oats and straw consumed eleven and one-half pounds of oats per day. During the thirty days that they had light work, the horses on hay gained 176 pounds and the three on straw 169 pounds. During the thirty days when they had heavy work one-half of the time, those on hay lost 340 pounds and those on straw 345 pounds.

The similar lots of horses fed on bran and shorts, half and half by weight, gained during the winter conditions, 88 pounds when fed hay, and 83 pounds when fed straw. When they were on the straw ration with heavy work for one-half of the month they lost 225 pounds, and on the hay ration 235 pounds.

These results indicate that horses can be carried almost as successfully on straw as roughage as they can on hay, provided enough aditional grain is given them to supply them with sufficient nourishment. The additional grain required is about one-fifth. If the feeder has facilities for chaffing the straw and will moisten it and mix the grain fed with it during the season when the animals are required to do very little work, a smaller amount of grain will carry them.

SUCKERS ON CORN

In the past suckers on corn were regarded as very undesirable, and oftentimes the small boy had to go through the cornfield and pull them off. Recent experiments show that suckering of the corn plant is merely a response to its surroundings. When the stand is thin there will always be plenty of suckers. The corn plants simply try to remedy the thin stand by suckering.

In an experiment several years ago where there were four plants in a hill eight suckers developed to each one hundred plants; where there were three in a hill, twenty-five suckers developed; where there were two in a hill seventy-six suckers, and where there was only one plant in the hill, 193 suckers developed to each one hundred plants. It was noticed that a large number of the suckers produced ears.

Another cause for suckering is the richness of the land. Rich, new land has been found to produce nearly twice the number of suckers as old, worn-out land. To some extent the tendency to suckers is no doubt inherited, but the main causes of suckering are the thinness of the ground and the weather conditions.

Experiments conducted for two years indicated that it paid to leave the suckers on. The average yield for two years of corn with the suckers left on was eighty-one bushels, while for corn with suckers pulled off it was sixty-four bushels.

Back Full of Aches Headaches and Depression

MUCH OF WOMEN'S SUFFERING IS NEEDLESS AND CAN BE PREVENTED BY THE USE OF DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS.

That Stab-like Pain in the Back is Sure Indication of Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Anna Rodriguez writes as follows from her home in Valencia: "For a long time I suffered with failing strength and nagging headaches. My condition grew steadily worse, my limbs became bloated and shaky, I was sallow and thin, felt rheumatic pains, dizziness and chills. I unfortunately didn't suspect my kidneys, and was nearly dead when I discovered the true cause of my sufferings. I read so much about the wonderful health and strength that comes to all who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills that I felt sure they would help me.

Such blessings of health and comfort I got from Dr. Hamilton's Pills I can't describe. They speedily put me right, and their steady use keeps me active, energetic, strong and happy. I strongly urge others to regulate and tone their system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut."

LAND FOR THE VOLUNTEERS.

That the Dominion Government is taking an active interest not only during their term of service but in their later years, is shown by the following amendment of the Volunteer Bounty Act of [illegible]. The amendment reads, in part, as follows:

"The Governor in Council may grant to every such volunteer, or, in the event of his death between the date of his enlistment or appointment and the thirty-first day of December, one thousand nine hundred and twelve, to his legal representative, two adjoining quarter-sections of Dominion lands, available for homestead entry, subject to the conditions herein specified. Every such grant shall be subject to the conditions that the grantee shall select and enter for the said two quarter-sections in the Dominion Lands Office for the land district in which they are situated on or before the thirty-first day of December, one thousand nine hundred and twelve; that he shall perfect his entry by commencing actually to reside upon and cultivate the land within six months after the date of entry; and that he shall thereafter reside upon and cultivate the land for the period, and in accordance with the terms and conditions, prescribed by the homestead provisions of The Dominion Lands Act.

Editorial Notes

One third of that useful tuber, the Irish potato, now so scarce and expensive, is raised in Germany. Well, what's in a name? A dollar note is called a "bill," whilst in deference to the German Emperor, for whose opinion would not give two one dollar bills one speaks of him as "William."

Every citizen of Peterborough has read with pleasure the report of the Canadian General Electric Co. for 1911. Every property owner and, in fact every patriotic man of this city must be glad to learn that Peterborough's biggest factory has just completed the most successful year in its history.

In these days of "ologies" and "isms" something with a new name is always cropping up. The Optometrical Association of Ontario has now applied to the Ontario Legislature for a charter. Optometry is the science of the correcting of defects of vision by means of lenses and prisms and not by drugs or surgery.

Hamilton, Ont., is in the throes of a mad dog scare. Two persons, both children, have been bitten by a fox terrier that is suspected of having hydrophobia. With the number of useless, barking, obnoxious, [illegible] worrying curs that roam the streets of this city, it is time some drastic measures were taken to not only keep them under civic control, but to have the police kill off all not legally protected. An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure in so horrible a disease as hydrophobia.

The Ontario government has amended the Municipal Act so that the Council of any city of 100,000 inhabitants or over, may by by-law provide that the names of candidates for Mayor, Controllers, Aldermen, members of the Board of Education and by-laws and questions may be printed on one ballot paper, the proper kind or set of ballot papers being prepared for each ward, and in such cases the Deputy Returning Officers shall cancel such part of the ballot paper as the elector may not be entitled to use at the polling place.

As public health is possibly one of the most, if not the most important matters that occupies the thoughts of Peterborough citizens, it is of interest to note the new regulations issued by the Ontario Board of Health. Among these rules are the following: "It shall be the duty of the Provincial Board and it shall have power to advise the officers of the Government in regard to public health generally, and as to drainage, water supply, disposal of garbage and sewage, heating, ventilation and plumbing of premises, exercise a careful oversight of vaccine matter and serum offered for sale in Ontario; determine whether the existing condition of any premises or of any street, or public place is a nuisance or injurious to health.

COURTING A VOICE

Telephone Girl Pursued by Lover Who Finally Married Her

A romantic story of the courtship and marriage of a telephone girl comes from St. Louis, where Mr. William McCalpin married Miss Viola Kortkemp, a young lady employed at the St. Louis telephone exchange. The marriage was the result of a courtship induced by the sweet voice of Miss Viola.

Mr. McCalpin, who is one of the managers of the Waters Pierce Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Trust, whilst telephoning from his office was fascinated by the voice that answered his call, and after several unnecessary calls, for the purpose of listening to the enchanting voice, he introduced himself and asked to be allowed to visit her and "get acquainted." Miss Kortkemp was taken back by such "rapid" methods and invariably "rang off" when he persisted, and at length to [illegible] the chaff of her fellow operators she obtained her transference to another exchange. Not to be beaten, the admirer set himself to hunt her down, and after a lapse of over two years he was successful.

Calling up a client on the telephone, he heard the long-sought voice from the exchange. He did not waste any time, for in response to the request, "Number, please," he said, "I am William McCalpin. Don't move. I am coming out to get you, and I am coming right away." The sweet, but astonished voice asked for enlightenment, and Mr. McCalpin repeated his former proposal. Persistence of this sort was bound to impress the lady, and after a moment's consideration the voice gave her name and address and permission for her admirer to call upon her father for an orthodox introduction.

Mr. McCalpin immediately went to see the father, who was the chief of the fire brigade of University City, and he consented to introduce Mr. McCalpin, with the happiest results. The "Voice" was quite up to expectations and the oil man gave an equally good impression. He insisted upon immediate marriage, as he declared that he had been courting her for two years, and again his persistence won, and the young couple were married. Mr. McCalpin is no ta millionaire, but as he is connected with the famous "octopus" it will probably not be long before he becomes one.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE STORY

The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian says: - A new and characteristic story of Florence Nightingale reaches me. She was a great admirer of Harriet Martineau, but Miss Martineau's inclination towards Atheism was a cause of regret and grief to her. When the news came of the authoress's death in unbelief, and friends, shocked and stern, were making remarks about her sad end and her lost soul, Florence Nightingale smiled as she said, "How glorious must have been her surprise when she woke in Paradise to find she had been mistaken."

THE NEED OF MEN

Work in Every Field Not Only Remains But Increases

More men are needed in the world to-day than ever before, because there is more to do—more different things to make, more actual people to support. Fifteen years ago the bicycle makers would have been frightened into bankruptcy if you had told them that in 1910 their trade would have almost disappeared. But what do we see now? The coming of automobiles has given work to all the bicycle men and thousands more. And it is so in other businesses and professions. The point to remember is that, while the form of work changes, the work in every field remains, and even increases. The real claims are not all taken up. Alexander the Great was only a fool when he wept because there were no more worlds to conquer. He didn't use his eyes to see with, but only to weep with.

POPULAR THOUGH POOR

"Be forgetful of self; think, and think kindly, of others."

"Say a kind rather than a smart thing."

"Be ready to help whenever you can."

"Give others credit for doing and knowing something."

"Be courteous to all, in or out of business."

"Don't talk scandal."

"Pay what you owe, and never borrow money."

Old Age Pensions

Following the removal of the pauperism disqualification, 10,938 persons in London alone received old-age pensions.

One hundred miles of new streets for the Metropolis are proposed by the London Traffic Branch of the Board of Trade.

Since the disestablishment of the Church in France, many former priests have taken up the occupation of cab-drivers in Paris.

THE ASPIRING CHAUFFEUR

Chug, chug! Plonk, plonk! Choo choo!

The motor-car dashed along the road at a tremendous speed, missed a woman by a split hair's-breadth, bumped over her less fortunate dog, and came to an abrupt halt.

"Dear me!" said the chauffeur, alighting.

The woman said more than "Dear me!" In fact, what she didn't say isn't worth printing.

"Can I—er—replace your dog?" suggested the chauffeur, getting in a word edgewise at about 3.45.

For a brief moment the woman regarded his be-goggled features. Then she retorted generously:

"You flatter yourself!"

A COMMON COMPLAINT

"What's the matter with you?" asked the Army doctor.

The recruit, who had been on the sick list ever since he had enlisted, shook his head sorrowfully.

"I dunno," he replied.

"You look well enough," commented the doctor. "How's the appetite?"

"I'd match an elephant at meals," answered the recruit. "It ain't that kind of illness, sir."

"Then I'm hanged if I know what kind it is!" exclaimed the Army medico. "How does it affect you?"

"Well, I eats well, and I drinks well, and I sleeps well," replied Thomas Atkins, rubbing his nose thoughtfully; "but directly I hear the word 'work,' I come all of a tremble!"

WOMEN IN PARLIAMENT

A Glance at the Reigns of the Early Edwards

In the very early times the affairs of the nation were not wholly in the hands of the sterner sex, for in the reigns of Henry III. and Edward I. four abbesses at least were summoned to Parliament namely, those of Shaftesbury, Barking, Winchester, and Milton. To one of the Parliaments of Edward III. there were summoned by writ ten ladies of noble birth, seven of them countesses. Gurdon, in his "Antiquities of Parliament," goes back still further than this, for he says that "ladies of birth and quality sat in council with the Saxon Mites." A certain Abbess Hilda, according to the historian Bede, presided at an ecclesiastical synod. In Wightred's great council at Becconfeld, A.D. 694, the abbesses sat and deliberated, and five of them signed decrees of that council along with the King, Bishops and nobles. King Edward's charter to the Abbey of Crowland, A.D. 961, was with the consent not only of the nobles but also of the abbesses, their names appearing among those who signed it.

GRINDSTONE ISLAND, Magdalen Islands, Que., March 20 (Special)—That Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing a great work for the suffering women of Canada, can no longer be denied. Every corner of the Dominion furnishes some noble woman who is willing to speak out and tell her suffering sisters where they can find relief, and Mrs. Jacob McLean, of this place, is one of them.

"I am fifty-six years old," Mrs. McLean states, "and at that critical time of life that comes to every woman.

Study the Location of

OAKLAND PARK

Oakland Park is located east of the Red River, just beyond the present north limits of the city of Winnipeg. It is about half way between the city limits and the line which, it is stated, the Canadian Pacific Railway will build across the north of the city to relieve the terrible freight congestion now confronting them. Whether that line is built or not, Northeast Winnipeg is now and will be the industrial part of the city; and Oakland Park will be the location par excellence for the homes of the better class of the future industrial army of Winnipeg.

Oakland Park runs between the Bird's Hill Road and the Main line, C.P.R. Its lots are well located, treed, on roads that are graded and used to-day, and the street car line passes the property.

Now Figure the Price of these Lots:

The prices asked for Oakland lots, from $4.00 to $14.00 per foot, are away down in comparison with other properties equally well located. They form Winnipeg's BEST investment to-day.

CURIOUS MASCOTS

Singers Who Have Real Faith in Such Company

Madame Patti, who has enraptured all music-lovers, places great belief in an old doll, called "Henriette," which she has treasured as her special talisman since she was seven years of age.

Another great singer with a real faith in mascots is Madame Alice Esty, and she never sings in public without wearing a small green heart attached to a delicate necklace of gold.

The Shah of Persia and a small table, upon which are five splendid portraits, are quite inseparable. This mascot accompanies him everywhere, and is placed close to his pillow while he sleeps. The portrait consists of himself, the late King Edward and his Consort, and the Tsar and Tsaritsa of Russia. The late Baroness Burdett-Coutts was almost convinced that good luck would desert her if she parted with a lucky guinea. This coin was given to her grandfather, who dressed rather carelessly, by a benevolent old gentleman who had mistaken the former for one seeking charity!

Among ladies in French society there is a great desire to possess for "luck" bits of the hangman's rope, and applications are frequently made —but without success—to influential Britons connected with the Home Office to obtain such unpleasant relics from the hangman!

LIGHT THAT DOES NOT FAIL

A Volcanic Beacon in San Salvador Republic

The republic of San Salvador is the only goverment on earth that collects lighthouse fees on account of a volcano that it owns, and without the slightest cost of upkeep.

The volcanic beacon is about eight miles inland from the port of Acajutla, and its pillar of cloud by day and its fire sky by night are visible for many miles out to sea. It bursts forth every seven minutes, and is just as accurate as any revolving light that warns mariners of danger in any part of the world.

This volcano has been keeping up this seven-minutes' service of eruptions ever since anyone can remember. It is a favorite amusement of visitors to sit by the hour during the lazy afternoons, and, watch in hand, to time the eruptions till they tire of the occupation and fall asleep. No one has ever caught the volcano napping, however.

Every vessel that puts in at Acajutla has to pay its lighthouse fee. There is no other lighthouse than the volcano, but that is a sufficient excuse for the Government of Salvador to make a charge for its services. The explosions that accompany the eruptions sound like detonations of heavy charges of dynamite, but, fortunately, they are not sufficient to shake the ground perceptibly more than about a mile or two from the summit of the crater.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

CHANGING THE WORLD

Look Around You and Examine Your Environment Occasionally

"You cannot change the world; only yourself."

The above saying is apt to be a little misleading. For though the world is so vast, huge, and complex that to change the whole of it in any way would require powers far greater than most of us possess, yet, on the other hand, by changing ourselves we do much towards changing the world. "He who reforms himself has done more to reform the community than a crowd of noisy, impotent talkers." Few of us properly realize the greatness of the influences which we exert, very often unconsciously, on all with whom we are constantly in contact.

When you change yourself, you cannot help but change your influence, and your influence changes others to some extent, and thus changes their influence, too, and so on, like the ripples caused by a stone flung into a pond. So if you reform yourself, you are taking a hand in the great task of reforming the world.

"Your world" is your mission-ground. "Your world" is the place where your best work is needed. Your friends, your workmates, above all, your family, are the people who are the most affected by you. To reform yourself is hard, but it is not a hopeless task.

You can alter your whole outlook on life. If you are inclined to be sad and gloomy, you can, by persistently forcing yourself to think cheerfully, in time develop the habit of cheerfulness to such an extent that it becomes second nature to you.

Look around you, and examine your world, occasionally. See where a change for the better is most needed, and set to work at once to make that change. Here is one, perhaps, who needs cheering up; go and cheer him. Here is one who seems to want advice; give it to him. Here is one who requires help; let him have any such help as lies in your power to give.

But, above all, look to yourself. Reform, like charity, should begin at home.—Budget and Family Journal.

"TOM BROWN'S" BIRTHDAY

The Hero of the Famous Fight Preaches Every Sunday

The hero of one of the finest books for boys ever written has celebrated the eighty-seventh anniversary of his birthday. The Rev. Augustus Orlebar, vicar of Wellington, Bedfordshire, for nearly fifty-three years, is the original of Tom Brown, whose fight with "the Slogger" is so vividly described in "Tom Brown's Schooldays." Mr. Orlebar remembers the encounter very well.

It is not claimed that he represents Tom Brown in any other respect, but he was the Rugby boy who at cover-point caught out the redoubtable batsman in the cricket match against the Marylebone team described in the same story. Hughes, afterwards the judge, was captain of the eleven when he put Orlebar into the team, and Orlebar himself was captain when Dr. Arnold died in 1842.

Despite his age, Mr. Orlebar, as he has always done, enjoys good health. He preaches every Sunday and looks after the Parish generally. Mr. Orlebar is a non-smoker, but not a teetotaler.

GREATLY EXAGGERATED

She had been at the seaside and in the country for the holidays, and her industrious fiancé had been working and waiting for her during the long, long days. Now she had returned, and he had been hearing many things of her, and was sore displeased.

"They tell me," he said, painfully, "that you flirted desperately with no fewer than six men."

Her cheeks flushed and her eyes blazed. "Who told you that?" she asked, angrily.

"Several people. It has been common talk."

Her anger gave way to sobs. "Oh, Frank," she pleaded, as she flung herself on his neck, "it isn't true—it isn't true."

A great load was lifted from his heart. "No, Frank," she went on, "it isn't true; there were only four."

TAKING NO CHANCES

"Johnny," said the teacher, "this is the third time I have had to punish you this week. Why are you so naughty?"

"Because," answered the incorrigible youngster, "grandpa says the good die young, and I ain't taking any chances."

A MILLINERY THOUGHT

"They say that when an ostrich is surprised he hides his head in the sand."

"I wish to thunder [illegible] hide his tail there," observed the man who had just settled a heavy millinery bill.

A Hangman Resigns

News come from Sydney that the hangman has resigned [illegible] It seems that several death sentences have been commuted [illegible] Labour Government, and as the executioner would have gained $[illegible] in the case of each malefactor, as a special remuneration, he doubtless considered that his emoluments have been trifled with. His fixed wage was $10 a week, whether anybody was to be hanged or not. He may have suffered from monotony, for, in his three years' service, he had not operated in a single instance.

NOT IN CHURCH

A well-known preacher gives a curious experience, as follows: "It was his custom to point his sermon with either "Dearly beloved brethren," or "Now, my brothers," until one day a lady member of the congregation took exception to this and asked why he always preached to the gentlemen and never to the ladies.

"My dear lady," said the beaming vicar, "one embraces the other."

"But not in the church," was the reply of the astonished lady.

MIGHT BE WORSE

It was not always possible for Mrs. O'Flaherty, from her permanent station at the washtub, to appreciate the silver lining, which her husband took pains to point out to her in every cloud.

"I've lost me job, Norah," he said cheerfully the other day; "but this is just the toime whin ye ought to be thankful I'm not so smart as some people."

"An' fer why should I be thankful for that, thin?" asked the hard-working soul, pausing to wipe her glistening forehead with her damp apron.

"'Tis aisy seen," replied her lord, gazing tolerantly at her from his comfortable chair by the stove. "If I was Tim Murphy, f'r instance, an' out of me job, I'd be losin' two dollars a day instid of a dollar and a half. You think o' that, me darlint, and 'twill put the heart into ye, same as it hav into me."

AN EXPERT WITNESS.

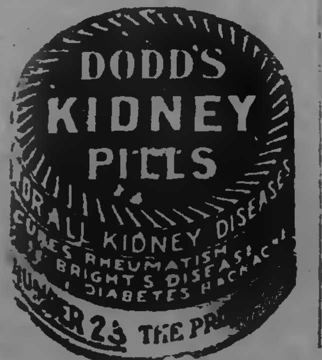
Time after time the counsel had tried to draw something important from the sea-faring man who stood in the box.

"You say your boat picked up the accused at nine o'clock," said the barrister wearily, but still determined to gain some ground.

"Now, it has been stated that he jumped overboard nearly an hour before that time. Tell me, Captain Bluffarty, how he appeared to you when you picked him up. If you had been asked to give an opinion of him then, what would you have said?"

There was a long pause. The captain looked thoughtful, then yawned, then stroked his beard.

"A-ah," he answered at long last. "Well, I'll tell you candid now. If somebody'd asked me then—just when we took him aboard—what I thought of him, I should have said straight out, insult or no insult, that he was one of the wettest men, if not the very wettest man, that ever I see'd. Fack mister!"



WHY THE TEACHER WEPT.

Every scholar was wearing his best clothes, and every face was beaming brightly. And the teacher's eyes watched grimly lest one small slip should spoil the record of her class.

For it was the annual inspection, and the fierce-looking man who called himself inspector was putting the pupils through their paces.

"Now, boys," he called, "I want you to tell me—what is a blizzard?"

Silence reigned.

"What is a blizzard?" said the ferocious one.

And still silence reigned.

The teacher glared at the top boy, then nodded to encourage him, and at last there came a look of pleading in her eyes. Almost she wept.

Slowly the top boy's hand went up.

"Yes?" snapped the inspector. "Go on. Tell me—what is a blizzard?"

"P-please, sir," stammered the youthful encyclopaedia, "it's the—the inside of a hen!"

A Nut Craker.

WHAT DID THE CROWD SAY?

Juggles is a good sort, but at times he gets worried. You see, he has a large number of little things to worry him. In other words, Joggles is the father of thirteen children.

As a good father should, Joggles took the whole bakers' dozen with him on his annual holiday. Was he annoyed at any of the humorous remarks of would-be wags which fell on his ears? No. He simply puffed with paternal pride.

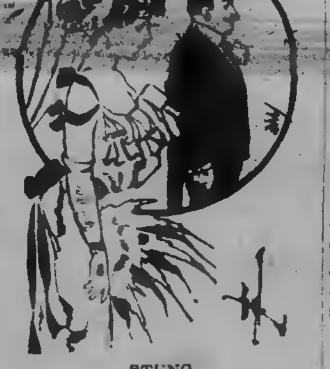
It was a railway porter who annoyed him—a common or garden railway porter. It happened thus:

Joggles and his little tot came up to the barrier, Joggles leading.

"What have you been doing?" demanded the porter, with a Sexton Blake-like air.

"No-no-nothing," stammered Joggles.

"Then," thundered the porter, "wot's all this crown follerin' ye for?"



STUNG.

He—Why is it you've never married?

She—You never asked me before.

POSERS

"Daddy," piped mother's little darling, but not father's, "is the sea a mile deep?"

Daddy, who was also an editor, glanced up crossly from a huge pile of manuscripts. "I don't know!" he snapped.

Mother's little darling looked disappointed. A little while later, he asked:

"Is the moon really made of cheese, daddy?"

Again came the response:

"I don't know!"

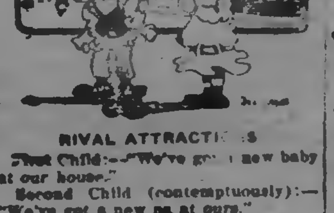
Another look of disappointment, another silence, and another question:

"Do cannibals use postage stamps?"

No less savage than the cannibals themselves was the distracted manuscript hunter as he roared, for the third time:

"I don't know!"

"Well, I say, daddy," exclaimed the youthful inquirer very seriously, "who made you an editor?"



RIVAL ATTRACTIONS

First Child:—"We've got a new baby at our house."

Second Child (contemptuously):—"We've got a new pa at ours."

SEVERE

A good story is going the rounds at a certain university regarding one of the sarcastic professors, who was recently conducting an oral examination in a very scientific way.

There was one student, handsome, easy, and self possessed, who appeared to be utterly ignorant of the simplest phases of the subject.

Professor W. put question after question to him, without receiving one intelligent reply. Finally, the student said, naively:—

"I'm very unfortunate, Professor, you never ask me anything I know."

The professor said nothing, but gravely tore off a tiny piece of paper from a convenient pad.

"Here, Mr. B.," he said, handing it to the student, "write all you know. Take plenty of time—there's no hurry."

MILK POINTS

Don't keep milk where it will be warmer than 50 degrees.

Don't leave it in an open dish or pan.

Don't put it in the bottom of the refrigerator.

Keep the cow's tail still by banishing flies. A simple spray will do it.

Strain all milk thoroughly. Germs cling to the dirt particles and may thus be eliminated.

Sterilize all crocks, pails, cans and bottles by boiling.

ORANGE MARMALADE

Select one orange and one lemon with a thin skin. Cut in slices and then in cubes. To this add six cupfuls of water. Let stand over night. Next morning boil twenty minutes, measure liquid, and to one cupful of mixture add one cupful of sugar. Boil evenly for one-half hour, or until it jells. This will make eight medium sized glasses.

Grape Sherbet

Two pounds Concord grapes, two lemons, one quart water, one pound sugar; lay a square of cheesecloth over a large bowl, put in the washed grapes and mash thoroughly; squeeze out all the juice and add an equal amount of sugar, the lemon juice. Use sugar enough to make it quite sweet, then freeze.

NEWSBOY TO OPERA SINGER

Plenty of romance has been crowded into the twenty-seven years of the life of Mr. B. Nevada Landino, who ten years ago was a New York newsboy, and is now a grand opera tenor singer. Mr. Landino has said that at Cleveland he filled up his spare time by shoe-blacking, while later on he worked side by side at cigarette-making with Rosa Pastor, of Whitechapel, who afterwards married a millionaire. To be slapped on the back by Mascagni, who said "Bravo!" is another incident that the tenor recalls with pride. Landino speaks four languages—German, French and Italian, in addition to English; he has a repertoire of two hundred songs, and knows twenty operas, twelve of which he can sing without rehearsing.

"DERBYSHIRE'S GRAND OLD MAN"

Known by many as "Derbyshire's Grand Old Man," Mr. Edward Mason Wrench, of Baslow, celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday recently. Not only in medicine and surgery has Mr. Wrench made a name for himself, but he also had a distinguished career as a soldier during the stirring times of the Crimean War and Indian Mutiny. In the former he did duty in the trenches, and was present at the three assaults—one on the Quarries and the others at the Redan and on the last occasion that the assault party went down to the trenches only half returned to the camp uninjured.

Throat Becomes Diseased from Neglecting Colds

THEN CATARRH SETS IN, MUCOUS DROPS INTO THE STOMACH, COUGHING, HEADACHES AND DEBILITY FOLLOW.

That the best method of curing catarrhal disease consists in using Catarrhozone is now freely admitted. Catarrhozone is infinitely superior to cough medicines, tablets, sprays and emulsions, which for the most part are of no practical value except to ease the cough for the time being. Often liquid cough remedies contain opium, morphine and cocaine. With Catarrhozone you take no drugs—you employ Nature's way—just inhale Catarrhozone's soothing healing vapor and relief and cure follows promptly.

Weak Throat, Racking Cough Cured.

"For five years I suffered from a severe bronchitis. A harsh, dry, racking cough kept my throat in a raw condition from one year's end to another. Before going to sleep at night I always had a bad attack, and in the morning before each breakfast I suffered greatly. My voice was harsh and raspy, and sometimes I found it difficult to make myself understood. Catarrhozone seemed to soothe and heal from the first day. It cured me, and now I wouldn't think of being without a Catarrhozone Inhaler—it means life to me."

The above experience is related by Mr. Alexander P. Savary of Hamilton, Pa., and proves the effectiveness of Catarrhozone, which will cure every cough, cold, bronchial or catarrhal attack. The dollar size of Catarrhozone contains two months' treatment and is guaranteed. Smaller size 50c, sample size 25c. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada

FOR CLEAN SPORT ON RACE TRACKS

Cheating Games Must be Suppressed if the Sport of Kings is to Retain Popularity

The introduction of the Pari-mutuel machines is being attemped in an effort to do away with a number of the evils associated with horse racing. They have been tried at a great number of places, and there is reason to believe that they will accomplish a good deal along this line. More than more machines are wanted, however, as is shown by the following article from a writer in the "Canadian Sportsman," which, while it deals chiefly with harness horse racing, is equally applicable to runners. Under the caption "What Hurts the Racing Game," he writes as follows:

Horse racing, which has been termed the sport of kings, has an origin dating many years farther back in history than any other sport enjoyed by the people of this generation, and judging from its present standing it is very apt to outlive them all. There is no contest that will excite a crowd to so high a pitch of enthusiasm as a hard-fought horse race. There are interesting sports, such as baseball, football, running, etc., but they all fail to bring the large crowd to its feet as do the struggling equines as they enter the home stretch and strive to the wire.

However, the feature of this grand sport depends entirely on the manner in which the races are conducted. There are dishonest men in the race horse business as in every other business. It would be unnatural were they absent.

Owners are, as a general rule, the men who are back of most of the crooked deals put through on race tracks and the trainer and driver are the tools the owner uses to gain his desire. The trainer, however, is often in the little game himself, and, of course at the honest owner's expense —the man who is paying him so much per mouth to train and drive his horse, and expecting him to win.

To make the racing game popular with the public these cheating games must be suppressed, and men who cannot race without them put out of the game. What the turf wants is men who will live up to maxims such as those uttered by the Clever Grand Circuit driver, Walter Cox: "Be honest." "Leave the booze for the other fellow." "When victory can be won to-day, don't wait for a winning to-morrow." "Always drive to win regardless of the record of the horse." "Remember that nobody wins fame in the sulky unless he frequently rides in front, even the driver who comes in second is apt to be overlooked by the spectators and critics." "It's the man in front who gets the glory and the reputation and finally lands the best horses for his stable." What the turf must have for future success of harness racing are qualified officials in the judges' stand.

It is surprising how many men who know practically nothing about the horses racing or the rules of racing occupy the judges' stands on association tracks, and it is this sort of men that the wise drivers take advantage of and put through their work.

A man, to occupy the judges' stand, should know the ability of every horse which starts in a race he judges. He should be thoroughly posted on all the rules of racing. He should have even a better knowledge of the horses be judges than the wily booky who marks up the betting odds. He should have no favorites, and be fearless in giving what he believes to be the proper decision. With such men in the stand, horse racing cannot help but become the most popular of sports.

LITTLE PARISENNE

Helene Avril draws a charming picture of a day in the life of the little Parisienne. It is a cold morning in February, dull and chilly. Out of doors passers-by hurry along wrapped and miserable looking. Simonne wakens early in her warm little bed, and as soon as she opens her eeys she smiles at the thought of the happiness that is in store for her. This is the day on which she has been invited to a children's party at the home of her little friend Jeanne, and they are going to have such fun. The night before the dressmaker sent her the dress specially made for the part. It is a "robe fourreau," in dark green velvet, which makes her look ever so tall. In a few hours everybody will be admiring her at Jeanne's house; her little friends first, but perhaps also their big brothers. In Simonne's heart is already awakened the desire to please "ces messieurs," the oldest of whom is not yet sixteen years of age.

While her little brain is still excited at the thought of what the day is destined to bring her, Simonne's mother enters to give her the usual good-morning kiss. She bends over the bed, puts her ar mund er the frail body, which clings to her with affection, and mother and daughter pass a delightful moment.

But eight o'clock strikes. "Vite, Monette, levons nous." You will amuse yourself this afternoon, but this morning we must work hard. The French teacher will be hear shortly. Are you quite ready with your lessons? Simonne hesitates to reply. Trying on her new dress last night kept her behind with her lessone, and she has not had time to go over her grammar again. She hurries, however, and dressing does not take her long this morning. Five minutes to swallow her chocolate—then there is a ring at the bell. It is mademoiselle. Already? And Simonne has not even looked at the second page, which she does not know at all. She runs to meet her teacher, throws her arms around her neck, and kisses her. "Oh, ma petite mademoiselle," she exclaims. "If you knew how delighted I am. This afternoon I am invited chez Jeanne. Mamma has had a new dress made for me, and we are going to have lots of fun."

Mademoiselle is used to these effusions. With both hands she takes the girl's head between hers and gives her a long maternal kiss on the forehead. Her pupils are almost as dear to her as if they were her own children. Simonne knows it well, the sly little minx. Now she feels is the moment to admit that she does not know her lessons very well. Mademoiselle does not scold her, but improves the occasion to give her some wise council.

Mademoiselle does not like vain and coquettish little girls, and their beautiful dresses leave her absolutely indifferent, but she draws a pleasing portrait of simple good-hearted children, and makes it so attractive that little Simonne feels a wee bit ashamed of the sentiments that agitated her shortly before.

Two o'clock. If anything were needed to add to Simonne's happiness, it is provided in the auto that whisks her to Jeanne's house, where nearly all the other children have arrived and are gathered in the hall. In a corner, seated by a little table, where they are turning over the leaves of a picture book, are a little boy and his sister who seem out of place in these surroundings. The boy is thirteen years of age, his sister eleven or twelve. No one takes any notice of them. Simonne asks Jeanne who they are.

"Oh," replied Jeanne, "they are the children of a post-mistress mamma knows. She invited them so that they might have an opportunity of amusing themselves—a thing that does not happen often. But I am sure they will be rather bored here, for no one knows them. Have you noticed the girl's dress. It must have been her mother who made it; it is not elegant. And anyone can see that the boy's suit is ready-made."

Simonne stood thinking for a while. These little ones "whom no one knew" interested her. She remembered what mademoiselle had told her in the morning, and found that they resembled in an astonishing manner the portrait of the little ones whose greatest charm was their simplicity. Her heart was stirred. It was true that they were not very fashionably dressed, but a generous movement sent her to their side. Might she sit by them and look at the pictures. In a few moments all three were chattering away as if they had known each other for years. Their laughter soon brought the other children around them. They joined in the games they organized and during the whole afternoon they amused themselves with a heartiness that made Simonne very pleased. She forgot all about her beautiful dress. Besides, other girls were as well dressed as she, so it was not really worth while to make any fuss about her dress, even if it was a "robe fourreau." What a delightful afternoon she had had, making two other children happy, who, but for her, would have been left out in the cold. She would be sure to tell mademoiselle how she had carried her lessou into practice.

MUST BE CLEVER

"She will be a clever woman that I marry" declared a confirmed bachelor, who was being chaffed on the subject.

"I thought you didn't like these clever women," said a friend.

"I don't," rejoined the bachelor. "But if ever I marry, it'll be a clever woman who does it."

FUTURE OF GEOGRAPHY

Traveller of the Future Should be a Trained Topographer

Major Leonard Darwin, the President of the Geographical Society, says "that in looking to the future it is important to inquire, not how their past history would then be regarded, but rather how the society would be able to maintain its reputation and its usefulness in the new conditions of geographical knowledge. It was true that the South Pole was as yet uncaptured, that the map of Arabia was still largely composed of great blank spaces, and that the bend of the Brahmaputra was drawn by guesswork in their atlases. But it was probable that all those problems would be solved before long, and where then would be the field in which the explorer might hope to win renown in robbing the unknown of its romance? They must sooner or later face the fact that the work by which the society had become best known in the past represented an almost finished chapter in geographical history, and to that condition of things the society would have to adapt itself. In view of the changing conditions, they ought, no doubt, to direct their efforts with more persistence than heretofore in the direction of encouraging travellers to make systematic and detailed examinations of camparatively small areas, and not merely to cover long distances with the result of doing little more than to confirm the impressions of previous explorers. The traveller of the future ought to be a trained topographer, or to have thoroughly prepared himself in advance for some definite class of investigation, if he wished to win their praises."

JAPANESE COMMANDMENTS

A Salutary and Natural Code of the Orientals

There can be no doubt that the majority of these Japanese rules are nearer scientific exactitude than the rules of Moses or the ordinary practice of modern English life. Here are the Japanese commandments:

(2) Never eat more than once a day.

(3) Take a very hot bath daily.

(4) Wear rough warm clothes.

(5) Early to bed and early to rise.

(6) Sleep at least six hours each night and at most seven and a half in a dark room with open windows.

(7) Rest on the seventh day, and during that day do not read or write.

(8) Avoid every expression of anger; never exercise the brain too much or too long.

(9) Marry early; widows and widowers should re-marry as soon as possible.

(10) Drink coffee and tea in the strictest moderation, do not smoke at all, and never touch alcohol in any form.

(11) Avoid hot rooms, and [illegible] all rooms heated artificially.

(12) In order to strengthen such organs as may be weakened by age or use, nourish yourself on the corresponding organs of animals.

A LONG WAIT

It is Mr. Arnold Daly, the famous American actor who recently made such a hit in "Arms and the Man" at the Criterion, who tells this story. He attended a dinner some time ago at which a lady who had risen from obscurity to fame on the stage told of how, one morning when unknown, she had called at Mr. Frohman's office in New York. She approached a particularly lordly office-boy and humbly inquired if Mr. Frohman were in. "He's not in," replied the boy, putting his feet on the desk. "Then I'll wait," she said, and seated herself in a chair. After an hour's wait she became weary, and ventured to make a second attack on the office-boy. "Will he be in soon?" she inquired. "I don't know," was the reply. "Will he be in to-day?" she persisted. "Not likely. He's in Europe!" At this point Mr. Daly sat up and took notice. "Were you that girl?" he asked. "Indeed, yes. Why?" Said Mr. Daly, "I was the office-boy."

LOVE SEEKS ASSURANCE

V. J. Warren, Calgary.

Too well, dear heart, too well you answer me!
Why do I ask to have you put in words
That which no human language can express?
Speech of the gods alone can compass that,
Which lifts us to the gods and lets us taste
Of heaven's bliss.

Ah, yes! I know what next you would reply.
Have I not read it in your sad, soft eyes—
Those heavenly windows of an angel's soul?
Have I not felt it in your warm caress,
Your clinging arms and sweet, red lips?
Do I not know?

Ah, yes! —even as the morning knows the sun!
The dew-kissed rosebud feels the same as I,
And shares a common secret with the world.
I know, and yet, ah yet, dear heart,
My ears are deaf, until I hear you say,
"I love you."

A "FAITHFUL HENCHMAN"

Romantic to a degree has been the career of Mr. Jesse Collings, upon whom Birmingham has decided to confer the honorary freedom of that city. He was born in a Devonshire cottage, and knew what it was to struggle on the pitiful wages of an agricultural laborer before he made his mark. Nobody is so ready as he to tell how he went to Birmingham with a solitary five-pound note in his pocket and started to carve out fame and fortune as a junior clerk in a firm of hardware merchants. Then he interested himself in social reforms and politics, and made the acquaintance of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, whose "faithful henchman," to quote the political description, he has been for many past years.

Cars Held by Load of Grain.

The car service on Charlotte street was held up for nearly half an hour yesterday morning by a load of grain which had become stuck fast in the mud at the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte street.

Lindsay Post says that the Toronto Construction Co. has secured the contract for the new C. P. R. lake front line. It is a stretch of 178 miles and work will be started thereon at once. It was thought that Mr. F. R. Wilford, of Lindsay, would have secured a section of the work.

REVIVAL OF BOXING

The London Referee has Much to Say on the Subject

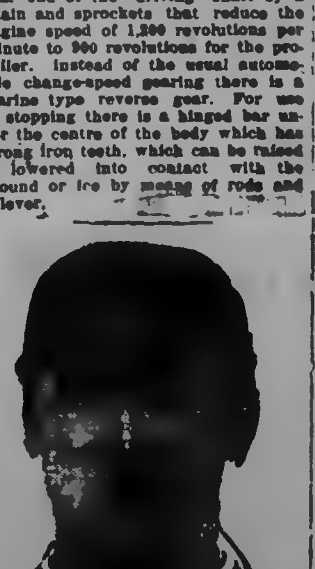
The subject of boxing is attracting attention everywhere. The London Referee says:—It is satisfactory to find the big reviews concerning themselves with boxing. Lately I commented on Mr. Osborn's admirable paper in the Fortnightly. This month there is one in the National by Mr. Harold Claughton, who dwells on the benefits which are derived from the sport, especially in the East End of London. Away down beyond Shoreditch disputes are often settled by fists instead of the sarcasms by which we usually round off our little controversies in the west, and nothing so strongly inculcates the principles of fair play as the ring. That is one of its strong points, and the lesson which it teaches in the difficult art of keeping your temper is another. As Mr. Claughton remarks: "For brutality go to the streets—not to a boxing show or a club-room—. For chastity—if a man is living intemperately he will not risk the ring; or should he, the contest will be stopped in half a minute. For foul language—an oath in the ring would be as out of order as a bird of paradise in Bermondsey." All this is true. The boxer who is to succeed must lead a wholesome life, and if he is in the right groove he cannot help imbibing principles which oblige him to "play the game" generally. There is something, perhaps, to be said for what Mr. Claughton calls "an ultimate authority, coordinating and controlling British boxing and boxers throughtout the land." Such an organisation, he thinks, "would for a sponsor with whom the authorities would readily co-operate."

As regards amateur boxing in England, the writer continues, the Amateur Boxing Association does its work in a way which is eminently satisfactory to all concerned, and the healthy influence of the National Sporting Club extends far beyond the confines of Covent Garden. We have, however, no adequate control of professional boxing, and it is for this reason that there is some danger the sport may get an undeservedly bad name; for those who are not better informed may be apt to imagine that what takes place at any hall a casual promoter may be able to hire is characteristic of boxing at headquarters and at resorts whose managers strive so far as possible to follow the path along which the N. S. C. leads.

MOTOR CAR ON SKIS

A Novel Conveyance Built for Count de Lesseps

There are characteristics suggestive of the automobile, the areoplane, the motor-boat, and the cutter, too, in the mechanical sleigh that has been manufactured in France for the Count de Lesseps, for use in Canada. As the count is an accomplished areoplanist as well as an automobilist, and the snow craft was built to his order by the designer of the Chauviere laminate areoplane propeller, it is not strange that so many features from [illegible] should have been combined in the attempt to produce a succesful and satisfactory mechanical sleigh. The automobile hood of the body blends neatly into the boat-shaped body, which terminates in a stern with a cutter effect that carries the two-bladed areoplane screw. There is room for two persons in the front seat, and a third passenger can be accommodated in a single seat behind them. The frame of the machine is of wood, and there are no springs between it and the flat, ski-like runners. The forward runners can be turned by the steering-wheel as in an automobile. A light, four-cylinder motor of aeronautical type furnishes the power. The forward end of the propeller shaft is connected with the rear end of the driving shaft by a chain and sprockets that reduce the engine speed of 1,200 revolutions per minute to 900 revolutions for the propeller. Instead of the usual automobile change-speed gearing there is a marine type reverse gear. For use in stopping there is a hinged bar under the centre of the body which has strong iron teeth, which can be raised or lowered into contact with the ground or ice by means of rods and a lever.



CHARLES CAR, who assented to the sale by his manager W. H. Watkins, of O'Toole, O'Brien and Alexander for $750.

BOXING IN CURRICULUM

From Lexington comes this despatch:—"The uplift in boxing continues. President Henry S. Barker of the State University of Kentucky, announces a course in boxing will be added to the college curriculum. Prizes for college champions in the featherweight, middleweight and heavyweight classes will be provided by the faculty. By the inauguration of the boxing course President Barker hopes to eliminate the practice of carrying pistols among the students, and to inspire a spirit of physical prowess in the collegiate body."

RAISE MORE HORSES

George B. Hulme Says There is Money in This Industry

When George B. Hulme, the noted horse judge, was in Winnipeg recently placing the ribbons on choice animals in many of the horse classes, says The Farmers' Advocate, he took advantage of an opportunity at the stock luncheon to tell farmers of the Canadian West that they should go in extensively for raising horses of all kinds, including army remounts. "In Western Canada," he said, "you have the best climate in the world, and an abundance of food and water that the horse wants."

This is just what many others who are in a position to speak with authority have said. Feed can be produced in abundance at low cost; for the most part the water is satisfactory; the climate is such that with reasonable care horse flesh is developed to perfection.

In spite of these facts, it is remarkable how few farmers really try to raise enough horses to increase their annual cash returns. Some will not be bothered with colts around the place; others consider that there is a chance that after they have paid the stallion service fee the foal will die. They have a sort of holy horror of anything that entails more risk than the growing of wheat. But there are men in the prairie provinces who are making money from breeding mares of the proper type—and they are becoming more numerous year by year. They have realized that it should not be necessary to bring thousands of dray and farm horses from the East every year. They have found out that there is profit in a horse at three or four years when he can be exchanged for cash totalling almost as many hundred dollars.

The horse raising industry is worth considering.

WINTERING FARM HORSES

How to Keep Idle Horses Cheaply in the Winter

There are three or four methods of wintering farm horses. Some turn out the idle horse and let them "rustle," some winter them in protected yards and others winter in the stable. Horses that will not be required to work from freeze-up in the fall till seeding begins in spring can be wintered as well outside as in, and more cheaply. If given a protected yard, into which a liberal supply of oat straw has been blown, they will come through the winter in as good shape or better than horses that have been closely confined and fed liberally on grain. An idle horse given plenty of good straw, some prairie hay, a few oat sheaves and water can be wintered in the yard at a minimum cost in labor and feed. Nature provides a heavy coat of hair, so the horse does not suffer any from the cold.

Horses thus wintered should have all the straw and rough fodder they will eat. Oat is the best straw. Corn [illegible] thus wintered. With oat straw and some hay no grain is required. Six weeks before spring work opens, light grain feeding should begin.

Colts may be wintered in the same way, but it is preferable to stable the weanling the first winter. Two colts in a box stall are company for each other, and if fed the usual rough fodder ration, and what oats they will clean up, do better than foals that rustle in the yard.—Farmers' Advocate.

CELERY HAS RUST

There will likely be a shortage in the celery crop this year. The recent storms have brought with them a rust known by growers as a celery disease, and it is playing havoc with the celery. Local growers claim that it was brought by the storms of the past month or so. The first sign noticeable is when the leaves turn red in spots. This gradually spreads over the leaves until they wither and decay. Then it strikes the roots of the celery and the root and stalks rot and die. Local dealers say that growers throughout the whole country are being bothered.—St. Thomas Journal.

FINE HORSES FOR CANADA

Nearly 1,000 horses have made the transatlantic voyage to the St. Lawrence this year. Mostly Hackneys and Clydesdales, the animals are to be distributed in a dozen different cities and towns throughout the Dominion. Mr. Robert Ness, of Howick, is the owner of twelve of the animals. Forty-four of the ponies are going to Mr. Sinton, of Regina, while Mr. Bogue is taking fifteen more to the West. All are bred from high-grade British stock and their coming will be welcomed by horsemen throughout Canada.

ORIGIN OF "GO TO BLAZES"

When Mr. Bodkin applied for the Bishop Blaize public-house, England, to be closed, he remarked to the chairman (Mr. R. Wallace, K.C.): "You may have heard of the ejaculation: 'Go to blazes!'"

"Yes" answered Mr. Wallace, "I think I have."

"Well," said Mr. Bodkin, "the origin of the expression is what the Bench seem to think it is. There was a Bishop Blaize and when anyone wanted advice it was the custom to say, 'Go to Blaizes.'" (Laughter.)

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

ANCIENT BULLION

Portion of Soudan Treasure Trove for Ontario Museum

Charles T. Currelley, director of the new museum of Toronto University, has received word that a good sample of the treasure trove of royal bullion, brought to light recently by Professor Garstang, of Liverpool University, England, in the course of his excavations at the ancient City of Meroe, in the Soudan, Africa, which existed about the time of Christ, was on its way to the museum. The bullion belonged to the ancient kings. Mr. Currelley related the very interesting circumstances associated with this sensational find. "Shortly after the time of Christ," he said, "the Soudan had a sudden burst of energy and greatness that those who have followed the Mahdi and Khalifa in recent times can understand, at least, to some extent. The great centre of this period was the town of Meroe, in the Soudan. Here great monuments were built and work was done that is surprisingly skilful and beautiful, though, of course, it is impossible to say how much of it was actually done by the Etheopians, or the Soudanese themselves, or how far it was the result of imported slave or free labor from Northern Africa, or, in fact, from anywhere on the Mediterranean. For some time Professor Garstang, of Liverpool, has been carrying on most successful excavations at Meroe, and last year the Royal Ontario Museum received, through the kindness of Mr. Robert Mond, of London, England, who is partially financing the expedition, some exquisite pieces of the ceramics of this period. This last winter Professor Garstang discovered the ancient treasure house of the Kings of Meroe, and there was still in the place a quantity of the royal bullion in gold nuggets, dust, etc., to the value of many thousands of dollars. It is probable that this new gift of a portion of bullion is also through the kindness of Mr. Mond.

"One is apt to speculate as to what happened to that ancient Minister of Finance and to the whole staff of clerical and manual helpers, or in any way why a large mass of such portable treasure should have been left for nearly 2,000 years. At any rate, we are very glad that a part of it will find a home in Toronto"

Mr. Currelley added that the records of ancient history threw very little light on the existence of the City of Meroe. There is a script at the ancient site of the once great city, and two men have been working on it, but so far have not been able to make head or tail out of it.

ECONOMY OF GOOD ROADS

The Cost of Haulage is Enormously Decreased

The value of good roads becomes evident when we look at the financial side of the problem. The cost of hauling one ton one mile is nine cents in Germany, and twenty-five cents in the United States, the difference is largely one of road bed. If we apply these figures to hauling, say, 5,000 bushels of wheat five miles, the cost in Europe would be $67.50, in the United States $187.50, or $120 more. It will be safe to say that where 5,000 bushels of wheat is raised, as much more hauling will be done which would represent another $120, or $240, the extra outlay caused by poor roads. This is only one item. Good roads increase the value of the land—$5 an acre is putting it too low, but at that it amounts to $1,600 for a half section—then the convenience and the ability to market at any time, so that advantage can be taken of the highest prices. The man in town realizes the value of good roads, and he gets them. He paves the sidewalks and streets. He knows that they will increase his business, his comforts and social advantages, but no more so than in the country for the farmer.—North Dakota Agricultural College.

THE HIGHEST DIGNITY

There joined the police force of London a young Scotchman but recently arrived from his native land. Being detailed one day to block the traffic on a certain thoroughfare where members of royalty were expected to pass, he was accosted by a lady hurrying to keep an appointment who thrust her head from the carriage window to remonstrate with him over the delay. "I canna let you pass, ma'am," answered the man of the baton. "But, sir, do you know who I am. I am the wife of a Cabinet Minister." "It disna mak no difference, ma'am," he answered. "I couldn'a let you pass if you were the wife of a Presbyterian minister."—Presbyterian Standard.

A Peculiar Paper Received.

The Times was yesterday in receipt of a New York paper that has three or four English words printed thereon. All we could learn was that the paper is called the "Forward." It is printed in Arabic, Hebrew, Hindustani, or some such language. The general appearance of the sheet, which is nicely printed, would remind one of what might pass through the mind of a man suffering with a bad attack of D. T.'s.

Canon Montgomery's Address Off.

Rev. Canon Montgomery, of Port Hope, who was to have delivered an address last night in St. John's church Sunday school, on the history of the Church, prior to the reformation, was not present, so the meeting had to be postponed. A telephone message was received at the residence of Rev. Canon Davidson, rector of the Church, saying that Rev. Mr. Montgomery was ill, and could not come to Peterborough.

Otonabee Man and a Skunk.

Mr. James Thompson of Otonabee, in conversation with The Times, told of an experience he had yesterday morning. When he went into his hen house, as is said in Byron's Don Juan, he found not what he sought. He went to look for eggs and found a skunk. A pitch fork was handy and the skunk soon became Alaska Sable. Mr. Thompson said that the aroma round the premises for several hours, did not recall attar of roses or bouquets of violets.

A Request.

From time to time we have requested the public to notify us in cases where our carrier boys sell copies of The Times. New Organ for St. Andrew's.

The large congregation of St. Andrew's church are to be congratulated on their enterprise in arranging for a new and up-to-date pipe organ. At the previous congregational meeting the question of procuring one was left in the hands of a committee which presented their report, with the result that a resolution was passed authorizing the committee to install a new pipe organ. Prices are being ascertained. The new organ will occupy the full space of the present organ loft, so that in future the choir will face the organist, as in George street church, and St. Paul's and many other churches. It will be fitted with an electric extended consol, and the wind will be supplied for the organ by an electric 10 h.p. motor.

Had Bad Sore Four Years

Mrs. Wilson, 110 Wickson avenue, Toronto, says: "About four years ago a sore spot appeared on the right side of my face. This spot increased in size until it became about half an inch in diameter and very painful. I went to a doctor, but the ointment he gave me did not have any good effect. The sore continued to discharge freely, and was most painful. I had it cauterized, tried poultices and all kinds of salves, but it was no good, and I continued to suffer from it for four years!

"A sample of Zam-Buk was one day given to me, and I used it. Although the quantity was so small, it seemed to do me some good, so I purchased a further supply.

"Each box did me more and more good, and, to my delight, before I had been using Zam-Buk three weeks I saw that it was going to heal the sore. In less than a month it was healed!

"I know a lady in the east of the city, whose husband suffered for years with an open sore on his leg. On my recommendation, Zam-Buk was tried in that case. The other day when I saw her, she told me that it had healed the sore completely.

"My daughter, who lives in Lethbridge, Alta., has also used Zam-Buk with the same satisfactory result. I think it is, beyond all doubt the finest healing balm known."

Such is the opinion of all persons who have really tried Zam-Buk. It is a sure cure for eczema, piles, abscesses, ulcers, scalp sores, ring worm, cuts, burns, scalds, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c box, all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. In case of skin disease use also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c tablet.

Health and Beauty Hints

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Louise: Face powder is very bad to use. It looks bad and leaves bad results. The woman who uses face powder eventually finds it clogs the pores in her face, causing wrinkles and other age marks. Leave it alone if you will be beautiful. Dissolve 4 ounces of spurmax in ½ pint witch hazel (or hot water), then add 2 teaspoonfuls of glycerine. This is the finest skin-whitener and beautifier imaginable, and for removing that shiny, oily or sallow look is unequaled. I find it extremely good for removing and preventing freckles, skin pimples and chapping in the wind. It does not show or rub off like powder and gives the skin a tone of such velvety smoothness.

Miss Essie: Even though your hair is thin, dull, straggly, split and broken through improper shampooing, you can fluff it up and make it appear abundant and be easy to arrange by shampooing with a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water. Rinse in clear water and the hair will dry quickly and be ever so soft and nice. The alkali in soap and most prepared shampoos ruins the hair by making it streaky, dull and brittle. Nothing is so cleansing as canthrox. When used for shampooing it removes all dandruff, irritation and gives the hair that soft, glossy, silken sheen every woman so much admires.

Mrs. W.J.: During the winter months anyone's blood is likely to become thick and sluggish, causing a sallow, pimply complexion and loss of energy, such as you speak of. What you need is a good system-tonic and blood-purifier. Try this one: Dissolve one ounce kardene in ½-pint alcohol, adding ½-cup sugar and hot water to make a quart. A tablespoonful taken before each meal will give you pure blood, a healthy, energetic body and put life and color into your face.

Harriet: For your tired, dull, inflamed eyes you need a good eye-tonic. Dissolve an ounce of crystos in a pint of water. Two or three drops of this in each eye daily will strengthen your eyes and make them bright and sparkling. This tonic will not smart and has proven a great aid to those who wear glasses. A friend of mine, who has remarkably clear, beautiful eyes tells me that she uses this simple tonic to keep them bright and full of expression. I find it excellent for inflamed, tired eyes and granulated eye lids.

Maxine: To remove the fuzz from your chin, apply a delatone paste, made by mixing powdered delatone and water. Let remain two or three minutes, then rub off and wash the skin. Seldom is a second application required to remove every trace of hair from any part of the anatomy, and while druggists charge a dollar for an original ounce package of delatone it is well worth its cost.

Audrey: I do not put much faith in oils and vaseline as a remedy for scalp troubles. By keeping the scalp clean by frequent shampooing and twice a week massage into the hair roots a tonic made by mixing together one ounce quinzoin and ½-pint each alcohol and cold water, your dandruff will disappear, your hair stop coming out and all scalp irritation leave. This remarkable tonic adds a beautiful glint and luster to the hair, and if anything will make the hair grow this quinzoin tonic will.

T. H. M.: The only safe method of quick fat reduction without dieting and violent exercising I know of is by taking before meals a tablespoonful of 4 ounces of parnotis dissolved in 1½ pints of hot water. This harmless remedy is particularly effective in cold weather, and cuts down weight rapidly. It leaves the skin free from wrinkles or flabbiness. Try this wonderful remedy and I am sure you will be delighted.

Julia: A good cleansing, softening, healing complexion cream is best prepared by stirring an ounce of almozoin and 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine into ½-pint cold water. This cream-jelly is greaseless and will not grow hair or make the skin oily and shiny. Used morning and night it will quickly smooth, soften and whiten your skin, correct and prevent chapping, and add a look of youthfulness that comes only from a smooth, refined complexion.

Ungava Exploration Company

Off For The New Gold Fields

The purpose of this organization is to explore the practically unknown mineral resources of Ungava. The Company is in possession of information as to the location of rich placer diggings in that country, and is equipping an expedition to reach the gold fields about the middle of June. The Company is purchasing a schooner of about one hundred tons. The vessel will be outfitted with all necessary machinery for placer mining, and provisioned for one year. The complement of men will be ten in number, comprising experienced placer miners, who have had long association with placer operations in Alaska. The leader of the party is a man of wide knowledge of this kind of mining, having spent seven years in the Yukon and Nome. Each man of the expedition will have an equal interest in the results of the findings. No wages will be paid and they will sign up for one year, agreeing to turn all discoveries into the Company. Hence, it will be seen the confidence these men have in the outcome of their voyage into this rich, but unexplored country of Ungava. One of the parties is a man who was employed by one of the big trading companies of the North for nine years, during which time he made some startling placer discoveries, and it is to these fields the expedition will go first.

To those who are at all familiar with the vast wealth that has been, and is being, taken from the Alaska gold fields, the possibilities of this Company will make a strong appeal.

Placer diggings, unlike any other kind of mining, means almost immediate return, and it is not at all unlikely that this Company will produce big returns before the end of the present year. The man who will pilot the expedition, and who spent nine years in Ungava and Labrador, positively states that he got pannings as high as 80 cents to the pan, besides discovering big gold-bearing quartz ledges and immense deposits of iron ore. Thus it will be seen that the possibilities of the Company are practically unlimited.

The Company is working under a Dominion charter, which is very broad and comprehensive in its scope. It does not limit the activities of the Company to mining, but permits its embarking in almost all branches of commercial industry that might grow out of its explorations in Ungava and Labrador.

This may, indeed, be the nucleus of a great and wealthy concern, whose assets in a few years may represent sums which to mention at this present writing would sound like madness. However, this vast North Country is now coming into its own, and undoubtedly large fortunes will be the reward of those intrepid pioneers who commercialize its teeming natural resources: Gold, silver, copper, iron, coal—all the cardinal elements of commerce.

SUMMARY

FIRST. It has been known for years that Ungava contains great areas of rich mineral deposits.

SECOND. We believe we will be the first expedition to reach the Eldorado, although there are some fourteen private expeditions going in this spring.

THIRD. Our men are experienced prospectors and placer miners, and their only hope of remuneration is their interest in what they find.

FOURTH. There is no guesswork about going directly to the right place, as one of the parties spent nine years in the country and knows just where to go.

COAL $10 TON IN QUEBEC

Montreal, Mar. 20.—A coal shortage has struck the Province of Quebec which is causing the gravest alarm. At this time of the year coal stocks are always greatly depleted owing to the big drain imposed by the heavy winter consumption. With most of the dealers in the small towns in the Province without house coal, and with the city merchants without supplies for a week or so, the word has come that no more shipments can be made from the Pennsylvania mines to Eastern Canada until the labor trouble is cleared up.

House coal rose to as high as $10 and $12 a ton on the receipt of this information.

The large users of steam coal were relying on the Nova Scotia mines to offset the trouble in the United States, but a hint has been passed around that if a strike is decided upon in Pennsylvania the Canadian miners will likewise go out.

FISHERMEN ADRIFT ON FLOATING ICE

INVESTIGATION INTO DEFUNCT FARMERS BANK CONTINUED

Toronto, Mar. 19.—The Royal investigation into the Farmers Bank crash, conducted by Chief Justice Sir William Meredith was resumed at Osgoode Hall this morning.

Sir Edmund Osler, M.P., president of the Dominion Bank, was the first witness called.

General Manager Travers will not be called until to-morrow.

SIR E. B. OSLER'S WARNING.

Sir Edmund Osler related how he had had an interview with Hon. Mr. Fielding, the late Minister of Finance, respecting the Farmers Bank certificate the deposit for which he considered had not been secured in an above board manner.

"Mr. Fielding intimated," said Sir Edmund, "that if he had refused to grant the certificate he would have been charged with favoring the larger banks."

Sir William asked what witness meant by saying that the cheque had been obtained by fraud.

"I meant that it had been raised by a discount of notes," replied witness. "I intimated that to Mr. Fielding in a general way."

Mr. Braithwaite, Toronto, manager of the Bank of Montreal, was next called. Mr. Braithwaite said that he knew Travers and that he knew he was organizing the bank.

A QUICK-FIRING GUN FOR USE ON AIRSHIPS.

London, Mar. 20.—Vickers, Sons & Maxim have produced at their Frith Works a new quick-firing gun for use on dirigible airships and aeroplanes. It has been thoroughly and successfully tested. It is of very light construction, shaped almost like a telescope, weighs probably not more than a hundred weight, and is easily trained and worked.

BALFOUR CLAIMS MINERS ARE WITHOUT ANY MERCY

Leading the Opposition He Moves Rejection of the Minimum Wage Bill as a Revolution

Dissolution Seems Impossible But the Opinion of Englands Parliament Should be Tested

Ex-Premier Says England Never Faced so Grave a Crisis as Now Confronts Them

London, Mar. 21.—The Labor members announced that they would vote with the Government to-day in advancing the bill to a second reading, reserving the right to offer amendments to-morrow. This saves the bill.

Balfour's announcement that Conservatives are opposed to a general election at this time was interpreted by friends of the Premier as meaning that the Government will receive Conservative votes to kill any extreme amendments that may be offered to-morrow.

London, Mar. 21.—The gravity of Great Britain's national peril arising from the labor war which Arthur J. Balfour, the Unionist statesman, characterized as surpassing in magnitude anything that this country has heretofore experienced, was reflected in the tense atmosphere of the House of Commons this afternoon, when the Minimum Wage bill came up for second reading.

The House has not been seen so crowded for years. Every gallery was packed.

Premier Asquith formally moved the second reading of the bill, and then immediately yielded the floor to Mr. Balfour, who moved its rejection.

"The country," said the former Unionist Premier, "has never before been faced with a crisis such as this. We are witnessing the new, strange, and portentous spectacle of a single organization acting within its legal powers, threatening to paralyze the whole trade of the country.

"There is no indication that the leaders of the movement desired to temper the use of their legal powers with any consideration of mercy. Was there ever an American trust at any period of its existence which had used or misused the powers given to it by the law to the detriment of private interests and general trade to the extent we are now witnessing?"

Cries of "Yes" from the Labor benches greeted Mr. Balfour's question as to the American trusts.

FORCING A COLOSSAL REVOLUTION.

Mr. Balfour recognized the earnestness of Premier Asquith's efforts but continued:

"There never has been a graver case of a Government deceiving itself and deceiving the House of Commons."

The former Premier said that the Government defended its bill on the ground of the existence of abnormal places in some of the mines, but this was merely to save the faces of the Ministers, who had hastened under threats to yield to the conditions laid down by the miners. He complained that the Government had sanctioned the tearing up of existing agreements without a word of protest, and declared that there was no justification for the Government attempting to force "this colossal revolution" through the House of Commons in less than a week.

The Government, the Prime Minister said, believed that the Minimum Wages bill was a necessary preliminary to any further steps, "which God forbid should be necessary."

MR. BOURASSA

In referring to the Nationalist meeting at Massey Hall, Toronto, on Monday night of last week, our esteemed contemporary, The News, says that amidst the profusion of decorations in Massey Hall on Monday night not a single British flag was in evidence. Was the omission a concession to Mr. Redmond absent or to Mr. Bourassa present? . . . Mr. Bourassa is in a poor way to convert the rest of Canada. English-speaking Canadians appreciate the services which French-Canadians have rendered in developing and defending their common country, but they entirely disagree with the Nationalist contention that the constitution should be violated in order to impose a dual school system upon any Province of Confederation against the wishes of its electors. Nor does Mr. Bourassa's declaration against Canadian participation in Imperial defence commend itself to the country. Indeed, the eloquent editor of Le Devoir must revise his programme if he wishes to become a national instead of merely a wasting Nationalist figure.

PUBLIC OPINION

[illegible]

THE NEW CITY OFFICES.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I see that some of the city council are in favor of combining the offices of Sanitary Inspector and Plumbing Inspector. I would most earnestly suggest, through the courtesy of The Times, that the man appointed Sanitary Inspector will have quite enough to do without attending to plumbing. This city is growing rapidly, and as our population increases, sanitary precautions become necessary in direct proportion. The most important thing in human life is "life," and life means "health." Health is, to a great extent dependent upon sanitary conditions. I would therefore again say, have one man, and a good man to look after our sanitation.

Health.

A NON-IRISH BULL.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I read, with much interest, a letter in your issue of yesterday, regarding the insane way in which the Suffragettes of England are worrying the Government in their present time of trial. Your correspondent, who uses the nom de plume, "Subscriber," very accurately describes the situation. Mrs. Pankhurst, and her disciples, are mostly women of wealth and education. They are women who should fully realize the peril that threatens England, and still they add to the burden of Mr. Asquith and his Cabinet, their demands for franchise. Even if female franchise were desirable, NOW, is not the time for these women to interfere with, or retard the wheels of government. The feeding or starvation of the people of the United Kingdom is at issue. The coal strike, as your correspondent remarked, is the most serious problem the Government of England has faced in several hundred years. If these Suffragettes cannot realize that the Cabinet has enough on their minds, with the coal strike added to other matters of business, and cannot understand that this burden is heavy enough for the Government to bear, without that last straw added, that of hysterical females smashing windows and handcuffing themselves to iron fences, the Suffragettes had better stay home and mind their household duties.

By the way, Mr. Editor, your correspondent must be Irish. I notice he uses a real "Irish Bull." His letter says: "If such women —— persist in trying to annoy the Government, they run the risk of pulling down the wall of deference that man pays to decent women."

Reason.

Reply.—We note the "Irish Bull" you call attention to. What "Subscriber" evidently intended to write, was "the wall of deference with which man protects decent women." The letter was printed as received, and before the little error of expression was detected.—Ed. Times.

FRISCO WOMAN IS ARRESTED

Tried to Pass Jewels Thro' New York Customs

DIAMONDS IN HER HAT

The Fashionably Dressed Widow Declared She Only Had a String of Pearls, But Inspectors Were Too Cute for Her.

[illegible] Carson, a fashionably dressed widow of San Francisco, had diamond ear-rings valued at several thousand dollars concealed in her hat when she passed customs inspection upon her arrival from India yesterday, according to an admission authorities said she made to-day.

Mrs. Carson declared only a package of unstrung pearls when first examined, and was released after payment of duty on the valuation of 2500 rubees (Indian money), at which figure she alleged she bought them.

The customs officer brought the woman from her hotel and she was arrested. She broke down and admitted, it is stated, that she had hidden two diamond ear-rings in her hat and had other jewelry which altogether the authorities valued at $20,000.

Mrs. Carson charged with smuggling, was released in $2000 bail. The hearing will be Friday.

SENATOR M'DONALD PASSED AWAY AT A GREAT OLD AGE

Ottawa, Mar. 21.—Hon. A. A. McDonald, Senator from Prince Edward Island, died at one o'clock this afternoon in his rooms at the Hotel Cecil.

He was born in 1829, was one of the delegates to the Confederation Conference at Quebec in 1864, and has been Senator since 1891. His death leaves Sir Charles Tupper the only surviving Father of Confederation.

STAGE STRUCK YOUTH ROBS HIS EMPLOYER OF SIXTY DOLLARS

Toronto, Mar. 21.—Albert Elmsley aged 19, a clerk in the employ of M. Boulton, appeared before Magistrate Denison to-day on a charge of stealing $60 of his employer's money. He admitted the theft, telling the Crown Attorney that he spent it going to "shows." He was remanded till the 28th to allow Magistrate Denison to consider the case.

FOR STEALING HAIR.

Everett Reid, the third of the culprits to answer the charge of the theft from the Harris hair factory in the west end was sent down for 30 days. The three young men made off with a quantity of hair and on returning a portion of it one of them was acquitted. The other got 30 days and to-day Reid received the same sentence.

After borrowing 50 cents from his friend James Dawson, while drinking at a bar, William McDonald ended the joy meeting by relieving him of seven dollars. He wanted to tend bar and caused a great hub-bub when the real wine clerk vaulted over and called in the police to put an end to the fight. McDonald will spend the next 30 days over the Don unless he can find the $1 and costs which separate him from freedom.

Cecilia Davis, 57 Trinity Square, charged with attempting to commit suicide by taking bichloride of mercury tablets was dismissed by Magistrate Denison.

ON A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Charged with procuring, Eleanor Tugwell was remanded until to-morrow when Harry Bleumenthal, in whose employ she is alleged to have been, will be brought from the jail as a witness. He was sent down for 60 days for keeping a house of ill-fame.

Mrs. May Bane, the alleged victim was brought up as a Crown witness. Her story is that the Tugwell woman met her on Jarvis street and took her to the house at 58 Pearl street, where she lived for a week when the police raided the place.

WOMAN AND HER SIX CHILDREN ARE CARRIED OUT BY FIREMEN

Toronto, Mar. 21.—Simon Foreman's wife and six children were saved in the nick of time from death by fire at his furniture store, 634 Queen street west, late last night.

Arrayed only in their [illegible] the mother and her [illegible] were carried down stairs by the father, aided by a rescuing force of police and firemen.

The flames had caught the stairway, the only exit from the sleeping rooms, and this lone avenue of escape would have been cut off had the fire gained a few minutes more on the rescuers.

Mrs. Frank Cable, and her daughter, Bertha, at 636 Queen West, were asleep in their beds when the police and firemen burst into the rear of the [illegible] store and roused them from their almost fatal slumber. Mother and daughter were carried down the ladders by the firemen.

Mr. A. Barr's store at 638 Queen west was also slightly touched by the flames, but the Barr family, five of them were awake and had no trouble getting out of danger.

MILES OF CARS ARE WAITING ON THE CANADIAN LINES

Buffalo, N.Y., Mar. 21.—"The D.L. and W. Railway has made delivery to Canadian connections of all business that it has had for them as promptly as the Canadian connection accepted, and will continue this practice, including such business as it switches to Canadian lines from other roads."

The above statement by a leading official of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railway, was made this morning. The Delaware and Lackawanna is one of the switching connections which transfer the cars of the soft coal roads with yards outside Buffalo to the Grand Trunk and the C.P.R. at Black Rock for points in Ontario.

HUNDREDS OF CARS READY.

The Lackawanna handles hard coal from Scranton direct. This morning at 8 o'clock there were 231 cars of coal on the Lackawanna switches at Black Rock ready for delivery to the Grand Trunk, and 82 cars for the C.P.R. connection. Last night the Granh Trunk handled 36 cars, and the Michigan Central 37 cars. From midnight until 8 this morning the G.T.R. took 27 cars, and the Michigan Central 43. Yesterday the Pennsylvania Railroad had 219 cars for the Grand Trunk via Lackawanna switches, and 512 cars for the C.P.R. and 537 cars to be re-consigned to Black Rock for Canada, but not specified C.P.R. or G.T.R.

"You could not get the mails over Suspension Bridge or International Bridge if all the coal waiting on the different roads ready to be transferred to the G.T.R. and C.P.R. were to go forward now at once, said a coal traffic manager whose business is to sell and forward coal from the mines.

DR. TUFFIER GRAFTS A BONE FROM WOMANS FOOT TO ARM

Paris, Mar. 21.—Dr. Tuffier, one of the most prominent surgeons in Paris, reports two cases of successful bone-grafting, in a communication to the Academy of Medicine. Two of the operations were performed more than a year ago, and as the subjects are in perfect health there can no longer be any doubt of the success of the experiment.

Dr. Tuffier says he was called upon to treat the arm of a young man whose elbow joint was affected by ankylosis. The joint had been removed, as the entire arm was paralyzed. The bone of another patient, a woman, whose foot had been amputated, was used to replace the missing bone. The young man after 13 months, is now able to use his arm.

The second case is that of a young man whose elbow had been destroyed by tuberculosis. In this case Dr. Tuffier grafted cartilage which had been preserved for five days from an operation on the leg of another person. This operation was carried out 14 months ago, and was a perfect success.

ASQUITH WILL RESIGN OFFICE IF COMMONS DEFEATS BILL

London, Mar. 21.—The crisis which has arisen over the Minimum Wage bill introduced by Premier Asquith in the House of Commons, in order to bring to an end the deadlock in British trade caused by the national coal strike, continues. The idea appears to be gaining ground that there will be considerable anxiety in passing the measure, even if it is not thrown out entirely, and that thus the strike will be prolonged.

In every town of the Kingdom people are anxiously awaiting the action of the House of Commons to-night. There is no doubt that the Minimum Wages bill will receive a second reading, for the coalition, composed of the Liberals, the Irish Party and the Labor party, will unite in voting for it. Trouble will begin, however, when the bill reaches the committee stage, at which period the members of the Labor party will propose the amendments on whose adoption they insist.

PETERBOROUGH LIKELY TO ACQUIRE P. L. & P. CO POWER

Yesterday, Aldermen Anderson, Brown, Duffus, Duncan and Gordon, and Mayor Bradburn met the Power Committee of the Ontario Legislature in Toronto. These city fathers went to Toronto in the very laudible idea of getting power for Peterborough. Every man in the city knows that our future is dependent upon the power we have and the power we can offer to manufacturers. Hon. Adam Beck had the committee introduced by Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P.

The result was that matters will be settled next Tuesday. It looks as though the city will have authority to expropriate the power of the Peterborough Light & Power Co. Before this is accomplished, however, a vote of the property owners of the city will have to be taken, to endorse this expenditure.

Ald. Gordon acted as spokesman for the city and made an eloquent plea for Peterborough's power.

O'HARA FULL OF GINGER OUT WITH THE TORONTO TEAM

Macon, Mar. 21.—Much cooler weather prevailed to-day, though the sun was hot and the day was bright. The cool breeze made the work of the Toronto players this morning a pleasure, and it was a great relief after the intense heat of the past few days.

Quite a few of the players are complaining of hoarseness and sore throat. George Winter could hardly speak and was not in uniform to day while Wilbur Corey also suffered a lot. Bill O'Hara was out again and is much better. Manager Kelly will play games every day from now on either with the Macon or Mercer teams, or between his own players. The "Yannigans" and "Regulars" will play this afternoon. Games could be had at Albany and Columbus, Ga., but Kelly prefers to stay here and play games without the bother of travel. A game will probably be played on Saturday with the Macon club.

COAL SHORTAGE IN PETERBORO

The coal situation in Peterborough is becoming acute. Yesterday a local man, whose credit is perfectly good, and who, in fact owns a considerable amount of real estate, could not purchase a ton of coal. He ordered a ton of nut coal on Wednesday and arranged for its reception. The coal did not come and the citizen's cellar window was, through forgetfulness, left open all Wednesday night. Yesterday morning he telephoned the coal company, with whom he had placed the order. The coal magnate assured him that his coal would be sent within an hour or two. When the sleigh arrived it brought only a few lonely bags of black diamonds. Upon his asking the driver, "where is the rest of my ton?" the latter replied, "Well, Mr. ——— you are one of the lucky ones. I was allowed to bring you five hundred pounds, whilst other people are only being allowed two hundred and fifty or three hundred pounds, when they order a ton!" If the threatened coal strike in the United States becomes an assumed fact, there will be a serious problem for our citizens to face, particularly if the cold weather of yesterday continues.

DROPPED DEAD IN THE STTEET

Toronto, March 21.—Seized with an attack of heart failure while on his way to work this morning, about 7.30, Roy Mullen, aged 22 years, boarding at 652 Richmond street west, died instantly, falling in the snow at the corner of Adelaide and Portland streets. With two of his friends he was on his way to the Ross Tin Works, on Adelaide street, where he was employed. He was carried into a grocery store at the corner, but life was extinct, and the police were notified to remove the body to the morgue. There will be no inquest held.

HUSBAND DEAD IN HOG PEN

New Hamburg, Ont., March 21.—The body of Jacob Wagler, a farmer, aged 30 years, was found yesterday in a hog pen. His throat had been cut with a razor. He was in good circumstances, and no reason for his suicide is known. He was only married on Thursday last.

THE FORMATION OF ICEBERGS

They Originate from Glaciers in Western Greenland and Assume Every Shape

Icebergs [illegible] in western Greenland. [illegible], according to a bulletin of the Hydrographic Office, Greenland's mountainous belt "is penetrated by deep fiords, which reach to the inland ice and are terminated by the perpendicular fronts of huge glaciers, while in some places the ice comes down in broad projections close to the margin of the sea. All of these glaciers are making their way toward the sea, and, as their ends are forced out into the water, they are broken off and set adrift as bergs. This process is called calving. The size of the pieces set adrift varies greatly, but a berg from 60 to 100 feet to the top of its walls, whose spires or pinnacles may reach from 200 to 250 feet in height and whose length may be from 300 to 500 yards, is considered to be of ordinary size in the Arctic.

"These measurements apply to the part above water, which is about one-eighth or one-ninth of the whole mass. Many authors give the depth under water as being from eight to nine times the height above. This is incorrect, as measurements above and below water should be referred to mass and not to height. It is even possible to have a berg as high out of the water as it is deep below the surface, for, if we imagine a large, solid lump of any regular shape which has a very small sharp high pinnacle in the centre, the height above water can easily be equal to the depth below. An authentic case on record is that of a berg grounded in the Strait of Belle Isle in sixteen fathoms of water, that had a thin spire about 100 feet in height.

"Bergs are made all the year round, but in greater numbers during the summer season; and thousands are set adrift each year. Once adrift in the Arctic, they find their way into the Labrador current and begin their journey to the southward. It is not an unobstructed drift, but one attended with many stoppages and mishaps. Many ground in the Arctic basin and break up there; others reach the shores of Labrador, where from one end to the other they continually ground and float; some break up and disappear entirely, while others go safely past and reach the Grand Banks. The whole coast of Labrador is cut up by numerous islands, bays, and headlands, shoals and reefs, which make the journey of all drift a long one, and adds greatly to the destruction of the bergs by stoppages and by causing them to break up.

"It is the greatly increased surface which the fragments expose to the melting action of the oceanic waters that accounts for the rapid disappearance of the berg after it has reached the [illegible] of the warm circulatory drift currents of the North Atlantic Ocean. If these processes of disintegration did not go on and large bergs should remain intact, several years might elapse before they would melt, and they would ever be present in the trans-Atlantic routes. In fact, instances are on record in which masses of ice escaping the influences of swift destruction or possessing a capability for resisting them, have, by phenomenal drifts, passed into European waters and been encountered from time to time throughout that portion of the ocean which stretches from the British Isles to the Azores.

"They assume the greatest variety of shapes, from those approximating to some regular geometric figure to others crowned with spires, domes, minarets, and peaks, while others still are pierced by deep indentations or caves. Small cataracts precipitate themselves from the large bergs, while many icicles hang in clusters from every projecting ledge. They frequently have outlying spurs under water, which are as dangerous as any other sunken reefs. For this reason it is advisable for vessels to give them a wide berth, for there are a number of cases on record where vessels were seriously damaged by striking when apparently clear of the berg. It is generally best for vessels to go to windward of them, because the disintegrated fragments will have a tendency to drift to leeward, while open water will be found to windward. Serious injury has occurred to vessels through the breaking up or capsizing of icebergs."

A PAYING IDEA

A Boy Who Developed a Business From Growing Sweet Peas

This is the story of a boy with a $2 idea—or perhaps more. He was [illegible] and just out of the Manual Training High School in Kansas City when the great thought came to him.

"I shall grow sweet peas for the city florists," he told his astonished parents, "there's money in that business."

Happily for Bryson's idea his father owned several acres of unused land ten miles from the city and in close touch with rapid transportation. Bryson borrowed about 100 feet of it, got enough money from the bank—backed by his father—to build the necessary greenhouse so that winter should not interfere with his work, and buy seed and tools. This seed he bought from the best florists in California. He did most of the work himself because, you see, he had learned carpentry in the manual training school; and he studied at night every catalogue and all the botanical books he could get. It took some nerve at this period to go ahead because the boy's school friends and a few of the neighbors laughed at his project. When they learned that he had cleared $100 and had paid back some of his borrowed capital they quit laughing. One hundred dollars was a mighty pile in Bryson's opinion that fall. He had learned something valuable about the dignity of labor and also he had a few pertinent ideas about money. He learned that with a good reputation one had good credit and with credit he could do many things. Therefore he rented more land from his father, signed up a few more customers, and went to work more eagerly than ever. At the end of the year—the second—he had paid his last note and had $400 to his own account. By this time he had two people working for him. Incidentally, Bryson's father was willing by this time to back him in anything. The boy cleared $800 the third year.

This boy, now twenty-one, has not given all his time to sweet peas, but these were his principal product. He grew violets and lilies-of-the-valley also, but sweet peas were by far the most successful flowers on the little place. He sold and still sells his products almost exclusively to city dealers in wholesale lots. He received prices ranging from $25 a thousand at Christmas to $5 a thousand for his sweet peas in the summer midseason. Early in the spring, before the snows had gone, he got $7.50 to $10 a thousand and sold from five to ten thousand a day. The sweet peas were arranged twenty-five to the bunch. Bryson has from ten to fifteen girls for the picking and employs six or seven laborers and gardeners for the setting out and care of beds.—Charles Dillon.

SHOCKED IN TRAIN SEAT

Passenger in an Electric Grip Burned While Crossing a Bridge

One of the most peculiar accidents [illegible] recorded in the history of the [illegible] Rapid Transit Company [illegible] Abraham Mender, of [illegible] New York, a passenger in a train [illegible] the Williamsburg Bridge, was [illegible] to death in his seat [illegible].

[illegible] and Nelson Kentor boarded [illegible] in Manhattan and [illegible] a [illegible] open car. Mender's feet [illegible] iron top of a generator [illegible] the seat in front of him. [illegible] reached the middle of the bridge, when Mender, in illustrating a story he was telling his friend, placed his hands on the metal handle on the back of the seat in front of him. Suddenly his face grew pale, and he ceased talking and began to tremble like a man with palsy. He tried to take his hands from the seat, but could not dislodge them. His feet were also fastened to the generator box by the electric current. While making efforts to free himself he screamed in agony.

Kentor jumped from his seat and grabbed Mender about the waist, but the electricity held him, too, and he could not let go. The heavy current passing through Kentor made him dance involuntarily and pound the floor with his feet. Rushing to the aid of the two men, George Williams, conductor of the train, seized Kentor, and was also held in the electrical grip. Several passengers finally lined up as if in a tug-of-war, and they, too, were held fast. Then the train stopped and the policemen went about and pulled all the men free from their position, although they, too, felt the force of the shock.

Mender, who was barely conscious, was immediately taken to the Eastern District Hospital. His feet were found to be badly burned. Kentor was also in bad shape, but after being treated by Dr. Schwarts was able to go home. The doctors said that Mender would have died in his seat had he been there a few seconds longer.

GERMAN'S DEADLY NEW SIEGE GUN

Fires Huge Bomb Which Does Not Enter Bore---A Destructive Weapon

A destructive new type of siege gun has just yielded satisfactory results to experiments conducted by the German military authorities.

The new gun was constructed by the firm of Krupp. It is an improvement on an idea much used by the Japanese in the siege of Port Arthur, and is designed to aid the advance of infantry storming an entrenched position. At the same time, experiments have been carried out with a new form of hand grenade, which effects much the same purpose.

For long military experts in Germany have been puzzling over the problem of how the long range artillery of an army could render efficient support to its own advancing infantry [illegible] the trenches of a fortress [illegible] to present [illegible] artillery of an at[illegible] cease bombarding [illegible] entrenchments as soon as [illegible] infantry gets to close quarters, [illegible] the stormers are likely to be mown down by their own guns from the rear.

This cessation of the attackers' bombardment enables the besieged to emerge from their entrenchments and pour a devastating fire at close quarters into the ranks of the attacking force, which is thus deprived of the support of its own artillery just at the moment when it most stands in need of it. The new gun has been devised to overcome this difficulty.

It has an extremely narrow, unrifled bore, and is of very light construction, easily capable of being carried by two men, and is intended to be carried in the front lines of the advancing infantry. Its most remarkable feature is its projectile, which consists of a round bomb of great diameter loaded with a very powerful explosive mixture. The bomb is of far greater diameter than the bore of the gun which throws it, and is provided with a long stick-like tail which is loaded into the barrel of the gun, its lower end, which is enlarged to a wad or piston-like form, resting on the guncharge at the bottom of the barrel. The bomb itself merely lies on the gun muzzle, quite outside the bore.

On being fired, the trailing stick like tail serves to keep the bomb in its proper direction of flight, and only detaches itself and falls to earth after a certain distance has been covered, leaving the bomb to pursue its course alone.

The experiments have shown that a reasonable precision can be obtained with the new missile up to a distance of 300 to 400 yards, and the bomb itself, which, owing to its large capacity, is capable of great destruction, serves not only to prevent the defenders emerging from their cover, but also to make great breaches in their entrenchments or fortifications.

CAULIFLOWER SEED

A Woman on Puget Sound Island Grows a Huge Quantity of It

Nine-tenths of the world's supply of Cauliflower seed is grown by a woman on a Pudget Sound island. Startling as this statement may seem, the fact remains that it is not due altogether to any supremacy of knowledge or skill that has enabled Mrs. Anne Archibault to achieve what thousands of first rank gardeners hopelessly abandoned. It is due to the peculiar climatic conditions of Whidby island. Outside of Holland no other section affords the climatic requisites for maturing the seed pods of cauliflower plants.

It was an accident, this discovery of Mrs. Archibault, that has made it possible for her to own 1,000 acres of fertile land and to enjoy a business of $100,000 annually. Cauliflower seed will not mature except under certain favorable conditions. One is dampness, humidity, which gives the tiny seeds the plumpness so essential to development. Another is water—not irrigation, rain, nor the wet, boggy mush of a marsh, but a continuous moist soil beneath which a hardpan subsoil acts as a floor to a reservoir. The land of Whidby island is ideal for this culture.

Cauliflower plants are transplanted like cabbage in rows. The usual cultivation is continued until the seed pods form. Then even the wind should be kept from the fields, for even the flutter of a tiny bird over a cluster of the seed pods will mar the perfect development of the seed. Harvest consists in gathering the dry pods, artificial drying in the sun, a clover seed separator and a fanning mill.

Mrs. Archibault's first crop amounted to a handful of seed. About this time she read in a bulletin issued by the department of agriculture that the supply of this seed was short and limited to a few hundred pounds. This was five years ago. Like a flash Mrs. Archibault saw her longed-for independence. She grew 400 pounds of seed in 1907. Communication with some well-known seedmen brought orders for her supply at $2 a pound. Every year since she has increased the yield of seed until the present world's supply of 30,000 pounds is practically all grown by her.

Farmers all over Whidby island grow this seed and sell their product to Mrs. Archibault, who markets it through her eastern sales agencies.

The cauliflower fields are beautiful at flowering time, the immaculate snow-white blossoms being alive with white butterflies. The mistress does not interfere with these cabbage moths, believing they aid in scattering the pollen from flower to flower.—Gail H. Fickle.

DOMINION FAIR A BIG EVENT

The Exhibition of 1912 to be a Record Breaker

The decision of the Federal Government to hold the Dominion Fair in Ottawa this year, at once turned the attention of stock breeders, manufacturers and exhibitors in general, all over Canada, to the coming Central Canadian Exhibition. The special grant of $50,000 from the government has already brought extra amounts from the regular sources of maintenance. Every department of the Fair will be improved from 100 to 200 per cent. Live stock and other premiums are to be at least doubled, and a similar policy will be followed in securing attractions.

On learning of the Dominion grant the Fair managers set to work enthusiastically. The first thing was to extend the dates, taking an extra Saturday into the Exhibition period. The Fair will open on Thursday, September 5th. The first two days will be for preparation, and Saturday, September 7th, will see the event in full swing. It will continue till Monday, September 16th, inclusive.

The management has started off with completing arrangements for the erection of a $90,000 machinery hall. The building will be 144x381 feet, made of brick, fire-proof, and of architectural design to conform with the other handsome edifices on the grounds. This means that the large number of manufacturers of farm implements and other machinery who have deferred coming to Ottawa will have to be on hand at the 1912 Fair and add much to its educational value. It is too soon to speculate on the special attractions, but it is known that the directors are negotiating through Col. Lowther of the Govenor-General's staff to secure the famous band of the Scots Guards for open air concerts.

The broad scale on which the Dominion Fair is to be conducted has necessitated beginning the work of preparation months before the usual time. The enlargement of the prize lists means a lot of carefull revision and several important changes will be announced later. Inquiries are pouring in already from all parts since the special nature of the Fair became known. As far as amusements and exhibits are concerned it will simply be a matter of selecting the best from a great host.

INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS.

According to the report of industrial accidents kept by the Department of Labour, 61 persons were killed and 178 injured during February, 1912. This record compares very favourably with that of January, when 86 workmen were killed and 214 injured. Compared with February 1911, the record is still more favourable, as 93 were killed and [illegible] injured in that month. The worst disaster of the past month was the premature explosion of dynamite on construction work near Fort Frances, Ont., on the line of the Canadian Northern Railway, by which 13 construction hands were killed and six others seriously injured.

Proven Oil Lands
Consisting of 240 Acres, King's County,
Coalinga, California, U.S.A.

FORTUNES IN OIL: To say that a flowing oil-well is a deluge of dollars is not in any sense overstating the case, as can be verified absolutely by reference to many of the gushers that have come in recently in California. The most spectacular of these has, of course, been the Lakeview Gusher, which began flowing on March 15, 1910, and soon acquired such force that it got beyond control, tore out the casing, toppled over the derrick and taxed the entire resources of the Union Oil Company to construct tanks and reservoirs to contain the oil. This was accomplished, however, after the greatest oil fight in history, and it is estimated that over 75 per cent. of the entire flow was saved. This gusher has recently stopped flowing, the estimated total production being around 15,000,000 barrels. Needless to say, every person who held stock in the company to any extent made a fortune.

As a field for the safe and profitable employment of capital there is absolutely nothing else in the country that equals California Oil. The records of the United States Government show that oil operations may be conducted with the utmost assurance of success, while the dividends that are being paid month by month and the stocks that have climbed to ten, twenty, fifty and even a hundred times their original prices, eloquently tell their own story of the profits. To those who would employ their money where it will combine safety and profits to the greatest possible degree, the California oil industry offers unrivaled opportunities. The industry is moving forward on the flood tide of prosperity and success, and a thorough and searching investigation will convince even the most conservative and skeptical of its tremendous money-making prospects and its practically unlimited future.

PROFITS IN OIL LANDS: The profits that have been made from the increased value of oil lands run to tremendous figures. United States government records show that on Jan. 1, 1909, 463 oil companies in the principal fields held 396,808 acres of oil land. Before the discovery of oil this land could have been bought for a very few dollars per acre. Since that time a great deal of it has been sold at prices ranging from $500 to $10,000 per acre, though much of it is valued at over $20,000 per acre. If the average advance in value had been $1000 per acre, this land would show a profit for the stockholders of these companies of about $400,000,000. The industry is now earning about 10 per cent. per annum on that valuation.

WHAT INVESTMENTS IN CALIFORNIA OIL COMPANIES HAVE MADE:

	Has since had a value of
$100 invested in Sauer Dough Oil Co.	$3,800
$100 invested in New York Oil Co.	3,900
$100 invested in Monte Cristo	4,000
$100 invested in Peerless Co.	4,300
$100 invested in Kern Oil Co.	4,500

$100 invested in Pinal Oil Co.	10,800
$100 invested in Lucile Oil Co.	16,000
$100 invested in Home Oil Co.	40,000

The above is in addition to the dividends, which, in most cases, have been several times the original investment.

You can see from the various lines of proof that we have given you just how THE DOMINION OIL COMPANY property proves itself to be the equal of any in California's famous field. It is impossible to put everything on paper. We cannot keep you informed of the actual happenings from day to day, so you should write to us for additional proof, in case you are not satisfied now. We want to tell you, however, that to delay is to run the risk of the rejection of your application, for, as you have read elsewhere, we do not intend to sell a share of this stock at any such price as the present one when the earning power of the DOMINION OIL COMPANY is established and their well producing. Now is the accepted time. Not a week from now or to-morrow. You should make up your mind how much you can afford and invest that amount at once.

There are now being offered for public subscription 100,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at 50c per share, which will leave 400,000 shares still in the treasury. It will be the aim of the directors to maintain and keep as large a treasury balance as possible in both money and stock available to meet at all times any and all contingencies that may arise, and thus effectually safeguarding the interests of all shareholders.

If you would join one of the most progressive and promising California Oil Companies, let us have [illegible] today for a block of this valuable stock. The stock of the Dominion Oil Company for development [illegible] is what we offer and what we sell you. Experts have pronounced the property as in proven territory. It has competent management, small capitalization, large acreage, no debts, fine equipment, unlimited market for the oil, and all in all, is a business opportunity that rarely comes to the individual investor more than once in a lifetime.

The right is reserved to return all subscriptions received in excess of the allotment to be sold, or to increase the price without notice whenever developments warrant it. With these facts and statements before you we solicit your consideration and co-operation by inviting you to join us in helping to develop a great property that will be an honor and credit to corporate enterprise. Our faith is strong that this is a proposition worthy of thought and investment and that it can soon be made a property of tremendous earning power.

Toronto, March 1st, 1912.

W. H. HILL, ESQ.,
Manager,
Sun Life Assurance Co.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I wish to thank the Sun Life Assurance Company, through you, for the prompt and very satisfactory settlement of my 15 year Endowment Policy, No. 64345, which matured and was paid me to-day.

I have also a 15 year Endowment maturing to-day in another leading Company.

The contrast, in the results, in favor of your Company is so marked that I want you to know it, but I am at a loss to know how such a difference could honestly occur. When I tell you that the profits in your Company are three and one-third times the profits in the other Company referred to, and this too notwithstanding I paid the other Company $1.15 per year more per $1000 than I paid you, you will realize my inability to comprehend the cause.

This is surely a tribute to the management of the Sun Life, and I am so well pleased I have applied for further insurance with you.

Incidentally, I would like to say a word for your loan privilege. As you are aware, I borrowed some money on my policy, a little over a year ago, which enabled me to obtain a substantial interest in a town site in the North-west, and you will be pleased to learn that it has already yielded substantial gain and gives promise to pay hundreds per cent., so that it is impossible to fully realize the value of that Policy to me.

I thought as an old Peterborough boy you would be pleased to know I am delighted with the result.

Yours truly,
(Signed) ROBERT E. DOLAN.

CALGARY

The City Of Opportunity

Capitol Hill

One of Calgary's close-in residential sub-divisions. City water is now in the adjoining divisions and sewer system is to be installed this spring. We expect these improvements in Capitol Hill this summer. Street car service is at present within two or three blocks of Capitol Hill. The City of Calgary has purchased Block 68, Capitol Hill, on which to build a large public school. A number of nice homes have already been built in Capitol Hill, and many more are in course of construction.

Lots in this sub-division are selling in pairs at $250 to $330 per lot. We offer you one block of forty lots, close to Block 68 at $210 per lot, on terms of Third Cash and Balance four, eight and twelve months, with interest at 8 per cent. on deferred payments. This block will readily sell for $300 per lot, or more, within the next six months. The block is high and level, and every lot is perfect. This is a gilt-edged investment. If you cannot handle it alone have some friend join you.

The subjoined clipping from the Trenton Advocate, gives good food for reflection. The paragraph says: "He thought the fire was out and to revive it took the gasoline can and threw in a little of the fluid. A flash, the can was at the ceiling—and Mr. Smith was surrounded by an atmosphere filled with flame, his clothes were afire, and he was in a fair way to incineration." If people will use coal oil or gasoline on their fires, the brigade will be kept busy.

New York, Mar. 18.—The belief that a suspension of work in the anthracite coal mines on April 1 because of the deadlock between the operators and mine workers over the working conditions will not be continued long, and that a settlement will be reached, was expressed by coal operators here to-day. It was pointed out that a similar situation existed when the agreement of the mine workers expired before. There was a refusal of the mine workers' demands, followed by a suspension and later negotiations were opened and the old agreement renewed.

Some of our citizens may remember that the Council passed a by-law prohibiting men from spitting in public places. A very wise and sanitary law. It is of interest, in this connection to note that detectives in New Orleans, La., have been detailed to ride on the street cars and arrest all violators of the anti-spitting law. This action was taken following a request of the Louisiana Anti-Tuberculosis League, of which Dr. G. Farrar Patton is president.

PRICES ARE STILL SOARING.

The Department of Labor's wholesale prices record up to date shows a still higher level for February than for January, notwithstanding that the latter month was reported as having seen the highest prices since 1893-4 and possibly since 1873. The index number rose during February from 131.4 to 134.3, these being percentages of the average level of prices during the last decade of the last century. The upward movement was largely the result

"Your Honor," said the arrested chauffeur, "I tried to warn the man, but the horn wouldn't work."

"Then why did you not slacken the speed rather than run him down?"

A light seemed to dawn upon the prisoner. "That's one on me, I never thought of that."

The local delegates who will attend the meeting of the Grand Lodge of the Woodmen of the World in Toronto to-day are Bros. R. N. Jones, Andrew Graham, Robt. Gibbs, A. Haskill and E. J. Waterman. The Grand Lodge meeting will discuss matters of importance.

There is no denying the fact that taxes, in this city, are quite as high as the average property owner or tenant, who pays said taxes, desires. The local taxpayer does not lose many hours sleep whilst thinking over how the city might increase either the rate or the assessment. To the contrary the average ratepayer, if the subject of taxes enters his mind at the time of his Beauty Sleep is apt to turn over, groan and switch that subject from his thinking machine. In this connection, it is of interest to note that the Ontario government has under consideration an amendment to the Municipal Act, as follows: "To render valid a by-law for granting a bonus in aid of a manufacturing industry the assent of three-fourths of all the members of the council and of two-thirds of the ratepayers who actually vote on the by-law shall be necessary."

Mother and Child Both Dead.

Mrs. Godfrey, of Mark street, East City, formerly of Otonabee, and a daughter of Mr. Lancaster of Otonabee, passed away on Sunday afternoon, three hours after the little one was born. The child also died yesterday morning. Messrs. A. Comstock & Sons will conduct the funeral, which will be held from the family residence at 2 p.m. to-day. Rev. Robt Pogue will hold the services. The bereaved parents have only been a short time in the city. Mr. Godfrey was a member of the Church of England, whilst the deceased was a communicant of St. Paul's.

FORTUNES MAY BE YOURS

How to Become as Rich as a Rothschild or a Rockefeller

There is no doubt that a fortune, and probably a large one, awaits the [illegible] solve certain problems. [illegible], for instance, has made won[illegible] of late years, and its [illegible] dentistry has become an almost [illegible] science; but, though the dentist can furnish the mouth with new and wonderfully efficient instruments of mastication, yet the surgeon has hitherto entirely failed to replace the worn-out organs of digestion, says Tit-Bits.

He can remove, wholly or in part, almost every organ of the body, but he can do very little towards their artificial replacement. It is said that Mr. Rockefeller has offered half a million dollars to anyone who will supply him with a new digestive apparatus, but up to the present we have not heard that anyone has drawn the cash.

The same gentleman is bald, and although he is probably less perturbed about his bald pate than about his dyspeptic stomach, yet doubtless he would be willing to endow that man with a pension for life who would rethatch his roof. Many hair-washes there are which have admirable qualities in the direction of stimulating the growth of the hair and preventing it from falling out, but even the manufacturer of those articles of the toilet would frankly admit that a real and infallible cure for baldness has not been discovered. The man who could rise up and demonstrate to the world that he can make hair spring up on a patch of pate as smooth as a billiard ball would be a millionaire in six months.

Many diseases, like leprosy, the plague, cholera, and smallpox, have been wholly or nearly eradicated from Western Europe, America, and the British Colonies, yet rheumatism continues to cripple tens of thousands, and is considered by most doctors as practically incurable. The man who can find a genuine cure is likely to be a millionaire in life and to have his statue in every city after he is dead.

The same remarks apply to cancer. Investigators are engaged on the problems involved in the cure of this disease in every quarter of the globe. It is no exaggeration to say that millions of pounds have been spent on research work in connection with it, and yet its ravages remain unabated.

So far as consumption is concerned, all the above remarks apply; but in this case a more rational treatment of the patients and their more careful isolation have done something to reduce its ravages. There are teeming thousands of men and women who would be willing to shower all their treasures at the feet of the man who one fine morning could step forth and say, "Here is a certain cure for consumption," or, "I hold in my hands the antidote to cancer." Aye, the world would beatify him.

No one has ever found a cure for sea-sickness, yet there is a fortune awaiting the man who will do so. Many sailors even, of whom the "Mighty Nelson" was one, are victims of sea-sickness if the weather should be at all rough. It has been a human experience ever since man ventured to embark upon the ocean. Yet nobody has ever found a remedy for it.

Just as, when you have a cold, every person you meet will give you a new and infallible cure, so, when you are [illegible] everyone will give you a simple panacea for sea-sickness. If the sea is as calm as a millpond the nostrum acts, but in the chops of the Channel it proves a tragical failure. There is a lot of money in an infallible cure for sea-sickness.

TURPENTINE NOW A LUXURY

No Longer the Cheapest Thing a Householder Can Buy

The time [illegible] when turpentine was about the [illegible] thing a housekeeper could buy. The [illegible] in the house was [illegible] cents worth of turpentine. Now your sewing machine oil bottle is big enough for that much. Indeed, turpentine has so grown in value that unless when you call [illegible] you do not specify that you want the genuine article he will hand you out a substitute [illegible] of crude gasoline. [illegible] retailed for 20 cents a gallon and now sells for [illegible] cents a [illegible] pint.

Turpentine is a southern product and [illegible] the demand [illegible] largely [illegible] the output [illegible] greater than [illegible] which shows that the [illegible] a very valuable [illegible] and [illegible] handling of the [illegible] for ests that produce the rosin and the turpentine to prevent the [illegible] of the trees. The old [illegible] already [illegible] being [illegible]. The [illegible] from the [illegible] back and [illegible] through [illegible]. The trees have been over [illegible] many large areas that were [illegible] have been killed by the [illegible] turpentine companies. The trees [illegible] natural growth and [illegible] by replanting. Their value [illegible] ly increase and it would be the sheer est folly to keep up the old methods of destruction.

First British Woman to Fly

The distinction of being the first woman of purely British nationality to fly belongs to Miss Gertrude Bacon daughter of the famous aeronaut who was really one of the pioneers of ballooning. Miss Bacon went up with Mr. Sommer in a Farman biplane during the Rheims aviation meeting of 1909, and in her book, "How Men Fly," which has recently been published she provided a fascinating narrative of the sensations of flying. She quotes the unfortunate Mr. Rolls as saying that his "first impression of flying was like trying to drive a motor car while was skidding in all directions at once."

Outcome of Local Power Meeting.

Mr. Walter Ressor, of the Light, Heat & Power Co., Lindsay, has been in receipt of a letter from Mr. W. Munro, secretary of the Central Water Conservation Association, which met recently in Peterborough. Mr. Munro asked Mr. Ressor to furnish Mr. Munro with a list of names of local citizens directly interested in the project.

Lindsay Post says this will be entirely satisfactory in so far as Lindsay is concerned.

A QUERY IN COLORS

Dullditch had a new Rugby football club, and the players were fifteen of the lustiest, liveliest lads the village could produce.

The day of their first match duly dawned as per programme; but the jerseys failed to turn up from the outfitters.

As a result of this unforeseen tragedy the players took the field in raiment of many hues rivalling the rainbow. The weak November sunlight showed up the weird colouring, making it appear like an artist's paint-bedaubed palette.

Just before half-time two laborers chanced to stop athwart the hedge and peered over.

"What is it, Bill? asked one in a little amaze. "Is it a football match or a bag of mixed chocolates."

Papa: "Be careful now. I shall ask mamma, and if she says you didn't ask her, I shall whip you for telling a story. Did you ask mamma?"

Three-year-old: "Yes, papa. Then" (a pause). "She said I couldn't have it."

A GOOD NIGHT'S REST.

A certain family were preparing to take their annual week's holiday, with the exception of their son named John, who had to work this particular week. His parents gave him strict instructions not to get too late for work, as he was a very sound sleeper.

The family had a fine time at the seaside, and got home again about twelve o'clock noon the following Saturday. They were surprised to find the blinds drawn, exactly as they had left them the Saturday previous.

After a deal of knocking and hammering at the door, the bedroom window [illegible] opened, and John, rubbing his eyes, called out:

"Hello! [illegible] up! [illegible]"

WHY HURRY?

The scorching cyclist was on the road to Stratford-on-Avon. He was bent over the handle-bars and the beads which bespeak the [illegible] toiler were trickling off his face.

"Hi, sonny!" he called to a [illegible] youth. "Am I right for Shakespeare's house?"

"Yes, you're right, [illegible]," was the dreamy reply of the [illegible] youth, "but you needn't hurry. Shakespeare's dead."

"I think not," replied the lady addressed. "I'm the mother of the bride."

The famous Nationalist leader denied the story that he intended to give up politics, was silent on the leadership of the new Catholic party, strongly advocated the teaching of religion in schools, and issued a warning on the likelihood of Ontario driving Quebec to Annexation.

PULLMAN CAR TRAVEL

A Britisher Writes His Impressions Concerning It

Yet I confess, writes an Englishman in Harper's Weekly, even bankruptcy seems welcome as an escape from the horrors of a Pullman, where you travel by day with two or three score of people, at least one of whom is certain to be a squalling infant and another a ubiquitous youngster with lungs and legs in an equal state of activity; where you have to rouse yourself every few minutes to resist the carboy's pestiferous attentions; and where the buzz of an incessant movement and conversation makes reading and dozing alike impossible. But even that pales before the trials that await one at bedtime.

A Pullman car at night is the most uncivilized thing on the American continent, and one of the most indecent. It quite fascinates my blushes. I sit enthralled as the darky porter strews my seat with other people's belongings, holds a pillow-case in his teeth and squeezes the pillow into it, and hurls sheets and mattresses about, and pulls at chains and sliding doors and levers and curtains. And what can be more enchanting than to hear husband and wife discussing how they shall dispose of themselves for the night, whether they shall share the lower berth or whether he shall be banished to the nest above?

And what pleasanter than to be made conscious by the writhings and heavings and vigorous protuberances of the curtains that just across the aisle some good lady is engaged in the fearsome struggle to undress. To walk the length of a Pullman car at about 10.30 p.m., when most of the berths are made up, and when the curtained contortions of those who are in the agony of "retiring" are at their worst, and when you butt into strange projections of humanity, and stumble over shoes and watch someone scaling the heights of an upper berth, is on the whole the most delirious experience I have ever encountered.

NAPOLEON'S GHOST

The "Ugliest Woman in Paris" Tells of a Strange Apparition

Mlle. Polaire, long known as "the ugliest woman in Paris" and "the actress with the smallest waist," now proudly declares that since she has become the owner of a famous old mansion in the aristocratic Faubourg St. Germain, she has been honored by a visit of the spirit of the great Napoleon, who first met Josephine Beauharnais within the walls of the mansion. Mlle. Polaire relates that towards sunset, a few weeks ago, she was reclining on a couch in her drawing-room. "Suddenly I became aware," she says, "that a man was approaching me in the half light. I looked at him steadily, with emotion but without fear. He was dressed in a strange, old-fashioned, military uniform. As I scrutinized him I recognized the features of the great Napoleon as they have been made familiar to me by David's portrait of the Emperor as a youth. As the Emperor appeared to me, he was [illegible] as a young Greek god, full of love [illegible] are. It is thus that he must [illegible] appeared at the time of his courtship with Josephine, [illegible] the [illegible] second [illegible] I looked at him, I was thrilled with joy. I felt that I was in the presence of the greatest man that ever lived. His face was thin, with the [illegible] line of a Greek. His great deep, dark eyes radiated love, passion, world-embracing ambition. His beautiful face seemed to be appealing for love. He pressed his hands together, and bent forward, as if imploring me, but without saying a word. Three times the same apparition presented itself to me at the same hour and place. Was he brought back by memories of Josephine, or did he come to see me? I can hardly tell."

A French paper suggests that Mlle. Polaire try the cure.

THE GIRL WITH A GROUCH

She is always selfish, unhappy and discontented.

The most selfish girl in the whole world is the girl with a grouch. The most unhappy girl in the whole world is the girl with a grouch. The effect would not be so disastrous if it ended with her own feelings; she not only injures herself, but she injures every one about her, because she seems to enjoy her grouch most when she sees those about her most unhappy. With some girls, this disposition is chronic—the attacks last from four days to four weeks. Girls subject to the grouch, spend nearly all their time thinking of themselves. They also spend much of their time smoothing out with cosmetics the wrinkles that these grouches plow into their faces. They cannot, however, change the facial expression that this disposition cultivates. Elsie Janis, who is famous for her youthful beauty, says "A sweet disposition does more toward promoting good looks than any other thing. Never think unkind thoughts of anybody, never sulk, never get into a temper. You can't have a nice, frank expression half of the time, if, during the other half of the time you are wearing a frown. Keep your temper and think kind thoughts. Temper is a great wrinkle producer, and a sour expression adds years to one's looks." It is considered as much an asset nowadays for a young lady to have a good disposition as beauty. Lady Diania Manners, who is a recent London debutante, has been named Lady Perfect Manners, because of her beautiful disposition.

Market Prices Take a Raise.

Enquiries made by The Times yesterday, at the local market weigh scales office, brought out the information that four hundred (400 chickens of this county had been weighed there, preparatory to shipment of said poultry to Toronto. If four hundred chickens a day, are sent from Peterborough to Toronto or Montreal, is it any wonder that the average local citizen, as he lifts his fork to mouth, during such operation says to himself, "there's five or six

GROOMS LEFT AT THE ALTAR

Strange Instances of Interventions Which Cancelled the Marriage Ceremony

A recent society wedding sensation, where the bride failed to appear at the altar at the eleventh hour, is not without parallel. Only a short time ago a lady on arriving near the church to be married ordered her coachman to drive her home again. Although astonished at this extraordinary request for the bridegroom was actually waiting in the church, he complied with his mistress's orders. It transpired afterwards that she had merely turned back because the crowd which had gathered to cheer her frightened her away.

In Bristol, some years ago, a marriage failed to take place at the last moment, in the most dramatic circumstances. The bride had been previously engaged. For some reason or other the engagement was broken off, and her fiance sailed for Canada. After some time she became engaged to a local insurance agent. All arrangements were made, and the happy couple were to be married on an Easter Sunday. A large number of people were assembled to witness the ceremony which was just about to begin when the first lover appeared on the scene. The bride fainted, and on regaining her senses she refused to be married to the insurance agent. Since then she has become the wife of her former lover, who has taken her to his homestead in Canada.

On the morning that another happy pair were to be married the bridegroom, who had a moustache and beard, determined to be clean shaven for the ceremony. Why he made up his mind to do such a curious thing on his wedding morn is not known. However, when he was shaved his friends all congratulated him upon his improved appearance. The ceremony was timed for eleven o'clock, and punctually to the moment he appeared at the church. When the bride saw him, however, she had a fit of hysterics, and it was not till some hours too late that she recovered her composure. She then announced that she would not marry her lover in any circumstances, declaring that he was betrayed by his mouth, previously hidden by his moustache and beard, and that he looked to her to be cruel!

Many will remember the sensation caused twelve years ago by the stopping of a fashionable wedding at the very last moment. The bridegroom was an exceedingly well-known figure in the world of sport, and the bride was the widow of a wealthy man. The curious part about it was that the lady was the only one who believed in her lover. Everyone else knew that his reputation was far from spotless but they could not, nevertheless, convince the charming widow. Everything was ready for the ceremony. The church had been profusely decorated with flowers and many well-known and prominent people had taken their places. The dramatic moment came when the couple met at the altar. The bride noticed that her intended husband was wearing a particularly valuable [illegible] tie-pin. Suddenly she cried [illegible] "Take me home! Take me home! I cannot say anything more now!" To the consternation of all [illegible] was stopped. So overcome was the bride that she fainted and had to be carried to her carriage. Later it transpired that this identical pin had been stolen some months before from the widow's rooms.—TIT BITS.

HORSES

Crushed oats are easier digested, and therefore more profitable than whole oats.

The driver's aim should be to make palate the [illegible] with a light but firm and steady hand.

A roll after a hard day's work is greatly appreciated by the horse. It takes the place of extra feed.

The value of salting the work horse regularly is often underestimated by horsemen. It is a good practice to keep the material before them at all times.

Remember that sudden changes of food may cause colic. New hay, new oats, green corn, etc., are often used. Make the change gradually, and no harm [illegible].

A horse that is extremely tired should not be given a heavy feed until [illegible] has had a little rest. Some feeders [illegible] on the supposition that a large [illegible] of feed is what is needed to re[illegible] energy. It must be remembered, however, that a horse so [illegible] cannot digest food as well as one that is fresh, and, therefore, should be fed accordingly.

TIGHT COLLARS

A well-known doctor considers it remarkable that no one seems to have laid stress on the fact that such slight obstacles to the free circulation of the blood through the vessels of the brain may adversely influence the health of those who are in the habit of wearing tightly-fitting neck clothes.

The fact appears to be well known to veterinary surgeons, who tell us that neck constriction through badly fitting harness is a causative factor in "staggers" in horses. It seems to be equally well known that dogs suffer a great deal through having to wear tightly fitting collars. Is it too much, then, he asks, to argue that those of us who wear our own collars too tightly buttoned may find that practice some explanation of symptoms ascribed to other causes?

CROOKSTON, Minn., Feb. 22.—Lying in the First National Bank vault at St. Vincent, placed there by the state customs collector last Wednesday, are $5,200 worth of diamonds and other jewels which were shipped by express by Albert Boyce to Mrs. Lena Sneed at Amarillo, Texas. The jewels are held because evidence that they were purchased in the States was not quite complete. If the necessary papers are not received within a few days the gems will be sent to St. Paul for safekeeping.

Health for Every Woman No More Headaches

FROM WEAKNESS AND DESPAIR THOUSANDS HAVE BEEN RESTORED TO ROBUST HEALTH BY DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS.

That sick women are made well by Dr. Hamilton's Pills is proved in the following letter:

"For years I was thin and delicate I lost color and was easily tired; a yellow pallor, pimples and blotches on my face were not only mortifying to my feelings, but because I thought my skin would never look nice again I grew despondent. Then my appetite failed. I grew very weak. Various remedies, pills, tonics and tablets I tried without permanent benefit. A visit to my sister put into my hands a box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. She placed reliance upon them, and now that they have made me a well woman I would not be without them whatever they might cost. I found Dr. Hamilton's Pills by their mild yet searching action very suitable to the delicate character of a woman's nature. They never once griped me, yet they established regularity. My appetite grew—my blood red and pure—heavy rings under my eyes disappeared, and to-day my skin is as clear and unwrinkled as when I was a girl. Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."

The above straightforward letter from Mrs. J. Y. Todd, wife of a well-known citizen in Rogersville, is proof sufficient that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a wonderful woman's medicine. Use no other pill but Dr. Hamilton's 25c. per box. All dealers or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ontario.

TOBACCO AND FOREST FIRES

As destructive forest fires have appalled the people, not only of the United States, but of our great Dominion by their awful results, such conflagrations are of international importance. Still, an editorial in a Nova Scotia newspaper, evidently penned in good faith, is laughable, when one considers that possibly sixty per cent. of men, or youths over 18 years of age, use tobacco. This article says: "The remarkable coincidence is the [illegible] pace with the increase in the sale of [illegible] the weed. This, coupled with the fact that wherever a systematic record has been kept, at least three-quarters of these "accidental" fires have been traced to their probable origin, in lighting of pipes or cigarettes, or cigar stumps carelessly thrown away. As tobacco smoking seems to be responsible for most of the destructive fires, why not prohibit its use? The one reason is that before the law could be enacted the country would probably be burnt up, so that possibly for the present something less drastic might be in order, and more effectual than an inoperative law. For instance, compel all dealers in the weed to pay a license of $100, all smokers $5, and manufacturers of the article $1,000. The same to form a fund to be used exclusively for assisting people to rebuild, who have lost their homes by fires. This fund might be augmented by fining all persons caught smoking off their own premises 50 cents, more or less.

Editorial Notes

The Ontario Government is discussing a bill to incorporate Arnprior as a town. Congratulations to Arnprior over leaving off its worn out village garb and donning the attire and dignity of a full fledged town.

Kingston Standard: Twenty-three of the twenty-five deputy returning officers who took the vote on the license reduction by-law last January, appeared before J. B. Walkem, K.C., yesterday afternoon, at the instance of the counsel of the liquor interests, T. J. Rigney. It took from 2.30 to 7.15 to examine the witnesses.

The Toronto House is taking matters into their own hands in a way that shows the public interests shall be preserved. By an amendment to the Municipal Act the following is being considered: "Every railway or highway bridge, culvert, tunnel or viaduct of a span of 20 feet and over, to be erected by any Municipal Corporation, or to be reconstructed or altered by it, shall come under the supervision of "The Ontario Railway and Municipal Board," and no construction, reconstruction or any alteration whatsoever shall be begun until the plans, specifications and full details thereof have been furnished to and approved of by the Board."

The Ontario government is certainly looking after the interests of the people of this, the banner Province of our great Dominion. The Legislature is now considering an amendment to the law regulating the sale of bread. By this recent enactment buns or rolls, not exceeding in weight four ounces avoirdupois, may be sold. Section 8 of the Act, is amended by adding thereto the following subsection: Any Municipal Council, which appoints an inspector under the provisions of this Act may also pass a by-law for licensing and regulating bread vendors and for providing for the inspection of the premises of the licensee and of any other premises from which the bread supplied by the licensee is obtained.

An older citizen remarked to The Times yesterday: "I remember as a boy, when swimming with other lads at Burnham's Point, when a fresh young man who had a girl in a canoe, left her round the point and tried to wallop me and my friends for bathing in public. Now, it seems the Toronto theatre censors have decided that the ballet dances, such as have been attended, and enjoyed by church, law, medicine, trade, politics, and the great big public in general, must be required to wear trousers, or, as Toronto Saturday Night says, "Panties." Now morality and decency are one thing, but a prudery that must inevitably lead to a much more "raw" criticism by the callow youth and the bald-head rows, does not lead to elevation of morality or the uplifting of thought.

Whilst not advocating American ideas as better than those of the Mother country, there is no denying the fact that the Suffragettes of our cousins to the south, are better conducted and display both better management and judgment than do the Pankhurst crowd of educated female hoodlums in England who deliberately smash windows, disturb ministers of the Crown during a crisis in England, and seemingly look for glory by imprisonment. Five hundred of New York's Suffragettes recently went to the Capitol at Albany. They smashed no windows, nor was one arrested. Not one of them had a title. Those women simply presented their petition to the N. Y. Senate and assembly and returned to their respective homes. This is one lesson, at least, that we, or rather the Suffragettes might take [illegible] Yankees.

ABOUT BOXING IN FRANCE

Frenchmen Can Now Hold Their Own With Most Boxers

Eugene Corri, the famous English boxing referee, has been giving his opinion on the rise of boxing in France. A few years ago, he says, the idea of French boxing was regarded with amusement. Now it has to be taken as a serious element. It was, Mr. Corri believed, the fine showing that Henri Piet made against Britain's lightweight champion, Freddy Welsh, at Mountain Ash about three years ago, that first aroused enthusiasm in the heart of the young Gaul. This was increased when George Carpentier made his advent, with the result that Frenchmen have studied the art so thoroughly and become so adept that they can now more than hold their own with English and American boxers. The progress of Carpentier has been simply phenomenal. His long run of brilliant successes has done more for the sport in France than that of even Piet, and in finally succeeding in defeating Britain's middleweight champion, Jim Sullivan, at Monte Carlo, boxing has given a fillip that will be the means, no doubt, of bringing to light additional talent. Who a few years ago would have thought a Frenchman capable of beating such men as Sid Burns, Young Joseph, Harry Lewis, and least of all Jim Sullivan, and who would have ventured the suggestion that Charles Ledoux would prove equal to the task of defeating Joe Bowker? He did it nevertheless, and did it handsomely and his victory, Mr. Corri thinks, is the forerunner of many more successes of French boxers over English unless the latter look to their laurels.

CROKER WILL SUPPLY HORSES TO GAEKWAR

Indian Ruler Arranges to Take All He Needs From Former Tammy Boss.

Richard Croker has found another distinguished customer for his horse-breeding [illegible] in Ireland. Some time ago he secured the patronage of the King of Spain. Now it is no less a potentate than the Gaekwar of Baroda. In future the Glencairn stable will be responsible for supplying all the horses the Indian ruler may need, and although he cannot be described by any sketch of imagination as a brilliant horseman, he regards an occasional ride as a necessity to keep himself in a reasonable physical condition. After the coronation period he slipped quietly over to Ireland and with becoming modesty, managed to escape observation. He had heard much of the superior quality of Irish horses and Irish linen and made up his mind to see both in their native surroundings. With the aid of a well known Dublin veterinary he was able to explore several well-known stable and breeding establishments. It is not related that he showed any particular knowledge of the points and quality of horses, but when he visited Belfast it was discovered that he was a keen judge of linen goods and his purchases were characterized by a critical appreciation of their value.

GREAT SWIMMING FEAT BY AUSTRALIAN YOUTH

Longworth Captured All the Titles Excepting the Breast Stroke.

The latest sporting exchange from the antipodes brought, among other things, the account of the New South Wales swimming championships, held in the Domain baths, Sydney. The feature of the fixture was the work of the youngster, W. Longworth, from Rose Bay, who captured all the titles with the exception of the breast stroke. In the 220 yards, Longworth covered the distance in 2 minutes 27 2-5 seconds, which is an Australasian record, and exactly one second less than the previous mark, held jointly by Kieran and Beaurepaire. Altho it is not a world's record, it is undoubtedly the finest aquatic feat ever accomplished. Daniels made the world's mark in a bath of 80 yards, while the Domain baths are 100 yards.

In this race Cecil Healy was second by about four yards, and H. H. Hardwick was third, about the same distance behind the second man. After the swimmers hit the water Longworth cut out a fast pace, and at twenty-five yards was clear of his opponents. When he turned for home at the 110 yards, Healy and Hardwick were close on him, and the pace was a cracker. A little farther on Healy made a great effort, shook off Hardwick, and began to crawl up on the leader. For a few strokes he was about level with Longworth, but the pace was killing and he had to give way. Longworth never slackened and, going ahead strongly, won in decisive style. There is only just mention made of the 440 yards, which Longworth won in the great time of 5 minutes [illegible] 2-5 seconds.

Aleck Wickham, another Rose Bay swimmer, won the 220 yards breast [illegible] minutes [illegible] seconds. He also won the diving championship.

A Wonderful Discovery

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming of fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Company and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema!

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c. stamp (to pay return postage). Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

Ungava Exploration Company

Off For The New Gold Fields

The purpose of this organization is to explore the practically unknown mineral resources of Ungava. The Company is in possession of information as to the location of rich placer diggings in that country, and is equipping an expedition to reach the gold fields about the middle of June. The Company is purchasing a schooner of about one hundred tons. The vessel will be outfitted with all necessary machinery for placer mining, and provisioned for one year. The complement of men will be ten in number, comprising experienced placer miners, who have had long association with placer operations in Alaska. The leader of the party is a man of wide knowledge of this kind of mining, having spent seven years in the Yukon and Nome. Each man of the expedition will have an equal interest in the results of the findings. No wages will be paid and they will sign up for one year, agreeing to turn all discoveries into the Company. Hence, it will be seen the confidence these men have in the outcome of their voyage into this rich, but unexplored country of Ungava. One of the parties is a man who was employed by one of the big trading companies of the North for nine years, during which time he made some startling placer discoveries, and it is to these fields the expedition will go first.

To those who are at all familiar with the vast wealth that has been, and is being, taken from the Alaska gold fields, the possibilities of this Company will make a strong appeal.

Placer diggings, unlike any other kind of mining, means almost immediate return, and it is not at all unlikely that this Company will produce big returns before the end of the present year. The man who will pilot the expedition, and who spent nine years in Ungava and Labrador, positively states that he got pannings as high as 80 cents to the pan, besides discovering big gold-bearing quartz ledges and immense deposits of iron ore. Thus it will be seen that the possibilities of the Company are practically unlimited.

The Company is working under a Dominion charter, which is very broad and comprehensive in its scope. It does not limit the activities of the Company to mining, but permits its embarking in almost all branches of commercial industry that might grow out of its explorations in Ungava and Labrador.

This may, indeed, be the nucleus of a great and wealthy concern, whose assets in a few years may represent sums which to mention at this present writing would sound like madness. However, this vast North Country is now coming into its own, and undoubtedly large fortunes will be the reward of those intrepid pioneers who commercialize its teeming natural resources: Gold, silver, copper, iron, coal—all the cardinal elements of commerce.

SUMMARY

FIRST. It has been known for years that Ungava contains great areas of rich mineral deposits.

SECOND. We believe we will be the first expedition to reach the Eldorado, although there are some fourteen private expeditions going in this spring.

THIRD. Our men are experienced prospectors and placer miners, and their only hope of remuneration is their interest in what they find.

FOURTH. There is no guesswork about going directly to the right place, as one of the parties spent nine years in the country and knows just where to go.

ENTERPRISE OF A MILLIONAIRE

Rockefeller, at 72, Spends Fortune on His Home

At the great age of 72, John D. Rockefeller, richest man in the world, "oil king," etc., is building himself still more magnificent palaces to live in. He has just agreed to an expenditure of $1,000,000 to improve his country home near New York, and the work is to occupy two years. In the interval he and Mrs. Rockefeller will manage to exist in another abode, gorgeous and immense, but not so big as the one he is altering. These alterations have given him the opportunity of coming out as an architect, for he has designed them himself. He made a model of the new buildings, and placed it upon a turn-table on the spot where he intended to build. Ingeniously arranged mechanism made it possible for him to turn it about by means of levers.

The oil king's reason for building is to add ten guest rooms to his home. Mr. Rockefeller is a man brimful of interest in life, whose chief hobby, apart from golf, is to devote a large portion of his immense income to the investigation of the cure and causes of disease, education, and the social advancement of his fellow man.

The new buildings are to be planned according to his own scheme of daily life. He wanted light in the dining-room in the morning and at noon. The only time he insisted upon having light in his office was between two and three o'clock in the afternoon. He wanted his own bed-room dark between three and four o'clock in the afternoon, the hour in which he takes his daily nap after completion of his business in the office.

After much experimenting, he composed a time-table by which he learned when the sun would shine in each room. When he had completed his calculations he turned the completed time-table over to the architects and told them to "go ahead."

DEATH OF HARRY GORDON

One of the Best Known of Winnipeg Sporting Men

Sportsmen were shocked to hear that Harry Gordon, one of Winnipeg's most noted sportmen, had died suddenly of typhoid fever. The deceased was but 28 years of age, and was at the time of his death travelling traffic agent for the C.P.R.. He was born in Winnipeg, and for years was prominent in hockey circles. He first won renown as a member of the School's lacrosse team in the Intercollegiate league, and later was captain of the Shamrocks in the city league. He also played with Billy Kean, and other noted local hockeyists. Mr. Gordon figured on the Rowing club seniors a few season's ago, and then broke into profesional circles by playing a prominent part in the management of the Shamrock club, which team won the championship of the last professional league in Winnipeg, a few years ago. Jimmy Gordon, also well known in local hockey and lacrosse circles is an only brother of the deceased.

WILL STICK TO THE HORSE

Big Contracting Firm Places an Order for 500.

With subway contracts in hand amounting to $34,000,000, the Bradley Contracting Company of New York, last week placed a new order with Fiss Doerr & Carroll for five hundred fancy draughters and approved plans for a new stable to accommodate six hundred horses in Long Island City. After experimenting since last July with mechanical substitutes, William Bradley is convinced that for the contracting business, at least, horses are more reliable and economical than machines, and henceforth he will stick to the horses. The company's entire system is to be changed to three-horse teams, this unusual style of equipment having been found to work better than any other in moving earth, rock and cement. With dump wagon, harness, blankets and everything complete one of these three-horse turnouts costs about $2,000. This is a tidy sum to invest in a work team, but Mr. Bradley says his long experience with all kinds of equipment has demonstrated that in the end it pays better than two horses or any other rig. One of these teams will take four cubic yards of earth or its equivalent, weighing six tons or more, at a load. Ninety-eight per cent. of the equivalent is in serviceable condition at all times, and if a horse or a driver is disabled it is always easy to replace him in a few minutes without putting the whole team out of business.

Scouting for Players

"Digging in the minors and little jerkwater towns for future diamond stars isn't what it is cracked up to be," says Arthur Irwin, the New York Yankees' veteran scout, who is soon to leave on another scouting tour. According to the man whom the Yankees depend upon for their star players, real good baseball players are at a premium these days.

"Scouting," comments Arthur "isn't like it used to be. There was a time when a man could go through the bushes and pick up all kinds of men, but times have changed since then. The scout who is likely to pick up one really good player during a season can congratulate himself and feel satisfied that he has earned his salary."

Scout Irwin declares that there never was such a slim market for ball players as at the present time. "Big league clubs," says Irwin, "are not in the markets to sell star players, naturally, and that's why it is so hard for any one club to gather a galaxy of stars. Every club owner wants to hold on to his best men, for they are the ones who bring success to his club. Money cannot buy them. The club owner must rely on the scout, for he is the one man behind the gun, so to speak. He is the man who unearths the stars."

HOW TERM "BONEHEAD" GOT INTO BASEBALL

Eddie Ashenback, the well-known minor league manager, who died recently, was the inventor of the expression "bonehead," which with 'concrete dome,'" "cement skull," "solid ivory," has become a byword in baseball. When Ashenback was managing the Shreveport team of the Southern League several years ago, he had a good catcher, who could also hit some, but he had the very serious weakness of not being able to guage a foul fly, no matter how easy it was.

One day a batter raised a high foul directly over the plate, and the catcher, [illegible] it, was hit squarely on top of the [illegible] by the descending sphere, which knocked off his mask and bounded away about thirty feet. That night Ashenback finished his supper early and was passing out of the dining room when he happened to walk behind this catcher, who was devouring his evening meal with gusto and enthusiasm. Stopping at the table, Ed. Passed his hands over the backstop's head, feeling for the bump which he though would surely be there on account of the contact with the ball that afternoon. But there was no lump to be felt. "No wonder," said Ash. "How could there be a bump? Your head is solid bone."

DESCRIBES KID McCOY

His Entry into the Fighting Game in Paris.

An interesting description of Kid McCoy's entry into the fighting game in Paris is given in an English sporting magazine. The Kid was always a clever fellow, both in and out of the ring. But, knowing the Parisian's fondness of fine clothes, he entered the ring in a flashy bathrobe, and when he disrobed for the night he had on a fancy pair of silk stockings and a pair of green silk tights. He also was particular before entering the ring to have every hair on his head lying just so. The account also says that there was a lot of "Kid" about the fight, but not much of the McCoy. He was fighting Harry Croxon, a big English heavyweight, that could hardly get out of his own way. McCoy was there with all his old time feints and an occasional jab, but was always careful that he did not get hit himself. The farce came to a close in the third round, when McCoy landed one of his old-time left hooks that knocked Crox on down for the count of eight; then put him out for good.

Death of "Tannie" Gillespie.

The news of the death of Alex. (Tannie) Gillespie, Hamilton, after only a few days' illness, was a shock to hundreds of his friends. Of a robust build, a cheerful disposition, a careful liver, and barely past his fiftieth year, he looked like a man destined for a ripe old age. The late Mr. Gillespie was an active cricketer and curler, and in his younger days a celebrated member of the Hamilton Tigers' Rugby Football Club, working on the forward line according to the rules then in vogue. He played first-class cricket for the Toronto Club, and for Hamilton before he moved here, with the Canada Life Company, a fine batsman and splendid medium pace bowler. He was a member of the Toronto Curling Club.

Suggestions from Paris

In reading some of the latest Paris fashion books I see that the skirt is to be just a bit wider, not enough, however, to make your last season's suit look out of date. The skirts will be cut straight; that is to say, will not be narrower around the ankles than at the knees, as was the case last season.

The position of the waist line has not changed, nor is it likely to, as the slightly raised waist line gives too good a line to nearly all figures for it to become obsolete. In other cases the natural waist line is better. One must, of course, study one's own figure and adopt what style is best suited to show one's figure to advantage.

In regard to the sleeves for the spring one well-known French house shows the separate sleeve in simple tailored dresses and the kimono sleeve in the more dressy gowns and evening blouses. Another Paris house says that the separate sleeve is certainly newer, but that the unbroken line of a pretty shoulder is more graceful. One style is just as good as another this year and so have what style suits you best.

For the spring dresses the sleeves are to be short for day and afternoon gowns, but the most popular length is just over the elbow.

The French or Dutch neck will be as popular as in the past few seasons and worn by those who have pretty and plump necks it is a most becoming style, but for the woman whose neck is long and thin it is a style to be avoided, as it makes her look older and thinner.

Silks of all kinds are to be used in the gowns for all times of the day from tennis and golf dresses to evening gowns. There can be nothing prettier than a soft white silk dress made in simple lines in which to play tennis in, and so comfortable.

The very beautiful new silk called broche is a brocade in weave, but not in color, and is made in some very rich and beautiful tones. Jane Dare.

FEATHER GARMENTS

Make Their Reappearance in Quite an Original Way.

An interesting novelty is to be the substitution of feather garments in the place of furs. This does not mean a mere revival of the long-discarded feather boa and muff. Feathers are to make their reappearance in quite an original way. "Long feather stoles will be worn," a West End Modiste says, "and they will be composed of such myriads as tiny, uncurled feathers that in the case of black or white stoles they could easily be mistaken for the most exquisite skins.

"There will be large pillow-shaped muffs to match, and in Paris some coats and jackets of similarly 'materialised' feathers will be seen.

"Another striking innovation is that the spring feathers will be obtainable in every conceivable shade, so that a pink, blue, or green muff will be no unusual sight.

"Furs, of course, do not afford a very large choice of colour, and this is an advantage which the feathers [illegible]

"Soft, downy [illegible] a good deal on evening dresses and, [illegible], also on costumes.

"The new fashion will doubtless be appreciated by most women as forming a transition between the heavy furs required for mid-winter and the lighter garments of the early summer."

Rubbers on the Carpet

Many housekeepers will welcome the suggestions given below by "an extensive traveller. Suppose, however, a woman returning her visits enters ten houses in an afternoon. It would mean that she must put on or take off her rubbers twenty-two times during the afternoon, and her gloves would be ruined in the process. On a reception day a boy or maid would be required for the "rubber office" alone, or else a notice might be put outside: "Kindly use the door-mat before entering." I cite this merely as an example of what might occur. Perhaps some women readers will give their opinion on the subject, for there is a real grievance. The letter is as follows:—

"Some Americans, and especially Canadians, have a habit which, if practiced in Europe, would be considered an insult. I have noticed several times that people who ought to know better will come right from the dirty street into my drawing-room without taking off their rubbers.

"Rubbers and overshoes had better be left in the hall; they were never intended for and are certainly not needed on the parlor rug.

"An Extensive Traveller."

When oilcloth has been down for a few months and is losing the shiny surface, it can be renewed easily and made to last twice as long if treated in the following way. Melt a little ordinary glue in a pint of water, letting it stand on the top of the oven till dissolved. Wash the oilcloth thoroughly and let it dry. Then at night, when the traffic of the day ceases, go over the whole carefully with a flannel dipped in the glue water. Choose a fine day for it, and by morning the glue will be hard and will have put a fine gloss as good as new on your floor.

Save your lemon rinds, dry them in the oven, and store them in an air-tight tin. A little of this added to an apple pie gives it a delicious flavoring.

Art muslin curtains should never be washed in warm water. Make a lather with hot water, and when it is nearly cold wash the curtains. If these are green, add a little vinegar; if lilac or pink, a little ammonia.

WOMEN FENCERS

They Are to be Admitted In Competitions With Men

Women are to be admitted as competitors to the national championship tournaments of the Amateur Fencers' League of America. That was the declaration of Dr. Graeme M. Hammond, president of the league and he even went further, in stating that the Fencers' Club of New York was about to inaugurate a series of weekly soirees, in which teams of women fencers, with the foils, would meet teams of men.

Without Good Digestion—
There Cannot Be Perfect Health.

It is not sufficient that the body be provided with suitable food—this food must be assimilated. Bad digestion causes loss of appetite, dyspepsia, coated tongue, bloating after eating and nausea.

With the return of good digestion, all these troubles pass away and are permanently cured.

The powerful Peruvian ingredient in

WILSONS INVALIDS PORT
(A la Quina du Pérou)

stimulates the digestion and assimilation—combined with the rich and ruby pure grape Oporto Wine, it constitutes an excellent tonic, the good effects of which are by no means temporary, for a continued use will be found to produce permanent good effects.

Dr. J. W. DANIEL, St. John, N.B., says:
"In one case I prescribed it to a lady, as a tonic and stomachic; she tells me that she took it with pleasure and advantage and it helped her very much and improved her appetite and digestion."

KILLED 4,000 WOLVES

The Richest of Laplanders Was Found Dead in the Wilds.

Michael Niesson Nila, the richest man in Lapland has been found dead in the wild wastes of his native land. His snowshoes were still on his feet.

Michael Nila of Juckasjorvi, a typical Lapland name, was well and widely known—a kind of patriarch possessed of much authority and influence. He was one of the boldest bear and wolf-hunters in the north.

The Laplanders abhor wolves, owing to their destructive raids on the reindeer, so that Nila was loudly praised for killing single handed quite 4,000 of them, representing in value $18,000. Besides that he was supposed to have $14,000 in cash and other assets—quite a fortune according to Lapland notions.

As soon as the weather and route permited, a large muster of his kindred and friends took the remains by reindeer-hearse to Juckasjorvi for burial.

BAKER AND FORD.

Of all the pitchers he has faced, Frank Baker of the Athletics says Russell Ford of the Highlanders is the hardest for him to hit. "I'm not afraid of many of them," said the manufacturer of home runs, "but Ford sure has my number. Baker also puts up a defense against the charge that he does not know how to play the third corner. I always try to make a base runner go on the outside," says Baker, "and naturally I would do as much blocking as possible. I don't see that I am any more awkward than any other man at playing third."

Why Sniffle and Sneeze With Catarrhal Cold

BY BREATHING THE HEALING VAPOR OF CATARRHOZONE YOU GET RELIEF IN TEN MINUTES.

Every second person that you meet seems to have a sneeze and stuffed feeling in the forehead and nostrils. To cure promptly, say, in half an hour, there is nothing worth using except Catarrhozone. You inhale its balsamic vapor, and feel as if you were among the Norway pines. This is because Catarrhozone contains a healing medicine, light as pine air, which is breathed straight into the lungs and bronchial tubes. Away goes the cold; sneezing and catarrhal cough cease, bronchial irritation stops; in short, you are cured of catarrh by a pleasant, simple remedy, free from sedatives and irritants.

That Catarrhozone is a swift, certain means of destroying colds and catarrh is proved by the following statement of Mr. Pulos, one of Brockville's best known merchants:

"In the fall of 1908," writes Mr. Pulos, under date of June 10th, 1910, "I contracted a very severe cold which developed into Catarrh. At that time I was living in New York State and treated with four different physicians, who afforded me no relief. On coming to Brockville I was advised by a friend to try Catarrhozone. I bought the [illegible] and was [illegible] completely cured by Catarrhozone, and have used it [illegible] cold with unfailing results. It is the grandest medicine in existence, and I hope my testimony will be of some use to other fellow-sufferers."

(Signed) George Pulos.

An ideal protection for the chest, lungs, nose, and throat is the frequent use of Catarrhozone. Two months' treatment (the large size) costs $1.00, medium sizes 50c; at all dealers or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

KING GEORGE AND FASHIONS

His Majesty Will Not Be Such a Force in Sartorial Affairs as His Father

King Edward was commonly regarded as the best-dressed man in Europe, and so he was accepted as the leader of masculine fashion, not in England alone, but almost everywhere. Take a case in point. It was King Edward who some years ago invented a modification of the ordinary frock coat for summer wear, the fronts of which were so cut away that they would hardly meet across the chest, and were held together when necessary by a link connecting with a button. One remembers also that one time, when he was staying at Marienbad, it was noticed that his late Majesty wore a red tie every day, and forthwith all the hosiers in Vienna made a great display of red cravats in their windows, and called them King Edwards. The news was telegraphed to different places, Paris went in for red ties, and later in London also the red tie became a favorite, but not to the same extent as on the Continent.

It was King Edward, too, who first popularized the white vest-slip; for if he was not the very first man to wear it in England, he was the first who was noticed to do so, and then the future of the new slip was no longer in doubt. But here it might be said that as a general thing the King discarded it long before his death. In some other matters of dress, involving possibly a great upheaval in established custom, his late Majesty was very cautious lest by example he should influence the men of his country towards a new fashion which might not be altogether to their liking, and cause much inconvenience. Yes it was not until he saw that the ... collar, which has now been so popular for many years, had become thoroughly established, that he took it himself, and so set the seal upon it. If he had never done so, it is quite likely that, despite the excellent start that it gained, it would not have survived as it did.

Besides uniforms, he had about 200 suits at Windsor castle, Buckingham Palace, and Sandringham; and it was certainly the fact that he had a larger wardrobe than any other monarch in the world, and it might very well have been that, with one kind and another he had more suits than any other man alive.

It is hardly likely that King George will be quite so much of a force in sartorial affairs as was his royal father, for the good reason that he does not think so much of dress, and is strongly disposed to be quite conventional in his attitude towards it; but one must hasten to add that, of course, His Majesty takes the utmost care at all times to be strictly correct in every detail, and his taste, while careful in its sobriety, is quite perfect. His Majesty is not disposed to take advantage of his high estate in this matter, and generally follows the lead of others; and the chief tailors in the West End will watch his appearances with rather less interest, not to say, anxiety, than they did those of the first gentleman in the last reign. He has, of course, every variety of clothes for town wear, each kind for the most part being several times repeated; while for country wear, especially on the sporting side, his wardrobe is perhaps quite the equal of that of the late King. As is well known, however, His Majesty is a very keen sportsman in those pursuits which involve wandering over the moors and hills with a gun in his hand, and he displays more interest in the selection of his shooting suits than he does perhaps in any others; while it may be added, as an interesting and pleasing circumstance, that he always exercises the utmost effort toward giving help to home industries in the matter of the cloths he selects, most of them being in the nature of homespun tweeds.

Then, as befits his strong naval interests and training, he has probably more naval uniforms than any other man. Indeed, the Kaiser is the only ruler who emulates him in this matter; for not only have these monarchs a very large wardrobe of uniforms for the naval and other maritime purposes of their own country, but each holds complimentary naval rank in foreign navies, and has complete sets of uniforms accordingly. Also, King George is honorary colonel in many foreign regiments, in addition to holding similar rank in several of our own.—Chambers' Journal.

THINGS TO KNOW

To poach an egg so that the water does not touch it, put a piece of butter at the bottom of an old teacup, then break in the egg, place the cup in a small saucepanful of boiling water, and in about five minutes the egg will be set. Pass a knife round the sides and slip out on to the toast—this prevents the toast getting damp.

For Watery Potatoes

When potatoes are likely to be watery, cook in the following way. Score the skin with a sharp knife—not too deeply—then boil in salted water. The incisions made let out the water in the potato, and renders it ... and floury when cooked.

Try Grating Your Apples

Line a plate with paste, and then grate in the apples instead of slicing them. This will ensure the fruit being cooked when the paste is done, and it also takes less quantity of apples. Tried with great success.

Snow-White Tables and Boards

If a kitchen table becomes dirty looking, cut a lemon in two and rub it all over the table. Then rinse well with pure clean water, and the result will be a smooth and snow white top. Pasteboards may be treated in the same way.

Lemon Roly-Poly

Take three-quarters of a pound of flour, six ounces of lard, the juice of one lemon, one teaspoonful of sugar, and one extra teaspoonful of flour. Mix the flour and lard into a smooth paste, and roll it out to the thickness of about half an inch. Squeeze the lemon-juice (strained)) into a cup. Stir the teaspoonful of flour and sugar into the juice to make a stiff paste. Spread this mixture over the paste and roll it up. Then tie the pudding into a floured cloth. Boil for two hours.

Stewed Chicken

Take a chicken, cut into joints; put into a stewpan two large onions (chopped fine), four tomatoes, some parsley, a little sage, a few bits of bacon cut small, and half a cupful of good stock. Stew gently for two hours. Just before dishing up, add a wineglassful of sherry.

Barley Pudding

Take half a pound of pearl barley, well washed; add one quart of new milk, half a pound of refined sugar, and half a nutmeg, grated; then bake it in a deep dish. Remove it from the oven when half cooked, beat up three eggs, mix well together, pour it into a well-buttered dish, and bake again for nearly an hour.

Fish for an Invalid

Half a saucepanful of water boiling and place a nice cutlet of fish in a soup plate with a tablespoonful of cold water and a nice piece of butter on the top of the cutlet, and cover with another soup plate. Place this over the boiling water and steam gently for twenty minutes. By cooking it this way you have all the nutriment that the fish contains.

Croquettes of Cheese

Four ounces of cheese, three ounces of breadcrumbs, one egg, one small onion, pepper, cayenne and salt to taste. Grate cheese, and put in a mortar with breadcrumbs, minced onion and seasoning. Pound to a smooth paste with enough beaten egg to moisten, then make into little balls, flatten out slightly, dip in frying batter, and cook in deep fat (which must be smoking hot before they are put in). When a delicate brown, drain well, and pile in a pyramid, garnish, and serve as quickly as possible.

Iced Fruit Cakes

One cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, two cupfuls of flour, four large eggs, one teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat the butter and sugar to a cream; add each egg separately. Mix the flour and baking powder and add to the rest of the ingredients, stirring well. Cut the paste in thick, narrow strips, and set in rounds, so as to form a deep cuplike shape; place on a well-buttered tin, and bake. When done, fill with iced fruit, prepared as follows: Take rich, ripe peaches (canned ones will do), cut in dice, dip in white of egg that has been slightly beaten, and then into pulverized sugar, and fill centre of the cake. Set in the oven until the meringue is nicely browned. Serve with rich cream and coffee.

Fortunes in Tea Cups

Did you ever learn to tell fortunes in teacups? Some of you say: "There's nothing in it. It's just foolishness." But that is a mistake. There is any amount of fun wrapped in the weird, uncanny-looking tea leaves, and now that the long, cold days have come and the tea hour seems the cosiest in the day your popularity will be established by enlivening your little tea-parties by telling your friends' fortunes.

Here is the way to do it. Brew the tea in a teapot without a strainer, or put a spoonful of tea in the cup itself and pour the hot water directly upon it. The tea must all be drunk except a few drops, which serve to keep the leaves in circulation. The cup must be whirled around three times, then turned on the saucer three times. Then begins the fortune-reading.

A lover (either man or woman, because sometimes you have "pink" tea parties) is represented by a number of dots in which one figure stands separate.

Two dots side by side mean an engagement.

An offer of marriage is shown by a figure kneeling in the cup.

A group of dots, three in a row, means that the offer will be accepted. Without them the lover has no chance.

Three large dots in the shape of a parallelogram will bear watching. These mean illness, sad news, or loss of money.

Three large dots in triangular shape mean just the contrary—good news, good fortune and good health.

If you are awaiting a letter, the following signs will tell you just what to expect. Four dots in a square tell of an important letter. A dot within the square or just outside means there is something in the letter which you will be glad to hear or something you want to receive, as money, a check, books, etc., small flakes within the square or near it indicates bad news in the epistle.

A long journey is indicated by a long line of dots extending half way around the cup. A group of dots near the terminus of the journey denotes that you will be greeted by a large circle of friends upon your arrival.

If you wish for something very much, indeed, three small dots in a triangular shape bid you hope the wish is about to come true.

Very large dots in a line warn you that many trials are in store for you. If these are mixed with fine dots, you will encounter disagreeable people.

Tears to be shed for one cause or another are represented by drops of tea in the bottom of the cup.

A clean rim to the cup means a quiet, happy, and prosperous existence.

Look out for the leaf that folds over the rim! This means that you are likely to have a stroke of good luck very soon.

The different shapes of the leaves indicate respectively, men, women, and clothes. A long hard leaf shows a man. Small leaves, or even points upon this long leaf, take the form of his silk hat, cane, boots, etc. A woman is shown by a broader leaf or paler shade. She is often distinguished by her wide skirts, her bonnet, parasol, etc.

To ascertain whether or not the man and woman are friends or enemies examine the space about them. If it is filled with tiny dots thickly settled they are enemies. If the space be clear and no dots appear about them they are good friends.

A cross in the teacup means the news of a death.

A group of trees standing separately means that your wish will come true.

And as you become more expert new ideas will come to you. Try it, girls.

Azile Green.

To make breadcrumbs quickly, cut the soft part from a stale loaf, put it into a clean muslin bag, tie the bag at the top, and gently rub it with the hands for a few minutes. The crumbs will then be fine enough for anything.

LARGEST EGG IN THE WORLD

The Aepyornis Surpassed the Ostrich, the King of Modern Birds

The largest egg in the world has recently been exhibited in the Museum of Natural History of New York and some other cities. It is the egg of the gigantic extinct bird called Aepyornis, which formerly lived in considerable numbers on the Island of Madagascar. This was a huge wingless creature, the largest and most formidable bird of prey that ever trod the earth. In life it has been variously estimated to have stood from seven to twelve feet in height, possessing massive and powerful limbs. This great bird surpassed the ostrich, the king of modern birds, both in size, herculean strength and build. The Aepyornis egg is six times larger than that of the ostrich, having a capacity of 150 hen eggs. Here are some of the astounding dimensions of the big egg: The shell is about one-eighth of an inch thick, the lengthwise circumference is two feet eight inches, and two feet two inches around the middle. Though termed a fossil egg, it is not petrified or turned to hard stone as in the case of dinosaur bones. It is in a surprisingly perfect condition, unbroken, and has a yellow color, although finely pitted in places. The contents have not been removed, as they have turned to fine dust, which comes out when handled through a small natural perforation on one side. The Aepyornis that laid this colossal egg has not been seen in the life of the present generation of the inhabitants of Madagascar. In former times, several centuries ago, they were quite abundant. Several incomplete fossil remains of the bird have been discovered, but no complete skeleton has yet been found. These show that the bird was not only of massive proportions, but short winged, and has been classed as a distant relative of the Moas and the Apteryx, fossil birds of New Zealand. The natives of Madagascar have for many years used the great eggshells for various domestic purposes, for carrying water and as jars for storing and holding food. Only two or three of these huge eggs have been obtained by Europeans and these were usually found in the sand beds of torrents. The present egg is said to be one of the largest and most perfect ever brought into civilization.

DON'T WASH YOUR HORSE

It Removes the Natural Oil From the Outer Skin

The practice of washing horses, as a rule, is injurious because it removes the natural oil from the outer skin and predisposes the animal to chill, writes a practical man in the Kentucky Stock Farm. The application of water to a horse's skin increases the heat conducting power of his coat and lowers the temperature of the surface by evaporation and also by conduction, in the event of the temperature of the water being cooler than that of the skin. Even in the tropics, washing a horse always takes the gloss off his coat, no matter how vigorously the subsequent grooming may be performed. This fact is certainly a strong argument against the practice in question. If it is imperative to wash, and there is not sufficient help to have the horse rubbed dry, without loss of time, we may, after scraping and going over him with two or three dry rubbers, take him out and exercise him at a brisk pace until he gets dry. We should then walk him about until his circulation regains its normal condition before taking him in. If we can not give this exercise, we may, after scraping and driving him, put on him a good supply of warm clothing, bandage his legs, and leave him thus to dry under his rugs, which he will do in an hour or less. He should after that be exercised and well rubbed down, so as to prevent his getting chilled. A good plan for getting horses to dry quickly and safely under clothing is to cover the animal's back and loins with straw before putting on a rug, so as to utilize the low heat conducting power of air and to give as little impediment as possible for the escape of moisture.

CHEAPER CUTS OF MEAT

Butchers should endeavor to correct the impression of customers that only the high-priced meats are valuable as food. On the contrary, the cheaper cuts are often more highly flavored and fully as nutritious.

The chuck is one of the cheapest portions of the beef, but when cooked slowly in a small amount of water, either with or without vegetables for seasoning, is a most excellent dish.

In stewing meat, if too high a temperature is used, it will toughen the fibre. Another mistake is to overcook the meat until it falls to shreds. The skirt steak sells for 2 to 3 cents a pound less than the others, but if properly cooked is just as good. Lay the steak on a meat board and score it well with a chopping knife. Then dredge with flour and put it into a smoking hot frying pan that has been greased enough to keep the meat from sticking to it. When well seared over on both sides, pour over it a little boiling water and allow it to simmer slowly for two hours. Season to suit the taste. A bit of carrot or onion, or bay leaf and a little vinegar to soften the fibre will add to the flavor of the

MAN OF THE PAST

Sir James Grant Refers to Some Canadian Pioneers

Sir James Grant, Ottawa, addressing the members of Zetland Masonic Lodge, Toronto, said in part: "Canada cannot boast of historic temples, ancient monuments or archaeological developments, but she has a pride in the men of the past century who, throughout the country, have taken an active part in making Canada the great centre of attraction in the civilized world. In 1850 I entered McGill University in Montreal as a student of medicine, and resided with the late Mr. Allan Macdonald, ex-chief factor of the Hudson Bay Company in the Northwest. He was a gentleman of high culture and refinement of taste, and was a remarkable example of the intellectual ability common amongst the factors of the Hudson Bay Company." Sir James spoke of the days he spent with Sir George Simpson and other Hudson Bay factors at the home of the late Mr. Macdonald, and how the conversations always turned to the wonderful work of the Hudson Bay Company from the Atlantic to the Pacific in the fur trade. Mr. Macdonald lost his eyesight two years after Sir James first met him, and the latter was asked to take charge of the bulk of Mr. Macdonald's correspondence, and Sir James said that in this way he was in a position to learn a great deal about the workings of the historic fur-trading company, and of the extent of its influence on the future of Canada's commerce. He said that in 1863 he delivered in the city of Ottawa, where he moved in 1854, an address on the desirability of closer union between the different Provinces of the Dominion, and of the early construction of the Trans-continental Railway. Sir Jonh Macdonald asked the speaker where he got so much information relative to these subjects, and Sir James's reply was that he got most of it as a result of his close associations with the factors of the Hudson Bay Company.

FUEL FROM POTATOES

In the Form of Denatured Alcohol They Will be Valuable

Culled potatoes will be furnishing the power for the gang plow and the engine on the farm before many more years go by.

A bushel of culled potatoes is worth fifty-six cents. Turned into denatured alcohol they would be worth seventy-two cents. The process of extracting the alcohol is not one that every farmer can carry on, but the alcohol is there all right.

Alcohol is produced by the fermentation of sugar. Potatoes contain starch that may be converted into sugar by the addition of malt and then fermented. The potatoes are steamed until the starch is cooked thoroughly. Then the malt is added. When the starch has been converted into sugar a yeast mash is added and the sugar is fermented. What is left from the potato mash can be fed to cattle. Experiments have proved that the mash has a high feeding value.

Denatured alcohol is used for heating and lighting, in chemicals, in varnishes, in explosives, and as a fuel for engines. For some years the tax laws were such that alcohol was too expensive as fuel for engines. For this reason machinery has not been adapted for using denatured alcohol. But it is coming into use.

The United States Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin recently on this subject. Denatured alcohol is being extracted from potatoes in other countries with success.

A distillery for this sort of work might be conducted by a farmer's cooperative association or as a private enterprise. A plant with a daily capacity of eight thousand pounds of potatoes would cost approximately $12,000. This is larger, considerably than would be practicable for a cooperative enterprise. The plant would have to be in a potato growing country with good railway facilities.—Kansas Industrialist.

USING WOOD SCRAPS

Tag Ends Left from Big Work Not Wasted Nowadays

In these days of high-priced lumber the utilization of the small pieces of wood formerly considered of little or no value assumes considerable importance. The woodworker gives a number of uses for these scraps.

Brush manufacturers have made some headway in using waste from furniture factories, but the pieces are of so many sizes and of such irregular shapes that success has been only partial. A small porch chair shop has been able to draw a considerable part of its raw material from the waste of boat factories.

Wheelwrights save the ends cut from spokes and shape them in lathes for chisel, gimlet, auger and other small tool handles. Wagon builders occasionally make use of scraps of hardwoods for lining brake blocks. Sash and blind makers save their scraps for the match factories, or if the pieces are large enough they are worked into corner blocks, rose blocks and balusters.

Coopers recut broken or defective staves of the larger sizes and make kegs or smaller vessels of them. Small headings are economically manufactured in that way. Occasionally defective staves and headings are made into dowels. Basket makers save the cores from which veneer has been cut and saw them into thin slats for baskets and crate covers.

Some of the makers on interior finish work their odds and ends of soft woods into small boxes and the hardwood scraps are made into parquet flooring. Planing mills work scraps and broken pieces unsalable in that form into boxes for apples medicines and other articles and into brackets, [illegible], rose blocks and small quarter-round moulding.

Hon. Col. Hughes Helps Veterans.

As there are a number of Fenian Raid veterans in this city and county, it will be of interest to them to learn that Hon. Col. Sam. Hughes has arranged that these old soldiers of Canada will each receive a grant of $100, payable to those living in Canada at time of passing of the Act providing for this payment.

LUNACY STATISTICS

Interesting Figures of the British Commissioners—Unemployment as a Cause of Insanity

Some figures of interest to life insurance are contained in the sixty-fifth report of the British Commissioners on Lunacy. Their returns show that alcohol is responsible for about 16 per cent. of the cases reported, while 20 per cent. were traced to unemployment. One of the commissioners thinks that lunacy will be largely lessened directly some method is found of increasing the general prosperity of Great Britain.

It is pointed out in the commissioners' report that in 9.6 per cent. of the cases has mental stress alone been the assignable cause of attack, though it is also explained that prolonged mental strain has been associated with nearly every other assignable factor in the category of causes. In confirmation of the assertion that insanity is an hereditary disease, the report states that—

"Our statistics show—and since their introduction, upwards of fifty years ago, have shown—that there is a family history of insanity in persons admitted to asylum care amounting, on an average, in the case of males, to 19 per cent., and of females to 23 per cent., of the total yearly admissions. This is probably an under-estimate, for there is always a considerable residuum concerning whom it is impossible to obtain positive information on this point."

But the report states that to ignore the factor of inheritance because three times the number of insane apparently come of sane stock would be unwarrantable. It is gratifying to note, further, that—

At marriagiable ages—twenty-five and upwards—the proportion of the unmarried of both sexes is considerably higher amongst the insane than it is in the general population, and to a slighter extent also in the widowed. Considerabl ymore single than married or widowed persons were admitted to care.

It also appears from the report that the proportions of the sexes certified yearly as insane are exactly the same, so far as relation to the number of persons in the country is concerned. There are, it is well known, more females than males in the country, and the estimated proportion per 1,000 in the general population for the middle of 1910 are—males, 482.8; females, 517.2.

The proportions amongst the insane annually admitted to care are practically identical—males, 484.0; females, 516.0. Concerning readmissions to care, it is stated that they form from 17 to 18 per cent. of the total admissions and may be considered to consist mainly of those who, in previous years, have been discharged as "relieved" or "not improved," and also of patients who, having left an asylum "recovered," are admitted with a recurrent attack. So far as asylum statistics go, the proportion of such occurrences is about one-fourth of those originally discharged as "recovered."

THE USEFUL CEDAR

Used by Indians for Everything, From Canoe to Food.

The Indians made much use of Western red cedar before white men became acquainted with the region in which it grew. From it they obtained food, clothing, shelter, means of transportation and apparatus for fishing and the chase. From the tree trunks the savages made canoes of all sizes, from the small trough that carried two men to the enormous dugouts that transported fifty or more upon long expeditions in war and peace. Before the Indians obtained metal tools from white traders they hollowed their canoes with fire and with their primitive stone and bone implements. Some of their dugouts are of enormous size, hewed from single trunks, and with lines so perfect that civilized men can scarcely suggest improvement. The making of a canoe of moderate size, by the crude means at the Indians' command in the early days, required several months of hard labor with flint adzes that chipped away pieces of wood not much larger than grains of sawdust.

The Indians of the region where western red cedar abounded generally chose it for such carpentry as they were capable of doing. Their choice was due to the softness of the wood, which meant a great deal to beams and doors with no better tools than fire, flint, bone and shell. They made fully as much use of the bark of the wood. With it they roofed, ceiled, floored, and papered their huts. They wove long strips of bark—sometimes thirty feet in length—into mats, which they used for beds, tables, blankets, and on ceremonial occasions. They made clothing of the same material. They twisted the bark into ropes for dog harness, ladders, fishlines and snares for wild animals and nets for catching fish. The list of uses for the bark did not end there, for they were able to make food of it. They beat the bark to a pulp, baked in cakes, and after completely saturating it with salmon oil they pronounced it a palatable and nutritious article of diet. It is believed, however, that the food value of the cakes was derived more from the fish oil than from the bark.—Agricultural Report.

GROUARD

The First Opportunity for Investment in the

PEACE RIVER COUNTRY

GROUARD has, for almost a century, been the most important point in the whole of the country north of Edmonton. For generations it has been the shipping point to which all roads to the wonderful Peace River Country and northland converged. It was here the great fur-trading companies and traders chose as the headquarters for their operations.

Now that the frontier has been pushed back, and railways guaranteed by Governments, what is more natural than that GROUARD should be the centre of great advancement and activity.

Now that the wonderful Peace River farming country has become the most prominent feature of the present time, and the settlers are pouring into that district, GROUARD has attained an importance as to location and possibilities never before attained by any town. GROUARD IS ESTABLISHED—has a post office, stores, churches, government telegraph, municipal-owned telephone, weather bureau, doctors' offices, shops, saw mill, government land office for the far famed Peace River district, general stores of the Hudson's Bay Company and the large firm of Revellion Bros., the Peace River Trading and Land Company, also the Bank of Commerce and Royal Bank have established branches there, with other banks to follow. You know banks do not go into a town, city or country where there is no business, or where the business will not increase. Follow the banks and you can never lose.

This is not a proposed townsite, but an established town of years standing.

BUY property in GROUARD—a coming city, with a rich agricultural district to back it up. BUY LOTS IN GROUARD and WATCH THEM ADVANCE IN VALUE.

A LOT OF MONEY HAS BEEN EXPENDED by the Dominion Government, and also the Province of Alberta in thoroughly investigating the real worth of the Great Peace River Country, and the results amply justified the expenditure.

The Peace River Country is recognized as the coming Granary of Canada, soon to be the home of a million or more prosperous farmers, a district producing millions of bushels of grain, thousands of heads of cattle.

Will there not be one or more large and prosperous cities to handle the business and trade of such a country? THE RAILROADS SAY THERE WILL, so there are now three roads heading into that country WITH GROUARD AS A CENTRE; THE STEAMBOAT COMPANIES, operating on the waterways with GROUARD as a head, SAY THERE WILL, and are building several new steamers; the GOVERNMENT OF ALBERTA SAYS THERE WILL, for they have just GUARANTEED BONDS to the amount of $25,000,000 FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF RAILROADS into this country, and THESE ROADS GO TO GROUARD; thousands of farmers say there will because they are now going into the great country taking up land, not even waiting for the railroad, and an immense business is being done right now at Grouard with these people; the BANKS SAY THERE WILL, for some have already OPENED BRANCHES AT GROUARD, and others are making ready to follow. What does this mean for Grouard? You can readily see that GROUARD HAS BEEN CHOSEN BY ALL INTERESTS as the gateway, commercial centre, and distributing point for that great country. It means a great city is now in the making, it means that when the steel reaches it those who have been wise enough to invest there now will find themselves wealthy.

YOU should share in this prosperity. Terms are being offered you that you cannot overlook. You have often dreamed that some time or other you would break away from the everyday grind, and invest, or buy something that you could sell afterward for much more than you paid for it, thus making a start on the road of prosperity. Make your dream come true. We offer you the opportunity. INVEST IN A PLACE PICKED BY THE GOVERNMENT, BY RAILROAD COMPANIES, BY BANKS, BY FARMERS, AS A COMING GREAT CITY, GROUARD.

The Hon. J. K. Cornwall, Member of Parliament for Alberta, a great Statesman, says, under date of January 24th, 1912:—

> "Concerning the Town of Grouard, situate on Lesser Slave Lake, I predict that in the near future there will be three lines of steel running into Grouard, which no doubt will make it a distributing point of more than ordinary importance. This same Town will eventually become the headquarters for merchants, farmers, manufacturers, and tourists."

Success is at your door, open and receive it.

Railroads for Grouard

Great Railroads make Great Cities. You know that. Look at all of our growing Western cities, they stand as great examples. But then what one of them had at its inception such advantages as are now apparent for Grouard? Three railroads for GROUARD—think of it.

During the month of February the Government of the Province of Alberta passed bills for the necessary guarantee of the bonds for construction of two lines from Edmonton to Grouard, and on into the Peace River Country.

The Canadian Northern from Athabasca Landing west to Peace River Landing, via GROUARD. The Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway from Edmonton to Dunvegan via GROUARD. Construction starting at once, and will be pushed forward as fast as possible. Would the Government guarantee bonds for building a road into a useless country? Would the roads go to Grouard if it were not an important point?

Terminals on our Grouard Property

A third line, the Pacific and Hudsons Bay Railway being built by English capital, runs from the Pacific Coast to Fort Churchill on the Hudsons Bay, and runs through Grouard. They have entered into an agreement with us, taking over part of this property ON WHICH THEY AGREE to place their station, freight sheds, and all terminals, thus ensuring the terminals for this great road RIGHT ON OUR commercial property at GROUARD.

Again GROUARD is the head of some 3,000 miles of lake and river transportation over which 100,000 tons of freight were handled last year.

Property will be more valuable in GROUARD in two years time than in any new town in Western Canada that has been put on the market during the last several years.

Increasing Our Plant.

It will be gratifying to the many friends of this great family journal to learn that we are continually improving our plant and extending our business. Three new modern machines are being added to our equipment, and in a short time we hope to be able to compete with the largest printing houses in Canada. Our newspaper will be further improved in the course of a few days. This is warranted by the splendid support we are getting in the way of daily increased subscriptions from all parts of this and surrounding Counties as well as from the city.

Mr. Publow on Our Cheese.

Mr. G. G. Publow, Chief Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario, while speaking here yesterday about Canadian cheese, said: "The most common complaint is that the cheese is too green, caused principally by shipping the cheese before it has had sufficient time to cure. Better facilities for curing the product at the factories is the only remedy. Canada is at present supplying about 75 per cent. of the cheese imports to Great Britain, and if we are to sustain our present enviable reputation in the world's biggest cheese market, we shall have to adopt means to obviate these imperfections."

Fire Brigade Saved Money.

Yesterday morning early Chief Howard and his doughty men were called to a fire in a store at the corner of Rubidge and Sherbrooke streets, occupied by Mrs. Dunsford. The brigade on arrival discovered a blaze at the rear of the premises, which had been caused by an attempt to thaw out some frozen water pipes. There were adjacent to the building, three dwelling houses, which were threatened, but the firemen were able to prevent the fire spreading by chopping out a partition. The estimated cost of the damage is placed at $50.00

DOMINION GOVERNMENT'S ULTIMATUM TO GRAND TRUNK—BLOCKS BILL UNTIL STRIKERS ARE BACK

PREMIER ASQUITH REFUSES MINERS THE MINIMUM SCALE

Englands Prime Minister Attacked Because He Would Not Accept the Dollar and a Quarter a Day Rate

Enoch Edwards, Labor Member of Parliament Announces That Premier's Action Closes Settlement of the Terrible Mine Strike

Premier Claims That Parliament Cannot Control the Rate of Wages in Any Line of Business

London, Mar. 22.—Premier Asquith in the House of Commons this afternoon refused to accept the miners' amendment to the Minimum Wage bill, providing a minimum of $1.25 and 50 cents as the daily wage for men and boys, respectively.

Enoch Edwards, Labor member of Parliament, and president of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, immediately announced that the Premier's rejection of the miners' amendment closed the door to an immediate settlement of the strike.

The House had just entered upon the committee stage of the Minimum Wage bill when the miners' amendment was moved and Premier Asquith's pronouncement, the gravity of which was immediately recognized caused a sensation among the members.

PARLIAMENT CANNOT FIX WAGES.

In opposing the miners' amendment the Premier said that he was inclined to think the figures reasonable ones, but said that it was most undesirable to insert in the bill any specific minimum wage or to establish the precedent of fixing the rate of wages by act of Parliament. It would, he pointed out, be peculiary dangerous to the men themselves, because, if Parliament once expressed its judgment that $1.25 was a fair minimum wage, that sum would be bound to be treated as the maximum.

Enoch Edwards, the miners' leader who seemed to be surprised at the Government's action, declared that the decision announced by the Premier, had shattered his hopes that the final form of the bill would commend itself to the good sense of both sides. The refusal of the amendment meant the closure of the door which yesterday appeared open to a settlement.

Andrew Bonar Law, the official leader of the Opposition, sided with the Government, which, he said, could not have taken any other course.

LABOR LEADER ACCUSES GOVERNMENT.

Ramsay McDonald, the leader of the Labor party, bitterly accused the Government of banging the doors in their faces. He then announced that the miners were willing to waive the inclusion of their schedule rates in the bill if the minimum rates of $1.25 and 50 cents were inserted.

William Bryce, Labor member for Glamorgan, declared that unless the $1.25 and 50 cents rates were conceded the miners would remain idle until the matter was settled in every coal field in the Kingdom.

CLAIM MADE THAT MR. HAYS DID NOT KEEP HIS PROMISE

Ottawa, Mar. 22.—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, strongly objected this morning before the Railway Committee to the passing of the new Grand Trunk financial bill, unless the company reinstates the 138 men whom Judge Barron in his report said should be reinstated and the company drop the notice of February reducing the wages.

Mr. Crothers was very frank in his statement. He said the only way evidently in which the company could be forced to do justice to the men was for Parliament to utilize the weapon at its disposal.

SHOULD KEEP ITS AGREEMENT

Mr. Crothers insisted that the company should be made to implement its undertakings. He did not wish to place any undue burden on any railway company and did not want to hold up this one. He had the original letter in which Mr. C. M. Hays had promised to reinstate all men not guilty of violation of the law during the strike. That agreement had not been lived up to. The company had in addition undertaken to put into force on Jan. 1, 1912, the same schedule of wages as ruled on the C.P.R. This was done and almost immediately the company had given notice to reduce the scale. Judge Barron, who had been selected to investigate the cases of failure of reinstatement reported there were 138 men who were not guilty of violation of the law. Of these 70 to 80 had not been reinstated.

DR. J. G. EVANS AND HARVEY WILL NOT BE ALLOWED BAIL

Toronto, Mar. 22.—According to the statement made by Crown Attorney Corley in the police court this morning, the Crown will entertain no request for bail for "Doctor" J. G. Evans and W. J. Harvey, now on remand on a charge of conspiracy to defraud, until the body of John Revell, alias Spur, has been exhumed from Norway cemetery.

This morning both prisoners appeared after a week's remand and to the former charge of conspiracy to defraud the estate of John Revell, Plympton, England, another charge that of obtaining the sum of $100 by fraud from Mr. A. B. Tytheridge was added.

WEEK'S REMAND.

A week's remand was ordered, which gave opportunity for Mr. W. A. Henderson to press his request for bail.

"The Crown will not entertain that," replied Mr. Corley, "until after the exhumation of Revell's body has taken place."

Mr. Corley stated that the exhumation proceedings would likely start as soon as the Chief Coroner had been informed of the urgency of the matter.

Regarding the exhumation proceedings, the police officials are reticent.

HARD TO DROP.

But Many Drop It.

A young Calif. wife talks about coffee:

"It was hard to drop Mocha and Java and give Postum a trial, but my nerves were so shattered that I was a nervous wreck and of course that means all kinds of ills. (Tea contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee and is equally harmful.)

"At first I thought bicycle riding caused it and I gave it up, but my condition remained unchanged. I did not want to acknowledge coffee caused the trouble for I was very fond of it.

"About that time a friend came to live with us, and I noticed that after he had been with us a week he would not drink his coffee any more. I asked him the reason. He replied, 'I have not had a headache since I left off drinking coffee, some months ago, till last week, when I began again, here at your table. I don't see how anyone can like coffee, anyway, after drinking Postum'!

"I said nothing, but at once ordered a package of Postum. That was five months ago, and we have drank no coffee since, except on two occasions when we had company, and the result each time was that my husband could not sleep, but lay awake and tossed and talked half the night. We were convinced that coffee caused his suffering, so he returned to Postum, convinced that the coffee was an enemy, instead of a friend, and he is troubled no more by insomnia.

"I, myself, have gained 8 pounds in weight, and my nerves have ceased to quiver. It seems so easy now to quit the old coffee that caused our aches and ails and take up Postum." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

WILL LOCAL BOARD OF TRADE SEND A MAN

It will be remembered that some few days ago we noted that at a meeting held in Toronto Mr. W. J. Gage suggested that representatives from the various Boards of Trade of Ontario go to London, England, to attend the big convention there. Yesterday morning Mr. V. Eastwood, president of the local Board of Trade, received the following telegram signed by F. G. Morley, Secretary-Treasurer: "Pursuant to resolution of Ontario Associated Boards Trade, you are requested to nominate accredited delegates for proposed British trip, leaving Montreal May 15th. Special arrangements proposed by Royal Line for first class steamship accommodation return at $160. Committee will decide if trip is feasible upon receiving definite replies on or before the 27th inst."

In response to a question put to Mr. Eastwood, by The Times, as to what action the local Board of Trade would take in the matter, that gentleman said the Board would probably consider the subject at its regular meeting on Monday night. He did not think the Board would likely send a representative, but intimated that there was a good chance for anyone capable of acting in such capacity, and wanting to take advantage of the rates to go to London.

PUBLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions of its correspondents.

AN ANSWER TO "SUBSCRIBER."

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Did the thought ever enter the mind of "Subscriber," when he was picturing—in words none too strong—the distress now prevalent in England on account of the coal strike, that such a condition of things would likely be impossible, if the women of the civilized world had long ago been given the franchise on equal terms with men?

Such an industrial calamity as has now overtaken England could not possibly happen in New Zealand, where women have long had the privilege of voting in that country of advanced legislation, with its Government Boards of Arbitration and Conciliation.

Might it not be possible too, that "Subscriber" is not qualified to sit in judgment on the "educated aristocrats" of whom he speaks so sneeringly. They at least are not in any sense of the word self seekers, and if they have smashed windows in public buildings and aristocratic residences, these methods of gaining their object, will at least not suffer in comparison with the methods adopted by the mine owners and mine workers to gain theirs, some of the results of which are before "Subscriber's" eyes in the columns of your paper adjoining his own letter, where we read that 1,500,000 workmen not connected with the mines have been forced out of employment, that in Staffordshire alone 60,000 potters with their helpers numbering thousands upon thousands, laborers, porters, railroad men and bargemen, have been forced out of work for the lack of coal.

What about the innocent wives and children of this vast multitude of men? Thousands have wept when listening to the singing of "Caller Herrin" in "Men Must Work and Women Must Weep." But let us change the sentiment and read "Men Will Strike Though Women Should Stave" and think of the thousands of little children without food or heat this very night through present industrial methods.

May it not be possible that the "educated aristocrats" at whom "Subscriber" casts his stone were maddened by the knowledge of all the misery that would surely result from the strike, and the utter failure of present-day methods of legislation to prevent the awful and unjust suffering which comes to women and children through the blindness or indifference of our law makers? May it not be possible, that impatient under moral wrong and seeing as they believed the Kingdom of Heaven to be within reach through woman suffrage they were ready to take it by violence and so defeated the object in view? Surely their motives were unselfish if their methods were unwise "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone."

As to the warning with which "Subscriber" closes his letter, I can assure him that, generally speaking, the deference paid to woman by man will be in the future as it always has been, just in proportion to her ability to exact the same.

OBJECT OF THE NE TEMERE DECREE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—A great deal has been written on the subject of the ne temere decree, but so far as I have seen no one representing the Protestant side of the controversy has sought to inquire into the real object of the Catholic Church in enforcing this decree. The pamphlet published by Rev. John C. Brophy in defence of the Catholic position induced me to give this phase of the subject a little attention. I admit of course that the object of the Roman Church, whether good, bad, or indifferent, is not the fundamental objection which Protestants have to the decree; but nevertheless when one reads the somewhat Pharisaical defences made by the Catholic clergy in its behalf, it becomes somewhat entertaining if not profitable, to speculate a little on just what their object is.

They say (and such is the express wording of the decree itself) that the real object is to prevent clandestine marriages. What the real object was and is may best be conjectured from a consideration of the following historical facts:

1. For over fifteen hundred years, from the first institution of the Roman Church down to the promulgation of the decree in 1564, at the Council of Trent, there was no such rule against clandestine marriages.

2. During the fifty years next preceding the decree vast numbers of people in Western Europe, stimulated by the Revival of Learning and a desire for liberty of conscience, left the Roman Church.

3. The avowed purpose of the Council of Trent, as appears from the negotiations preceding it, and the subsequent conduct of the proceedings was to stem if possible this rising tide of Protestantism, first by offers of compromise and conciliation, and when those proved abortive, then by such other means as the ingenuity of the Italian bishops (who formed a vast

TORONTO BLOCKED ON VOTE ON ITS SUBURBAN LINE BILL

Toronto, Mar. 22.—These seven members of the Legislature—all as it happens, Conservatives—blocked Toronto's efforts to have incorporated in the Toronto Suburban Railway's bill a provision which would protect the city in the case of the city undertaking to operate a general radial electric railway terminal system:

H. A. C. Machin, Kenora.
J. A. Mathieu, Rainy River.
Napoleon Champagne, Ottawa.
W. C. Chambers, West Wellington.
Sam. Charters, Peel.
A. W. Nixon, Halton.
J. T. H. Regan, South Wentworth.

The provision was that any part of the road within the city boundaries as they now are or as they may be extended could be expropriated by the city, the price and conditions to be settled by the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board.

The vote was seven to seven. Those supporting the four Toronto members present were: Allan Studholme, East Hamilton; R. A. Norman, of Prince Edward and J. Thompson, of East Peterborough. The Toronto members were, W. K. McNaught, Hon Thos. Crawford, E. W. J. Owens, and T. R. Whiteside. Hon. J. S. Hendrie, the chairman of the committee, did not vote and declared that the amendment which had been moved by Mr. McNaught was not carried.

The vote followed a long and involved discussion.

EDITORS CIVEN SIX MONTHS FOR PRINTING STRIKE NEWS

London, Mar. 22.—That the Government is determined no one shall persuade the troops to fail to perform any strike duty became a certainty to-day. In Old Bailey Court, Ben Buck and Chas. Buck, sub-editors of the magazine "Syndicalist," were sentenced to six months' imprisonment each for permitting their editor to print an appeal to the soldiers to refuse to shoot strikers. The appeal was widely circulated at the various troop depots.

Guy Bowman, the offending editor, freely admitted authorship, and defended his sentiments, but the court shut off his explanations by imposing a sentence of nine months.

LOCAL WOMAN IN BREEN CASE

May be Called Upon to Give Evidence in Divorce Proceedings

Considerable local interest is being taken in the divorce case now being tried in New York, in which Mrs. Ethel Croker Breen is suing her husband, John Breen, for divorce. The suit was brought on about three weeks ago, and resulted in a disagreement, but the plaintiff got her complaint amended to include the name of a Peterborough woman in her charges against her husband. The new trial is set for the first Monday in April.

In her complaint Mrs. Breen charged misconduct with three women in Canada last summer, but named only one of them, Miss Maude Diehl, a Toronto telephone operator. No testimony was offered concerning any of the other women. Miss Diehl came here and denied the charges against her. The trial will doubtless be watched with interest by the people of Peterborough, many of whom became personally acquainted with Breen, the latter having resided in this city most of last year.

Police Court Notes.

At yesterday's police court, John Moore and W. Brooks, who had raised a disturbance near the Quaker Oats factory, pleaded guilty to having been drunk. The result was $5 each or 15 days in the Castle Nesbitt. Bruce Roddy was also given the option of paying $5 or spending fifteen days in the stone mansion overlooking Victoria Park. The charge was vagrancy. John McKee was allowed ten days in which to raise $2, that he was fined for having indulged a little too freely in the glass that makes a monkey out of a man.

TORONTOS ISOLATION HOSPITAL CAUSES LEGISLATIVE ACTION

Toronto, Mar. 22.—Interesting speculations are promoted by the action of Hon. I. B. Lucas in introducing into the Legislature an amendment to the Public Health Act, which, if carried, would prevent the City of Toronto from erecting an Isolation Hospital in York Township at the head of Bathurst street. The city has acquired a $30,000 property just outside the city limits for this purpose.

The amendment provides that an Isolation Hospital shall not be established or kept by a municipal corporation upon lands in another municipality which were purchased or even contracted for before the first of the present year without the consent of the municipality where the lands are situate, and unless such consent is obtained within a month from the passing of the Act the lands may not be used for that purpose.

MARKDALE AVENUE NEAR SITE

One of the most interesting trains of thought which flow from the Lucas measure is suggested by a glance at the map of York Township in the vicinity of the hospital site. One sees there if the map be sufficiently modern, a street named Markdale avenue. In this connection the presence of the word "Markdale" comes as the discovery of an old friend; for is not the home town of the Hon. Mr. Lucas none other than Markdale?

The property in this vicinity is owned by the real estate firm of Messrs. Tanner and Gates, and upon inquiry it is learned that these gentlemen originally hailed from the same town of Markdale.

"I don't know anything about the bill," said Mr. F. W. Tanner this morning; "but I should be very glad to hear that such a bill was being introduced. That would be a very nice little stand indeed, and I wish Mr. Lucas every success in his venture."

"It seems to me like a very peculiar piece of legislation," said the Mayor. "We shall, of course, take immediate steps to combat it, and I don't possibly see how such a thing could be put through."

DR. HASTINGS SAYS "ME TOO."

"They have done it purposely to block the Isolation Hospital scheme" said Dr. Hastings, Medical Health Officer, this morning. "I shall take the matter up at once with the City Solicitor and the Corporation Counsel. We shall have to see that this measure is not entertained for a moment."

LIBERAL WILL CLOSE ALL BARS BUT ALLOW SHOP LICENSES

Toronto, Mar. 22.—To wipe out every bar in Ontario while retaining shop licenses is understood, on the best authority, to have been the decision of the caucus of Liberal members in the Legislature yesterday.

It was learned authoritatively this morning that some details remained to be settled, but the above platform found the members of the party practically in agreement. It is also stated that there was a very minor division of opinion, Mr. Rowell's definition of [illegible] being accepted after a long debate.

In a general way it was intimated that nothing short of riddance of the saloon and the total destruction of the treating system thereby, was found acceptable to the meeting. How such a radical section could be spliced to a political party's sailing gear is understood to be the puzzle now agitating the members.

QUITE ADVANCED.

"It will be quite advanced;" was the statement of one.

"If So-and-so says we are not going to abolish the bar, there is a surprise coming to him," declared another.

"And retain shop licenses?"

"That remains to be seen."

[illegible] fairly definite assurance was given that it will be retained in the Liberal platform as a buffer between the abolition of the treating system and the unpopularity of total prohibition.

IT IS EXPECTED THAT THE SOFT COAL MINES WILL CLOSE

Toronto, Mar. 22.—Large quantities of coal continue to arrive in Toronto and it is serving present needs but much more is required to relieve the anxiety of the dealers and the manufacturers whose stock of fuel is very low.

This section of the Province is now doing fairly well to all accounts but in Western Ontario they are still clamoring for coal.

Soft coal is in much demand all over the Province and the situation at the mines is a source of apprehension.

SOFT COAL OUTLOOK IS BAD.

Mr. Alfred Rogers, of the Elias Rogers Company, said this morning that the soft coal outlook is very gloomy as present indication pointed strongly to a shutdown of the mines. In regard to anthracite he does not see much cause to worry as it looks as if the miners would not go.

Toronto's troubles are, he considers, over, for the time being, but the dealers are not yet able to stock up. If the soft coal mines do close down, Toronto will be rather seriously affected.

NOT RAILWAY'S FAULT.

Grand Trunk officials deny that the dealers have cause for complaint in regard to shunting cars of coal that arrive here. "We are prepared to give them all the shunting they want and as quick as they want it, and if there is any delay at all here it is their fault," said one of them this morning.

A MODEL HUSBAND.

He had [illegible] married just a year, and one day strolled into his office grinning all over his face and whistling.

"What [illegible] matter with you?" asked his colleague.

"Matter? Why when I [illegible] this morning my wife said: '[illegible], you are a model husband.'"

"Well, that [illegible] a compliment," said his partner.

"I should like to know what [illegible]," stated the young husband.

"Well, take my advice, and look up the English Dictionary, and note what the word 'Model' means."

The young husband did so, and this is what came to his gaze, and dampened his feelings:

"Model, a small pattern, a miniature of something on a larger scale."

INSULTING.

TOO MANY COLLECTIONS

A Scot, paying a visit to London, was taken by his nephew to a service in St. Paul's Cathedral. He had no acquaintance with the Liturgy of the Church of England. He picked up a prayer-book and became very interested, but as he turned over the leaves his face became clouded with a look of intense anxiety.

He placed the prayer book carefully down, looked cautiously round, picked up his hat, and crept stealthily to the door.

His nephew followed him, and said "Are you ill, uncle? What is the matter?"

The uncle replied, "No, but it is enough to make any man ill, the number of collections made in this kirk!"

"Collections," said the nephew in surprise, "if there is any at all there certainly won't be more than one."

"Well," replied the uncle, "why shouldna' [illegible] many in the book. There's nothing but 'collect' and a bit of prayer, then 'collect' again, and I say I-to masel, 'I'll bide here until all these collections are taken, I'll no hae a bawbee left in ma pocket.'"

CHANGEABLE CLIMATE

"The English climate is rather changeable."

"Yes, rather. We seem to get every kind of weather there is, except, of course, good weather."

A TIP TO BUSINESSLIKE FARMERS

A motor-car had just reached a nice level stretch of road, and the man in the goggles was preparing for a scorch, when an honest-eyed old farmer stepped from the hillside, and held up his hand.

"Reckon you was jest going to slip along tidy fast," he said.

The motorist seemed angry for having been stopped, and wanted to know why he had stopped him. The old farmer replied

"Look through these 'ere glasses of mine, and then perhaps you will change your mind."

The motorist looked through the glasses, and beheld a policeman on the branch of a tree.

"Great Scott!" he said; "It's nothing but a police-trap. Thanks, old friend." And the clink of coins was heard.

A minute later he went crawling past the tree at six miles per hour, gotten gains, remarked:

"That idea of carting the scarecrow from the pea-field and fixing it to the tree weren't so bad."

IN THE DARK.

"Before I propose, Miss Plainer, I must know if you have anything in the bank?"

"Yes, Mr. Hunter. I have a sweetheart there; he's the manager. We are to be married next month."

Belgium's Population

Belgium, with 643 inhabitants to the square mile, is the most thickly populated country in Europe; England's figure is 557, Germany's 306, France's 202, Russia's 194, and Spain's 101.

Storm of Long Ago

In the great English storm of 1703, which lasted two days, 8,000 people were drowned, 20,000 trees were uprooted in Kent, and two million pounds' worth of damage was done in London alone.

SAYS ALL SPORT DANGEROUS

[illegible] Comments on the [illegible] With [illegible]

[illegible] Weekly has [illegible] which of [illegible] sport is most [illegible]. Apparently, [illegible] dangerous, as wit-

[illegible] nowadays one hears [illegible] that were [illegible] former generations [illegible] whether the [illegible] athletics is so beneficial [illegible] as is generally [illegible]

[illegible] few white athletes [illegible] voluntarily to deform [illegible] the extent that Jack Johnson [illegible] the colored boxer has [illegible] natural teeth taken out [illegible] substituted, in order to [illegible] swallowing teeth during [illegible] there seems to be a form [illegible] deformities inseparable [illegible] pursuit of certain branches of [illegible] by the strain.

"Very few branches of athletics develop [illegible] equally. Nearly all of them develop certain muscles or sets of muscles only, with the result the athlete is [illegible] proportioned. And although the various systems of "physical culture" [illegible] claim to give symmetrical development, even these at their best only give a man a huge mass of over-developed and slow moving muscles, which in nine cases out of ten are of no earthly use to him in the life that he leads.

"Nowadays we have such deformities as the 'bicycle face,' the 'tennis elbow,' the 'chauffeur's stare,' 'pedestrian's foot,' 'bowler's wrist,' and so on.

"In lawn tennis, for example, the right side, and especially the forearm get nearly all the exercise, and in the case of people who are constantly playing tennis their deformed, one-sided development is noticeable even away from the tennis lawn. Bowling is a winter sport to which exactly the same [illegible] apply as to tennis.

"Then there is cycling. We see photographs of cyclists and motorcyclists careering round racecourses at terrific speeds, with their bodies bent over the [illegible] of their machines. Their [illegible] are distorted, their lungs [illegible], and their backs hideously [illegible]. If this sport is long persisted in, the muscles of the face settle permanently in the contorted grimace, the hump-back becomes chronic, and the cramped lungs surely make the individual liable to consumption. [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] face [illegible] throughout [illegible] at [illegible] speed and [illegible] which [illegible] desirable [illegible] and down to our [illegible] of the [illegible] gave, which [illegible] people [illegible] nowadays, [illegible] a considerable [illegible] been [illegible] with [illegible] or bicycle.

"Then [illegible] the numerous instances [illegible] dread shadow of heart disease [illegible] fallen on a man's life through his pursuit of the sport of rowing. And another injurious deformity is 'pedestrian's' or the 'boardwalk' foot. Nor are the thin and wiry legs of runners desirable traits to hand down to our children. Even golf which is much more nearly an ideal sport than the sports mentioned already, is productive of the objectionable 'golf swing' and 'golf walk.'

"The trouble lies in the fact that athletes specialize, and develop only certain sets of muscles which fit them for one particular sport. This development takes place at the expense of other muscles of the body, and the 'game deformity' is produced. Moreover, there is to be considered the argument that excessive physical development takes place at the expense of the mental powers.

Altogether it seems to be clear that specializing in a particular sport is injurious. It is far wiser to be a duffer at all sports than to be expert at one, as is generally the case."

BEN HOUSER'S PLACE

Will Be on the First Corner for Boston Nationals.

Ben Houser is likely to be a fixture at first for the Boston Nationals. He is with the club at the training ground in Columbia, S.C. Houser played classy baseball at Indianapolis after the Athletics let him out, but when he was annexed by the Boston Pilgrims to hold down Fred Tenney's old place he was away out of condition. Houser is six feet two and weighed 165 pounds. He looked like he could crawl thru a hole in the fence. At the camp he pushed the beam up to 210 and looked like a baseball player. Johnny King looks to Houser as his first choice at the first corner. He went from Toronto to Philadelphia.

THE HIRED MAN

Alberta Paper Hands Out Advice to the Farmer

The "Alberta Homestead," which should know what conditions are, hands out this bit of left-handed advice to the farmer:—

"The hired man will soon be with you for the harvest. He can have his sleeping quarters in the hay loft or the caboose, as he ought to want nothing better.

"Should he show unusual readiness for work, this is a quality which should be encouraged, and 18 hours should be got out of him a day.

"Set him to work right after each meal, as a hired man has no business to fear indigestion, and he can get his rest at night.

"If he's inexperienced at farming, an occasional sneer when he makes a mistake will brace him up, and prevent him from repeating the blunder.

"Give him as many chores to do as possible, especially on Sundays, or he might get into idle ways.

"Try and prevent him from running off to town on Saturday nights, where habits of dissipation might get hold of him. A couple of hours' relaxation with the bucksaw will soon stop this.

"A policy of this kind will put any hired man in love with farming and with you, too."

Poultry Pointers

George Hansmann, a poulterer of Hillsboro, N.D., gives the following good advice:—

Grit to the fowl is what teeth are to the ruminating animal—a necessity.

A [illegible] is essential. The [illegible] will do [illegible] if you throw [illegible] in short, broken pieces.

Let the fowls have as wide range as possible, but if they must be confined, give them plenty of shade and dig up the ground frequently.

Young geese do not lay as many fertile eggs or produce as many goslings in the first breeding season as they do in the second.

Fresh air and sunshine are the best disinfectants that the poultry-raiser has at his disposal, and ought to be more often used in his work.

A plat of ground 70 feet square divided into two lots will be ample accommodation for 25 fowls. Confine them in one lot for a week at a time, meanwhile spading up the other.

The well-hatched chicks in the carefully-cared-for brooder will amount to little unless good food is supplied in proper amounts and at right intervals.

More harm results to flocks during the [illegible] than at any other time [illegible] to [illegible] of their [illegible] the houses and both [illegible]

[illegible] of [illegible] high and the poultryman [illegible] ing [illegible] Feeding [illegible] a science [illegible] costs are now figured to fractions [illegible] a cent.

Always handle ducks and geese by their necks, and never by the legs, as fowls are handled, for their limbs are not strong enough to serve as handles.

A poulterer can well afford to pay one cent per quart for skim-milk. Feed quantities of whole milk and you will find it pays.

ELECTRICITY ON FARMS

Labor Will Be Trifling—Nothing to Do But Turn on Current

In these days when the metropolitan city may be described as a great electrical laboratory and consuming station, it should not be overlooked that the farm itself is coming in for its share of this universal source of power.

There are many ways through which the farm that can afford the use of the electric current may have it for the trouble of installation. Some nearby inter-urban electric line may have its surplus current for sale; some stream close at hand may have a gravity waterfall to develop electricity sufficient for half a dozen farmers; or the gasoline engine in connection with a dynamo is within comparatively easy reach of the prosperous farmer who discovers that to keep his boys on the farm—or even to make certain that his hired help will stay with him through the season it is up to him to lighten those old drudgeries of twenty years ago.

In the home of the farmer, the first adaptation of the electric current would be in displacing the kerosene lamp. A motor in the basement and a pump and tank on the outside would effect a system of water-works for the house. In the dairy the cream separator, churn, and the washing machinery for dairy necessities can be operated. Laundry work that bugbear of the farmer's wife is simplified and lightened to the last degree. Even the long-sought "milking machine" is to receive an impetus at the hands of Yankee ingenuity, and, if it shall be perfected, the electric current must drive it.

In the cow barns and horse stables the electric bulb attached to wires in gaspipe housings not only will give the safest light for winter mornings and evenings, but already the vacuum cleaner has made its appearance, adapted to the easiest and most thorough currying and cleaning of the coats of cows and horses.

Instead of the long and laborious process of ice cutting from ponds, the electric current will operate the refrigerating room's ammonia fluids, with automatic stoppage of the motor when the required degree of cold is reached. The power may be directed to the farm workshops, where lathes and grindstones and emery wheels may be run for the farm's "jack-of-all-trades," saving not only the charges of the village blacksmith in hundreds of troubles, but saving the time of driving to and from the town.

In some of the north [illegible] growing sections the electric [illegible] signal is set for arousing [illegible] farm population any time in the night when the "danger" temperature is reached out of doors. This means at the present time that every available worker turns out and kindles fires in the smudge pots that are set in the orchards, prepared for the torches that shall wipe out the dangers of frost. But as electricity is light, power, and heat, all in one, may not the present smudge pots become electrical heaters, automatically turned on?

To-day there is not a practical electrical engineer who does not look upon the present state of electrical service as in its infancy. We have the electrical city. How long before the electrical farm?

GROWING TOBACCO

Twenty Acres Set Out in Plant at Kelowna this Year

Louis Holman of Kelowna, has planted 20 [illegible] in tobacco this year, [illegible] would have been [illegible] cultivation had Mr. Holman [illegible] to secure experienced help.

In discussing the future of the tobacco industry in the Okanagan Mr. Holman observed that for the success of the industry it was essential that one or more experienced men should take up tobacco-growing in each of the different districts of the interior where it might profitably be gone in for. These would be, as it were, guide-posts for other ranchers who went in for the project, and with this assistance there should be no failures in crops even at the commencement, with the exception of those caused very occasionally in this province by exceptionally cold winters. It took about three years, Mr. Holman stated, for a man starting in "green" to properly master planting, irrigating and harvesting without any aid from experienced planters. As far as ultimate success was concerned he was certain of it.

Skeleton vs. Man

A skeleton is about an inch shorter than the living man.

Blackpool Was First

Blackpool was the first seaside resort to adopt electric railways.

With subway contracts in hand amounting to $24,000,000, the Bradley Contracting Company of New York, last week placed a new order with Fiss Doerr & Carroll for five hundred fancy draughters and approved plans for a new stable to accommodate six hundred horses in Long Island City. After experimenting since last July with mechanical substitutes, William Bradley is convinced that for the contracting business, at least, horses are more reliable and economical than machines, and henceforth he will stick to the horses. The company's entire system is to be changed to three-horse teams, this unusual style of equipment having been found to work better than any other in moving earth, rock and cement. With dump wagon, harness, blankets and everything complete one of these three-horse turnouts costs about $2,000. This is a tidy sum to invest in a work team, but Mr. Bradley says his long experience with all kinds of equipment has demonstrated that in the end it pays better than two horses or any other rig. One of these teams will take four cubic yards of earth or its equivalent, weighing six tons or more, at a load. Ninety-eight per cent of the equivalent is in serviceable condition at all times, and if a horse or a driver is disabled it is always easy to replace him in a few minutes without putting the whole team out of business.

Proven Oil Lands
Consisting of 210 Acres, King's County, Coalinga, California, U.S.A.

FORTUNES IN OIL. To say that a flowing oil well is a deluge of dollars is not in any sense overstating the case, as can be verified absolutely by reference to many of the gushers that have come in recently in California. The most spectacular of these has, of course, been the Lakeview Gusher, which began flowing on March 15, 1910, and soon acquired such force that it got beyond control, tore out the casing, toppled over the derrick and taxed the entire resources of the Union Oil Company to construct tanks and reservoirs to contain the oil. This was accomplished, however, after the greatest oil fight in history, and it is estimated that over 75 per cent. of the entire flow was saved. This gusher has recently stopped flowing, the estimated total production being around 15,000,000 barrels. Needless to say, every person who held stock in the company to any extent made a fortune.

As a field for the safe and profitable employment of capital there is absolutely nothing else in the country that equals California Oil. The records of the United States Government show that oil operations may be conducted with the utmost assurance of success, while the dividends that are being paid month by month and the stocks that have climbed to ten, twenty, fifty and even a hundred times their original prices, eloquently tell their own story of the profits. To those who would employ their money where it will combine safety and profits to the greatest possible degree, the California oil industry offers unrivaled opportunities. The industry is moving forward on the flood tide of prosperity and success, and a thorough and searching investigation will convince even the most conservative and skeptical of its tremendous money-making prospects and its practically unlimited future.

PROFITS IN OIL LANDS: The profits that have been made from the increased value of oil lands run to tremendous figures. United States government records show that on Jan. 1, 1909, 463 oil companies in the principal fields held 396,808 acres of oil land. Before the discovery of oil this land could have been bought for a very few dollars per acre. Since that time a great deal of it has been sold at prices ranging from $500 to $10,000 per acre, though much of it is valued at over $20,000 per acre. If the average advance in value had been $1000 per acre, this land would show a profit for the stockholders of these companies of about $400,000,000. The industry is now earning about 10 per cent. per annum on that valuation.

WHAT INVESTMENTS IN CALIFORNIA OIL COMPANIES HAVE MADE:

	Has since had a value of
$100 invested in Sauer Dough Oil Co.	$2,800
$100 invested in New York Oil Co.	3,900
$100 invested in Monte Cristo	4,000
$100 invested in Peerless Co.	4,300
$100 invested in Kern Oil Co.	4,500
$100 invested in San Joaquin Co.	5,700
$100 invested in S. F. and McK. Co.	6,250
$100 invested in Caribou Oil Co.	6,100
$100 invested in Kern River Co.	8,000
$100 invested in Pinal Oil Co.	10,800
$100 invested in Lucile Oil Co.	16,000
$100 invested in Home Oil Co.	40,000

The above is in addition to the dividends, which, in most cases, have been several times the original investment.

You can see from the various lines of proof that we have given you just how THE DOMINION OIL COMPANY property proves itself to be the equal of any in California's famous field. It is impossible to put everything on paper. We cannot keep you informed of the actual happenings from day to day, so you should write to us for additional proof, in case you are not satisfied now. We want to tell you, however, that to delay is to run the risk of the rejection of your application, for, as you have read elsewhere, we do not intend to sell a share of this stock at any such price as the present one when the earning power of the DOMINION OIL COMPANY is established and their well producing. Now is the accepted time. Not a week from now or to-morrow. You should make up your mind how much you can afford and invest that amount at once.

There are now being offered for public subscription 100,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at 50c per share, which will leave 400,000 shares still in the treasury. It will be the aim of the directors to maintain and keep as large a treasury balance as possible in both money and stock available to meet at all times any and all contingencies that may arise, and thus effectually safeguarding the interests of all shareholders.

If you would join one of the most [illegible] California Oil Companies, let us have your subscription to-day for a block of this valuable stock. The stock of the Dominion Oil Company for development purposes is what we offer and what we sell you. Experts have pronounced the property as in proven territory. It has competent management, small capitalization, large acreage, no debts, fine equipment, unlimited market for the oil, and all in all, is a business opportunity that rarely comes to the individual investor more than once in a lifetime.

The right is reserved to return all subscriptions received in excess of the allotment to be sold, or to increase the price without notice whenever developments warrant it. With these facts and statements before you we solicit your consideration and co-operation by inviting you to join us in helping to develop a great property that will be an honor and credit to corporate enterprise. Our faith is strong that this is a proposition worthy of thought and investment and that it can soon be made a property of tremendous earning power.

The stock is now selling very rapidly, and as this is an investment of an exceptionally meritorious nature, you cannot afford not to investigate. Write Us at Once for Prospectus and full particulars of the DOMINION OIL COMPANY, which will be mailed to you without any obligation or expense on your part.

SATISFIED POLICY-HOLDER

(Copy)

Toronto, March 1st, 1912.

W. H. HILL, ESQ.,
Manager,
Sun Life Assurance Co.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I wish to thank the Sun Life Assurance Company, through you, for the prompt and very satisfactory settlement of my 15 year Endowment Policy, No. 61345, which matured and was paid me to-day.

I have also a 15 year Endowment maturing to-day in another leading Company.

The contrast, in the results, in favor of your Company is so marked that I want you to know it, but I am at a loss to know how such a difference could honestly occur. When I tell you that the profits in your Company are three and one-third times the profits in the other Company referred to, and this too notwithstanding I paid the other Company $1.15 per year more per $1000 than I paid you, you will realize my inability to comprehend the cause.

This is surely a tribute to the management of the Sun Life, and I am so well pleased I have applied for further insurance with you.

Incidentally, I would like to say a word for your loan privilege. As you are aware, I borrowed some money on my policy, a little over a year ago, which enabled me to obtain a substantial interest in a town site in the Northwest, and you will be pleased to learn that it has already yielded substantial gain and gives promise to pay hundreds per cent., so that it is impossible to fully realize the value of that Policy to me.

I thought as an old Peterborough boy you would be pleased to know I am delighted with the result.

Yours truly,
(Signed) ROBERT E. DOLAN.

CALGARY

The City Of Opportunity

Capitol Hill

One of Calgary's close-in residential sub-divisions. City water is now in the adjoining divisions and sewer system is to be installed this spring. We expect these improvements in Capitol Hill this summer. Street car service is at present within two or three blocks of Capitol Hill. The City of Calgary has purchased Block 68, Capitol Hill, on which to build a large public school. A number of nice homes have already been built in Capitol Hill, and many more are in course of construction.

Lots in this sub-division are selling in pairs at $250 to $350 per lot. We offer you one block of forty lots, close to Block 68 at $210 per lot, on terms of Third Cash and Balance four, eight and twelve months, with interest at 8 per cent. on deferred payments. This block will readily sell for $300 per lot, or more, within the next six months. The block is high and level, and every lot is perfect. This is a gilt-edged investment. If you cannot handle it alone have some friend join you.

An older citizen remarked to The Times yesterday: "I remember as a boy, when swimming with other lads at Burnham's Point, when a fresh young man who had a girl in a canoe, left her round the point and tried to wallop me and my friends for bathing in public. Now, it seems the Toronto theatre censors have decided that the ballet dances, such as have been attended, and enjoyed by church, law, medicine, trade, politics, and the great big public in general, must be required to wear trousers, or, as Toronto Saturday Night says, "Panties." Now morality and decency are one thing, but a prudery that must inevitably lead to a much more "raw" criticism by the callow youth and the bald-head rows, does not lead to elevation of morality or the uplifting of thought.

Whilst not advocating American ideas as better than those of the Motherland country, there is no denying the fact that the Suffragettes of our cousins to the south, are better conducted and display both better management and judgment than do the Pankhurst crowd of educated female hoodlums in England who deliberately smash windows, disturb ministers of the Crown during a crisis in England, and seemingly look for glory by imprisonment. Five hundred of New York's Suffragettes recently went to the Capitol at Albany. They smashed no windows, nor was one arrested. Not one of them had a title. Those women simply presented their petition to the N. Y. Senate and assembly and returned to their respective homes. This is one lesson, at least, that we, or rather the Suffragettes might take from the Yankees.

It is now said that the present odorous pig and cattle pens, on the market square, as well as the market clerk's office are to be moved to the vacant lot east of their present location. Such a move would cause no tears to be shed by anyone, even including the hogs.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE STORY

The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian says:—A new and characteristic story of Florence Nightingale reaches me. She was a great admirer of Harriet Martineau, but Miss Martineau's inclination towards Atheism was a cause of regret and grief to her. When the news came of the authoress's death in unbelief, and friends, shocked and stern, were making remarks about her sad end and her lost soul, Florence Nightingale smiled as she said, "How glorious must have been her surprise when she woke in Paradise to find she had been mistaken."

SPORT ON THE UPGRADE

Englishmen Are Distinguishing Themselves on Many Fields

The Daily Mail says editorially: "The warmest congratulations of all lovers of cricket will go out to the M.C.C. team for their notable victory over the Australians by an innings and 225 runs in the fourth test match at Melbourne. As the second and third matches had fallen to England by 8 wickets and 7 wickets respectively, the mother-country has won the rubber and so recovered possession of the mythical "Ashes" lost to the Australians in 1909. The achievement of the Englishmen is a remarkable one in every way since Mr. Warner, the captain, fell ill before the first test match and has been unable to take part in any of them. The trying duties of captaincy thus devolved on Mr. Douglas, the Essex amateur, who had had no previous experience of test-match cricket or of the game in Australia. Mr. Douglas is to be congratulated warmly on his success. After Australia had won the first test match by 146 runs, the Egnlishmen never looked back, but defeated their formidable opponents by very large margins. To Hobbs especially is a tribute of admiration due, for in three successive test matches he has topped the much-coveted "century" and done a lion's share in winning the rubber. Rhodes, too, has given of his best, while the performances of Mr. Foster, Marnes and Mr. Douglas in dismissing Australian batsmen, are likely to be long remembered among the notable achievements in international cricket. Such a happy outcome of the tour is all the more welcome as the team that was sent out to Australia was regarded as an experimental one, most of the players being inexperienced in test match cricket.

Nor is it in cricket alone that English sport is on the up-grade. The English Rugby fifteen at Twickenham disposed of Ireland with unexpected ease and won the game with five tries to nothing. In the opinion of the best judges, such a pack of forwards as England possesses has rarely been seen before. Another feat accomplished was at Dublin, where the English association eleven quite overran the Irish team and scored 6 goals to 1. Thus, in the year 1912, England stands to carry off the rugby championship, they are gringing the "Ashes" back from Australia, and they promise to start first favorite in the great triangular cricket turnament.

MOTORED ON ICE

Kulick Travelled at Rate of 109 Miles An Hour.

Frank Kulick traveled over the frozen surface of Lake St. Clair recently at a rate of 109 miles an hour, covering one mile in 33 2-5 seconds. The mark set a new record for an automobile speed contest on ice, the former mark being held by Henry Ford, who, nine years ago, drove a mile at 39 4-5 seconds over practically the same course. Kulick twice broke the former record. The first time he went over the course he carried his mechanician with him and his time was 34 4-5 seconds. On his second attempt he went the distance alone and succeeded in clipping his first mark by almost two seconds. The conditions for Kulick's try for the record were not bad, but they could have been better. The lake was covered with almost a foot of snow and this had to be scraped off for a distance of almost two miles in order to allow for a flying start and to give room at the finish for stopping. The ice, being uncovered, was rough, and although the little machine was let out to the limit by Kulick the speed was somewhat retarded by the bumps in the ice. Kulick was fairly flying when he had his machine opened up at top speed. When the machine passed the spectators it was hardly visible. At times the slightest raise in the ice would send the machine in to the air and it sped on with all four wheels in the air.

AUSTRALASIAN WONDER

A letter from Australia says that athletes from wherever they hail will have tough nuts to crack at the Olympic games in members of the team from the land of the cornstalks. One of the brightest particular stars will be G. N. Hill, a youth from Auckland, N. Z., who at the recently held tenth biennial Australasian amateur championship games paralyzed the onlookers with his performance in the distance against a gale of wind for the last [illegible] and [illegible] mile in 15 min. [illegible] on a heavy track. On Wednesday he won a two-mile handicap from scratch, making a horrible gap in the field. The clocks recorded 9 min. [illegible], which time upsets A. A. Shrubb's record of 9 min. [illegible] sec. established in N. S. W. in 1905, and the N. Z. record of 9 min. 42 1-5 sec., by W. F. Simpson. Shrubb's world record, however, is 9 min. 9 [illegible] sec., done at Glasgow, June 11, 1904.

LITTLE PARISENNE

Helene Avril draws a charming picture of a day in the life of the little Parisienne. It is a cold morning in February, dull and chilly. Out of doors passers-by hurry along, chapped and miserable looking. Simonne wakens early in her warm little bed, and as soon as she opens her eyes she smiles at the thought of the happiness that is in store for her. This is the day on which she has been invited to a children's party at the home of her little friend Jeanne, and they are going to have such fun. The night before the dressmaker sent her the dress specially made for the party. It is a "robe fourreau," in dark green velvet, which makes her look ever so tall. In a few hours everybody will be admiring her at Jeanne's house; her little friends first, but perhaps also their big brothers. In Simonne's heart is already awakened the desire to please "ces messieurs," the oldest of whom is not yet sixteen years of age.

While her little brain is still excited at the thought of what the day is destined to bring her, Simonne's mother enters to give her the usual good-morning kiss. She bends over the bed, puts her arm under the frail body, which clings to her with affection, and mother and daughter pass a delightful moment.

But eight o'clock strikes. "Vite, Monette, levons nous." You will amuse yourself this afternoon, but this morning we must work hard. The French teacher will be hear shortly. Are you quite ready with your lessons? Simonne hesitates to reply. Trying on her new dress last night kept her behind with her lessons, and she has not had time to go over her grammar again. She hurries, however, and dressing does not take her long this morning. Five minutes to swallow her chocolate—then there is a ring at the bell. It is mademoiselle. Already? And Simonne has not even looked at the second page, which she does not know at all. She runs to meet her teacher, throws her arms around her neck, and kisses her. "Oh, ma petite mademoiselle," she exclaims. "If you know how delighted I am. This afternoon I am invited chez Jeanne. Mamma has had a new dress made for me, and we are going to have lots of fun."

Mademoiselle is used to these effusions. With both hands she takes the girl's head between hers and gives her a long maternal kiss on the forehead. Her pupils are almost as dear to her as if they were her own children. Simonne knows it well, the sly little minx. Now she feels is the moment to admit that she does not know her lessons very well. Mademoiselle does not scold her, but improves the occasion to give her some wise council.

Mademoiselle does not like vain and coquettish little girls, and the beautiful dresses leave her absolutely indifferent, but she draws a pleasant portrait of simple good-hearted children, and makes it so attractive that little Simonne feels a wee bit ashamed of the sentiments that agitated her shortly before.

Two o'clock. [illegible] It is proposed at the [illegible] that [illegible] her to Jeanne's house, [illegible] and the other children have [illegible] and are gathered in the hall. [illegible] pictures [illegible] little [illegible] sister [illegible] years [illegible] twelve. [illegible] they are.

"Oh," [illegible] Jeanne, "the children [illegible] knows. [illegible] They [illegible] amusing [illegible] they will [illegible] no one [illegible] the girl [illegible] her mother [illegible] made it; it [illegible] elegant, [illegible] boy's [illegible] ready-made."

Simonne [illegible] thinking for a while. [illegible] little ones whom she knew [illegible] interested her. [illegible] mademoiselle had told her in the morning, and [illegible] that they resembled in an [illegible] ing manner the portrait of the ones whose greatest charm was simplicity. Her heart was stirred. [illegible] was true that they were not very fashionably dressed, but a generous movement sent her to them. Might she sit by them and look at the pictures? In a few moments the three were chattering away as if they had known each other for years. Their laughter soon brought the other children around them. They joined the games they organized and during the whole afternoon they amused themselves with a heartiness that made Simonne very pleased. She got all about her beautiful dress. Besides, other girls were as well dressed as she, so it was not really worth while to make any fuss about her dress, even if it was a "robe fourreau." What a delightful afternoon she had had making two other children happy, who, but for her, would have been left out in the cold. She would be [illegible] to tell mademoiselle how she had [illegible] her lesson in practice.

MUST BE CLEVER

"She will be a clever woman that I marry" declared a confirmed bachelor, who was being chafted on the subject.

"I don't," rejoined the bachelor. "But if ever I marry, it'll be a clever woman who does it."

Flood From a Water Pipe.

A Lindsay man recently went on a visit. He forgot to turn off the intake water pipe. When the Water Commissioner went to the house, a few days ago, he saw the piano, the sofa, the wash tubs, the frying pan and the baby's cradle all floating merrily round the first floor. The frying pan by the way was in the wash tub.

LUNACY STATISTICS

Interesting Figures of the British Commissioners—Unemployment as a Cause of Insanity

Some figures of interest to life insurance are contained in the sixty-fifth report of the British Commissioners on Lunacy. Their returns show that alcohol is responsible for about 16 per cent. of the cases reported, while 20 per cent. were traced to unemployment. One of the commissioners thinks that lunacy will be largely lessened directly some method is found of increasing the general prosperity of Great Britain.

It is pointed out in the commissioners' report that in 9.6 per cent. of the cases has mental stress alone been the assignable cause of attack, though it is also explained that prolonged mental strain has been associated with nearly every other assignable factor in the category of causes. In confirmation of the assertion that insanity is an hereditary disease, the report states that:—

"Our statistics show—and since their introduction, upwards of fifty years ago, have shown—that there is a family history of insanity in persons admitted to asylum care amounting, on an average, in the case of males, to 19 per cent., and of females to 23 per cent., of the total yearly admissions. This is probably an under-estimate, for there is always a considerable residuum concerning whom it is impossible to obtain positive information on this point."

But the report states that to ignore the factor of inheritance because three times the number of insane apparently come of sane stock would be unwarrantable. It is gratifying to note, further, that:—

At marriagiable ages—twenty-five and upwards the proportion of the unmarried of both sexes is considerably higher amongst the insane than it is in the general population, and to a slighter extent also in the widowed. Considerabl ymore single than married or widowed persons were admitted to care.

It also appears from the report that the proportions of the sexes certified yearly as insane are exactly the same, so far as relation to the number of persons in the country is concerned. There are, it is well known, more females than males in the country, and the estimated proportion per 1,000 in the general population for the middle of 1910 are males, 482.8; females, 517.2.

The proportions amongst the insane annually admitted to care are practically identical—males, 484.0; females, 516.0. Concerning readmissions to care, it is stated that they form from 17 to 18 per cent. of the total admissions, and may be considered to consist mainly of those who, in previous years, have been discharged as "relieved" or "not improved," and also of patients who, having left an asylum "recovered," are admitted with a recurrent attack. So far as asylum statistics go, the proportion of such occurrences is about one-fourth of those originally discharged as "recovered."

THE USEFUL CEDAR

Used by Indians for Everything From Canoe to Food.

The Indians made much use of Western red cedar before white men became acquainted with the region in which it grew. From it they obtained food, clothing, shelter, means of transportation and apparatus for fishing and the chase. From the tree trunks the savages made canoes of all sizes, from the small trough that carried two men to the enormous dugouts that transported fifty or more upon long expeditions in war and peace. Before the Indians obtained metal tools from white traders they hollowed their canoes with fire and with their primitive stone and bone implements. Some of their dugouts are of enormous size, hewed from single trunks, and with lines so perfect that civilized men can scarcely suggest improvement. The making of a canoe of moderate size, by the crude means at the Indians' command in the early days, required several months of hard labor with flint adzes that chipped away pieces of wood not much larger than grains of sawdust.

The Indians of the region where western red cedar abounded generally chose it for such carpentry as they were capable of doing. Their choice was due to the softness of the wood, which meant a great deal to beams and doors with no better tools than fire, flint, bone and shell. They made fully as much use of the bark as of the wood. With it they roofed, ceiled, floored, and papered their huts. They wove long strips of bark—sometimes thirty feet in length—into mats, which they used for beds, tables, blankets, and on ceremonial occasions. They made clothing of the same material. They twisted the bark into ropes for dog harness, ladders, fishlines and snares for wild animals and nets for catching fish. The list of uses for the bark did not end there, for they were able to make food of it. They beat the bark to a pulp, baked in cakes, and after completely saturating it with salmon oil they pronounced it a palatable and nutritious article of diet. It is believed, however, that the food value of the cakes was derived more from the fish oil than from the bark. —Agricultural Report.

STOPPING A RUN.

Many years ago, in consequence of a commercial panic, there was a severe run on a bank in South Wales and the small farmers jostled each other in crowds to draw their money. Things were rapidly going from bad to worse, when the bank manager, in a fit of desperation, suddenly bethought him of an expedient. By his direction a clerk, having heated some sovereigns in a frying pan, paid them over the counter to an anxious applicant.

"Why, they're quite hot?" said the latter, as he took them up.

"Of course," was the reply; "what else could you expect? They are only just out of the bank's own mint. We are coining them by hundreds as fast as we can."

"Coining them!" thought the simple agriculturist; "then there is no fear of the money running short." With this their confidence revived, the panic abated, and the bank was enabled to weather the storm.

GALT TRIES TO INJURE CANADA.

Peterborough is headquarters of the Canadian General Electric Co. whose lamps, and other goods, are equal, if not superior to those made anywhere else in the world. The town of Galt has contracted with the hydro-electric. Galt's plumbers and sellers of electrical [illegible] injunction against the town to stop it from selling to the people through the hydro-electric department, electric lamps. The plumbers claim that the lamps being sold by the town are a German make and can be bought cheaper than the Canadian lamps. They also claim that the German lamps are not as good as the Canadian make and do not last as long. The plumbers all sell Canadian lamps. By the town going into retailing electric lamps the plumbers who are paying taxes and living there claim that part of their livelihood is being taken away from them.

It is to be hoped that the plumbers of Galt will win out. Why should a municipality enter into competition with its merchants? Again, why should a Canadian town try to advance the sale of cheap made German goods, when Peterborough, a Canadian city, can, and does, produce electric lamps equal, if not superior to any made in the world. Canada, to work towards its great future destiny, must depend on her own manufactured goods for her own consumption. No municipality in Canada should try to help Emperor William's subjects along, simply because, by making a few cents it would tend to stifle Canadian industry.

Editorial Notes

That the Canadian part of and influence over wireless telegraphy is demonstrated by the fact that Signor Marconi will take personal charge of the wireless station at Glace Bay, N. S., for some time. We have a wireless telegraph system in Peterborough, but its local name is gossip.

The registrar of Queen's University has been informed by Kingston agents of the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railways that the special students' rates will be withdrawn on May 1st. This means that the students from the Maritime Provinces and the west will have to pay full single fare both on coming to college and returning home after the date specified.

A man named Benjamin Hobson was charged in the Lindsay police court Wednesday with having escaped from a police officer there in 1910. The man, it is alleged, after escaping from Constable Thornbury, spent the winter in the lumber shanties. Possibly the poor fellow under arrest caught sight of the Scugog River and became desperate. He was remanded for sentence, and, it is possible that justice may be tempered with mercy.

Peterborough is not the only spot in our broad Dominion, where the axe has come in juxta-position with the vertebrae column of politicians. The press of Belleville notes that "The axe is busy at Picton." This refers to dismissal of the post office janitor there. We do not know the gentleman. Still he may be a husky man who could make more money by cultivating his muscle, and using no more intelligence than the law demands. On the other hand, if one plays with political fire one is apt to get his official fingers burnt.

ABOUT BOXING IN FRANCE

Frenchmen Can Now Hold Their Own With Most Boxers

Eugene Corri, the famous English boxing referee, has been giving his opinion on the rise of boxing in France. A few years ago, he says, the idea of French boxing was regarded with amusement. Now it has to be taken as a serious element. It was, Mr. Corri believed, the fine showing that Henri Piet made against Britain's [illegible] at [illegible] ago, that first aroused enthusiasm in the heart of the young Gaul. This was increased when George Carpentier made his advent, with the result that Frenchmen have studied the art so thoroughly and become so adept that they can now more than hold their own with English and American boxers. The progress of Carpentier has been simply phenomenal. His long run of brilliant successes has done more for the sport in France than that of even Piet, and having succeeded in defeating Britain's middleweight champion, Jim Sullivan, at Monte Carlo, boxing has given a fillip that will be the means, no doubt, of bringing to light additional talent. Who a few years ago would have thought a Frenchman capable of beating such men as Sid Burns, Young Joseph, Harry Lewis, and least of all Jim Sullivan, and who would have ventured the suggestion that Charles Ledoux would prove equal to the task of defeating Joe Bowker? He did, nevertheless, and did it handsomely, and his victory, Mr. Corri thinks, is the forerunner of many more successes of French boxers over English unless the latter look to their laurels.

majority of the Council could devise.

4. Some of the decrees passed at that Council related to marriage which was declared to be a sacrament and over which the Church was declared to have absolute authority, and further, that (ne temere) lest some should marry unwisely, no marriage should be valid unless performed by a Catholic priest.

5. The Roman Catholic priests whenever there is any doubt as to either of the contracting parties being an orthodox Catholic, are instructed by the heirarchy and do make it a condition of performing the ceremony that the children of the marriage shall be educated in the Catholic faith.

These are facts that anyone can verify for himself by reference to the proper authorities.

I submit that the conclusion is irresistible that the decree was passed originally for the sole purpose of giving the Roman Church an effective weapon in its war against Protestantism. Many persons, especially in a country where the Catholic religion still predominates, who might perhaps feel inclined to listen to the call of liberty of conscience and break away from the Church, when the time for getting married arrives, rather than brave the odium of a possible imputation of living in adultery, swallow their convictions as best they may and hie themselves to the nearest priest, who is not so much interested in tying the marriage knot securely as he is in tying both parties and the children yet to be born securely to the cause of his Church. That this club is peculiarly effective for keeping the women in line may readily be understood.

While it is perhaps natural for the Catholic Church to use every means in its power to bolster up a dying faith, it is not a pleasant spectacle to see their divines put on a sanctimonious air and prate about the sacramental nature of marriage when they themselves are degrading that relationship by using it as a weapon for their own selfish ends regardless of how many innocent people may suffer.

Yours truly,
W. H. Perry.

WHY THEY LAUGHED.

A lady, famed for her skill in cooking, was entertaining a number of friends at tea. Everything on the table was much admired, but the excellence of the sponge cake was especially the subject of remark.

"Oh!" exclaimed one of the guests, "it is so beautifully soft and light. Do tell me where you got the recipe?"

"I am very glad," replied the hostess, "that you find it so soft and light. I made it out of my own head."

SEVERE

A good story is going the rounds at a certain university regarding one of the sarcastic professors, who was recently conducting an oral examination in a very scientific way.

There was one student, handsome, easy, and self possessed, who appeared to be utterly ignorant of the simplest phases of the subject.

Professor W. put question after question to him, without receiving one intelligent reply. Finally, the student said, naively:—

"I'm very unfortunate, Professor, you never ask me anything I know."

The professor said nothing, but gravely tore off a tiny piece of paper from a convenient pad.

"Here, Mr. B.," he said, handing it to the student, "write all you know. Take plenty of time—there's no hurry."

DEATH OF HARRY GORDON

One of the Best Known of Winnipeg Sporting Men

Sportsmen were shocked to hear that Harry Gordon, one of Winnipeg's most noted sportmen, had died suddenly of typhoid fever. The deceased was but 28 years of age, and was at the time of his death travelling traffic agent for the C.P.R.. He was born in Winnipeg, and for years was prominent in hockey circles. He first won renown as a member of the School's lacrosse team in the Inter-collegiate league, and later was captain of the Shramrocks in the city league. He also played with Billy Kean, and other noted local hockeyists. Mr. Gordon figured on the Rowing club seniors a few season's ago, and then broke into profesional circles by playing a prominent part in the management of the Shamrock club, which team won the championship of the last professional league in Winnipeg, a few years ago. SPEAKS OUT HIS FIRM BELIEF

New Liskeard Man Tells the Public What He Thinks of the Remedy That Never Fails to Cure Diseased Kidneys.

DRUG STORES ON SHIPS

As a result of representations made by the General Shipowners' Society, London, the Board of Trade is now reconsidering the scale of drugs prescribed for use on board ships. It has been found that many of the drugs which vessels are compelled to carry are never used, while others which should form part of the medical equipment of every ship, are omitted. With a view to assisting the Board of Trade to arrive at a decision on the subject medical officers of the leading steamship lines have formulated a modern list of supplies which there is reason to believe will be adopted. In drawing this up regard has been had to faster passages now made by steamers as compared with the days of sailing ships when the existing scale was prescribed.

CHICAGO MERCHANT MAKES STATEMENT.

After Spending Thousands of Dollars and Consulting the Most Eminent Physicians, He Was Desperate.

CHICAGO, ILLS.—Mr. J. G. Becker, of 184 Van Buren St., a well-known wholesale dry goods dealer, states as follows:

"I have had catarrh for more than thirty years. Have tried everything on earth and spent thousands of dollars for other medicines and with physicians, without getting any lasting relief, and can say to you that I have found Peruna the only remedy that has cured me permanently.

"Peruna has also cured my wife of catarrh. She always keeps it in the house for an attack of cold, which it invariably cures in a very short time."

Things have come to such a pass, that the average man in Peterborough to cook his breakfast and keep the house habitable, must look for fuel. Coal is almost a forbidden luxury.

Ungava Exploration Company

Off For The New Gold Fields

The purpose of this organization is to explore the practically unknown mineral resources of Ungava. The Company is in possession of information as to the location of rich placer diggings in that country, and is equipping an expedition to reach the gold fields about the middle of June. The Company is purchasing a schooner of about one hundred tons. The vessel will be outfitted with all necessary machinery for placer mining, and provisioned for one year. The complement of men will be ten in number, comprising experienced placer miners, who have had long association with placer operations in Alaska. The leader of the party is a man of wide knowledge of this kind of mining, having spent seven years in the Yukon and Nome. Each man of the expedition will have an equal interest in the results of the findings. No wages will be paid and they will sign up for one year, agreeing to turn all discoveries into the Company. Hence, it will be seen the confidence these men have in the outcome of their voyage into this rich, but unexplored country of Ungava. One of the parties is a man who was employed by one of the big trading companies of the North for nine years, during which time he made some startling placer discoveries, and it is to these fields the expedition will go first.

To those who are at all familiar with the vast wealth that has been, and is being, taken from the Alaska gold fields, the possibilities of this Company will make a strong appeal.

Placer diggings, unlike any other kind of mining, means almost immediate return, and it is not at all unlikely that this Company will produce big returns before the end of the present year. The man who will pilot the expedition, and who spent nine years in Ungava and Labrador, positively states that he got pannings as high as 80 cents to the pan, besides discovering big gold-bearing quartz ledges and immense deposits of iron ore. Thus it will be seen that the possibilities of the Company are practically unlimited.

The Company is working under a Dominion charter, which is very broad and comprehensive in its scope. It does not limit the activities of the Company to mining, but permits its embarking in almost all branches of commercial industry that might grow out of its explorations in Ungava and Labrador.

This may, indeed, be the nucleus of a great and wealthy concern, whose assets in a few years may represent sums which to mention at this present writing would sound like madness. However, this vast North Country is now coming into its own, and undoubtedly large fortunes will be the reward of those intrepid pioneers who commercialize its teeming natural resources: Gold, silver, copper, iron, coal—all the cardinal elements of commerce.

SUMMARY

FIRST. It has been known for years that Ungava contains great areas of rich mineral deposits.

SECOND. We believe we will be the first expedition to reach the Eldorado, although there are some fourteen private expeditions going in this spring.

THIRD. Our men are experienced prospectors and placer miners, and their only hope of remuneration is their interest in what they find.

FOURTH. There is no guesswork about going directly to the right place, as one of the parties spent nine years in the country and knows just where to go.

BEFORE TREATMENT

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

Ideal Protection Against Inroads of Catarrh

BY BREATHING THE RICH, BALSAMIC VAPOR OF CATARRHOZONE YOU PREVENT AND CURE ALL HEAD, NOSE AND THROAT DISEASE.

Remember this: You don't take drugs when using Catarrhozone; you simply inhale a healing vapor that cures every type of catarrh, bronchitis, asthma, throat and nose soreness

No medicine brings such prompt relief, exerts such an invigorating influence, or so thoroughly and speedily cures throat troubles, as "Catarrhozone." Doctors, hospitals, sanitariums, all say that for those who suffer from changeable weather, for those who are predisposed to catarrh, lung trouble, deafness, or bronchitis, no treatment is so indispensable as "Catarrhozone."

Victim of Chronic Catarrh Cured.

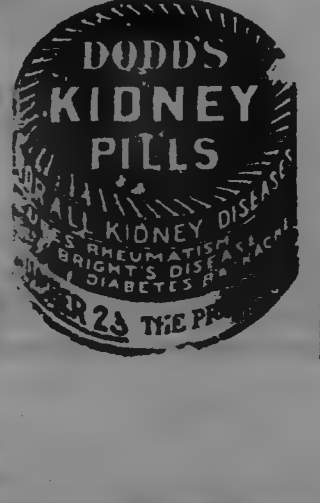
I contracted a severe cold while following my occupation of furniture travelling, and eventually it developed into Catarrh. The desultory mode of life I was following gave me very little chance to attend to the Catarrh condition, and at last I became a victim of Chronic Catarrh. I bought a large package of Catarrhozone, used it as per directions, and have never been bothered since. I will be only too glad to give any information I possess to any person suffering from the disease that was the bane of my life two years.

A. H. SWARTZ, Brockville, Ont.

For certain cure, for relief in an hour, use Catarrhozone, the only direct, breathable medicine. Two months' treatment guaranteed, price $1, smaller size 50c.; at all druggists, or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont., and Buffalo, N. Y., U.S.A.

Death of "Tannie" Gillespie.

The news of the death of Alex. (Tannie) Gillespie, Hamilton, after only a few days' illness, was a shock to hundreds of his friends. Of a robust build, a cheerful disposition, a careful liver, and barely past his fiftieth year, he looked like a man destined for a ripe old age. The late Mr. Gillespie was an active cricketer and curler, and in his younger days a celebrated member of the Hamilton Tigers' Rugby Football Club, working on the forward line according to the rules then in vogue. He played first class cricket for the Toronto Club, and for Hamilton before he moved here, with the Canada Life Company, a fine batsman and splendid medium pace bowler. He was a member of the Toronto Curling Club.



WOMEN IN PARLIAMENT

A Glance at the Reign of the Early Edwards

In the very early times the affairs of the nation were not wholly in the hands of the sterner sex, for in the reigns of Henry III. and Edward I four abbesses at least were summoned to Parliament—namely, those of Shaftesbury, Barking, Winchester and Milton. To one of the Parliaments of Edward III. there were summoned by writ ten ladies of noble birth, seven of them countesses. Gurdon, in his "Antiquities of Parliament," goes back still further than this, for he says that "ladies of birth and quality sat in council with the Saxon Witas." A certain Abbess Hilda, according to the historian Bede, presided at an ecclesiastical synod. In Wighfred's great council at Becconfeld, A.D. 694, the abbesses sat and deliberated, and five of them signed decrees of that council along with the King, Bishops and nobles. King Edward's charter to the Abbey of Crowland, A.D. 961, was with the consent not only of the nobles but also of the abbesses, their names appearing among those who signed it.

A Hangman Resigns.

News come from Sydney that the hangman has resigned his position It seems that seven death sentences have been commuted recently by the Labour Government, and as the executioner would have gained $50 in the case of each malefactor, as a special remuneration, he doubtless considers that his emoluments have been trifled with. His fixed wage was $10 a week, whether anybody was to be hanged or not. He may have suffered from monotony, for, in his three years' service, he had not operated in a single instance

THE ASPIRING CHAUFFEUR

Chug, chug! Plonk, plonk! Choo choo!

The motor-car dashed along the road at a tremendous speed, missed a woman by a split hair's-breadth, bumped over her less fortunate dog, and came to an abrupt halt.

"Dear me!" said the chauffeur, alighting.

The woman said more than "Dear me!" In fact, what she didn't say isn't worth printing.

"Can I—er—replace your dog?" suggested the chauffeur, getting in a word edgewise at about 3.45.

For a brief moment the woman regarded his be-goggled features. Then she retorted freezingly:

"You flatter yourself!"

A COMMON COMPLAINT

"What's the matter with you?" asked the Army doctor.

The recruit, who had been on the sick list ever since he had enlisted, shook his head sorrowfully.

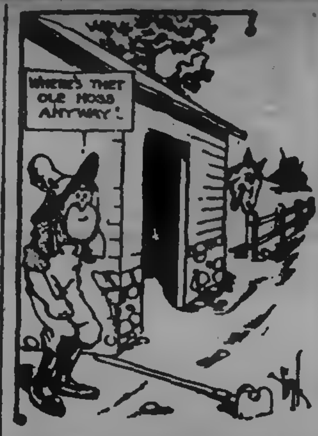
"I dunno," he replied.

"You look well enough," commented the doctor. "How's the appetite?"

"I'd match an elephant at meals," answered the recruit. "It ain't that kind of illness, sir."

"Then I'm hanged if I know what kind it is!" exclaimed the Army medico. "How does it affect you?"

"Well, I eats well, and I drinks well, and I sleeps well," replied Thomas Atkins, rubbing his nose thoughtfully; "but directly I hear the word 'work,' I come all of a tremble!"



WHERE'S THAT OLE HOSS ANYWAY!

HORSE HIDE.

REPENTING AT LEISURE.

Agnes was a little tot of five, with curly, flaxen hair, china-like complexion—and a will of her own.

She had been ill-advised, and mamma had dismissed her to her bedroom, to remain in durance vile till she should express due contrition for her behavior.

Agnes cheerfully obeyed the parental order, and showed no spirit of repentance at the end of the first quarter of an hour.

When thiry minutes had elapsed, mamma called from an adjoining room:

"Agnes, dearie, aren't you sorry?"

There was no reply from the darkness beyond.

Ten minutes later the question was repeated. Back came the reply, in the patient dignity and childish treble of five summers:

"Mamma, please don't ask me any more. I'll come and let you know when I'm sorry.'

DOCTORS, BEWARE!

A cool-headed man walked into a dotors surgery and described his ailment.

The doctor said be would give him a tonic, but it would not do it work alone; he must not worry, but anything that bothered him he must cast on one side.

Three months after he sent his bill in for three guineas, and asked for an early remittance. This was the reply:

"Dear doctor, having received your bill, I find that it worries me greatly, so have cast it on one side."

IT ALL HAPPENED.

"What candidate are you going to vote for"

"Well, I've had both of them hand me a cigar but I haven't smoked them yet."

Eat and Get Thin.

This is turning an old phrase face about, but modern methods of reducing fat have made this revision possible.

If you are overfat and also averse to physical exertion and likewise fond of the table and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, do this: Go to your druggist (or write the Marmola Co., 1192 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.) and give him (or send them) 75 cents. For this modest amount of money the druggist will put you in the way of satisfying your ambition for a nice, trim, slim figure. He will hand you a large case of Marmola Prescription Tablets (compounded in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription), one of which you must take after each meal and at bedtime until you begin to lose your fat at the rate of 12 to 16 ounces a day. That is all. Just go on eating what you like, leave exercising to the athletes, but take your little tablet faithfully and without a doubt that flabby flesh will quickly take unto itself wings, leaving behind it your natural self, neatly clothed in firm flesh and trim muscles.

SKIPPED.

She—Did you ever see a vanishing lady?

Grass Widower—Yes, I married one.

MAKING THEM LEVEL.

Two hot-headed Hibernians met one day to fight a duel with pistols. One of them was very fat, and the other was very thin. They had taken up their positions, and were just about to begin when the fat man objected.

"Shure," said he, "I'm twice as fat as that gossoon. I should stand further away from him than he does from me, for I'm easier to hit, I'm thinkin.'"

"Don't worry about that," said his second, and, taking a piece of chalk, he reduced the fat man's figure to the size of his antagonist.

"Now, then," said he, "run away, ye spalpeens, and don't forget all hits outside that line don't count!"

Three important factors—correct style, splendid quality and a binding guarantee —have brought about the wide popularity of

TOBACCO AND FOREST FIRES.

As destructive forest fires have appalled the people, not only of the United States, but of our great Dominion by their awful results, such conflagrations are of international importance. Still, an editorial in a Nova Scotia newspaper, evidently penned in good faith, is laughable, when one considers that possibly sixty per cent. of men, or youths over 18 years of age, use tobacco. This article says:

Local Singer For England.

Lindsay Post: Miss Lavinia Hallihan, of Peterborough, sails for England on March 23rd, where she will pursue her studies under Madame Novosky in London, under whose tuition so many young singers have lately had phenomenal success.

AUTOMOBILES AS FAT PRODUCERS

The lure of the automobile is irresistible and in consequence, those who always ride find they are becoming fleshy, and so tailors and modistes are in quandary to know how to bring out and accentuate graceful lines in the garments they design for Madame.

Dame Fashion has decreed that the present figure must be slight and graceful, but the devotees of the motor find themselves becoming billowy instead of willowy.

Dr. J. T. M. Finney of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, declares that if the men and women of today devoted more time to golf, tennis, riding and walking and less time to their motors, they would be in better health.

Someone said: "Since I've had a motor I am out in the air a great deal." That no doubt is true, but just sitting or lounging in a soft, comfortable motor is not getting any exercise, except an occasional bump.

Those who can afford a motor can afford a good saddle-horse, and a brisk canter in the morning for an hour is worth a whole day in a motor.

A woman should not take too much violent exercise, as her organism is too delicately constructed to stand such violence, but, on the other hand, she who has a motor should not spend her days flitting about town or in the country with not a thought of exercise of any kind.

A lethargic body will sooner or later make a lethargic brain. Brain and body should work in unison and each [illegible] its share if you are to [illegible]. Jane Dare.

TABOOES HOBBLE SKIRT

Something as to the Prevailing Modes for Woman.

This is what women will wear the coming season as disclosed by the style congress held in Chicago by the Ladies' Tailors and Dressmakers' Association of America:

No hobble skirts.

Dresses must be two and a half yards wide, three-fourths of a yard wider than the hobble.

They must be short, three inches from the ground.

Blue and white are the colors, and the materials whipcords.

Jackets are to be 36 to 38 inches long, and close-fitting.

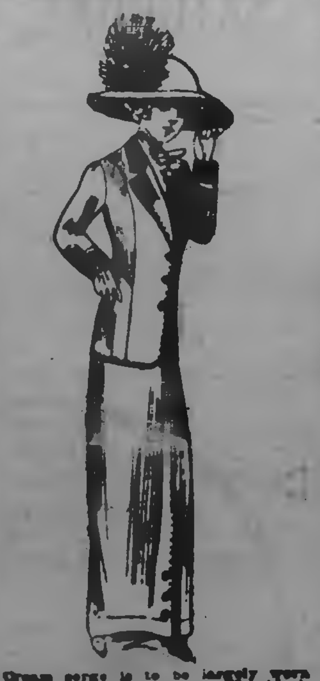
Empire effects must be forgotten.

If any waist line is effected, it must be "at the waist or lower."

Revers and sailor collars will be tabooed, but collars will be different colored from the coat.

No changes are ordered in plain tailored gowns or suits.

CREAM SERGE SUIT



Cream serge is to be largely worn during the coming season. The black satin collar and cuffs add a smart touch.

Contract for Lighting Armouries.

Messrs. Alexander & Miller, the local electricians, have received the contract for installing a "flaming arc" system of lighting in the Armouries. This new system is similar to that in use at the Toronto and Montreal Armouries. The Times is given to understand that the contract will amount approximately to $1,000.

A very enjoyable thimble tea was given by Mrs. Chas. Brewer, 162 Smith street. The guests were entertained by novel forms of guessing contests, music and refreshments.

HOW TO STAND AND WALK CORRECTLY

[illegible] training forms part o[illegible] good manners. [illegible] carries her[illegible] at all times is like [illegible] actress—she has m[illegible] the art which conceals art. [illegible] stand is the first thing to [illegible].

The correct position is to stand with the weight on both feet, the shoulders held well back, the chin in and head high, but not turned up.

Do not stand with one knee bent or on one foot. This gives the figure a [illegible] effect and will in time make one hip higher than the other. One shoulder will also drop. This position throws the body into unsymmetrical lines that are most ungraceful.

If you stand in the position described in the above paragraph you will find that you can stand for a long time without becoming the least bit tired, but if you shift your weight from one foot to the other in a restless manner you will soon tire and lose that repose of manner that has such charm.

You see so much written of the American girls' walk. It has been called ungraceful, too atheletic, and many other things, but with all that is said of the American girls' carriage she has a freedom in her walk that is not without attraction.

With the head held up, shoulders bent forward ever so little, and a slight swing to the arms (not enough to be ungraceful), she walks with a quick, firm step, and looks every inch a queen.

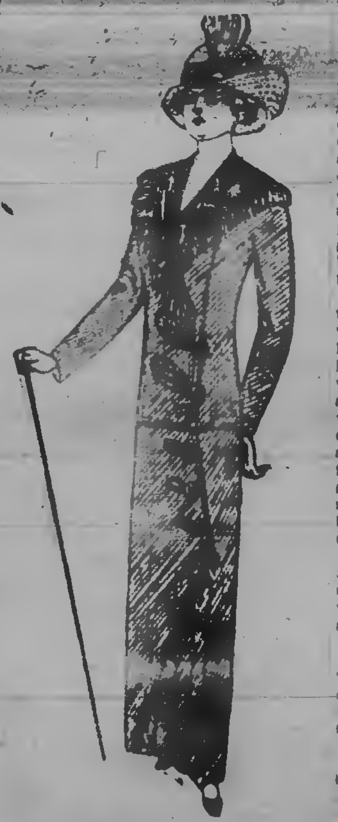
Each step should be taken from the hips, not from the knees. A knee walk is awkward, incorrect and does not give the proper exercise, and is very tiring.

For the drawing-room this athletic walk must be toned down. The girl who is accustomed to walking in the country and swinging her arms often feels ill at ease in the drawing-room, and does not know what to do with her arms and hands, but after a little training she should be as much at ease in the ball-room as on the tennis court and golf course.

These games, if not overdone, will give grace and good courage to the girl who indulges in them.

Just now there is a fad for walking and standing with the head and chin down. This is wrong, both from an artistic and healthful standpoint. The girl who walks with her head up as though she were unafraid of the world, and who looks at you in a frank, fearless manner and smiles pleasantly when you meet her is the girl who will always attract pleasant attention and is a treat to see as she swings along the avenue with that unaffected but natural grace.

BLACK SATIN SUIT



Black satin suits are again to be high in favor, and our illustration today shows a pretty design for such a costume.

Suggestions About Dress

A pair of very thin, coarsely-woven silk stockings will give the effect of the most expensive, heavy ones if worn over a pair of thin lisle thread or cotton hose. They are particularly good for street wear, when very sheer stockings are unsuitable. A black velvet dress will be much less difficult to keep clean if you brush it with a new, dry sponge. The difficulty in using dress shields with kimono sleeves may be obviated by sewing them in at right angles to their usual position.

Birthstones and Flowers.

The birth-stone for those born in January is a garnet, and the flower a wild one; for those in February, an amethyst, and the flower a pink; March, bloodstone, violet; April, diamond, Easter lily; May, emerald, lily of the valley; June, pearl, rose; July, ruby, daisy; August, sardonyx, pond-lily; September, sapphire, poppy; October, opal, cosmos; November, topas, chrysanthemum; December, turquoise, holly.

A Hangman Resigns.

News come from Sydney that the hangman has resigned his position. It seems that seven death sentences have been commuted recently by the Labour Government, and as the executioner would have gained $50 in the case of each malefactor, as a special remuneration, he doubtless considers that his emoluments have been trifled with. His fixed wage was $10 a week, whether anybody was to be hanged or not. He may have suffered from monotony, for, in his three years' service, he had not operated in a single instance

GOOD COOK BETTER THAN DOZEN DOCTORS

The Secret of Health, Wealth and Happiness is Concealed in the Pots and Pans of the Kitchen.

"The secret of health, wealth, and happiness is concealed in the pots and pans and kitchen ranges of the humblest flat. One poor cook makes one bad stomach; one bad stomach makes one cranky husband; one cranky husband makes the family sick; ten poor cooks make one doctor rich—and, on the other hand, one good cook can do more real good than a dozen doctors." This excerpt from his culinary arithmetic was the climax of the address of Charles Laparque, imported chef, before the Chicago School of Domestic Science. "It is easy, ladies," he continued. "Study cooking and practice it and the doctors will go out of business. Don't be frightened by the menus you see in cafes. Make the dishes yourselves; they are all easy."

THE USES OF DRIPPING

With the price of butter continuing to soar, it surely behooves the household economist to inquire into the possibilities of substitutes. For making cookies, Johnny cake or almost anything but cake you may use one-quarter of the butter your recipe calls for and the other three-quarters pork dripping, or, if it has been kept in very good condition, beef dripping. For frying croquettes, doughnuts or anything else that requires deep fat use one-half lard and one-half dripping. Keep a tin especially for this mixture, which can be poured back into it, through a cheesecloth, after each using. For potatoes and other foods fried on a griddle dripping is just as good as butter. Bacon fat is excellent for frying fish or veal.

All dripping should be strained through cheesecloth and kept in a warm place. Do not on any account let it get chilled. This is particularly important with beef dripping, which very easily becomes tallowy and rancid. Pork dripping keeps very well and is the best of all. Lamb dripping is good for nothing but soap. In fact the fat from soups or from any other cooking may be saved for this purpose and the soap recipes accompanying packages of the best brands of lye will be found quite satisfactory.

If you have butter which has become strong, work soda into it, half a teaspoonful to a pound, and used with an equal quantity of lard. It is excellent for pie crust.

When making baked or boiled custard, the milk to be used should be scalded and set aside to cool. Then make the custard in the ordinary way, and it will be perfectly smooth.

If one cupful of vinegar is put with the water in which colored tablecloths are washed, it will prevent the color from running. Iron when still damp, and they will look equal to new.

THE FORMATION OF ICEBERGS

They Originate from Glaciers in Western Greenland and Assume Every Shape

Icebergs usually originate in western Greenland. Everywhere, according to a bulletin of the Hydrographic Office, Greenland's mountainous belt "is penetrated by deep fiords, which reach to the inland ice and are terminated by the perpendicular fronts of huge glaciers, while in some places the ice comes down in broad projections close to the margin of the sea. All of these glaciers are making their way toward the sea, and, as their ends are forced out into the water, they are broken off and set adrift as bergs. This process is called calving. The size of the pieces set adrift varies greatly, but a berg from 60 to 100 feet to the top of its walls, whose spires or pinnacles may reach from 200 to 250 feet in height and whose length may be from 300 to 500 yards, is considered to be or ordinary size in the Arctic.

"These measurements apply to the part above water, which is about one-eighth or one-ninth of the whole mass. Many authors give the depth under water as being from eight to nine times the height above. This is in*correct*, as measurements above and below water should be referred to mass and not to height. It is even possible to have a berg as high out of the water as it is deep below the surface, for, if we imagine a large, solid lump of any regular shape which has a very small sharp high pinnacle in the centre, the height above water can easily be equal to the depth below. An authentic case on record is that of a berg grounded in the Strait of Belle Isle in sixteen fathoms of water, that had a thin spire about 100 feet in height.

"Bergs are made all the year round, but in greater numbers during the summer season; and thousands are set adrift each year. Once adrift in the Arctic, they find their way into the Labrador current and begin their journey to the southward. It is not an unobstructed drift, but one attended with many stoppages and mishaps. Many ground in the Arctic basin and break up there; others reach the shores of Labrador, where from one end to the other they continually ground and float; some break up and disappear entirely, while others get safely past and reach the Grand Bank. The whole coast of Labrador is cut up by numerous islands, bays, and headlands, shoals and reefs, which makes the journey of all drift a long one, and adds greatly to the destruction of the bergs by stoppages and by causing them to break up. [illegible] increased surface [illegible] melting [illegible] of the oceanic waters [illegible] the rapid disappearance of the ice after it has reached the northern edge of the warm circulatory drift currents of the North Atlantic Ocean. If these processes of disintegration did not go on and large bergs should remain intact, several years might elapse before they would melt, and they would ever be present in the transoceanic routes. In fact, instances are on record in which masses of ice, escaping the influences of swift destruction or possessing a capability for resisting them, have, by phenomenal drifts, passed into European waters and been encountered from time to time throughout that portion of the ocean which stretches from the British Isles to the Azores.

"They assume the greatest variety of shapes, from those approximating to some regular geometric figure to others crowned with spires, domes, minarets, and peaks, while others still are pierced by deep indentations or caves. Small cataracts precipitate themselves from the large bergs, while many icicles hang in clusters from every projecting ledge. They frequently have outlying spurs under water, which are as dangerous as any other sunken reefs. For this reason it is advisable for vessels to give them a wide berth, for there are a number of cases on record where vessels were seriously damaged by striking when apparently clear of the berg. It is generally best for vessels to go to windward of them, because the disintegrated fragments will have a tendency to drift to leeward, while open water will be found to windward. Serious injury has occurred to vessels through the breaking up or capsizing of icebergs."

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Lake, Lush and Schaffly Are the New Comers as Managers

The managers of the International League teams this season will be as follows:

Toronto—Joseph J. Kelley.
Montreal—William Lush.
Buffalo—George Stallings.
Rochester—John Ganzel.
Providence—Fred Lake.
Jersey City—Larry Schafly.
Newark—Joe McGinnity.
Baltimore—John Dun.

The new-comers in a managerial capacity in this league are Lush, Schafly, and Lake. Schafly managed the Toronto team the latter part of 1908, when Joe Kelley was in Boston, and practically managed the Newark team when it made such a good showing in 1910, though McGinnity was nominally in charge. Schafly is a clever ball player, and a good leader, and Jersey City can be counted upon as being a factor in the race this year from bell to bell.

Lush is more or less an experiment, though five or six years as coach of the Yale team may give him the necessary experience in the handling of a team. Lush has played in this league, and knows its calibre, so that he will not likely underestimate the strength of the organization.

Lake has had major league experience as a manager, having been with both Boston teams in that capacity. Years ago, when the Toronto team played ball on the diamond "over the Don," Lake was a catcher for the Leafs, and "Jimmy" Casey, then breaking in, was his understudy.

Speaking of the prospects for the future, Spalding's Guide, says of the International League:

"The coming season will probably see a much closer race, as steps have been taken to strengthen the weaker teams. Providence has changed hands, and with Ford as manager, and plenty of good material obtained of, or through, the Detroit Tigers, should give a god account of itself. Frank J. Nevin, William R. Vandusen, Hugh Jennings, and Ty Cobb are interested financially in Providence. Jersey City has been reorganized, and an active campaign for a first division club is on. In Baltimore, Jack Dun held on to the best of his men, and promises to set a fast pace from the start. Toronto, too, has a strong club ready, to take the field, several big offers for players, notably for Tim Jordan, having been refused. Manager Stallings, in Buffalo, has been very busy in his search for good material, and expects to make a much better showing than that of last season. The champions disposed of several good men by sale last fall, but Manager Ganzel and President Chapin set to work at once to replace them, and have purchased enough players to fill the gaps, in the opinions of critics. At Newark considerable activity is shown, and Manager McGinnity promises to place a strong team in the [illegible]

A PAYING IDEA

A Boy Who Developed a Business From Growing Sweet Peas

This is the story of a boy with a $2,000 idea and perhaps more. He was seventeen and just out of the Manual Training High School in Kansas City when the great thought came to him.

"I shall grow sweet peas for the city florists," he told his astonished parents, "there's money in that business."

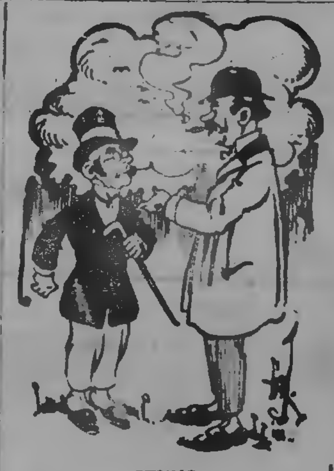
Happily for Bryson's idea his father owned several acres of unused land ten miles from the city and in close touch with rapid transportation. Bryson borrowed about 100 feet of it, got enough money from the bank—backed by his father—to build the necessary greenhouse so that winter should not interfere with his work, and buy seed and tools. This seed he bought from the best florist in California. He did most of the work himself because, you see, he had learned carpentry in the manual training school; and he studied at night every catalogue and all the botanical books he could get. It took some nerve at this period to go ahead because the boy's school friends and a few of the neighbors laughed at his project. When they learned that he had cleared [illegible] and had paid back some of his borrowed capital they quit laughing. One hundred dollars was a mighty pile in Bryson's opinion that fall. He had learned something valuable about the dignity of labor and also he had a few pertinent ideas about money. He learned that with a good reputation one had good credit and with credit he could do many things. Therefore he rented more land from his father, signed up a few more customers and went to work more eagerly than ever. At the end of the year—the second—he had paid his last note and had $400 to his own account. By this time he had two people working for him. Incidentally, Bryson's father was willing by this time to back him in anything. The boy cleared [illegible] the third year.

This boy, now twenty-one, has not given all his time to sweet peas, but these were his principal product. He grew violets and lilies-of-the-valley also, but sweet peas were by far the most successful flowers on the little place. He sold and still sells his products almost exclusively to city dealers in wholesale lots. He received prices ranging from $25 a thousand at Christmas to $5 a thousand for his sweet peas in the summer midseason. Early in the spring, before the snows had gone, he got $7.50 to $10 a thousand and sold from five to ten thousand a day. The sweet peas were arranged twenty-five to the bunch. Bryson has from ten to fifteen girls for the picking and employs six or seven laborers and gardeners for the setting out and care of beds.—Charles [illegible]

The Toronto House is taking matters into their own hands in a way that shows the public interests shall be preserved. By an amendment to the Municipal Act the following is being considered. "Every railway or highway bridge, culvert, tunnel or viaduct of a span of 20 feet and over, to be erected by any Municipal Corporation, or to be reconstructed or altered by it, shall come under the supervision of "The Ontario Railway and Municipal Board," and no construction, reconstruction or any alteration whatsoever shall be begun until the plans, specifications and full details thereof have been furnished to and approved of by the Board."



STUNG.

Client—I just received your bill for getting me off with a fine in that case last week.

Lawyer—Well?

Client—I've changed my mind. I'd rather go to jail!

ON THE LONE TRAIL.

It was in the far backwoods of Canada that the young Englishman and his wife had settled down. But rarely did they see a fresh face, and even when a stranger did chance to call it was always late at night; in the early morning he would be away again.

So little Johnny had to content himself with his own amusements, and find out excitement for himself. By the time he was four years old he knew the names of dozens of animals and birds, but very little about human nature.

One day he saw a strange, unknown creature approaching his home. He watched it until it came quite near, and now there seemed something familiar about it. He turned and ran, wild with excitement.

"Oh, mummy, look! Quick! Here's a funny fing like farver coming!"

It was the second man he had ever seen!

[illegible] He is the light of my life.

Father—Well, that's all right, but I object to having my house lit up by him after midnight.

A PROPOSAL TRAGEDY.

"Miss Smith," he began, earnestly, "I've been thinking of you all the week."

"Really"—she blushed sweetly—"of poor little me?"

"Yes, I have been looking forward to this meeting."

"How nice of you to say so."

"Yet I am half afraid."

"I am sure you need fear nothing."

He continued bravely:

"Well, every man has one ruling passion in his life, and mine, I think, you might by this time have guessed."

"I—I think I have."

"Well, dear Miss Smith, I came here tonight wondering if I dare ask you, if I could persuade you——"

"I think you could persuade me to do anything."

"How good of you to say so!" he cried radiantly. "Then will you—will you—can I rely upon you to coax your brother Jack to join our football club?"

She collapsed.

THE GUARD COULDN'T.

A local "express" in North Yorkshire would stop for a passenger anywhere.

Once the guard saw a woman a field or two away signalling to him with her umbrella. He stopped.

As the woman came panting up, he urged her to hurry up and get in.

"Na," she said, "I'm no gawn, I only wanted to know if ye could change me half-a-crown."

MORE TROUBLE.

He—There was a terrible accident at our house last night.

She—You don't mean it!

He—Yes, as I was sitting in the parlor, I happened to look out and I saw the kitchen sink.

A Contrast of a Year.

Just as a contrast with conditions this year in Peterborough. On the 21st March, 1911, the Street Commissioner had a gang of men busy over scraping mud from the streets. About all the men could have scraped yesterday would have been icycles or shovels of snow.

GROUARD has, for almost a century, been the most important point in the whole of the country north of Edmonton. For generations it has been the shipping point to which all roads to the wonderful Peace River Country and northland converged. It was here the great fur-trading companies and traders chose as the headquarters for their operations.

Now that the frontier has been pushed back, and railways guaranteed by Governments, what is more natural than that GROUARD should be the centre of great advancement and activity.

Now that the wonderful Peace River farming country has become the most prominent feature of the present time, and the settlers are pouring into that district, GROUARD has attained an importance as to location and possibilities never before attained by any town. GROUARD IS ESTABLISHED—has a post office, stores, churches, government telegraph, municipal-owned telephone, weather bureau, doctors' offices, shops, saw mill, government land office for the far famed Peace River district, general stores of the Hudson's Bay Company and the large firm of Revellion Bros., the Peace River Trading and Land Company, also the Bank of Commerce and Royal Bank have established branches there, with other banks to follow. You know banks do not go into a town, city or country where there is no business, or where the business will not increase. Follow the banks and you can never lose.

This is not a proposed townsite, but an established town of years standing.

BUY property in GROUARD—a coming city, with a rich agricultural district to back it up. BUY LOTS IN GROUARD and WATCH THEM ADVANCE IN VALUE.

GROUARD

The First Opportunity for Investment in the

PEACE RIVER COUNTRY

A LOT OF MONEY HAS BEEN EXPENDED by the Dominion Government, and also the Province of Alberta in thoroughly investigating the real worth of the Great Peace River Country, and the results amply justified the expenditure.

The Peace River Country is recognized as the coming Granary of Canada, soon to be the home of a million or more prosperous farmers, a district producing millions of bushels of grain, thousands of heads of cattle.

Will there not be one or more large and prosperous cities to handle the business and trade of such a country? THE RAILROADS SAY THERE WILL, so there are now three roads heading into that country WITH GROUARD AS A CENTRE; THE STEAMBOAT COMPANIES, operating on the waterways with GROUARD as a head, SAY THERE WILL, and are building several new steamers; the GOVERNMENT OF ALBERTA SAYS THERE WILL, for they have just GUARANTEED BONDS to the amount of $25,000,000 FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF RAILROADS into this country, and THESE ROADS GO TO GROUARD; thousands of farmers say there will because they are now going into the great country taking up land, not even waiting for the railroad, and an immense business is being done right now at Grouard with these people; the BANKS SAY THERE WILL, for some have already OPENED BRANCHES AT GROUARD, and others are making ready to follow. What does this mean for Grouard? You can readily see that GROUARD HAS BEEN CHOSEN BY ALL INTERESTS as the gateway, commercial centre, and distributing point for that great country. It means a great city is now in the making, it means that when the steel reaches it those who have been wise enough to invest there now will find themselves wealthy.

YOU should share in this prosperity. Terms are being offered you that you cannot overlook. You have often dreamed that some time or other you would break away from the everyday grind, and invest, or buy something that you could sell afterward for much more than you paid for it, thus making a start on the road of prosperity. Make your dream come true. We offer you the opportunity. INVEST IN A PLACE PICKED BY THE GOVERNMENT, BY RAILROAD COMPANIES, BY BANKS, BY FARMERS, AS A COMING GREAT CITY, GROUARD.

The Hon. J. K. Cornwall, Member of Parliament for Alberta, a great Statesman, says, under date of January 24th, 1912:—

> "Concerning the Town of Grouard, situate on Lesser Slave Lake, I predict that in the near fut-"ure there will be three lines of steel running into Grouard, which no doubt will make it a dis-"tributing point of more than ordinary importance. This same Town will eventually become "the headquarters for merchants, farmers, manufacturers, and tourists."

Success is at your door, open and receive it.

Railroads for Grouard

Great Railroads make Great Cities. You know that. Look at all of our growing Western cities, they stand as great examples. But then what one of them had at its inception such advantages as are now apparent for Grouard? Three railroads for GROUARD—think of it.

During the month of February the Government of the Province of Alberta passed bills for the necessary guarantee of the bonds for construction of two lines from Edmonton to Grouard, and on into the Peace River Country.

The Canadian Northern from Athabasca Landing west to Peace River Landing, via GROUARD. The Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway from Edmonton to Dunvegan via GROUARD. Construction starting at once, and will be pushed forward as fast as possible. Would the Government guarantee bonds for building a road into a useless country? Would the roads go to Grouard if it were not an important point?

Terminals on our Grouard Property

A third line, the Pacific and Hudsons Bay Railway being built by English capital, runs from the Pacific Coast to Fort Churchill on the Hudsons Bay, and runs through Grouard. They have entered into an agreement with us, taking over part of this property ON WHICH THEY AGREE to place their station, freight sheds, and all terminals, thus ensuring the terminals for this great road RIGHT ON OUR commercial property at GROUARD.

Again GROUARD is the head of some 3,000 miles of lake and river transportation over which 100,000 tons of freight were handled last year.

Property will be more valuable in GROUARD in two years time than in any new town in Western Canada that has been put on the market during the last several years.

Story of a Local Tom Cat.

This is just a little story of home life in Peterborough. A family living on Water street has a little daughter not quite nine years of age. The family also has a cat of the "Thomas" sex. This cat has a bad habit of bringing any, and all stray bones it finds into the kitchen. The mother of the family naturally objects to the accumulation of bones in the kitchen. Yesterday she chased Thomas cat out of the kitchen. The little daughter objected, saying, "I don't see why you should chase 'Tom' that way. He's savings those bones for his kittens." Still a broom was used on the bones and shaken at Thomas.

Inquest Held in Port Hope.

A Port Hope dispatch yesterday says that the jury empannelled to enquire into the cause of the death of the late Myrtle Little, whose body was found in the Ganeraska river on Wednesday morning, viewed the remains at Walker's undertaking rooms yesterday morning, after which an adjournment was made until 8 o'clock.

At the evening session, Dr. G. A. Dickinson, stated that the deceased was up to the time of her death in apparently good health. There was no marks of violence on the body and only a few scratches on one of her knees. No bones were broken.

Amusing Entertainment at "Y."

Last night a very amusing entertainment was held at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium. This room, for the occasion, was made to represent the Old Red Mill. Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr. occupied the chair in his usual happy style. The program was introduced by entry of the Hay Seed Band, and they were some band at that: The whole program, including the ground ticklers drill, the broncho busters, tumbling by Uncle Josh, vegetable drill, fun on the fence rails, games in the barn yard, Uncle Silas and his performing bear, fun over the hay stack etc., made one of the most laughable shows that the city has seen. The "Y" deserves great credit for the trouble they took in getting up this entertainment and the successful way it was carried out. The show ended with God Save the King

Site of East City's New School Will be at Corner of Hunter And Concession Streets

DEPUTATION FROM EAST CITY OPPOSES THE PROPOSITION

BIG PLAYGROUNDS ARE ESSENTIAL TO PHYSICAL DEVELOPMENT IN SCHOOL CHILDREN.

The Higher the Ground on Which Schools are Erected the Better, so Long as the Elevation is Not Unreasonable—Toronto's General School Inspector Explains the Penny Bank System—Teaches the Children the Value of the Dollar—Toronto Scholars Have $130,000 Deposited—They are Also Educated to Work.

The Board of Education met in special session on Saturday evening to pass the resolution published elsewhere in this page re purchase of six acres of property on the Armour Estate at the corner of Concession and Hunter streets, on which to erect a new modern twelve-roomed school for East City. The special Building Committee entrusted with the selection of a site for this purpose, after six months' enquiry and investigation into conditions across the water have concluded that the property selected is the only available site upon which to erect a modern school suitable for present and future requirements. It offers six acres of land at a purchase price of $3,300, whereas in order to secure a site of but two and a half acres in area where the present school is located, the Board would have to expend $6,360 in purchasing adjacent properties. Then the Board has fallen in line with the popular view that playgrounds form one of the chief essentials of public school requirements, and have determined not to commit the grave mistake of their grandfathers in building for present day needs only, and in grounds deplorably restricted in area.

It is also contended that East City must of necessity expand northward, if at all, in which event the site [illegible] will be quite central.

Some opposition to the site was offered by a small deputation, but the Board had the courage of their convictions, and voted accordingly.

There were present at the meeting Chairman John Crane and Trustees V. Eastwood, B. F. Ackerman, W. H Hill, T. H. Adams, L. M. Hayes, R. Fair, and Dr. Morrison.

DEPUTATION OPPOSES SITE

Messrs. Ald. Morgan, Samuel Taylor, M. Mein and Jas. McDonald composed a deputation from East City in opposition to the Armour Estate as a suitable location for the new school.

Ald. Morgan said the deputation present was called on the spur of the moment to meet the School Board in special session on this question otherwise a much larger deputation would have been forthcoming. Taking East City ratepayers as a whole, the speaker contended one could find but three in favor of the site in question. The objections to it are its elevation, its exposure, and the counter attraction of the lift lock and canal to little ones. This winter it would almost have been impossible for children to climb the Armour hill to school, to say nothing of having to spend many hours each day at its elevation. Then in summer, when sultry weather prevailed in other parts of the city, the hill top would be found too uncomfortably cool for children to spend much time at a stretch at its summit. The old site, Ald. Morgan went on to say, is an ideal one, is plenty high enough and lots adjacent can be purchased to afford ample play grounds. To buy the Glover, Strain and Drain properties with two vacant lots, may cost a little more than the Armour Estate property, but East City ratepayers would be better satisfied, as they want the new school to be erected in the present locality where this Ward's school has always been situated. We could get a signed petition to this effect from 90 per cent of the citizens affected, or bring along a big and representative deputation at any given evening and hour.

W. H. Hill offered that were the present site selected, school would have to be closed a year to facilitate building operations.

Ald. Morgan did not think any serious objection to that would be found.

Mr. S. Taylar contended that the serious objection to the site under consideration was that small children would find it difficult to climb its icy walks in winter. Then it would be exposed to east winds, and no breezes are more cutting. Another objection is that the property is As to closing the present school during building operations, he offered that school might be held in the old town hall. Mr. Taylor, however, was not prepared to say what proportion of the ratepayers are opposed to the site selected and would like to investigate futher before committing himself. He had certainly found a few in favor of the new location.

Mr. McDonald, nothing to say except to acquiesce in Ald. Morgan's views.

THE BOARD'S POSITION,

Dr. Morrison explained that the committee in charge of this matter had devoted considerable time to this question, and after careful enquiry into the situation had decided in favor of the Armour Estate site, which offered six acres of land and was considered fairly central at present and would be fully central in the near future. The proposition to add adjacent property to the present school site was not desirable either from a financial or a practical point of view. The Strain and Draine lots would cost $1500 and $1600 respectively, the Glover property $2250 and the two vacant lots in rear of the latter property $1000. The acquisition of these lots would only enlarge the old school site by two acres, at a total cost of $6360 and then only furnish a site suitable for a six-roomed school. The Board has decided to build for the future and plans have been prepared for a twelve room school, eight rooms of which will be needed as soon as completed. It is expected that East City will grow and it must expand northward. The present site, whilst central today will not be so in ten or possibly five years later, because of necessity any increase in population must go to the north of Hunter street. Consequently the Board has concluded that the centre of the Ward will in the future be on a line with Hunter street. As to school grounds, continued Mr. Morrison, this Board has decided not to fall into the error of its predecessors in erecting adequate public schools on lots only fit for kindergarten schools. We have six acres at the King Edward school and would gladly add another three acres had we the funds available. The Queen Alexandra school stands on so diminutive a lot that its girls have to play on the streets. Discipline at the King Edward school is superior to that of any other in the city; roomy playgrounds contribute to discipline—the children return to their studies at the ring of the bell, refreshed and invigorated by their exercise. Our idea is to get six acres for the new East City school, and the site selected is the only one available offering such an area. It's very little higher than the hill children have to climb to the separate school, and they don't complain. If East City residents want to retain the old site, concluded Dr. Morrison, he would advise that in view of the small ground available, a six-roomed school be erected and another later on in some other locality. To crowd 400 pupils into a twelve roomed school on a two and a half acre lot would only be following that policy for which our grandfathers are so freely condemned. We are anxious to please the people, of course, but would have to change our plans entirely to meet the views of this deputation, and in doing so the building of a new school would have to be postponed for this year.

Mr. V. Eastwood contended that the people should have an opportunity to express their opinion at a public meeting.

Chairman John Crane—"A signed petition would be preferable."

Mr. W. H. Hill here pointed out that most likely when the old school lot is divided up and sold it would net more than the cost of the new site on the Armour Estate.

Ald. Morgan would be satisfied with a smaller school on the old site at present, and another building when called for.

Mr. W. H. Hill replied that there is need for an eight roomed school now. Then it is more economical and convenient to teach all the grades under the one roof.

The chairman suggested that the wishes of East City citizens might be met by leaving the matter over for a day or two until a more definite petition is forthcoming. Still, it might be unfortunate to do so; the plans are all prepared, negotiations for the purchase of the new site are practically concluded, and any delay might prove a calamity.

Mr. T. H. Adams said that as a representative of East City, he had at first favored retaining the present school site, but a weighing of the pros and cons had changed his views. It was too bad he added, that when this question is practically settled, this deputation should come here in opposition to the Board's action which had now been before the public some six months. He did not believe in paying for property adjacent to the present school, twice what it is assessed for.

Mr. R. Fair agreed with Mr. Adams. The prices asked for properties near the old site had quite converted him in favor of the one in question. Then, were Ald. Morgan's views acquiesced in, two schools would be needed to do justice to East City, and that was not desirable for reasons advanced by Mr. Hill.

Dr. Morrison—"An eleven roomed school is required in which to teach all grades under one roof."

Mr. Fair thought a public meeting of East City citizens in the city hall would be preferable to a petition.

Ald. Morgan stood out for a petition, which he suggested the Board could head as it pleased.

Mr. Eastwood wanted a public meeting called when opinions, pros and con, might be expressed.

Dr. Morrison did not think any opinions advanced would change the Board's views one iota. "And I'm prepared as a member of this Board to take the responsibility of voting for the new site. I don't believe there exists any real concrete objection to it."

Mr. Fair—"I have not heard any one object to the site except the gentlemen present to-night."

Mr. Hill—"I have enquired pretty thoroughly into the matter and have not met any East City people opposed to the site."

Ald. Morgan—"You had not met the committee until to-night."

At this juncture Ald. Morgan was reminded that for the past few months the Board had awaited a deputation on this question, but none put in an appearance.

Mr. Hill here expressed his opinion that the Board had a perfect right to reject the argumentt of any deputation or the request of any petition were they convinced that such a course would be in the best interest

NEW 12 ROOM SCHOOL TO BE BUILT ON 6 ACRES OF GROUND

The new East City Twelve Room Public School will be built on six acres of the Armour Estate, on the hill at the head of Hunter street, unless some unanticipated hitch occurs in the negotiations now practically concluded between the Board of Education and executors of the Estate.

The Board's special Building Committee had offered $400.00 an acre for this property, but on writing Mr. Armour recently agreed to increased price of $550 per acre, or $3,300 for the whole parcel. The Committee and Mr. Armour are a unit as to this result of their negotiations and the latter gentleman will submit the terms of their agreement to members of the estate for ratification at the earliest possible moment. Hence the Board of Education met in special session Saturday night, when the action of their special Building Committee was endorsed in the following resolution:

Moved by Dr. Morrison, seconded by T. H. Adams,—

"That after further consideration of the matter, of the offer of $400.00 per acre made to the Armour Estate for that part of Block V., East of Concession street on Registered Plan No. 1A. for the City of Peterborough, situate at the North East Corner of Concession and Hunter streets and having a frontage of 510 feet on Concession street and 510 feet on Hunter street, that the Board increase the amount to $3,300.00 for the said parcel, without prejudice, providing a proper title is delivered forthwith, and that the Treasurer be authorised to issue cheque therefore, when a Certificate of title is furnished by the Board's Solicitors."—Carried unanimously.

VANDALS SMASH LOCAL BOAT HOUSES

On Saturday evening some vandals with an abnormal bump of destruction, broke into five boat houses along the C.P.R. tracks. They, or he, tried to force a sixth boat house, but the door and lock were too strong, and the man's attempt was foiled. A deliberate piece of vandalism was perpetrated, as a gasoline engine had been smashed with a hammer. The police claim that the guilty party did not seem to have entered the places to steal, as much as for mischief. Cushions, camping goods and fishing tackle were thrown about. The boat houses broken into belonged to Messrs. Thos. Emmerson, Thos. Sabine, Dunnett and Dunsford, and McCall and Hatcher. The police have the matter in hand, but were reluctant yesterday to impart any information.

On the same night the machine shop of the Peterborough Machine Co., was broken into. It is thought the culprit stole the hammer there with which he later on forced the doors.

A SAD LOSS TO THE TOWNSHIP OF CAVAN

The many friends of Mr. W. T. Donaldson, one of Cavan's best known and most highly respected residents, will extend to him, Mr. Donaldson and Mr. A. E. Hanna, their heart-felt sympathy over their recent sad loss. On Tuesday last, Mr. Donaldson's eldest daughter, Amy Elizabeth, wife of Mr. A. E. Hanna, Janetville, died as a result of confinement, leaving a little baby boy. The deceased who was thirty-three years of age was a universal favorite among all who knew her. She was a consistent and ardent member of the Presbyterian church, and was always noted for the good work she did. Mrs. Hanna was married last May, and her demise has cast a gloom over the township of Cavan. The funeral, at which Rev. Mr. McKenzie officiated, was held on Thursday and was very largely attended. The floral tributes of respect were many and beautiful, testifying to the high esteem of the deceased. Among them was a beautiful floral "Gates Ajar," sent by the church congregation. Mrs. Hanna, who had been a member of the choir for years, was remembered by them, the choir sending some beautiful flowers. The Canadian Order of Foresters, of which Mr. Hanna was a member, also sent a floral design.

ANOTHER LIFT LOCK ON TRENT CANAL

Mr. Peter Ritchie, Superintendent of the Big Chute power plant was in Orillia last week. He says the Trent Valley Canal engineers have been surveying there this winter, and there will be a 60-foot lift lock near their power house. The Canadian Northern railway engineers are also surveying a line through to Port Severn, seeking a port on the Georgian Bay.

JAS. L. HUGHES SAYS 12 ROOM SCHOOL NEEDS 6 ACRES LAND

BUT SCHOOL BOARD HAS THE COURAGE OF ITS CONVICTIONS AND ACTS ACCORDINGLY.

New Site Will Cost $3,300—Twelve Room Modern School to be Built Thereon—Eight Rooms are Needed at Present—Board, Both as to Ground and Building, is Looking Ahead to the Future—Expect East City to Expand Northward.

Mr. Jas. L. Hughes, General Inspector of Toronto's city schools, addressed the Board of Education in special session Saturday on two subjects—Play-grounds and Penny Banks.

The first subject the distinguished visitor dealt with was Play-grounds and he prefaced his remarks with the assertion that the three great desirable elements of humanity are power, skill and character. No one agrees these days that knowledge is power, he contended, and power, the first great element can be better developed on the play-ground than in any other way. Seventy-five per cent. of America's leading men were brought up in the country where opportunity was offered for the physical development. Play is the boy's work, and Toronto schools have the finest playgrounds in the country. In the Queen City, where land is exceptionally dear, both the people and their Board of Education recognize the necessity for ample play-ground, and whole blocks have actually been bought and buildings torn down to practically apply this principle. In Toronto, Mr. Hughes offered, the school grounds are available to city clubs when not needed by the school organizations. Then any society or club can use the buildings at night, and while no assembly halls are provided in the schools there are kindergarten rooms capable in some instances of seating 800 people. The schools are public property and the public are permitted their use on all convenient occasions. Then each of Toronto's 70 schools has a piano furnished by the people—not by the Board; also reflectoscope lanterns with which to give educative illustrated entertainments. These donations are the result of the enthusiastic co-operation of such organizations known as parents' societies organised in connection with each school. Then the Board has organized night schools in connection with the public schools, eleven of which are for foreigners.

Returning to the question of playgrounds, Mr. Hughes offered that a twelve room school should stand on six acres of ground, at as high an elevation as practicable—providing the grounds are flat. In certain corners of each ground should be provided for gardening by the children. The higher elevation on which the school stands the better, and price should be no obstacle in the way of securing ample grounds.

PENNY BANKS.

Inspector Hughes' pet hobby just now is "Penny Banks.: for schools, and he is throwing himself heart and soul into the question of their adoption in all schools. His explanation of their operation in Toronto was very explicite, and he apparently convinced our Board of Education that the simplicity of the scheme would prove no hardship to our teachers in Peterborough. The Penny Bank is in operation in Toronto schools and thos eof several other cities and towns under a Dominion charter, and with marked success. No man can make a dollar out of it, and any deficit in operative expenses is made good in Toronto by bankers, who heartily cooperate in the scheme. The Government allows the Penny Bank four per cent. on funds invested with it, and the bank pays depositors three per cent. interest, retaining one per cent for running expenses. Deposits are received in class rooms of Toronto schools each Monday morning by the several teachers, to whom they are presented in pass books, and the system is so simple that no loss of time in lessons is experienced. The counting, denominating of coins and bills, book-keeping, etc. is all done by a couple of boys and girls, and so perfect is the check system that no confusion arises. The amounts deposited is handed into the nearest local bank in the ordinary way, and a cheque received therefor. In a city like Peterborough one chartered bank would be characterized as the "Schools Penny Bank."

Continuing, Mr. Hughes explained that $210,000 are to-day invested in the Penny Bank, of which $130,000 belongs to Toronto school children, who deposit each month on an average of $2400 to $2700. Of course, during the winter months there are more withdrawals than deposits. No depositor is allowed to have more than $300 in the bank at any one time. This scheme, urged Mr. Hughes, is a great aid in developing character; a child is made self-respecting and trained up to the proper value of money instead of applying it to the gratifying of sensual taste. Mr. Hughes invited the Board to send a deputation to Toronto some Monday (including some person or persons prejudiced against the scheme), when he would hold over the banking hour in some of the schools that the deputation might see the simplicity of the scheme's Operation.

WORK FOR CHILDREN.

Inspector Hughes, in conclusion of a very interesting conversational interview, advanced the argument that work is an important element in developing the character of school children. City boys are liable to go bad for want of work. The total weekly amount earned by Toronto scholars averages $4,500—$180,000 a year. The highest amount earned weekly by one boys is $9, but of course, he is an exception.

STRIKERS WENT ON PARADE

Toronto, Mar. 23.—Escorted by eight mounted constables and numbering about 2200 strong, the striking employees of the T. Eaton firm and their sympathizers presented a formidable appearance as with banners and placards held high in the air, bearing inscriptions informing the public of their grievances, they paraded Saturday afternoon. The route was from Dalhousie street along Shuter to James, to Queen, westward to Spadina, thence north to College to Yonge and then down to the Labor Temple, where they disbanded to get refreshments, prior to the Massey Hall Mass Meeting in the evening.

Although fully a third of the parade was composed of the weaker sex—the women—these as well as the men, were undaunted at the slushy condition of the streets and during the march a sort of diversion was created by a running fire of bright talk which kept the strikers in a rare humor. A pathetic feature of the procession was the presence of an aged woman, who insisted on making her weary frame help to enlarge the line of women.

A MODEL HUSBAND.

He had been married just a year, and one day strolled into his office grinning all over his face and whistling.

"What is the matter with you?" asked his colleague.

"Matter?" Why when I left home this morning my wife said: 'Dear, you are a model husband.'"

"Well, that is not much of a compliment," said his partner.

"I should like to know why not," stated the young husband.

"Well, take my advice, and look up the English Dictionary, and note what the word 'Model' means."

The young husband did so, and this is what came to his gaze, and dampened his feelings.

"Model, a small pattern, a miniature of something on a larger scale."

INSULTING.

Lawyer: "What! You a doctor? Why, you couldn't cure a ham!"

Doctor: "And you, sir, you could not try a case of cheese!"

TOO MANY COLLECTIONS

A Scot, paying a visit to London, was taken by his nephew to a service in St. Paul's Cathedral. He had no acquaintance with the Liturgy of the Church of England. He picked up a prayer-book and became very interested, but as he turned over the leaves his face became clouded with a look of intense anxiety.

He placed the prayer-book carefully down, looked cautiously round, picked up his hat, and crept stealthily to the door.

His nephew followed him, and said "Are you ill, uncle? What is the matter?"

The uncle replied, "No, but it's enough to make any man ill, the number of collections made in this kirk."

"Collections?" said the nephew in surprise, "if there is any at all there certainly won't be more than one."

"Well," replied the uncle, [illegible] There's [illegible] say I to masel, 'I'll bide here until a' these collections are taken I'll no ha' a bawbee left in ma pocket.'"

A TIP TO BUSINESSLIKE FARMERS

A motor-car had just reached a nice level stretch of road, and the man in the goggles was preparing for a scorch, when an honest-eyed old farmer stepped from the hillside, and held up his hand.

"Reckon you was jest going to slip along tidy fast," he said.

The motorist seemed angry for having been stopped, and wanted to know why he had stopped him. The old farmer replied:

"Look through these 'ere glasses of mine, and then perhaps you will change your mind."

The motorist looked through the glasses, and beheld a policeman on the branch of a tree.

"Great Scott!" he said: "It's nothing but a police trap. Thanks, old friend." And the clink of coins was heard.

A minute later he went crawling past the tree at six miles per hour gotten gains, remarked:

"That idea of carting the scarecrow from the pea-field and fixing it to the tree wern't so bad."

"Before I propose, Miss Plainer, I must know if you have anything in the bank?"

"Yes, Mr. Hunter. I have a sweetheart there; he's the manager. We are to be married next month."

GERMAN'S DEADLY NEW SIEGE GUN

Fires Huge Bomb Which Does Not Enter Bore---A Destructive Weapon

A destructive new type of siege gun has just yielded satisfactory results to experiments conducted by the German military authorities.

The new gun was constructed by the firm of Krupp. It is an improvement on an idea much used by the Japanese in the siege of Port Arthur, and is designed to aid the advance of infantry storming an entrenched position. At the same tiem, experiments have been carried out with a new form of hand grenade, which effects much the same purpose.

For long military experts in Germany have been puzzling over the problem of how the long range artillery of an army could render efficient support to its own advancing infantry right up to the trenches of a fortified position. According to present "siege technique" the artillery of an attacking army has to cease bombarding the enemy's entrenchments as soon as the storming infantry gets to close quarters, otherwise the stormers are likely to be shot down by their own guns from the rear.

This cessation of the attackers' bombardment enables the besieged to emerge from their entrenchments and pour a devastating fire at close quarters into the ranks of the attacking force, which is thus deprived of the support of its own artillery just at the moment when it most stands in need of it. The new gun has been devised to overcome this difficulty.

It has an extremely narrow, unrifled bore, and is of very light construction, easily capable of being carried by two men, and is intended to be carried in the front lines of the advancing infantry. Its most remarkable feature is its projectile, which consists of a round bomb of great diameter loaded with a very powerful explosive mixture. The bomb is of far greater diameter than the bore of the gun which throws it, and is provided with a long stick-like tail which is loaded into the barrel of the gun, its lower end, which is enlarged to a wad or piston-like form, resting on the guncharge at the bottom of the barrel. The bomb itself merely lies on the gun muzzle, quite outside the bore.

On being fired, the trailing stick like tail serves to keep the bomb in its proper direction of flight, and only detaches itself and falls to earth after a certain distance has been covered, leaving the bomb to pursue its course alone.

The experiments have shown that a reasonable precision can be obtained with the new missile up to a distance of 300 to 400 yards, and the bomb itself, which, owing to its large capacity, is capable of great destruction, serves not only to prevent the defenders [illegible] entrenchments or fortifications.

CAULIFLOWER SEED

A Woman on Puget Sound Island Grows a Huge Quantity of It

Nine-tenths of the world's supply of Cauliflower seed is grown by a woman on a Puget Sound island. Startling as this statement may seem, the fact remains that it is not due altogether to any supremacy of knowledge or skill that has enabled Mrs. Anne Archibault to achieve what thousands of first rank gardeners hopelessly abandoned. It is due to the peculiar climatic conditions of Whidby island. Outside of Holland no other section affords the climatic requisites for maturing the seed pods of cauliflower plants.

It was an accident, this discovery of Mrs. Archibault, that has made it possible for her to own 1,000 acres of fertile land and to enjoy a business of $100,000 annually. Cauliflower seed will not mature except under certain favorable conditions. One is dampness, humidity, which gives the tiny seeds the plumpness so essential to development. Another is water—not irrigation, rain, nor the wet, boggy mush of a marsh, but a continuous moist soil beneath which a hardpan subsoil acts as a floor to a reservoir. The land of Whidby island is ideal for this culture.

Cauliflower plants are transplanted like cabbage in rows. The usual cultivation is continued until the seed pods form. Then even the wind should be kept from the fields, for even the flutter of a tiny bird over a cluster of the seed pods will mar the perfect development of the seed. Harvest consists in gathering the dry pods, artificial drying in the sun, a clover seed separator and a fanning mill.

Mrs. Archibault's first crop amounted to a handful of seed. About this time she read in a bulletin issued by the department of agriculture that the supply of this seed was short and limited to a few hundred pounds. This was five years ago. Like a flash Mrs. Archibault saw her longed for independence. She grew 400 pounds of seed in 1907. Communication with some well-known seedmen brought orders for her supply at $3 a pound. Every year since she has increased the yield of seed until the present world's supply of 30,000 pounds is practically all grown by her.

Farmers all over Whidby island grow this seed and sell their product to Mrs. Archibault, who markets it through her eastern sales agencies.

The cauliflower fields are beautiful at flowering time, the immaculate snow-white blossoms being alive with white butterflies. The mistress does not interfere with these cabbage moths, believing they aid in scattering the pollen from flower to flower.—Gal H. Fickle.

RABIES, HYDROPHOBIA

A History of the Disease and How to Treat It

During the past year many cases of rabies have been reported in Canada, which have caused much loss of live stock, and, in several localities, people have been bitten.

This is one of the oldest diseases known. In the fourth century B. C. it was described by Aristotle, who wrote: "Dogs suffer from a madness which puts them in a state of fury, and all the animals that they bite when in this condition become also attacked by rabies.'

The season of the year makes very little difference, as the disease is just as prevalent in winter as it is in summer. This seems contrary to the idea of many people, who think that July and August, "dog days," are the only time that dogs are subject to rabies.

Cause

Rabies is caused in nearly all cases by the bite of a rabid animal. It is possible to contract the disease from the saliva, the tears from the eyes, or the milk of a rabid animal. The rabid dog is a source of danger a few days before the symptoms of the disease appear, but in no case before he was bitten by a rabid animal, or otherwise innoculated. Hot weather, lack of water or [illegible] will never in themselves produce rabies.

The dog is the principal source of which rabies is spread over the country.

Symptoms

The symptoms seldom develop in less than fourteen days after the animal was bitten, most commonly three to six weeks, but they may not show for six months to a year. Not all animals bitten develop the disease. It depends somewhat upon the part of the body which was bitten. In man there is less danger if bitten through the clothing than upon the bare parts of the body. It is not uncommon for the symptoms to develop in less than two weeks when bitten upon the head. The symptoms show in one of two forms—furious or dumb.

Furious Rabies

"With the furious form the dog is at first noticed to seek the company of his master more than usual, or he will hunt dark, secluded places. Sometimes he will make sudden starts towards objects. These conditions last for a day or two. Later he becomes restless, and will often travel twenty to thirty miles in a day. While he is on this trip he is very likely to bite cattle, hogs, and dogs often passing horse and man, unless they interfere with his course. He will usually return home unless he is killed. During this period he is irritable, seldom eating or drinking, not because he does not want food or water, nor because he is afraid of water, for he is not, but from the fact that his throat is paralyzed and he cannot swallow. Often he will force sticks and stones down his throat in efforts to satisfy hunger and thirst. This period of irritation lasts for two to three days followed by a period of paralysis which has already taken place in the throat, [illegible] howl, and the inability to swallow. This is followed by paralysis and death, the entire symptoms lasting from four to ten days.

Dumb Rabies

The dog seeks his master's company or may hide in dark places, being unable to eat or drink the lower jaw hangs down and the tongue protrudes which may swell and turn dark. The condition is followed by paralysis and death in four to ten days after the first symptoms appear.

Symptoms

Cattle are prone to chase chickens dogs, and may run at a man, whom they are less apt to attack. Often falling down from no apparent cause twitching of muscles, inability to eat, due to paralysis, often showing signs of sexual excitement even when pregnancy is well advanced, but seldom biting. These symptoms are followed by paralysis and death.

The horse is often more vicious than cattle, biting anything within reach, and shows many of the symptoms shown by cattle.

Diagnosis

This is made from microscopic examination of the brain, which shows small round or oval bodies from 1-25,000 to 1-1,000 of an inch in diameter. They have never been found unless the animal has been inoculated with rabies virus. There are [illegible] changes in the nervous ganglia [illegible] of rabies, but [illegible] diagnosis is more uncertain and of little use in the early stages of the disease. Sticks and stones may be found in the stomach of a rabid dog.

Treatment

This consists of a preventative treatment (Pasteur), which must be taken before the symptoms have developed. In order to be effective it should be taken within a few days of having been bitten by a rabid animal. The treatment may also be given to valuable domestic animals.

NINE HEALTH COMMANDMENTS

1. Keep windows open day and night.
2. Do not spit.
3. Breathe through the nose by keeping the mouth shut.
4. Drink pure water.
5. Eat slowly, take well-cooked meals, and cultivate regular habits.
6. Wear loose clothing of seasonal material.
7. Take regular open air exercise—recreation if possible.
8. Wash the whole body at least once a week.
9. Work but do not worry.

A balanced ration is just as essential for poultry as it is for other live stock. A few crumbs from the table or an occasional feed of corn will never produce profitable fowls. It pays to feed a balanced ration.

ABOUT BOXING IN FRANCE

Frenchmen Can Now Hold Their Own With Most Boxers

Eugene Corri, the famous English boxing referee, has been giving his opinion on the rise of boxing in France. A few years ago, he says, the idea of French boxing was regarded with amusement. Now it has to be taken as a serious element. It was, Mr. Corri believed, the fine showing that Henri Piet made against Britain's lightweight champion, Freddy Welsh, at Mountain Ash, about three years ago, that first aroused enthusiasm in the heart of the young Gaul. This was increased when George Carpentier made his advent, with the result that Frenchmen have studied the art so thoroughly and become so adept that they can now more than hold their own with English and American boxers. The progress of Carpentier has been simply phenomenal. His long run of brilliant successes has done more for the sport in France than that of even Piet, and having succeeded in defeating Britain's middleweight champion, Jim Sullivan, at Monte Carlo, boxing has given a fillip that will be the means, no doubt, of bringing to light additional talent. Who a few years ago would have thought a Frenchman capable of beating such men as Sid Burns, Young Joseph, Harry Lewis, and least of all Jim Sullivan, and who would have ventured the suggestion that Charles Ledoux would prove equal to the task of defeating Joe Bowker? He did, nevertheless, and did it handsomely, and his victory, Mr. Corri thinks, is the forerunner of many more successes of French boxers over English unless the latter look to their laurels.

LIGHT THAT DOES NOT FAIL

A Volcanic Beacon in San Salvador Republic

The republic of San Salvador is the only government on earth that collects lighthouse fees on account of a volcano that it owns, and without the slightest cost of upkeep.

The volcanic beacon is about eight miles inland from the port of Acajutla, and its pillar of cloud by day and its fire sky by night are visible for many miles out to sea. It bursts forth every seven minutes, and is just as accurate as any revolving light that warns mariners of danger in any part of the world.

This volcano has been keeping up this seven-minutes' service of eruptions ever since anyone can remember. It is a favorite amusement of visitors to sit by the hour during the lazy afternoons and, watch in hand, to time the eruptions till they tire of the occupation and fall asleep. No one has ever caught the volcano napping, however.

Every vessel that puts in at Acajutla has to pay its lighthouse fee. There is no other lighthouse than the volcano, but that is a sufficient excuse for the Government of Salvador to make a charge for its services. The [illegible] charges of dynamite, but, fortunately, they are not sufficient to shake the ground perceptibly more than about a mile or two from the summit of the crater.

Belgium's Population

Belgium, with 642 inhabitants to the square mile, is the most thickly populated country in Europe; England's figure is 557, Germany's 306, France's 203, Russia's 194, and Spain's 101.

Storm of Long Ago

In the great English storm of 1703 which lasted two days, 8,000 people were drowned, 20,000 trees were uprooted in Kent, and two million pounds' worth of damage was done in London alone.

Proven Oil Lands
Consisting of 240 Acres, King's County,
Coalinga, California, U.S.A.

FORTUNES IN OIL: To say that a flowing oil well is a deluge of dollars is not in any sense overstating the case, as can be verified absolutely by reference to many of the gushers that have come in recently in California. The most spectacular of these has, of course, been the Lakeview Gusher, which began flowing on March 15, 1910, and soon acquired such force that it got beyond control, tore out the casing, toppled over the derrick and taxed the entire resources of the Union Oil Company to construct tanks and reservoirs to contain the oil. This was accomplished, however, after the greatest oil fight in history, and it is estimated that over 75 per cent. of the entire flow was saved. This gusher has recently stopped flowing, the estimated total production being around 15,000,000 barrels. Needless to say, every person who held stock in the company to any extent made a fortune.

As a field for the safe and profitable employment of capital there is absolutely nothing else in the country that equals California Oil. The records of the United States Government show that oil operations may be conducted with the utmost assurance of success, while the dividends that are being paid month by month and the stocks that have climbed to ten, twenty, fifty and even a hundred times their original prices, eloquently tell their own story of the profits. To those who would employ their money where it will combine safety and profits to the greatest possible degree, the California oil industry offers unrivaled opportunities. The industry is moving forward on the flood tide of prosperity and success, and a thorough and searching investigation will convince even the most conservative and skeptical of its tremendous money-making prospects and its practically unlimited future.

PROFITS IN OIL LANDS: The profits that have been made from the increased value of oil lands run to tremendous figures. United States government records show that on Jan. 1, 1909, 463 oil companies in the principal fields held 396,808 acres of oil land. Before the discovery of oil this land could have been bought for a very few dollars per acre. Since that time a great deal of it has been sold at prices ranging from $500 to $10,000 per acre, though much of it is valued at over $20,000 per acre. If the average advance in value had been $1000 per acre, this land would show a profit for the stockholders of these companies of about $400,000,000. The industry is now earning about 10 per cent. per annum on that valuation.

WHAT INVESTMENTS IN CALIFORNIA OIL COMPANIES HAVE MADE:

	Has since had a value of
$100 invested in Sauer Dough Oil Co.	$3,800
$100 invested in New York Oil Co.	3,900
$100 invested in Monte Cristo	4,000
$100 invested in Peerless Co.	4,300
$100 invested in Kern Oil Co.	4,500
$100 invested in San Joaquin Co.	5,700
$100 invested in S. F. and McK. Co.	6,250
$100 invested in Caribou Oil Co.	6,400
$100 invested in Kern River Co.	8,000
$100 invested in Pinal Oil Co.	10,800
$100 invested in Lucile Oil Co.	16,000
$100 invested in Home Oil Co.	40,000

The above is in addition to the dividends, which, in most cases, have been several times the original investment.

You can see from the various lines of proof that we have given you just how THE DOMINION OIL COMPANY property proves itself to be the equal of any in California's famous field. It is impossible to put everything on paper. We cannot keep you informed of the actual happenings from day to day, so you should write to us for additional proof, in case you are not satisfied now. We want to tell you, however, that to delay is to run the risk of the rejection of your application, for, as you have read elsewhere, we do not intend to sell a share of this stock at any such price as the present one when the earning power of the DOMINION OIL COMPANY is established and their well producing. Now is the accepted time Not a week from now or to-morrow. You should make up your mind how much you can afford and invest that amount at once.

There are now being offered for public subscription 100,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at 50c per share, which will leave 400,000 shares still in the treasury. It will be the aim of the directors to maintain and keep as large a treasury balance as possible in both money and stock available to meet, at all times any and all contingencies that may arise, and thus effectually safeguarding the interests of all shareholders.

Experts have pronounced the property as in proven territory. It has competent management, small capitalization, large acreage, no debts, fine equipment, unlimited market for the oil, and all in all, is a business opportunity that rarely comes to the individual investor more than once in a lifetime.

The right is reserved to return all subscriptions received in excess of the allotment to be sold, or to increase the price without notice whenever developments warrant it. With these facts and statements before you we solicit your consideration and co-operation by inviting you to join us in helping to develop a great property that will be an honor and credit to corporate enterprise. Our faith is strong that this is a proposition worthy of thought and investment and that it can soon be made a property of tremendous earning power.

SATISFIED POLICY-HOLDER

(Copy)

Toronto, March 1st, 1912.

W. H. HILL, ESQ.,
Manager,
Sun Life Assurance Co.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I wish to thank the Sun Life Assurance Company, through you, for the prompt and very satisfactory settlement of my 15 year Endowment Policy, No. 61345, which matured and was paid me to-day.

I have also a 15 year Endowment maturing to-day in another leading Company.

The contrast, in the results, in favor of your Company is so marked that I want you to know it, but I am at a loss to know how such a difference could honestly occur. When I tell you that the profits in your Company are three and one-third times the profits in the other Company referred to, and this too notwithstanding I paid the other Company $1.15 per year more per $1000 than I paid you, you will realize my inability to comprehend the cause.

This is surely a tribute to the management of the Sun Life, and I am so well pleased I have applied for further insurance with you.

Incidentally, I would like to say a word for your loan privilege. As you are aware, I borrowed some money on my policy, a little over a year ago, which enabled me to obtain a substantial interest in a town site in the North-west, and you will be pleased to learn that it has already yielded substantial gain and gives promise to pay hundreds per cent., so that it is impossible to fully realize the value of that Policy to me.

I thought as an old Peterborough boy you would be pleased to know I am delighted with the result.

Yours truly,
(Signed) ROBERT E. DOLAN.

CALGARY

The City Of Opportunity

Capitol Hill

One of Calgary's close-in residential sub-divisions. City water is now in the adjoining divisions and sewer system is to be installed this spring. We expect these improvements in Capitol Hill this summer. Street car service is at present within two or three blocks of Capitol Hill. The City of Calgary has purchased Block 68, Capitol Hill, on which to build a large public school. A number of nice homes have already been built in Capitol Hill, and many more are in course of construction.

Lots in this sub-division are selling in pairs at $250 to $350 per lot. We offer you one block of forty lots, close to Block 68 at $210 per lot, on terms of Third Cash and Balance four, eight and twelve months, with interest at 8 per cent. on deferred payments. This block will readily sell for $300 per lot, or more, within the next six months. The block is high and level, and every lot is perfect. This is a gilt-edged investment. If you cannot handle it alone have some friend join you.

The registrar of Queen's University has been informed by Kingston agents of the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railways that the special students' rates will be withdrawn on May 1st. This means that the students from the Maritime Provinces and the west will have to pay full single fare both on coming to college and returning home after the date specified.

It is to be hoped that the plumbers of Galt will win out. Why should a municipality enter into competition with its merchants? Again, why should a Canadian town try to advance the sale of cheap made German goods, when Peterborough, a Canadian city, can, and does, produce electric lamps equal, if not superior to any made in the world. Canada, to work towards its great future destiny, must is busy at Picton." This refers to dismissal of the post office janitor there.

We do not know the gentleman. Still he may be a husky man who could make more money by cultivating his muscle, and using no more intelligence than the law demands. On the other hand, if one plays with political fire one is apt to get his official fingers burnt.

That the Canadian part of and influence over wireless telegraphy is demonstrated by the fact that Signor Marconi will take personal charge of the wireless station at Glace Bay, N. S., for some time. We have a wireless telegraph system in Peterborough, but its local name is gossip.

Unfortunate Fire at Keene.

A fire, with serrious results has just occurred at Keene. Mr. John McGilien, of that place, has lost his barn, together with grain, fodder, implements, three head of cattle and a horse, by fire, the origin of which is unknown. Mr. McGillen and his brother Charles were away at the time.

Man Found Dead Near Keene.

Isaac Dunn, well known to residents in Keene, was found dead on Wednesday in a little shanty on the river-shore just west of Mr. James McConnell's farm, by some ladies, who had brought him some provisions. He had been in poor health for some time and had evidently been dead a day or two when found.

City's Bill May Be Amended.

Peterborough's bill asking for the right to expropriate power plants, and equipments will likely have to be amended before it is again presented to the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature on Tuesday next. One of the members stated that it looks as if the city may be given the right to expropriate the Peterborough Light and Power Company's distribution plant, but it was doubtful whether anything further would be gained.

Presentation to Mr. Thirnbeck.

The members of the Girls' Athletic Society of the Collegiate Institute presented Mr. Jack Thirnbeck, manager of the Brock street rink with a handsome amber-stemmed briar pipe, gold mounted and caddy of tobacco. Mr. Thirnbeck has shown the girls many little kindnesses during their hockey games and practises, at the rink during the season just closed.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE STORY

The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian says:—A new and characteristic story of Florence Nightingale reaches me. She was a great admirer of Harriet Martineau, but Miss Martineau's inclination towards Atheism was a cause of regret and grief to her. When the news came of the authoress's death in unbelief, and friends, shocked and stern, were making remarks about her sad end and her lost soul, Florence Nightingale smiled as she said, "How glorious must have been her surprise when she woke in Paradise to find she had been mistaken."

[illegible] Instances of Interuptions Which Cancelled the Marriage Ceremony

A recent society wedding sensation, where the bride failed to appear at the altar at the eleventh hour, is not without parallel. Only a short time ago a lady on arriving near the church to be married ordered her coachman to drive her home again. Although astonished at this extraordinary request for the bridegroom was actually waiting in the church, he complied with his mistress's orders. It transpired afterwards that she had merely turned back because the crowd which had gathered to cheer her frightened her away.

In Bristol, some years ago, a marriage failed to take place at the last moment, in the most dramatic circumstances. The bride had been previously engaged. For some reason or other the engagement was broken off, and her fiance sailed for Canada. After some time she became engaged to a local insurance agent. All arrangements were made, and the happy couple were to be married on an Easter Sunday. A large number of people were assembled to witness the ceremony which was just about to begin when the first lover appeared on the scene. The bride fainted, and on regaining her senses she refused to be married to the insurance agent. Since then she has become the wife of her former lover, who has taken her to his homestead in Canada.

On the morning that another happy pair were to be married the bridegroom, who had a moustache and beard, determined to be clean shaven for the ceremony. Why he made up his mind to do such a curious thing on his wedding morn is not known. However, when he was shaved his friends all congratulated him upon his improved appearance. The ceremony was timed for eleven o'clock, and punctually to the moment he appeared at the church. When the bride saw him, however, she had a fit of hysterics, and it was not till some hours too late that she recovered her composure. She then announced that she would not marry her lover in any circumstances, declaring that he was betrayed by his mouth, previously hidden by his moustache and beard, and that he looked to her to be cruel!

Many will remember the sensation caused twelve years ago by the stopping of a fashionable wedding at the very last moment. The bridegroom was an exceedingly well-known figure in the world of sport, and the bride was the widow of a wealthy man. The curious part about it was that [illegible] only one [illegible] in her lover. Everyone else knew that his reputation was far from spotless but they could not, nevertheless, convince the charming widow. Everything was ready for the ceremony. The church had been profusely decorated with flowers, and many well-known and prominent people had taken their places.

The dramatic moment came when the couple met at the altar. The bride noticed that her intended husband was wearing a particularly valuable diamond tie-pin. Suddenly she cried out: "Take me home! Take me home! I cannot say anything more now!" To the consternation of all was stopped. So overcome was the bride that she fainted and had to be carried to her carriage. Later it transpired that this identical pin had been stolen some months before from the widow's rooms.—TIT BITS.

HORSES

Crushed oats are easier digested, and therefore more profitable than whole oats.

The driver's aim should be to manipulate the reins with a light but firm and steady hand.

A roll after a hard day's work is greatly appreciated by the horse. It takes the place of extra feed.

The value of salting the work horse regularly is often underestimated by horsemen. It is a good practice to keep the material before them at all times.

Remember that sudden changes of food may cause colic. New hay, new oats, green corn, etc., are often used. Make the change gradually, and no harm will result.

A horse that is extremely tired should not be given a heavy feed until he has had a little rest. Some feeders act on the supposition that a large amount of feed is what is needed to replace the lost energy. It must be remembered, however, that a horse so exhausted cannot digest food as well as one that is fresh, and, therefore, should be fed accordingly.

TIGHT COLLARS

A well-known doctor considers it remarkable that no one seems to have laid stress on the fact that such slight obstacles to the free circulation of the blood through the vessels of the brain may adversely influence the health of those who are in the habit of wearing tightly-fitting neck clothes.

The fact appears to be well known to veterinary surgeons, who tell us that neck constriction through badly fitting harness is a causative factor in "staggers" in horses. It seems to be equally well known that dogs suffer a great deal through having to wear tightly fitting collars. Is it too much, then, he asks, to argue that those of us who wear our own collars too tightly buttoned may find that practice some explanation of symptoms ascribed to other causes?

A Local Fenian Raid Veteran.

Lindsay Post: Mr. Fred Edmonds, proprietor of Wonderland, is another Fenian Raid veteran. Both he and his brother, E. B. Edmonds, were members of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough, at the time of the trouble, in fact he was the youngest member of the volunteer company drafted to expel the invaders. The late Col. Kennedy, who afterwards was with Lord Wolsely in the first Reil rebellion in 1970 was in command of the company.

FORTUNES MAY BE YOURS

How to Become as Rich as a Rothschild or a Rockefeller

There is no doubt that a fortune, and probably a large one, awaits the man who shall solve certain problems. Surgery, for instance, has made wonderful strides of late years, and its allied art of dentistry has become an almost exact science; but, though the dentist can furnish the mouth with new and wonderfully efficient instruments of mastication, yet the surgeon has hitherto entirely failed to replace the worn-out organs of digestion, says Tit-Bits.

He can remove, wholly or in part, almost every organ of the body, but he can do very little towards their artificial replacement. It is said that Mr Rockefeller has offered half a million dollars to anyone who will supply him with a new digestive apparatus, but up to the present we have not heard that anyone has drawn the cash.

The same gentleman is bald, and although he is probably less perturbed about his bald pate than about his dyspeptic stomach, yet doubtless he would be willing to endow that man with a pension for life who would rethatch his roof. Many hair-washes there are which have admirable qualities in the direction of stimulating the growth of the hair and preventing it from falling out, but even the manufacturer of those articles of the toilet would frankly admit that a real and infallible cure for baldness has not been discovered. The man who could rise up and demonstrate to the world that he can make hair spring up on a patch of pate as smooth as a billiard ball would be a millionaire in six months.

Many diseases, like leprosy, the plague, cholera, and smallpox, have been wholly or nearly eradicated from Western Europe, America, and the British Colonies, yet rheumatism continues to cripple tens of thousands, and is considered by most doctors as practically incurable. The man who can find a genuine cure is likely to be a millionaire in life and to have his statue in every city after he is dead.

The same remarks apply to cancer. Investigators are engaged on the problems involved in the cure of this disease in every quarter of the globe. It is no exaggeration to say that millions of pounds have been spent on research work in connection with it, and yet its ravages remain unabated.

So far as consumption is concerned all the above remarks apply; but in this case a more rational treatment of the patients and their more careful isolation have done something to reduce its ravages. There are teeming thousands of men and women who would be willing to shower all their treasures at the feet of the man who, one fine morning, could step forth and say, "Here is a certain cure for consumption," or, "I hold in my hands the antidote to cancer." Aye, the world would beatify him.

No one has ever found a cure for sea-sickness, yet there is a fortune awaiting the man who will do so. Many [illegible] be at all rough. It has been a human experience ever since man ventured to embark upon the ocean. Yet nobody has ever found a remedy for it.

Just as, when you have a cold, every person you meet will give you a new and infallible cure, so, when you are going for a voyage, short or long, everyone will give you a simple panacea for sea-sickness. If the sea is as calm as a mill-pond the [illegible], but in the chops of the [illegible] it proves a tragical failure. [illegible] lot of money in an infallible cure for sea-sickness.

TURPENTINE NOW A LUXURY

No Longer the Cheapest Thing a Householder Can Buy

The time was when turpentine was about the cheapest thing a housekeeper could buy. The biggest bottle in the house was sent for five cents' worth of turpentine. Now your sewing-machine oil bottle is big enough for that much. Indeed, turpentine has so grown in value that unless when you call at the paint dealer's and do not specify that you want the genuine article he will hand you out a substitute made largely of crude gasoline. Some years ago turpentine retailed for 20 cents a gallon; and now sells for 10 cents a half pint.

Turpentine is a southern product, and, while the demand has largely increased, the output has largely fallen off. The value of the output in 1910, though much smaller than the previous year, was 40 per cent. greater than in 1909, all of which shows that the south has a very valuable industry and one that demands scientific and careful handling of the pine forests that produce the resin and the turpentine to prevent the destruction of the trees. The old forests are already giving out and new areas are being worked. The product is taken from the tree by chopping holes in the bark and sap, through which it runs. The trees have been overworked, and many large areas that were valuable have been killed by the greed of the turpentine companies. The trees are a natural growth and cannot be restored by replanting. Their value will steadily increase, and it would be the sheerest folly to keep up the old methods of destruction.

First British Woman to Fly

The distinction of being the first woman of purely British nationality to fly belongs to Miss Gertrude Bacon daughter of the famous aeronaut who was really one of the pioneers of ballooning. Miss Bacon went up with Mr. Sommer in a Farman biplane during the Rheims aviation meeting of 1909, and in her book, "How Men Fly," which has recently been published she provided a fascinating narrative of the sensations of flying. She quotes the unfortunate Mr. Rolls as saying that his "first impression of flying was like trying to drive a motor-car while was skidding in all directions at once."

Servant Girls Are Coming.

Now that the servant girl question in Peterborough has reached an acute stage, it is of interest to learn that Immigration Officer Howson expects a party of twenty girls from the old country in a short time. As regards the servant girl problem, there are unlimited openings for the right class at good wages, in comfortable homes under conditions which are from almost every point of view, much more congenial than that which prevails in Great Britain.

Three Modern Farmers

The Reeve of Middlemass Township sat back in his great arm chair before a snappy fire, and opened his paper. It was a city daily, dropped at his front gate by the rural mail delivery service. In the half-light of the fire the Reeve's figure loomed large and comfortable. His shoulders, broad as a door and slightly bowed, suggested but did not proclaim their strength. The head and neck, rough hewn and massive, capped fittingly the body's column. The eyes of the Reeve were gray and steady; his mouth was a kindly straight line. He was like a tree which had grown from a sapling until it spread its giant branches protectingly over the small shrubbery at its base.

The Reeve of Middlemass was in the cheerful mood which comes to those who count their assets frequently. He was just in the midst of this pastime, when the telephone at his elbow rang.

"Hello!" he said, taking down the receiver.

"Hello, dad," came a voice over the wire.

It was his oldest boy, who was studying at the University of Toronto, fifty miles away. When the conversation was finished the Reeve returned to his paper, after first adjusting the shade of the electric reading lamp. He looked out of the window after a short time, towards the road where the poles of the Hydro-Electric system carried Niagara power past the adjacent farms. The great power mill in his barn ground meal and chopped feed for a hundred cattle. His house was heated by a furnace, and a wind-mill and elevated tank furnished water for his bath room.

The door behind him opened and in rushed a pretty girl of about twenty. She was just home from the MacDonald Institute at Guelph, where she learned not only the practical culinary operations of housekeeping, but also the hundred little feminine devices for making a home attractive. Her touch was every[illegible] in the great farm house. Cushions, draperies, the piano littered with music all spoke eloquently of her presence.

"Bill and Jim will be home on Thursday," she said.

"No," corrected her father joyously, "On Wednesday."

Bill and Jim were at the Ontario Agricultural College learning how to farm according to scientific methods instead of attempting to enter the crowded professions in the strenuous competition of business life.

The Reeve paid all the bills. He could afford to do so. His land was clear of debt. His annual crops had been excellent and all had sold at a high price. He owned stocks and had recently bought part of an issue of debentures made by the neighboring town.

As the fire burned low and as the Reeve of Middlemass dozed in his chair, a picture of thirty years [illegible] slowly out of the past and mirrored in his memory. A log [illegible] stood in a clearing, where several small fields made a brave showing against the background of heavy timber. A young man, little more than a boy, driving a team of horses up to the door of the house. A woman, with a patient face and gray hair, came out and climbed into the rig. They drove off in the direction of the nearest town. It was market day and they intended to secure supplies in exchange for their baskets of eggs and butter. The woman had one dollar in cash. Paying the interest on the mortgage had taken so much that year. The Reeve of Middlemass knew that boy. It was himself. He remembered how he had been forced to leave school just when he began to thirst for knowledge. He recalled the struggle upward against bad markets, the lack of farm machinery, the sluggishness which hung over the industrial life of the country until the coming of the good times. It was a bad dream and the Reeve awoke.

He returned to his paper, selecting the market page, and running his keen eye over the lists of prices paid for the products which he had for sale. "Just for amusement," he said, "I'm going to compare prices to-day, December 1st, 1911, with prices on the same day thirty-one years ago."

This is what he got by comparison:

Produce	Dec. 1st, 1880
Hay, ton	$9.00 to $13.00
Straw, ton	7.00 to 8.50
Dressed hogs, cwt	5.75 to 6.00
Chickens, pair	.30 to .40
Ducks, pair	.50 to .60
Turkeys, each	.75 to 1.25
Geese, each	.45 to .60
Butter, lb	.20 to .21
Eggs, doz.	.20 to .22
Apples, bbl	1.00 to 1.75
Potatoes, bag	.45 to .50
Cabbages, doz.	.25 to .50

Produce	Dec. 1st, 1911
Hay, ton	$19.00 to $23.00
Straw, ton	14.00 to 15.00
Dressed Hogs, cwt	9.25 to 9.60
Chickens, lb	.14 to .16
Ducks, lb	.13 to .14
Turkeys, lb	.22 to .25
Geese, lb.	.14 to .15
Butter, lb	.30 to .33
Eggs, doz.	.50 to .60
Apples, bbl	2.00 to 3.50
Potatoes, bag	1.30 to 1.35
Cabbages, doz.	.75 to 1.00

The Reeve of Middlemass regarded his comparison with considerable pleasure.

"Not only have the prices paid for my produce increased," he observed to himself, "but my markets have also been enlarged."

To prove this to his own satisfaction the Reeve looked up the census returns, showing the growth in the population of Hamilton, Brantford and Berlin, his three nearest and best markets, to which he shipped the choicest of his products direct to consumers.

Markets	1891	1901	1911
Hamilton	36,661	52,634	81,881
Berlin	4,054	9,747	15,193
Brantford	9,616	16,619	23,095

"There is no doubt," observed the Reeve, "that my home market has grown with the expansion of the big manufacturing towns. It now takes 80 per cent. of what we farmers produce."

He then satisfied his curiosity as to the amount of farm produce exported and the increase in exports during the last thirty years. Blue books gave him the following:

Exp'ts	1868	1879	1909
Agricul. Pro.	$12,871,056	$19,628,000	$71,997,000
Animal Pro.	6,893,167	14,100,000	51,349,000
Cheese, lbs.	4,503,370	46,414,000	164,907,000
Wheat, bus.	2,284,702	6,610,724	49,137,449

The Reeve of Middlemass dozed again, this time with pleasant dreams.

Twenty years before, a friend of the Reeve, had decided to leave Ontario and try his fortune in Saskatchewan. He settled on a homestead and endured the hardships of pioneer life. While the Reeve battled grimly with "the black nineties," the Westerner hung desperately to his homestead in defiance of frost, wind, fire and crops failure. At last the tide turned and a succession of fat years cured his sick exchequer. He harvested hundreds of acres of No. 1 Northern during the summer of 1911 and stored it safely away in great elevators. One day he was going to Winnipeg via Grand Trunk Pacific. He liked travelling that way because he had anticipated the line by nearly twenty years, and it was a novelty to ride on the road which had reached him in the prairie wilderness. The luxurious Pullman coach filled him with subtle satisfaction. Presently he went into the dining car, and enjoyed the attendance of half a dozen colored waiters. Among other things, he ordered poached eggs. The waiter brought two, delicately balanced on fragrant toast.

"Thirty cents for two poached eggs," remarked the Westerner, looking at his check. "Rather high."

"They cost us sixty cents a dozen, sir," replied the waiter.

"The farmers around here must be getting rich," remarked the traveller.

"Not by selling these eggs," said the waiter. "They come from Chicago."

"Chicago," exclaimed the traveller. "What are they doing away up here?"

"Feeding Western farmers who don't keep hens," retorted the waiter.

"I keep a few hens," expostulated the Westerner. [illegible]ly. "I even have to buy some occasionally."

"When people buy," said the waiter, "most of them pay through their nose."

The Westerner opened his suit case and took out a Government blue book, in which he buried himself for the remainder of the journey.

"Say," he called to the waiter as he left the car, "Where does your butter come from?"

"Ontario."

"And your vegetables?"

"Ontario."

"Meats?"

"Ontario mostly."

The Westerner turned up the subject "Eggs" in his blue book. He found that the imports of eggs for consumption had increased from 772,572 dozen in 1902 to 3,373,640 dozen in 1911. Of the latter, 3,313,727 dozen had come from the United States.

He looked over the market columns in the newspaper. In the old provinces, where mixed farming was carried on, farmers had a dozen sources of revenue. Eggs, butter, cheese vegetables, animals, all brought high prices.

"I have only one source of revenue," soliloquized the Westerner. "Wheat, and I'm mining my land. Some day it will give out. Our Western towns and cities are growing fast as the people come from other lands and locate here. They are creating a great home market for us. I am going to stop growing wheat only and begin mixed farming. If I am growing rich with one source of revenue, how rich will I be with half a dozen?"

While the Ontario farmer dozed in comfort, and the aggressive Westerner planned to increase his large revenue, the hardy settler in Northern Ontario smiled to himself.

"I've got them all beaten," he said. "The last census taken of the district served by the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway shows that it has an urban population of 30,550 and a rural population of 17,600. That means that every farmer has the townsmen as steady customers the year round."

And all three farmers were pleased to learn that the Dominion and Provincial parliaments are spending $8,800,000 annually to encourage and develop that most important industry—agriculture, which has passed from its status as a hard, unattractive and unprofitable calling to that of a fairly pleasant, fairly easy, attractive and an utterly independent means of making a good living.

"NO goods purchased abroad are cheap that take the place of our own labor and our own raw material."

Story of a Local Tom Cat.

This is just a little story of home life in Peterborough. A family living on Water street has a little daughter not quite nine years of age. The family also has a cat of the "Thomas" sex. This cat has a bad habit of bringing any, and all stray bones it finds into the kitchen. The mother of the family naturally objects to the accumulation of bones in the kitchen. Yesterday she chased Thomas cat out of the kitchen. The little daughter objected, saying, "I don't see why you should chase 'Tom' that way. He's savings those bones for his kittens." Still a broom was used on the bones and shaken at Thomas.

Annual Meeting of the O.L.A.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Ontario Library Association will be held in Toronto on Easter Monday and Tuesday, April 8th and 9th. The interest in public library work in Ontario is steadily growing in both the larger and smaller libraries, and a large attendance is expected. Every public library board is requested to send delegates. Programmes may be had on application to the secretary, Mr. E. A. Hardy, 81 College street, Toronto.

Men Who Don't Excercise

SUFFER FROM INDIGESTION, HEADACHES, POOR APPETITE, SLEEPLESSNESS.

Nothing so Sure to "Set Up" a Man Make Him Feel Brisk and Vigorous as Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Lack of exercise and overwork were the causes that combined to almost kill Samuel S. Stephens, Jr., one of the best known citizens in Woodstock.

In his convincing letter Mr. Stephens says:—

"A year ago I returned home after a long trip, completely worn out. I was so badly affected by chronic biliousness, so much overcome by constant headaches, dizziness, that I despaired of ever getting well. I was always tired and languid, had no energy and spirit, found it difficult to sleep for more than five hours. My appetite was so fickle that I ate next to nothing, and in consequence lost weight and strength. I was pale and dark rings under my eyes that made me look like a shadow.

"It was a blessing that I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. In one week I felt like a new man. The feeling of weight and nausea in my stomach disappeared. My eyes looked brighter, color grew better, and, best of all, I began to enjoy my meals. The dizziness, languor and feeling of depression passed away, and I fast regained my old-time vigor and spirits. To-day I am well — thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

For health, strength, comfort and good spirits there is no medicine like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Beware of substitutes, and don't let any dealer palm off some other pill on which he can make more money. 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, by mail from The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

THE MORNING TIMES

MONDAY, MARCH 25, 1912.

THE ACQUISITION OF RICHES.

To get rich at all hazards, and to get rich quick if possible seems to be the object to which most men are bending their energies now-a-days. Even—

"The humble man out yonder is working in the ditch,
Has the hope within him hidden that some day he may be rich;
And forgetting all the seasons that so foolishly were spent,
He keeps hoping he may profit by some lucky accident."

If it were not so, many a man who is now able to prey upon the credulity of his fellows would be compelled to seek othe remployment. The chief Post Office Inspector of the City of New York, reports that last year "Members of the Suckers' List" lost seventy-seven millions of dollars investing in the get-rich-quick schemes; and it is safe to say that all the "suckers" were not caught on the other side of the line. The man who goes through life "taking a flyer" at this and that under the impression that he will some day "strike it rich" is in 999 times out of 1000 only wasting his money and making rapid preparation for an old age of humiliation and penury. The sooner he awakens to the fact that there is no certain short cut to riches, and that the "lucky accident" does not happen to one in one thousand, the better it will be for himself and his family. The only safe plan to adopt, if he hopes to have a competency in his old age, is to live within his income and to systematically lay up something from his earnings no matter how small the amount may be. If he is living beyond his means he should keep in mind Micawbers statement, which was something like this: "Income 20 shillings, expenditure 20 shillings and 6 pence, result misery; income 20 shillings and 6 pence, expenditure 20 shillings, result happiness." If he cannot do more, he should make absolutely certain of an old age of comfort and happiness, which he may do if he will avail himself of the opportunity presented by the Canadian Government Annuities Act, in regard to which information may be obtained at any Post Office or on application to the Superintendent of Annuities, Ottawa. There is no other plan for the purpose which will give him anything like the same returns. So long as his present permanent abode is in Canada, whether he is naturalized or not, he is eligible to make the purchase.

Editorial Notes

A local citizen on Saturday remarked to a Times' reporter, "I saw an item in one of the evening papers a few days ago to the effect that the local milk dealers are cutting prices. I would like to find one of those cutters. The only cut I can find is when the vendor cuts a piece off the next dollar and adds it to my account."

Ontario is to get its demand for a Federal subsidy for the Provincial Government Railway. Hon. Frank Cochrane gave notice of a resolution providing for the payment of a subsidy of $6,400 per mile for the main line and branches of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway, aggregating 300 miles. The total subsidy will therefore be $1,920,000.

The government of British Columbia has asked the Senate whether Dominion government has taken any steps to prevent the immigration of Chinese and Japanese into Canada, as wanted by that Province. This is a subject of vital interest to the West, and will undoubtedly be given serious attention by the authorities at Ottawa. The Jap and the Chink are seemingly displacing the white laborer. Still, had it not been for Chinese labor, it is claimed, in some quarters, that the transcontinental railways would not have been constructed.

When one reads that three hundred hungry men marched into Grimsby, England, a day or two ago, and begged for relief, it is now up to Premier Asquith to "take the bull by the horns" and do something to relieve the strike situation. It is hard to say whether the operators or the strikers are either wholly at fault. In the meantime, however, England and her teeming millions are starving for the want of coal and what the use of coal means. The railway cannot be operated and that means that food suppljes cannot be moved.

One of our evening contemporaries, a few days ago noted that Ald. Anderson wants a public abbatoir. This seems a subject worth considering. The jews, a race that with what faults they may or may not have, for centuries, have survived, and, to-day control the finances of the world. These very Israelites, in the matter of their meat are far more particular than their Gentile neighbors. The rabbi must kill their sheep or cattle in a certain way. Every carcass must be thoroughly examined. Every organ of the internal portion must be carefully inspected. Should any sign of disease be discovered in heart, liver, kidneys, &c., that carcass is rejected and sold to butchers supplying the Gentiles' trade. With a public abbatoir, the meat we consume could be under a better system of inspection than at present exists. The chance of tuberculosis infection would thus be greatly minimized.

Death of "Tannie" Gillespie.

The news of the death of Alex. (Tannie) Gillespie, Hamilton, after only a few days' illness, was a shock to hundreds of his friends. Of a robust build, a cheerful disposition, a careful liver, and barely past his fiftieth year, he looked like a man destined for a ripe old age. The late Mr. Gillespie was an active cricketer and curler, and in his younger days a celebrated member of the Hamilton Tigers' Rugby Football Club, working on the forward line according to the rules then in vogue. He played first-class cricket for the Toronto Club, and for Hamilton before he moved here, with the Canada Life Company, a fine batsman and splendid medium-pace bowler. He was a member of the Toronto Curling Club.

ALWAYS THE SAME.

"Yes," said the prospective purchaser, "I always judge a motor-car by its engine."

"But don't you pay any attention to its finish?" asked the seller, who had been extolling the upholstering and trimmings.

"Never; my motor-cars always have the same finish—a brick wall or a ditch."

DEPUTATION FROM EAST CITY OPPOSES

of the community. "That is what we are elected for."

To Mr. Morgan, Dr. Morrison replied that an acre of land would be needed upon which to erect the new school, apart from this ample playgrounds now called for. "And I think it would be a great mistake were we to throw down this opportunity to acquire a six acre desired site."

Chairman Crane acquiesced in the foregoing. "At the South Central school when the children are out for recess they can't even stand up in the diminutive grounds."

Mr Hill—That school will have to be abolished eventually.

THE QUESTION SETTLED.

To bring the matter to a crisis, Mr. Eastwood here moved, seconded by Mr. B. Ackerman,—That a public meeting of East City ratepayers be called for Tuesday or Wednesday of this week, to discuss the question of a site for the new school.

Dr. Morrison moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. W. H. Hill,—That the Board convene in committee of the whole right now and definitely settle the matter.

The vote on the amendment proved a tie, when Chairman Crane voted with the ayes, and the resolution carried.

The original motion was of course lost.

Board then met in committee of the whole, and after a brief discussion resumed in special session and carried the resolution that they agree to the payment of $3300 for the six acres of the Armour Estate at the head of Hunter street east.

A PAYING IDEA

A Boy Who Developed a Business From Growing Sweet Peas

This is the story of a boy with a $2,000 idea—and perhaps more. He was seventeen and just out of the Manual Training High School in Kansas City when the great thought came to him.

"I shall grow sweet peas for the city florists," he told his astonished parents, "there's money in that business."

Happily for Bryson's idea his father owned several acres of unused land ten miles from the city and in close touch with rapid transportation. Bryson borrowed about 100 feet of it, got enough money from the bank, backed by his father, to build the necessary greenhouses so that winter should not interfere with his work, and buy seed and tools. The seed he bought from the best [illegible] in California. He did most of the work himself because, you see, he had learned carpentry in the manual training school; and he studied at night every catalogue and all the botanical books he could get. It took some nerve at this period to go ahead because the boy's school friends and a few of the neighbors laughed at his project. When they learned that he had cleared $100 and had paid back some of his borrowed capital they quit laughing. One hundred dollars was a mighty pile in Bryson's opinion that fall. He had learned something valuable about the dignity of labor and also he had a few pertinent ideas about money. He learned that with a good reputation one had good credit and with credit he could do many things. Therefore he rented more land from his father, signed up a few more customers, and went to work more eagerly than ever. At the end of the year—the second—he had paid his last note and had $400 to his own account. By this time he had two people working for him. Incidentally Bryson's father was willing by this time to back him in anything. The boy cleared $[illegible] the third year.

This boy, now twenty-one, has not given all his time to sweet peas, but these were his principal product. He grew violets and lilies-of-the-valley also, but sweet peas were by far the most successful flowers on the little place. He sold and still sells his products almost exclusively to city dealers in wholesale lots. He received prices ranging from $25 a thousand at Christmas to $5 a thousand for his sweet peas in the summer midseason. Early in the spring before the snows had gone, he got $7.50 to $10 a thousand and sold from five to ten thousand a day. The sweet peas were arranged twenty-five to the bunch. Bryson has from ten to fifteen girls for the picking and employs six or seven laborers and gardeners for the setting out and care of beds.—Charles [illegible]

THE HIRED MAN

Alberta Paper Hands Out Advice to the Farmer

The "Alberta Homestead," which should know what conditions are, hands out this bit of left-handed advice to the farmer:—

"The hired man will soon be with you for the harvest. He can have his sleeping quarters in the hay loft or the caboose, as he ought to want nothing better.

"Should he show unusual readiness for work, this is a quality which should be encouraged, and 18 hours should be got out of him a day.

"Set him to work right after each meal, as a hired man has no business to fear indigestion, and he can get his rest at night.

"If he's inexperienced at farming, an occasional sneer when he makes a mistake will brace him up, and prevent him from repeating the blunder.

"Give him as many chores to do as possible, especially on Sundays, or he might get into idle ways.

"Try and prevent him from running off to town on Saturday nights, where habits of dissipation might get hold of him. A couple of hours' relaxation with the bucksaw will soon stop this.

"A policy of this kind will put any hired man in love with farming and with you, too."

Don't leave it in an open dish or pan.

Don't put it in the bottom of the refrigerator.

Keep the cow's tail still by banishing flies. A simple spray will do it.

Strain all milk thoroughly. Germs cling to the dirt particles and may thus be eliminated.

Ungava Exploration Company

Off For The New Gold Fields

The purpose of this organization is to explore the practically unknown mineral resources of Ungava. The Company is in possession of information as to the location of rich placer diggings in that country, and is equipping an expedition to reach the gold fields about the middle of June. The Company is purchasing a schooner of about one hundred tons. The vessel will be outfitted with all necessary machinery for placer mining, and provisioned for one year. The complement of men will be ten in number, comprising experienced placer miners, who have had long association with placer operations in Alaska. The leader of the party is a man of wide knowledge of this kind of mining, having spent seven years in the Yukon and Nome. Each man of the expedition will have an equal interest in the results of the findings. No wages will be paid and they will sign up for one year, agreeing to turn all discoveries into the Company. Hence, it will be seen the confidence these men have in the outcome of their voyage into this rich, but unexplored country of Ungava. One of the parties is a man who was employed by one of the big trading companies of the North for nine years, during which time he made some startling placer discoveries, and it is to these fields the expedition will go first.

To those who are at all familiar with the vast wealth that has been, and is being, taken from the Alaska gold fields, the possibilities of this Company will make a strong appeal.

Placer diggings, unlike any other kind of mining, means almost immediate return, and it is not at all unlikely that this Company will produce big returns before the end of the present year. The man who will pilot the expedition, and who spent nine years in Ungava and Labrador, positively states that he got pannings as high as 80 cents to the pan, besides discovering big gold-bearing quartz ledges and immense deposits of iron ore. Thus it will be seen that the possibilities of the Company are practically unlimited.

The Company is working under a Dominion charter, which is very broad and comprehensive in its scope. It does not limit the activities of the Company to mining, but permits its embarking in almost all branches of commercial industry that might grow out of its explorations in Ungava and Labrador.

This may, indeed, be the nucleus of a great and wealthy concern, whose assets in a few years may represent sums which to mention at this present writing would sound like madness. However, this vast North Country is now coming into its own, and undoubtedly large fortunes will be the reward of those intrepid pioneers who commercialize its teeming natural resources: Gold, silver, copper, iron, coal—all the cardinal elements of commerce.

SUMMARY

FIRST. It has been known for years that Ungava contains great areas of rich mineral deposits.

SECOND. We believe we will be the first expedition to reach the Eldorado, although there are some fourteen private expeditions going in this spring.

THIRD. Our men are experienced prospectors and placer miners, and their only hope of remuneration is their interest in what they find.

FOURTH. There is no guesswork about going directly to the right place, as one of the parties spent nine years in the country and knows just where to go.

WINNIPEG
WHERE MONEY DOUBLES QUICK
LAC DU BONNET POWER PLANT
POINT DUBOIS POWER PLANT

The Fastest Growing City on the Continent

The growth of a city regulates increase in real estate values. The faster the growth in population, the faster is the growth in prices in both city and suburban real estate, and as Winnipeg is the fastest growing city in Canada, or for that matter on the North American Continent, you could not pick a city where money, either in large or small amounts could be invested to better advantage. Profits are sure if you buy where prices are right.

60,000 HORSE POWER HYDRO ELECTRIC PLANT

This great civic power plant furnishes power to manufacturers at a very low rate and will make Winnipeg Canada's most important industrial centre. Since the power plant has been completed, manufacturing establishments are being completed at an unprecedented rate, and during the past year over forty new factories started operation. This great industrial development means an enormous increase in Winnipeg's population. No one can, with any degree of certainty, foretell what the increase in population will amount to in ten years, but it is safe to assume that in that time Winnipeg's population will have passed the half million mark and real estate values will have doubled many times over. Compare the future with the past five or ten years and figure for yourself the possibilities that lie in an investment in Winnipeg real estate. Six years ago, property that sold for $6 to $8 per foot is now worth anywhere from $40 to $65 per foot, and with a still greater growth in the next five years, the increase in real estate values will be correspondingly greater.

PAKLAND PARK AN IDEAL INVESTMENT.

One of the best real estate investments offered in Winnipeg to-day is Oakland Park, which is located east of the Red River beyond the present northern limits of the city of Winnipeg.

Oakland Park is located in what will be a great industrial centre, lying as it does inside the new line of the C. P. R.

Many factories will locate in the immediate vicinity of Oakland Park, where thousands of men will find employment. Oakland Park will, therefore, become a great residential centre and real estate values will increase rapidly.

The price at which Oakland Park lots are now selling assures the investor of a handsome profit within the next twelve or eighteen months, and values should at least double before the final payments are made. The prices asked for Oakland Park are considerably lower than those of any other property similarly located.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Lake, Lush and Schafly Are the New Comers as Managers

The managers of the International League teams this season will be as follows:

Toronto—Joseph J. Kelley.
Montreal—William Lush.
Buffalo—George Stallings.
Rochester—John Ganzel.
Providence—Fred Lake.
Jersey City—Harry Schafly.
Newark—Joe McGinnity.
Baltimore—Jack Dun.

The new comers in a managerial capacity in the league are Lush, Schafly, and Lake. Schafly managed the Toronto team the latter part of 1908, when Joe Kelley was in Boston, and practically managed the Newark team when it made such a good showing in 1910, though McGinnity was nominally in charge. Schafly is a clever ball player, and a good leader, and Jersey City can be counted upon as being a factor in the race this year from bell to bell.

Lush is more or less an experiment though five or six years as coach of the Yale team may give him the necessary experience in the handling of a team. Lush has played in the league, and knows its calibre, so that he will not likely underestimate the strength of the organization.

Lake has had major league experience as a manager, having been with both Boston teams in that capacity. Years ago, when the Toronto team played ball on the diamond "over the Don," Lake was a catcher for the Leafs, and "Jimmy" Casey, then breaking in, was his understudy.

Speaking of the prospects for the future, Spalding's Guide, says of the International League:

"The coming season will probably see a much closer race, as steps have been taken to strengthen the weaker teams. Providence has changed hands, and with Ford as manager, and plenty of good material obtained of, or through, the Detroit Tigers, should give a god account of itself. Frank J. Nevin, William R. Vandusen, Hugh Jennings, and Ty Cobb are interested financially in Providence. Jersey City has been re-organized, and an active campaign for a first division club is on. In Baltimore, Jack Dun held on to the best of his men, and promises to set a fast pace from the start. Toronto, too, has a strong club ready to take the field, several big offers for players, notably for Tit. Jordan, having been refused. Manager Stallings, in Buffalo, has been very busy in his search for good material, and expects to make a much better showing than that of last season. The champions disposed of several good men by sale last fall, but Manager Ganzel and President Chapin set to work at once to replace them, and have purchased enough players to fill the gaps, in the opinions of critics. At Newark considerable activity is shown, and Manager McGinnity promises to place a strong team in the field."

Poultry Pointers

George Hansmann, a poulterer of Hillsboro, N.D., gives the following good advice:—

Grit to the fowl is what teeth are to the ruminating animal, a necessity.

A cornsheller is not essential. The hens will do their own shelling if you throw out the ears in short, broken pieces.

Let the fowls have as wide range as possible, but if they must be confined give them plenty of shade and dig up the ground frequently.

Young geese do not lay as many fertile eggs or produce as many goslings in the first breeding season as they do in the second.

Fresh air and sunshine are the best disinfectants that the poultry-raiser has at his disposal, and ought to be more often used in his work.

A plat of ground 50 feet square divided into two lots will be ample accommodation for 25 fowls. Confine them in one lot for a week at a time, meanwhile spading up the other.

The well-hatched chicks in the carefully-cared-for brooder will amount to little unless the food is supplied in proper amounts and at right intervals.

More harm results to flocks during the summer months than at any other time owing to the neglect of their owners, not keeping the house and bodies of the birds clean.

Prices of grain feeds are high, and the poultryman must watch his feeding closely. Feeding has become a science, and costs are now figured to fractions of a cent.

Always handle ducks and geese by their necks, and never by the legs, as fowls are handled, for their limbs are not strong enough to serve as handles.

A poulterer can well afford to pay one cent per quart for skim-milk. Feed quantities of whole milk and you will find it pays.

ELECTRICITY ON FARMS

Labor Will Be Trifling—Nothing to Do But Turn on Current

In these days when the metropolitan city may be described as a great electrical laboratory and consuming station, it should not be overlooked that the farm itself is coming in for its share of this universal source of power.

There are many ways through which the farm that can afford the use of the electric current may have it for the trouble of installation. Some nearby inter-urban electric line may have its surplus current for sale; some stream close at hand may have a gravity waterfall to develop electricity sufficient for half a dozen farmers; or the gasoline engine in connection with a dynamo is within comparatively easy reach of the prosperous farmer who discovers that to keep his boys on the farm—or even to make certain that his hired help will stay with him through the season—it is up to him to lighten those old drudgeries of twenty years ago.

In the home of the farmer, the first adaptation of the electric current would be in displacing the kerosene lamp. A motor in the basement and a pump and tank on the outside would effect a system of water-works for the house. In the dairy the cream separator, churn, and the washing machinery for dairy necessities can be operated. Laundry work—that bugbear of the farmer's wife—is simplified and lightened to the last degree. Even the long-sought "milking machine" is to receive an impetus at the hands of Yankee ingenuity, and, if it shall be perfected, the electric current must drive it.

In the cow barns and horse stable the electric bulb attached to wires in gaspipe housings not only will give the safest light for winter mornings and evenings, but already the vacuum cleaner has made its appearance adapted to the easiest and most thorough currying and cleaning of the coats of cows and horses.

Instead of the long and laborious process of ice cutting from ponds, the electric current will operate the refrigerating room's ammonia fluid with automatic stoppage of the motor when the required degree of cold is reached. The power may be directed to the farm workshops, where lathes and grindstones and emery wheels may be run for the farm's "jack-of-all-trades," saving not only the charges of the village blacksmith in hundreds of troubles, but saving the time of driving to and from the town.

In some of the northern fruit growing sections the electric warning signal is set for arousing the whole farm population any time in the night when the "danger" temperature is reached out of doors. This means at the present time that every available worker turns out and kindles fires in the smudge pots that are set in the orchards, prepared for the torches that shall wipe out the dangers of frost. But as electricity is light, power, and heat, all in one, may not the present smudge pots become electrical heaters, automatically turned on?

To-day there is not a practical electrical engineer who does not look upon the present state of electrical service as in its infancy. We have the electrical city. How long before the electrical farm?"

HINTS ON FOOD

Marion Harland Gives Some Advice to Housewives

"Things to avoid in food and drink," is the subject of an interesting article in The Public Health Journal of Canada, by Marion Harland, who says in part:

Mouldy bread is a lurking place for ptomaines. I have heard housekeepers gravely assert that "mould does not hurt bread." A woman who had studied domestic science in college argued with me, to her own satisfaction, that mould, being a vegetable growth, when it appears on stale bread, is as harmless as yeast. "Of which it may be said to be a by-product," she concluded. "Under the microscope you would see a miniature forest in that slice of mouldy bread. Toast it and you have dead wood—nothing worse."

She may have been right. I may err in trying to keep bread from moulding, if possible, and to throw it to pigs and chickens when the blue-edged forests appear upon it. I do the same with regard to musty loaves. I am positive in the conviction that musty flour and souring indian meal are unsafe as food for human creatures. Left to their own destruction as foods, the flour will develop weevils and the meal mealworms in due time. The germs of both must have been in the must and sourness. I actually knew one frugal housewife who sifted the weevils out of the flour and put it back into the barrel for family use! It never occurred to her that there might be as many invisible germs in the sifted flour as there were living wrigglers before she used the sieve.

Sprouting potatoes are unwholesome. I maintain that the water in which raw potatoes are cooked should be thrown away as unfit for culinary purposes. In some countries it is reckoned poisonous. Old potatoes should be cooked in two waters. Sprouting potatoes should not be cooked at all, except for chickens and pigs. Luckily, the rank smell that goes with the pale, dingy green of the peeled vegetable repels the would-be eater.

Since prevention is always and everywhere, better than cure, it behooves the wise manager of the household to shield her provisions, raw and cooked, from the peril of contagion. A fly will deposit enough eggs in meat in a second of time to stock it with larvae in less than forty-eight hours. Therefore, keep meats behind wire, and if they are to be kept a day or two without cooking, wash over with vinegar and a dash of red pepper.

Lay a lump of charcoal in the bottom of the chamber of the refrigerator in which milk and butter are kept.

Make free use of the whitewash brush in the root cellar, and everywhere let in the free air and sunshine once a day. Have wire screens in your windows and doors all summer.

Corruption breeds in warm darkness, and is carried into your dwellings upon the feet and feelers of insects. The price of security from perils, visible and microscopic, is intelligent vigilance.

FEEDING CATTLE WANTED

The Supply of Feeders Is Far Behind the Demand

The demand for feeding cattle has come on with a rush. On Toronto cattle market one day last week there were ten buyers for every load of stockers and feeders offered. Good feeders are scarce at any price, and farmers who are accustomed to put up a bunch of feeding cattle at this season are finding it very hard to have their wants supplied. Ontario will have a lot of rough feed this year, and will be able to make use of a larger number than usual of cattle for feeding purposes. That the supply is so small will serve to remove any doubts there may be regarding the future of the cattle market. Cheap cattle are a good ways off and the farmer who is so fortunate as to have choice, well finished cattle for sale this coming winter is likely to realize pretty well on his investment. The situation is being relieved somewhat by Western feeding cattle which have been offering in larger numbers of late. But even with this larger supply it looks as if there will not be enough of the good kind to go around. —Canadian Farmer.

DESCRIBES KID McCOY

His Entry into the Fighting Game in Paris.

An interesting description of Kid McCoy's entry into the fighting game in Paris is given in an English sporting magazine. The Kid was always a clever fellow, both in and out of the ring. But, knowing the Parisian's fondness of fine clothes, he entered the ring in a flashy bathrobe, and when he disrobed for the night he had on a fancy pair of silk stockings and a pair of green silk tights. He also was particular before entering the ring to have every hair on his head lying just so. The account also says that there was a lot of "Kid" about the fight, but not much of the McCoy. He was fighting Harry Croxon, a big English heavyweight, that could hardly get out of his own way. McCoy was there with all his old time feints and an occasional jab, but was always careful that he did not get hit himself. The farce came to a close in the third round, when McCoy landed one of his old-time left hooks that knocked Crox on down for the count of eight; then put him out for good.

CHANGING THE WORLD

Look Around You and Examine Your Environment Occasionally

"You cannot change the world; only yourself."

The above saying is apt to be a little misleading. For though the world is so vast, huge, and complex that to change the whole of it in any way would require powers far greater than most of us possess, yet, on the other hand, by changing ourselves we do much towards changing the world. "He who reforms himself has done more to reform the community than a crowd of noisy, impotent talkers." Few of us properly realise the greatness of the influences which we exert, very often unconsciously, on all with whom we are constantly in contact.

When you change yourself, you cannot help but change your influence, and your influence changes others to some extent, and thus changes their influence, too—and so on, like the ripples caused by a stone flung into a pond. So if you reform yourself, you are taking a hand in the great task of reforming the world.

"Your world" is your mission-ground. "Your world" is the place where your best work is needed. Your friends, your workmates, above all, your family, are the people who are the most affected by you. To reform yourself is hard, but it is not a hopeless task.

You can alter your whole outlook on life. If you are inclined to be sad and gloomy, you can, by persistently forcing yourself to think cheerfully, in time develop the habit of cheerfulness to such an extent that it becomes second nature to you.

Look around you, and examine your world occasionally. See where a change for the better is most needed, and set to work at once to make that change. Here is one, perhaps, who needs cheering up; go and cheer him. Here is one who seems to want advice; give it to him. Here is one who requires help; let him have any such help as lies in your power to give.

But, above all, look to yourself. Reform, like charity, should begin at home.—Budget and Family Journal.

AN EXPERT WITNESS.

Time after time the counsel had tried to draw something important from the sea-faring man who stood in the box.

"You say your boat picked up the accused at nine o'clock," said the barrister wearily, but still determined to gain some ground.

"Now, it has been stated that he jumped overboard nearly an hour before that time. Tell me, Captain Bluffarty, how he appeared to you when you picked him up. If you had been asked to give an opinion of him then, what would you have said?"

There was a long pause. The captain looked thoughtful, then yawped then stroked his beard.

"A-ah," he answered at long last. "Well, I'll tell you candid now. If somebody'd asked me then—just when we took him aboard—what I thought of him, I should have said straight out, insult or no insult, that he was one of the wettest men, if not the very wettest man, that ever I see'd. Fack, mister!"

"CATARRHOZONE" A BOON TO MANY THOUSANDS.

Because you are old is no reason for suffering with everlasting coughing—those terrible chest troubles and difficult breathing can be thoroughly cured with Catarrhozone. You simply breathe the healing vapor of Catarrhozone, and instantly its rich balsamic fumes are carried by your breath into the tiniest recesses of the nose, throat, chest, bronchial tubes and lungs.

Just think of it—a direct breathable medicine, full of soothing antiseptic pine essences that reaches every sore, congested membrane in two seconds. No drugs to take—nothing to harm or sicken the stomach, because Catarrhozone is the purest, safest cough, catarrh and cold remedy ever devised.

"For many years," writes Richard McCallum, Stirling, Ont., "I have suffered from Catarrh, and continually hawked and coughed, so that my throat was always in an inflamed, irritable condition.

"Doctors' medicine did not help me in the least, and all other remedies I used were quite useless. In one case it was time wasted in snuffing powder up the nose; in another using a greasy ointment, and so on. Not one of them was the least bit of good.

"I heard Catarrhozone favorably spoken of, and tried it. Really it benefited me more in a few hours than years of treatment with doctors' and other so-called remedies.

"Receiving such immense benefit, I continued using Catarrhozone, and in a few weeks I was completely cured of Catarrh and throat trouble."

Get Catarrhozone to-day. Large size costs $1.00, and lasts two months. Smaller sizes 25c and 50c. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

BABYLONIAN SURGEON'S FEES

The French newspapers contain interesting references to the discovery of a Babylonian stone which shows the fees that were paid to surgeons some four thousand centuries ago. The fees, considering the risk, were extremely moderate; and they were fees literally with a vengeance, and not honorariums, in those far-away days. An operation to the neck, we learn, cost about five francs. Setting a broken leg is, we are informed, put down at $3. Dentistry was paid for at a better rate, seeing that the tariff for removing a tooth was $1.25. This seems a very stiff sum relatively, but there is a reverse to this beautiful medal. If the operation turned out badly, and the patient died, then the unfortunate practitioner had both his hands cut off.

London Pensioners

Of the 69,200 odd in receipt of old-age pensions in London, 61,314 receive the full amount of $1.25; 2,876, $1; 2,991, 75c.; 1,413, 50c., and 540, 25c.

GALT TRIES TO INJURE CANADA.

Peterborough is headquarters of the Canadian General Electric Co. whose lamps, and other goods, are equal, if not superior to those made anywhere else in the world. The town of Galt has contracted with the hydro-electric. Galt's plumbers and sellers of electrical supplies have decided to issue an injunction against the town to stop it from selling to the people through the hydro-electric department, electric lamps. The plumbers claim that the lamps being sold by the town are a German make and can be bought cheaper than the Canadian lamps. They also claim that the German lamps are not as good as the Canadian make and do not last as long. The plumbers all sell Canadian lamps. By the town [illegible] lamps the plumbers who are paying taxes and living there claim that part of their livelihood is being taken away from them.

SALT FOR MANGOLDS

Best Results Obtained From Use of 10 Per Cent. Per Acre

That [illegible] ation of salt in addition to other [illegible] lizers is useful for the mangold [illegible] is generally acknow[illegible] quantity [illegible] ly is a question upon which the[illegible] considerable difference of opi[illegible].

To [illegible] finite information on this point [illegible] Harper-Adams Agricultural College has been conducting experiments [illegible] three years with quantities per [illegible] e of 2½ cwt., 5 cwt., 10 cwt. and 1[illegible] cwt. respectively.

The sa[illegible] applied in the middle of April [illegible] thoroughly worked into the soil by [illegible] tivating, harrowing and rolling thr[illegible] times before rowing up, the ridges [illegible] ing again split before sowing.

Special care has to be taken to ensure the s[illegible] being completely mixed with the s[illegible], otherwise the seed is liable to be [illegible] aged.

The dre[illegible]s were made across all the manur[illegible] and variety trial plots, and the [illegible]s are the average of the different p[illegible]s. The result was the following: The application of—

2½ cwt. [illegible] duced an average increase, abo[illegible] tons roots;

5 cwt. pr[illegible] d an average increase, about 5½ t[illegible] roots;

15 cwt. [illegible] oduced an average increase, ab[illegible] tons roots.

The h[illegible] plication of 15 cwt. was [illegible] ed for the first time last year, just [illegible] effect would be.

The ex[illegible] ent seems to demonstrate [illegible] quantity of salt that can be [illegible] with the best result is 10 [illegible] per a[illegible].

HORSES IN WINTER

Can be Ke[illegible] on Straw as Well as on Hay

Professor [illegible] H. Shepperd, of the North Dak[illegible]a Agricultural College, answering a question recently about wintering horses on straw, says:

The N[illegible] kota station did a considerable amount of work in horse feeding a number of years ago and made ext[illegible] trials with oat straw, compa[illegible] with hay, for roughage. [illegible] it was found that some horses did [illegible] as well on it as they did on [illegible]. While others were very much [illegible] carry, chiefly because their ap[illegible] for roughage were too [illegible] to [illegible] them to eat enough of [illegible]. As [illegible] these dainty animals there was [illegible] trouble in keeping them up on [illegible] straw as roughage.

The oat [illegible] used was that of a normal s[illegible] which was coarser and more wee[illegible] than that which had been obtained [illegible] year. The trial consisted of a [illegible] d of sixty days' feeding [illegible] the grain ration against a [illegible] ar period with oats and hay, a[illegible] sixty days' feeding with [illegible] and half bran and [illegible] feeding bran and [illegible] straw.

During the first thirty days winter conditions were present and the horses were used only about enough for good exercise. During the second thirty days they were worked at harrowing, discing and seeding and had nearly all of that work the last half of the month. The horses receiving oats and hay as a ration required nine and one-third pounds of oats with hay to carry them, while those on oats and straw consumed eleven and one-half pounds of oats per day. During the thirty days that they had light work, the horses on hay gained 176 pounds and the three on straw 169 pounds. During the thirty days when they had heavy work one-half of the time, those on hay lost 340 pounds and those on straw 345 pounds.

The similar lots of horses fed on bran and shorts, half and half by weight, gained during the winter conditions, 88 pounds when fed hay, and 83 pounds when fed straw. When they were on the straw ration with heavy work for one-half of the month they lost 225 pounds, and on the hay ration 235 pounds.

These results indicate that horses can be carried almost as successfully on straw as roughage as they can on hay, provided enough aditional grain is given them to supply them with sufficient nourishment. The additional grain required is about one-fifth. If the feeder has facilities for chaffing the straw and will moisten it and mix the grain fed with it during the season when the animals are required to do very little work, a smaller amount of grain will carry them.

SUCKERS ON CORN

In the past suckers on corn were regarded as very undesirable, and oftentimes the small boy had to go through the cornfield and pull them off. Recent experiments show that suckering of the corn plant is merely a response to its surroundings. When the stand is thin there will always be plenty of suckers. The corn plants simply try to remedy the thin stand by suckering.

In an experiment several years ago where there were four plants in a hill eight suckers developed to each one hundred plants; where there were three in a hill, twenty-five suckers developed; where there were two in a hill seventy-six suckers, and where there was only one plant in the hill, 198 suckers developed to each one hundred plants. It was noticed that a large number of the suckers produced ears.

Another cause for suckering is the richness of the land. Rich, new land has been found to produce nearly twice the number of suckers as old, worn-out land. To some extent the tendency to suckers is no doubt inherited, but the main causes of suckering are the thinness of the ground and the weather conditions.

Experiments conducted for two years indicated that it paid to leave the suckers on. The average yield for two years of corn with the suckers left on was eighty-one bushels, while for corn with suckears pulled off it was sixty-four bushels.

HOW TO STAND AND WALK CORRECTLY

Ph[illegible] al training forms part of th[illegible] good manners.

[illegible] at all times is like an [illegible] actress—she has [illegible] the art which conceals art. [illegible] is the first thing to be [illegible].

The correct position is to stand with the weight on both feet, the shoulders held well back, the chin in, and head high, but not turned up.

Do not stand with one knee bent or on one foot. This gives the figure a one-sided effect and will in time make one hip higher than the other. One shoulder will also drop. This position throws the body into unsymmetrical lines that are most ungraceful.

If you stand in the position described in the above paragraph you will find that you can stand for a long time without becoming the least bit tired, but if you shift your weight from one foot to the other in a restless manner you will soon tire and lose that repose of manner that has such charm.

You see much written of the American girls' walk. It has been called ungraceful, too atheletic, and many other things, but with all that is said of the American girls' carriage she has a freedom in her walk that is not without attraction.

With the head held up, shoulders bent forward ever so little, and a slight swing to the arms (not enough to be ungraceful), she walks with a quick, firm step, and looks every inch a queen.

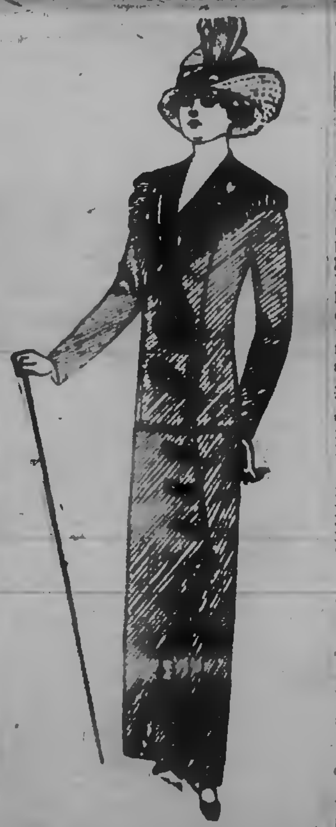
Each step should be taken from the hips, not from the knees. A knee walk is awkward, incorrect and does not give the proper exercise, and is very tiring.

For the drawing-room this athletic walk must be toned down. The girl who is accustomed to walking in the country and swinging her arms often feels ill at ease in the drawing-room, and does not know what to do with her arms and hands, but after a little training she should be as much at ease in the ball-room as on the tennis court and golf course.

These games, if not overdone, will give grace and good courage to the girl who indulges in them.

Just now there is a fad for walking and standing with the head and chin down. This is wrong, both from an artistic and healthful standpoint. The girl who walks with her head up as though she were unafraid of the world, and who looks at you in a frank, fearless manner and smiles pleasantly when you meet her is the girl who will always attract pleasant attention and is a treat to see as she swings along the avenue with that unaffected but natural grace.

BLACK SATIN SUIT



Black satin suits are again to be high in favor, and our illustration to-day shows a pretty design for such a costume.

Suggestions About Dress

A pair of very thin, coarsely-woven silk stockings will give the effect of the most expensive, heavy ones if worn over a pair of thin lisle thread or cotton hose. They are particularly good for street wear, when very sheer stockings are unsuitable. A black velvet dress will be much less difficult to keep clean if you brush it with a new, dry sponge. The difficulty in using dress shields with kimono sleeves may be obviated by sewing them in at right angles to their usual position.

Birthstones and Flowers.

The birth-stone for those born in January is a garnet, and the flower a wild one; for those in February, an amethyst, and the flower a pink; March, bloodstone, violet; April, diamond, Easter lily; May, emerald, lily of the valley; June, pearl, rose. July, ruby, daisy; August, sardonyx, pond lily; September, sapphire, poppy; October, opal, cosmos; November, topaz, chrysanthemum; December, turquoise, holly.

HIS OPPORTUNITY.

Cabman (his patience exhausted): "Oh, just wait two minutes, sir. There's a big mirror in Casey's window up the street here."

There was peace.

FUTURE OF GEOGRAPHY

Traveller of the Future Should be a Trained Topographer

Major Leonard Darwin, the President of the Geographical Society, says th[illegible] looking to the future it is im[illegible] [illegible] would then be regarded, but rather how the society would be able to maintain its reputation and its usefulness in the new conditions of geographical knowledge. It was true that the South Pole was as yet uncaptured, that the map of Arabia was still largely composed of great blank spaces, and that the bend of the Brahmaputra was drawn by guesswork in their atlases. But it was probable that all these problems would be solved before long, and where then would be the field in which the explorer might hope to win renown in robbing the unknown of its romance? They must sooner or later face the fact that the work by which the society had become best known in the past represented an almost finished chapter in geographical history, and to that condition of things the society would have to adapt itself. In view of the changing conditions, they ought, no doubt, to direct their efforts with more persistence than heretofore in the direction of encouraging travellers to make systematic and detailed examination of camparatively small areas, and not merely to cover long distances with the result of doing little more than to confirm the impressions of previous explorers. The traveller of the future ought to be a trained topographer, or to have thoroughly prepared himself in advance for some definite class of investigation, if he wished to win their praises."

JAPANESE COMMANDMENTS

A Salutary and Natural Code of the Orientals

There can be no doubt that the majority of these Japanese rules are nearer scientific exactitude than the rules of Moses or the ordinary practice of modern English life. Here are the Japanese commandments:

(1) Spend as much time as possible in the open air.

(2) Never eat more than once a day.

(3) Take a very hot bath daily.

(4) Wear rough warm clothes.

(5) Early to bed and early to rise.

(6) Sleep at least six hours each night and at most seven and a half in a dark room with open windows.

(7) Rest on the seventh day, and during that day do not read or write.

(8) Avoid every expression of anger; never exercise the brain too much or too long.

(9) Marry early; widows and widowers should re-marry as soon as possible.

(10) Drink coffee and tea in the strictest moderation; do not smoke at all; and never touch alcohol in any form.

(11) [illegible] artificially.

(12) In order to strengthen such organs as may be weakened by age or use, nourish yourself on the corresponding organs of animals.

A LONG WAIT

It is Mr. Arnold Daly, the famous American actor who recently made such a hit in "Arms and the Man" at the Criterion, who tells this story. He attended a dinner some time ago at which a lady who had risen from obscurity to fame on the stage told of how, one morning when unknown, she had called at Mr. Frohman's office in New York. She approached a particularly lordly office-boy and humbly inquired if Mr. Frohman were in. "He's not in," replied the boy, putting his feet on the desk. "Then I'll wait," she said, and seated herself in a chair. After an hour's wait she became weary, and ventured to make a second attack on the office-boy. "Will he be in soon?" she inquired. "I don't know," was the reply. "Will he be in to-day?" she persisted. "Not likely. He's in Europe!" At this point Mr. Daly sat up and took notice. "Were you that girl?" he asked. "Indeed, yes. Why?" Said Mr. Daly, "I was the office-boy."

LOVE SEEKS ASSURANCE

Why do I ask to have you put in words
That which no human language can express'
Speech of the gods alone can compass that,
Which lifts us to the gods and lets us taste
Of heaven's bliss

Ah, yes! I know what next you would reply.
Have I not read it in your sad, soft eyes—
Those heavenly windows of an angel's soul'
Have I not felt it in your warm caress,
Your clinging arms and sweet, red lips?
Do I not know?

Ah, yes!—even as the morning knows the sun'

And shares a common secret with the world
I know, and yet, ah yet, dear heart,
My ears are deaf, until I hear you say,

A "FAITHFUL HENCHMAN"

Romantic to a degree has been the career of Mr. Jesse Collings, upon whom Birmingham has decided to confer the honorary freedom of that city. He was born in a Devonshire cottage, and knew what it was to struggle on the pitiful wages of an agricultural laborer before he made his mark. Nobody is so ready as he to tell how he went to Birmingham with a solitary five-pound note in his pocket and started to carve out fame and fortune as a junior clerk in a firm of hardware merchants. Then he interested himself in social reforms and politics, and made the acquaintance of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, whose "faithful henchman," to quote the political description, he has been for many past years.

A man named Benjamin Hobson was charged in the Lindsay police court Wednesday with having escaped from a police officer there in 1910. The man, it is alleged, after escaping from Constable Thornbury, spent the winter in the lumber shanties. Possibly the poor fellow under arrest caught sight of the Scugog River and became desperate. He was remanded for sentence, and, it is possible that justice may be tempered with [illegible]

MAN OF THE PAST

Sir James Grant Refers to Some Canadian Pioneers

Sir James Grant, Ottawa, addressing the members of Zetland Masonic Lodge, Toronto, said in part: "Canada cannot boast of historic temples, ancient monuments or archaeological developments, but she has a pride in the men of the past century who throughout the country, have taken an active part in making Canada the great centre of attraction in the civilized world. In 1850 I entered McGill University in Montreal as a student of medicine, and resided with the late Mr. Allan Macdonald, ex-chief factor of the Hudson Bay Company in the Northwest. He was a gentleman of high culture and refinement of taste, and was a remarkable example of the intellectual ability common amongst the factors of the Hudson Bay Company." Sir James spoke of the days he spent with Sir George Simpson and other Hudson Bay factors at the home of the late Mr. Macdonald, and how the conversations always turned to the wonderful work of the Hudson Bay Company from the Atlantic to the Pacific in the fur trade. Mr. Macdonald lost his eyesight two years after Sir James first met him, and the latter was asked to take charge of the bulk of Mr. Macdonald's correspondence, and Sir James said that in this way he was in a position to learn a great deal about the workings of the historic fur-trading company, and of the extent of its influence on the future of Canada's commerce. He said that in 1863 he delivered in the city of Ottawa, where he moved in 1854, an address on the desirability of closer union between the different Provinces of the Dominion, and of the early construction of the Trans-continental Railway. Sir Jonh Macdonald asked the speaker where he got so much information relative to these subjects, and Sir James's reply was that he got most of it as a result of his close associations with the factors of the Hudson Bay Company.

FUEL FROM POTATOES

In the Form of Denatured Alcohol They Will be Valuable

Culled potatoes will be furnishing the power for the gang plow and the engine on the farm before many more years go by.

A bushel of culled potatoes is worth fifty-six cents. Turned into denatured alcohol they would be worth seventy-two cents. The process of extracting the alcohol is not one that every farmer can carry on, but the alcohol is there all right.

Alcohol is produced by the fermentation of sugar. Potatoes contain starch that may be converted into sugar by the addition of malt and then fermented. The potatoes are steamed until the starch is cooked thoroughly. Then the malt is added. When the starch has been converted into sugar a yeast mash is added and the sugar is fermented. What is left from the [illegible] Experiments have proved that the mash has a high feeding value.

Denatured alcohol is used for heating and lighting, in chemicals, in varnishes, in explosives, and as a fuel for engines. For some years the tax laws were such that alcohol was too expensive as fuel for engines. For this reason machinery has not been adapted for using denatured alcohol. But it is coming into use.

The United States Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin recently on this subject. Denatured alcohol is being extracted from potatoes in other countries with success.

A distillery for this sort of work might be conducted by a farmer's co-operative association or as a private enterprise. A plant with a daily capacity of eight thousand pounds of potatoes would cost approximately $12,000. This is larger, considerably than would be practicable for a coöperative enterprise. The plant would have to be in a potato growing country with good railway facilities.—Kansas Industrialist.

USING WOOD SCRAPS

Tag Ends Left from Big Work Not Wasted Nowadays

In these days of high-priced lumber the utilization of the small pieces of wood formerly considered of little or no value assumes considerable importance. The Woodworker gives a number of uses for these scraps.

Brush manufacturers have made some headway in using waste from furniture factories, but the pieces are of so many sizes and of such irregular shapes that success has been only partial. A small porch chair shop has been able to draw a considerable part of its raw material from the waste of boat factories.

Wheelwrights save the ends cut from spokes and shape them in lathes for chisel, gimlet, auger and other small tool handles. Wagon builders occasionally make use of scraps of hardwoods for lining brake blocks. Sash and blind makers save their scraps for the match factories, or if the pieces are large enough they are worked into corner blocks, rose blocks and balusters.

Coopers recut broken or defective staves of the larger sizes and make kegs or smaller vessels of them. Small headings are economically manufactured in that way. Occasionally defective staves and headings are made into dowels. Basket makers save the cores from which veneer has been cut and saw them into thin slats for baskets and crate covers.

Some of the makers on interior finish work their odds and ends of soft woods into small boxes and the hardwood scraps are made into parquet flooring. Planing mills work scraps and broken pieces, unsalable in that form, into boxes for apples medicines and other articles and into brackets, balusters, rose blocks and small quarter-round moulding.

A valuable discovery of Talc has been found near Madoc.

The wielders of stane and besom are still busy at Charlotte street rink. It is to be hoped they will not arrange for a bonspiel on July 1st.

PULLMAN CAR TRAVEL

A Britisher Writes His Impressions Concerning It

Yet I confess, writes an Englishman in Harper's Weekly, even bankruptcy seems welcome as an escape from the horrors of a Pullman, where you travel by day with two or three score of [illegible] fain to be a squalling infant and another a ubiquitous youngster with lungs and legs in an equal state of activity; where you have to rouse yourself every few minutes to resist the carboy's pestiferous attentions; and where the buzz of an incessant movement and conversation makes reading and dozing alike impossible. But even that pales before the trials that await one at bedtime.

A Pullman car at night is the most uncivilized thing on the American continent, and one of the most indecent. It quite fascinates my blushes. I sit enthralled as the darky porter strews my seat with other people's belongings, holds a pillow-case in his teeth and squeezes the pillow into it, and hurls sheets and mattresses about, and pulls at chains and sliding doors and levers and curtains. And what can be more enchanting than to hear husband and wife discussing how they shall dispose of themselves for the night, whether they shall share the lower berth or whether he shall be banished to the nest above?

And what pleasanter than to be made conscious by the writhings and heavings and vigorous protuberances of the curtains that just across the aisle some good lady is engaged in the fearsome struggle to undress. To walk the length of a Pullman car at about 10.30 p.m., when most of the berths are made up, and when the curtained contortions of those who are in the agony of "retiring" are at their worst, and when you butt into strange projections of humanity, and stumble over shoes and watch someone scaling the heights of an upper berth, is on the whole the most delirious experience I have ever encountered.

NAPOLEON'S GHOST

The "Ugliest Woman in Paris" Tells of a Strange Apparition

Mlle. Polaire, long known as "the ugliest woman in Paris" and "the actress with the smallest waist," now proudly declares that since she has become the owner of a famous old mansion in the aristocratic Faubourg St. Germain, she has been honored by a visit of the spirit of the great Napoleon, who first met Josephine Beauharnais within the walls of the mansion. Mlle. Palaire relates that towards sunset, a few weeks ago, she was reclining on a couch in her drawing-room. "Suddenly I became aware," she says, "that a man was approaching me in the half light. I looked at him steadily, with emotion but without fear. He was dressed in a strange, old fashioned [illegible] recognized the features of the great Napoleon, as they have been made familiar to me by David's portrait of the Emperor as a youth. As the Emperor appeared to me, he was as beautiful as a young Greek god, full of love and fire. It is thus that he must have appeared at the time of his courtship with Josephine, on the eve of the second glorious campaign in Italy. As I looked at him I was thrilled with joy. I felt that I was in the presence of the greatest man that ever lived. His face was thin, with the pure outline of a Greek. His great deep, dark eyes radiated love, passion, world-embracing ambition. His beautiful face seemed to be appealing for love. He pressed his hands together, and bent forward, as if imploring me, but without saying a word. Three times the same apparition presented itself to me at the same hour and place. Was he brought back by memories of Josephine, or did he come to see me? I can hardly tell."

A French paper suggests that Mlle. Polaire try the cure.

THE GIRL WITH A GROUCH

She is always selfish, unhappy and discontented.

The most selfish girl in the whole world is the girl with a grouch. The most unhappy girl in the whole world is the girl with a grouch. The effect would not be so disastrous if it ended with her own feelings; she not only injures herself, but she injures every one about her, because she seems to enjoy her grouch most when she sees those about her most unhappy. With some girls, this disposition is chronic—the attacks last from four days to four weeks. Girls subject to the grouch, spend nearly all their time thinking of themselves. They also spend much of their time smoothing out with cosmetics the wrinkles that these grouches plow into their faces. They cannot; however, change the facial expression that this disposition cultivates. Elsie Janis, who is famous for her youthful beauty, says: "A sweet disposition does more toward promoting good looks than any other thing. Never think unkind thoughts of anybody, never sulk, never get into a temper. You can't have a nice, frank expression half of the time, if, during the other half of the time you are wearing a frown. Keep your temper and think kind thoughts. Temper is a great wrinkle producer, and a sour expression adds years to one's looks." It is considered as much an asset nowadays for a young lady to have a good disposition as beauty. Lady Diana Manners, who is a recent London debutante, has been named Lady Perfect Manners, because of her beautiful disposition.

A slight sample of the way things are going on in this section, it might be noted that the Norwood Register of last issue has five marriage notices and only one of a death.

By a majority of 66 the Presbyterian congregation of Norwood has declared against Church Union. The vote was 94 for and 160 against, 75 not voting.

LARGEST EGG IN THE WORLD

The Aepyornis Surpassed the Ostrich, the King of Modern Birds

The largest egg in the world has recently been exhibited in the Museums of Natural History of New York and some other cities. It is the egg of the gigantic extinct bird called Aepyornis, which formerly lived in considerable numbers on the Island of Madagascar. This was a huge wingless creature, the largest and most formidable bird of prey that ever trod the earth. In life it has been variously estimated to have stood from seven to twelve feet in height, possessing massive and powerful limbs. This great bird surpassed the ostrich, the king of modern birds, both in size, in clean strength and build. The Aepyornis egg is six times larger than that of the ostrich, having a capacity of 150 hen eggs. Here are some of the astounding dimensions of the big egg. The shell is about one-eighth of an inch thick, the lengthwise circumference is two feet eight inches, and two feet two inches around the middle. Though termed a fossil egg, it is not petrified or turned to hard stone as in the case of dinosaur bones. It is in a surprisingly perfect condition, unbroken, and has a yellow color, although finely pitted in places. The contents have not been removed, as they have turned to fine dust, which comes out when handled through a small natural perforation on one side. The Aepyornis that laid this colossal egg has not been seen in the life of the present generation of the inhabitants of Madagascar. In former times, several centuries ago, they were quite abundant. Several incomplete fossil remains of the bird have been discovered, but no complete skeleton has yet been found. These show that the bird was not only of massive proportions, but short winged, and has been classed as a distant relative of the Moas and the Apteryx, fossil birds of New Zealand. The natives of Madagascar have for many years used the great eggshells for various domestic purposes, for carrying water and as jars for storing and holding food. Only two or three of these huge eggs have been obtained by Europeans and these were usually found in the sand beds of torrents. The present egg is said to be one of the largest and most perfect ever brought into civilization.

DON'T WASH YOUR HORSE

It Removes the Natural Oil From the Outer Skin

The practice of washing horses, as a rule, is injurious because it removes the natural oil from the outer skin and predisposes the animal to chill, writes [illegible] in the Kentucky Stock Farm. The application of water to a horse's skin increases the heat conducting power of his coat and lowers the temperature of the surface by evaporation and also by conduction, in the event of the temperature of the water being cooler than that of the skin. Even in the tropics, washing a [illegible] always takes the gloss off his coat, no matter how vigorously the subsequent scouring may be performed. This fact is certainly a strong argument against the practice in question. If it is imperative to wash, and there is not sufficient help to have the horse rubbed dry, without loss of time, we may, after scraping and going over him with two or three dry rubbers, take him out and exercise him at a brisk pace until he gets dry. We should then walk him about until his circulation regains its normal condition before taking him in. If we can not give this exercise, we may, after scraping and driving him, put on him a good supply of warm clothing, bandage his legs, and leave him thus to dry under his rugs, which he will do in an hour or less. He should after that be exercised and well rubbed down, so as to prevent his getting chilled. A good plan for getting horses to dry quickly and safely under clothing is to cover the animal's back and loins with straw before putting on a rug, so as to utilize the low heat conducting power of air and to give as little impediment as possible for the escape of moisture.

CHEAPER CUTS OF MEAT

Butchers should endeavor to correct the impression of customers that only the high-priced meats are valuable as food. On the contrary, the cheaper cuts are often more highly flavored and fully as nutritious.

The chuck is one of the cheapest portions of the beef, but when cooked slowly in a small amount of water, either with or without vegetables for seasoning, is a most excellent dish.

In stewing meat, if too high a temperature is used, it will toughen the fibre. Another mistake is to overcook the meat until it falls to shreds. The skirt steak sells for 2 to 3 cents a pound less than the others, but if properly cooked is just as good. Lay the steak on a meat board and score it well with a chopping knife. Then dredge with flour and put it into a smoking hot frying pan that has been greased enough to keep the meat from sticking to it. When well seared over on both sides, pour over it a little boiling water and allow it to simmer slowly for two hours. Season to suit the taste. A bit of carrot or onion or a bay leaf and a little vinegar to soften the fibre will add to the flavor of the gravy.

If Peterborough were honored, as it should be, by having a Senator from this city in Ottawa, the local press, Grit or Tory, would not keep continually trying to find fault with everything he did or does.

Henry Nugent of Omemee, a Fenian Raid veteran, gets $100. He was a member of the 45th Battalion, connected with the company at Lifford, in Manvers. All the officers of his old company are now dead.

GROUARD has, for almost a century, been the most important point in the whole of the country north of Edmonton. For generations it has been the shipping point to which all roads to the wonderful Peace River Country and northland converged. It was here the great fur-trading companies and traders chose as the headquarters for their operations.

Now that the frontier has been pushed back, and railways guaranteed by Governments, what is more natural than that GROUARD should be the centre of great advancement and activity.

Now that the wonderful Peace River farming country has become the most prominent feature of the present time, and the settlers are pouring into that district, GROUARD has attained an importance as to location and possibilities never before attained by any town. GROUARD IS ESTABLISHED—has a post office, stores, churches, government telegraph, municipal-owned telephone, weather bureau, doctors' offices, shops, saw mill, government land office for the far famed Peace River district, general stores of the Hudson's Bay Company and the large firm of Revellion Bros., the Peace River Trading and Land Company, also the Bank of Commerce and Royal Bank have established branches there, with other banks to follow. You know banks do not go into a town, city or country where there is no business, or where the business will not increase. Follow the banks and you can never lose.

This is not a proposed townsite, but an established town of years standing.

PEA E RIVER

C UNTRY

A LOT OF MONEY HAS BEEN EXPENDED by the Dominion Government, and also the Province of Alberta in thoroughly investigating the real worth of the Great Peace River Country, and the results amply justified the expenditure.

The Peace River Country is recognized as the coming Granary of Canada, soon to be the home of a million or more prosperous farmers, a district producing millions of bushels of grain, thousands of heads of cattle.

Will there not be one or more large and prosperous cities to handle the business and trade of such a country? THE RAILROADS SAY THERE WILL, so there are now three roads heading into that country WITH GROUARD AS A CENTRE; THE STEAMBOAT COMPANIES, operating on the waterways with GROUARD as a head, SAY THERE WILL, and are building several new steamers; the GOVERNMENT OF ALBERTA SAYS THERE WILL, for they have just GUARANTEED BONDS to the amount of $25,000,000 FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF RAILROADS into this country, and THESE ROADS GO TO GROUARD; thousands of farmers say there will because they are now going into the great country taking up land, not even waiting for the railroad, and an immense business is being done right now at Grouard with these people; the BANKS SAY THERE WILL, for some have already OPENED BRANCHES AT GROUARD, and others are making ready to follow. What does this mean for Grouard? You can readily see that GROUARD HAS BEEN CHOSEN BY ALL INTERESTS as the gateway, commercial centre, and distributing point for that great country. It means a great city is now in the making, it means that when the steel reaches it those who have been wise enough to invest there now will find themselves wealthy.

YOU should share in this prosperity. Terms are being offered you that you cannot overlook. You have often dreamed that some time or other you would break away from the everyday grind, and invest, or buy something that you could sell afterward for much more than you paid for it, thus making a start on the road of prosperity. Make your dream come true. We offer you the opportunity. INVEST IN A PLACE PICKED BY THE GOVERNMENT, BY RAILROAD COMPANIES, BY BANKS, BY FARMERS, AS A COMING GREAT CITY, GROUARD.

The Hon. J. K. Cornwall, Member of Parliament for Alberta, a great Statesman, says, under date of January 24th, 1912:—

> "Concerning the Town of Grouard, situate on Lesser Slave Lake, I predict that in the near future there will be three lines of steel running into Grouard, which no doubt will make it a distributing point of more than ordinary importance. This same Town will eventually become the headquarters for merchants, farmers, manufacturers, and tourists."

Success is at your door, open and receive it.

Railroads for Grouard

Great Railroads make Great Cities. You know that. Look at all of our growing Western cities, they stand as great examples. But then what one of them had at its inception such advantages as are now apparent for Grouard? Three railroads for GROUARD—think of it.

During the month of February the Government of the Province of Alberta passed bills for the necessary guarantee of the bonds for construction of two lines from Edmonton to Grouard, and on into the Peace River Country.

The Canadian Northern from Athabasca Landing west to Peace River Landing, via GROUARD. The Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway from Edmonton to Dunvegan via GROUARD. Construction starting at once, and will be pushed forward as fast as possible. Would the Government guarantee bonds for building a road into a useless country? Would the roads go to Grouard if it were not an important point?

Terminals on our Grouard Property

A third line, the Pacific and Hudsons Bay Railway being built by English capital, runs from the Pacific Coast to Fort Churchill on the Hudsons Bay, and runs through Grouard. They have entered into an agreement with us, taking over part of this property ON WHICH THEY AGREE to place their station, freight sheds, and all terminals, thus ensuring the terminals for this great road RIGHT ON OUR commercial property at GROUARD.

Again GROUARD is the head of some 3,000 miles of lake and river transportation over which 100,000 tons of freight were handled last year.

Property will be more valuable in GROUARD in two years time than in any new town in Western Canada that has been put on the market during the last several years.

Recently a few acres of that same farm was sold for $3,000.

On the following Monday evening there will be a congregational gathering and supper in the church.

While You Work and While You Sleep

Wage-earners make money only while they work. My Lot-Buyers and Gardeners make money while they sleep. Those who have bought from me during the past four years have made by increasing value of lots, more than 50 per cent. per annum on the amount invested, and they are worth from $200 to $1,200 to-day, because of having wisely imposed a "must" upon themselves to save a little of what they earned. Come in and let us show you a very easy way to do the same.

Gardens: I know one man who planted one acre of onions, and sold his crop for $800 cash. Was this not making money while he slept? We can supply a few acres, ploughed, to men who would wish to do likewise. Also a large place with good buildings and orchards suitable for gardens, and a large poultry plant. Immediate possession. Decide at once, and call for full particulars.

The call was formally presented to Mr. McCullough and signed by 232 members and twenty adherents. Mr. McCullough in feeling terms accepted the call, which was sustained by the Presbytery and the translation of Mr McCullough to the Presbytery of Peterborough was agreed upon. Rev Mr. Cooper, of Mount Forest was appointed Moderator pro tem. of Guthrie Session, and will preach and declare the pulpit vacant on the first Sunday in April

A SUDDEN DEATH.

Mr. John Edward Carscallen Drops Dead Whilst at Work.

As John Edward Carscallen was engaged at his work, at the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company's factory, about 4.30 Saturday afternoon he was suddenly seized with what is considered a heart attack. Before medical aid could be summoned he had passed away. The remains were taken to Comstock's undertaking establishment, and yesterday removed to the late residence of the deceased, 512 Parnel street. Dr. McPherson was at once summoned, but death ensued before he could arrive. Coroner Dr. Greer was notified, but considered an inquest unnecessary. The deceased who was sixty-four years of age, came to Peterborough from Newburg. He leaves a wife and two children to mourn his loss. The exact date of the funeral was not available last night. Mr. Carscallen was a member of St. James Methodist church.

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT COM. IN BRIEF BUSINESS SESSION

SUPPLIES FOR THE FIRE DEPARTMENT VOTED.

600 Feet of New Fire Hose to Be Purchased—A Hose Tester to Be Procured—This Year's Estimates Provide for Only Three New Arc Lamps and Twelve Incandescents.

The City's Fire, Water and Light Committee met last night.

There were present Mayor W. H. Bradburn, Chairman Ald. Johnston, and Aldermen Morgan, Anderson and Brown.

The chairman was authorized to procure a hose tester for the fire department at the cost of $185.

The committee will purchase for the fire department, 12 rubber coats, 8 pair rubber boots. (The Mayor and chairman to exercise their judgment as to whether "long" coats and "short" boots, or "short" coats and "hip" boots, are procured).

Two accounts of $5.00 and $2.60 respectively, for lunch for firemen when at fires.

To the Mayor Ald. Morgan replied that the Chief arranges for lunches for the men, when he thinks occasion warrants it.

The committee did not take exception to lunches being procured for the men when at big fires on bad nights, or when inconvenient to leave a fire for regular meals, but advised the Chief that the exact date when meals are served, together with the number of men supplied, must in future accompany the bill.

FIRE HOSE.

The Underwriters' report calls for 5000 feet of hose being carried in the fire station. Our Department has now 3000 feet of first class hose on hand, and 1400 feet of second class material, and the committee was authorized to purchase another 800 feet. The committee had samples of hose from the Dunlop Co. and the Canadian Rubber Co. to hand with quotations, but decided to invite tenders from the Goodyear people and the Gutta Percha Co. before placing the order for new hose.

LIGHT WANTED.

Fourteen petitioners asked for an arc lamp at the corner of Lock street and Gladstone avenue. (This year's estimates only allow for three new arc lamps and twelve incandescents). The present arc lamp at the corner of Lock and Weir streets will be moved from under a tree to the centre of the street, from whence it is thought the corner of Lock street and Gladstone avenue will be sufficiently illuminated.

LIQUOR FORCES WIN AFTER BITTER FIGHT AT OWEN SOUND

Owen Sound, Mar. 25.—The Owen Sound election contest on Saturday is one of many bitter incidents growing out of the local option struggle.

In January a Council composed mostly of temperance men was elected. Under the leadership of Councillor Dr. Howey they started to "clean up" the town. He asked for the resignation of the Chief of Police, [illegible] not enforced the local option law, and because of certain other charges. The Chief refused to resign, and the liquor forces lined up behind him. A citizen, Mr. J. D. Stoddart, took legal steps to unseat five of the temperance councillors for irregularities at the polls. One of these, Councillor Corbet, resigned and the other four were unseated by Judge Widdifield for purely technical irregularities. Among these was Dr. Howey, who had gone after the scalp of the Chief of Police. The town for several weeks seethed with this latest election controversy. Generally the temperance forces win out by a small majority, but on this occasion the [illegible] option forces [illegible] on [illegible] four of the five candidates.

The liquor forces are now in a majority in the council, and the Chief of Police will not lose his job.

WORKERS IN TEXTILE MILLS GIVEN INCREASES

Boston, Mass., Mar. 25.—More than 120,000 textile operatives in New England received a general advance in wages to-day, when the increases announced recently by many cotton and woolen manufacturers went into effect. The advances varied from five to ten per cent., but with the exception of the 35,000 employees in the mills owned by the manufacturers of Fall River, where a ten per cent. increase has been granted, the operatives will not know the exact amount of their increases until pay day.

MANUFACTURER MUST REPLY TO LARCENY

Boston, Mass., Mar. 25.—Arthur Willis Shaw, the absconding Freeport Me., shoe manufacturer, who, for love of Mrs. Georgia M. Stuart of the Back Bay, deserted his wife and children and mulcted his firm of thousands of dollars has arrived in Boston from Los Angeles under arrest on an indictment charging him on eight counts with the larceny of $19,000.

Taken to police headquarters by Capt. Armstrong and Inspector Gaddis, the police officials who brought him back from the California city, he was booked and measured and immediately afterward remanded to the Charles street jail. It is probable that he will plead to the indictment before the superior court, at which time bail will be fixed.

"I'll clear myself of the charges."

Such was the statement Shaw made to a reporter who met him at Springfield and came through to Boston with him. But there was not much force of vigor to his words. Looking from eyes almost hidden by swollen lids, mute testimony of sleepless, nervous nights, his whole attitude was one of dejection.

VARICOSE VEINS CURED

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

RAILROADS MAKE A BLUFF STRIVING--KEEPING COAL

Miles of Cars at Ebenezer Because Canada Railways Cannot Deliver Fast Enough

Buffalo, Mar. 25.—About eight miles south east of Buffalo lies the little village of Ebenezer where one can see the coal congestion at its worst along the line and spurs of the Pennsylvania Railroad. There are four yards or groups of switches, though they make all one, so far as a non-railway man can tell. One of these groups has seventeen tracks, with a longer extra one swinging out from the block. They extend from the station to the "Hump," the best part of a mile. They all have long rows of loaded freight cars for the greater or less part of their length, and these cars are practically all filled with coal.

This winter the Canadian lines could not keep their own yards at Fort Erie, at Welland, and at Hamilton clear. They couldn't keep Black Rock clear. They couldn't keep the yards of the three switching roads—the Erie, the Lackawanna and the New York Central—clear. And these roads consequently, were unable to keep the yards of the hauling roads at East Buffalo clear. And hence these hauling roads couldn't keep their outside yards clear.

At Black Rock the cars lie until the Grand Trunk takes them over the Bridge, generally on Sunday. The Sabbath laws against local traffic in Ontario, allow the Canadian railways to concentrate their Sunday efforts on getting their through freight delivered, and the week ends have been busy ones for the yard men at Black Rock and Fort Erie of late.

PETERBORO'S BRIGHT FUTURE

It looks as though the people of this Province, and even the millions who inhabit the Dominion of Canada, and especially the citizens of Peterborough, have not realized the great future that is, not only possible, but almost inevitably certain, for this city. Here we are the most important city on the Trent Valley Canal. Let pessimists talk as they like, the Trent Canal has a great future, as a factor in Canada's transportation. On the route of the Canal there are 110,000 horse power, either developed, or in process of development. The power alone means the saving of $4,000,000 annually that would otherwise go to the United States for coal. Then, Peterborough has exceptional railway facilities. The C.P.R. and G.T.R. have competing lines which, of course, means good shipping facilities and reasonable freight rates. As the center of a great summer resort system, Peterborough stands forth prominently. The Dominion government, realizing that this city has a bright future ahead, has appropriated a large sum for docks along the banks of the Otonabee River. Our street car service, our banking and mercantile institutions are equal to those of cities of much larger population. The whole aim of our citizens should be to BOOM PETERBOROUGH.

BODY OF AN INFANT WAS THROWN FROM A TRAIN

Barrie, Mar. 25.—The finding of the body of a new-born babe on the C.P.R. tracks at Midhurst, a village about four miles north of Barrie, is being investigated this afternoon before Coroner W. A. Ross. The assumption is the box was thrown from a southbound C.P.R. train some time during Thursday afternoon or night. It was picked up in a lonely place between two bushes and some distance from any important road. The big ravine is one mile further west, and the guilty party may have intended throwing the box out as the train passed over the bridge.

AUTOMOBILE BANDITS ARE TERRORIZING FRANCE

Paris, Mar. 25.—The automobile bandits, who in February terrorized many districts of France by carrying out an extraordinary series of crimes are believed to be still at large. They to-day perpetrated a bold murder on the public highway between Villeneuve-St. Georges and Paris.

A gang of four bandits who occupied an automobile ordered the chauffeur of a private motor car to stop. When the chauffeur refused, the highwaymen shot him dead with their revolvers and wounded the occupant. After throwing the corpse of the chauffeur into the ditch by the roadside, the bandits entered the automobile and next turned up at Chantilly, the racing centre, at half past ten. They entered the local branch of a big Paris bank, where they shot the cashier and another employee dead and dangerously wounded a third man with two revolver shots in the back.

The ruffians then seized a portfolio containing $8,000 in notes, and dashed out, started at full speed in direction of Paris. The subsequently abandoned the automobile when nearing Asnieres, a suburb just outside the walls of Paris.

It was thought that the brigands had taken the train from Asnieres to Paris, but a strong force of detectives posted at the Saint Lazare terminus has thus far failed to trace them. A large number of detectives are scouring the suburbs in swift automobiles in pursuit of the audacious miscreants.

PUBLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions of its correspondents.

DO NOT GRUDGE CHARITY.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I saw, a few days ago in one of the local papers, an article about the amount of charity that Relief Officer Miller has dispensed this year. Do you think that the amount of charity dispensed should be grudged? We have passed, in fact have not yet passed, one of the most severe winters that our oldest resident can recall. How the poor, the really poor, lived through those below zero days and nights and kept body and soul together is to me a conundrum. I would say, let the tax payer, the property owners of this city, who live at ease, and never have to consider whether they must buy "porterhouse" or "round" steak, share a little of their excess wealth with the poor. General Sheridan said "War is hell," but poverty, in a Canadian winter, is very much like what the American General described War.

Worker.

THE MADE-HERE EXHIBITION.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Whilst the subject of this letter is somewhat far-off, I think that notices by the Peterborough press, in the interim would do good and are certainly deserved. What I refer to is the Made-in-Peterborough Exhibition to be held here on June 3rd. As noted in one of the evening papers, the Ladies Auxiliary of the Peterborough Health Association have chosen an auspicious date for the event, the birthday of our King. There are two important matters for consideration in connection with this exhibition. First, is the cause, viz., that the proceeds are to be applied towards engaging a district nurse to superintend the care of tuberculosis patients of the city who could not afford to do such work. Secondly, the more worldly and financial results that will accrue to Peterborough manufacturers. Peterborough is now, since the lumbering of this district has greatly diminished, dependent for her success and future growth, on her factories and their products. There is no doubt but what, by a reasonable amount of outside and local advertising, both the city and our local [illegible] will greatly benefit by the coming exhibition. Every praise is due to the ladies, by whose philanthropic efforts this is to be attained. Allow me, Mr. Editor, in closing, to say, I give your paper credit for suggesting this exhibition of home made products by the articles you printed about a similar exhibition held recently in Lindsay.

Progress.

NO WORDS WASTED

A Swift Transformation Briefly Described.

About food, the following brief but emphatic letter from a Georgia woman goes straight to the point and is convincing.

"My frequent attacks of indigestion and palpitation of the heart culminated in a sudden and desperate illness, from which I arose enfeebled in mind and body. The doctor advised me to live on cereals, but none of them agreed with me until I tried Grape-Nuts food and Postum.

"The more I used of them the more I felt convinced that they were just what I needed, and in a short time they made a different woman of me. My stomach and heart troubles disappeared as if by magic, and my mind was restored and is as clear as it ever was.

"I gained flesh and strength so rapidly that my friends were astonished. Postum and Grape-Nuts have benefited me so greatly that I am glad to bear this testimony." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

BOARD OF TRADE CONSIDERS ENGLISH EMIGRATION MATTERS

Last night the Board of Trade held a meeting in the Council Chamber. At this meeting Mr. Vincent Eastwood occupied the chair. Several members spoke strongly on helping English immigrants to come to Canada. Mr. J. John made a really eloquent and patriotic speech in favor of the movement, partly as follows.

I believe Peterborough can be materially benefitted by assisting that which is substantial in our midst, that is, the wage-earners in permanent employment and of good character, to bring their wives and families here and set up their own homes, who at present are unable to do so for lack of the money for their transportation.

The business interests of the city would be benefitted in this way, that the money spent in keeping up the home in England would be spent here. A few days ago I read an account of an address given at the Board of Trade meeting in Toronto outlining a scheme worked by the Irish Home Rule of Winnipeg, to help such cases, and which had been found very successful.

Now I will show the results of the first year's working of the Winnipeg Imperial Home Re-union Association. 180 applications were approved and 700 people were added to the population of Winnipeg. The cost of their transportation was $23,582.76. Of this amount $6,013.45 was deposited by the applicants in advance for transportation being issued. The balance was borrowed.

During 1911 Home Reunion Associations were formed in Toronto, Fort William, Regina, Saskatoon, Brandon, Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, Calgary, Red Deer, Edmonton, Yorkton, Vancouver, Nelson, St. John, N.B., and two weeks ago one in Hamilton and an effort is to be made to start one in London in the near future.

I believe there are in Peterborough who would like to help their tenant round the corner. I believe our bankers, our professional men, and our manufacturers would like to help to make our merchants and trades more prosperous, and stop the money going to the old country, which could, under this scheme, be spent here. I believe there are some like my friend who would like to give a helping hand to the struggler in our midst, and in conclusion I have much pleasure in commending to your earnest consideration this movement which will make new comers better citizens, better Canadians and more loyal to Canada their adopted country, and lastly more loyal to the City of Peterborough, that has given them assistance.

As Mr. John finished his speech, Mr. Pennyfather arose and said, "Please put me down for $100 towards the movement."

Mr. W. H. Pretty spoke strongly of the great advantage which might be gained by bringing English people, particularly children, so that the latter might be trained to our ways.

Mr. Turner said, last year, the matter of considering the municipal elections was brought. He thought that this should be considered. He did not approve of the Ward system of voting for aldermen.

Mayor Bradburn intimated that such action would have to go before the ratepayers.

Mr. Pennyfather suggested that before a sweeping action were taken, a meeting of responsible citizens be held so that subscribers be protected in their subscriptions.

Mr. Turner added that his motion should include a committee to get subscribers.

Among those present were the preceding speaker and Messrs. J. J. Turner, Jr., Green, Dobbin, Wainwright and Mayor Bradburn.

Mr. Turner said, in connection with the guarantee fund, he wanted particulars as to disposal of the funds. He moved that a branch of the Imperial Home Reunion Association be formed in Peterborough.

The matter of sending a representative of the Peterborough Board of Trade to England as told in yesterday's issue was left to a committee to ascertain whom were willing to go. The meeting then adjourned.

STREET CAR BARNS BURNED IN TORONTO, MANY CARS IN ZONE

Toronto, Mar. 25.—Upwards of 150 summer cars stored in the sheds of the Toronto Railway on King street east, appeared to be doomed by fire which broke out on the premises late this afternoon and gained such headway before it was discovered that one whole section of the corrugated shed at the rear was abandoned by the fire fighters and their attention turned to an effort to save the western wing of the building.

BUILDING WAS NOT MUCH USED

The sheds are used for the storing of the open summer cars and are divided into two sections immediately at the rear of the large brick sheds facing King street.

An alarm was turned in to the fire department at once, but by the time the first reels arrived flames were pouring from the roof of the building.

FOUR KILLED IN C. P. R. WRECK, THREE ARE INJURED

Settlers' Train Ran Into a Freight at the Little Wayside Station of Amyot

DEAD.

John Campbell, Cheltenham, Ont., farmer.

— Jamieson, Owen Sound, farmer.

John Smith, Chapleau, engineer, died in the General Hospital from scalds.

— Nyal, fireman, buried in the wreckage.

INJURED.

Engineer Looner, held at Chapleau.

John La Loyest, Peterborough, a trainman, in serious condition at the General Hospital, suffering from burns.

— Conley, farmer, held at Chapleau.

Four men are dead and three others seriously injured as a result of a collision on the Lake Superior Division of the Canadian Pacific at the little way station at Amyot, 362 miles west of North Bay, early on Saturday morning when a settlers' train struck a freight. Misinterpretation of train orders makes this the second accident on the division in three days. It appears that both the trains had orders to meet and pass at Birch station, the westbound settlers' train passed the station, six miles west of Amyot, but instead of waiting at Birch station. The west bound settlers' train passed the station. It collided with the freight so violently that a number of cars were demolished, the track was torn up for some distance, and both engines were battered into shapeless masses and hurled from the tracks. Those who suffered most were the firemen and engineers on the wrecked trains, as two of these crews are dead and two others are severely injured that recovery is doubtful.

A fireman Nyal was so completely buried in the wreckage that for some time he was reported missing. Later his body was found almost unrecognizable. James Smith engineer from Chapleau, was brought to the city, where he died at the General Hospital last night, from scalding.

A farmer named Jamieson, from Owen Sound, was killed, and John Campbell, of Cheltenham, is also dead. Trainman La Loyest is being attended at Chapleau, where his condition is found to be so serious that he could not be moved to the city. He comes from Peterborough. A farmer named Conley is being held at Chapleau. He may not recover. Engineer Looney was also injured, but not seriously enought to be brought north.

Both trains, it is stated were running at about 25 miles an hour when the impact came, and the general traffic was delayed for several hours the rest of the day. Seven cars of settlers' effects, including much stock of horses and cattle, will be a complete loss.

With Campbell on the train with the settlers' effects went Arthur Conlan, aged fourteen years. Nothing has been heard of Conlan, although diligent inquiry was made for him at the scene of the wreck.

Ungava Exploration Company

Off For The New Gold Fields

The purpose of this organization is to explore the practically unknown mineral resources of Ungava. The Company is in possession of information as to the location of rich placer diggings in that country, and is equipping an expedition to reach the gold fields about the middle of June. The Company is purchasing a schooner of about one hundred tons. The vessel will be outfitted with all necessary machinery for placer mining, and provisioned for one year. The complement of men will be ten in number, comprising experienced placer miners, who have had long association with placer operations in Alaska. The leader of the party is a man of wide knowledge of this kind of mining, having spent seven years in the Yukon and Nome. Each man of the expedition will have an equal interest in the results of the findings. No wages will be paid and they will sign up for one year, agreeing to turn all discoveries into the Company. Hence, it will be seen the confidence these men have in the outcome of their voyage into this rich, but unexplored country of Ungava. One of the parties is a man who was employed by one of the big trading companies of the North for nine years, during which time he made some startling placer discoveries, and it is to these fields the expedition will go first.

To those who are at all familiar with the vast wealth that has been, and is being, taken from the Alaska gold fields, the possibilities of this Company will make a strong appeal.

Placer diggings, unlike any other kind of mining, means almost immediate return, and it is not at all unlikely that this Company will produce big returns before the end of the present year. The man who will pilot the expedition, and who spent nine years in Ungava and Labrador, positively states that he got panning as high as 80 cents to the pan, besides discovering big gold-bearing quartz ledges and immense deposits of iron ore. Thus it will be seen that the possibilities of the Company are practically unlimited.

The Company is working under a Dominion charter, which is very broad and comprehensive in its scope. It does not limit the activities of the Company to mining, but permits its embarking in almost all branches of commercial industry that might grow out of its explorations in Ungava and Labrador.

This may, indeed, be the nucleus of a great and wealthy concern, whose assets in a few years may represent sums which to mention at this present writing would sound like madness. However, this vast North Country is now coming into its own, and undoubtedly large fortunes will be the reward of those intrepid pioneers who commercialize its teeming natural resources: Gold, silver, copper, iron, coal—all the cardinal elements of commerce.

SUMMARY

FIRST., It has been known for years that Ungava contains great areas of rich mineral deposits.

SECOND. We believe we will be the first expedition to reach the Eldorado, although there are some fourteen private expeditions going in this spring.

THIRD. Our men are experienced prospectors and placer miners, and their only hope of remuneration is their interest in what they find.

FOURTH. There is no guesswork about going directly to the right place, as one of the parties spent nine years in the country and knows just where to go.

A small block of the stock is offered for public subscription at 10c per share.

A SUDDEN DEATH.

Mr. John Edward Carscallen Drops Dead Whilst at Work.

As John Edward Carscallen was engaged at his work, at the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company's factory, about 4.30 Saturday afternoon he was suddenly seized with what is considered a heart attack. Before medical aid could be summoned he had passed away. The remains were taken to Comstock's undertaking establishment, and yesterday removed to the late residence of the deceased, 512 Parnel street. Dr. McPherson was at once summoned, but death ensued before he could arrive. Coroner Dr. Greer was notified, but considered an inquest unnecessary. The deceased who was sixty-four years of age, came to Peterborough from Newburg. He leaves a wife and two children to mourn his loss. The exact date of the funeral was not available last night. Mr. Carscallen was a member of St. James Methodist church.

A local citizen on Saturday remarked to a Times' reporter, "I saw an item in one of the evening papers a few days ago to the effect that the local [illegible] I would like to [illegible] these matters [illegible] the [illegible] dollar and [illegible] to me [illegible]."

A slight sample of the way things are going on in this section, it might be noted that the Norwood Register of last issue has five marriage notices and only one of a death.

By a majority of 66 the Presbyterian congregation of Norwood has declared against Church Union. The vote was 94 for and 160 against, 73 not voting.

Building operations in Peterborough are in a tentative state. The C.G.E. Co. additions will give some work to local labor, as will the increase in Messrs. J. J. Turner & Company's establishment.

While You Work and While You Sleep

Wage-earners make money only while they work. My Lot-Buyers and Gardeners make money while they sleep. Those who have bought from me during the past four years have made by increasing value of lots, more than 50 per cent. per annum on the amount invested, and they are worth from $800 to $1,200 to-day, because of having wisely imposed a "must" upon themselves to save a little of what they earned. Come in and let us show you a very easy way to do the same.

Gardens: I know one man who planted one acre of onions, and sold his crop for $900 cash. Was this not making money while he slept? We can supply a few acres, ploughed, to men who would wish to do likewise. Also a large place with good buildings and orchards suitable for gardens, and a large poultry plant. Immediate possession. Decide at once, and call for full particulars.

We expect these improvements in Capitol Hill this summer. Street car service is at present within two or three blocks of Capitol Hill. The City of Calgary has purchased Block 68, Capitol Hill, on which to build a large public school. A number of nice homes have already been built in Capitol Hill, and many more are in course of construction.

Lots in this sub-division are selling in pairs at $250 to $350 per lot. We offer you one block of forty lots, close to Block 68 at $210 per lot, on terms of Third Cash and Balance four, eight and twelve months, with interest at 8 per cent. on deferred payments. This block will readily sell for $300 per lot, or more, within the next six months. The block is high and level, and every lot is perfect. This is a gilt-edged investment. THE WOODBINE

A $10.000 Plate With 100 Entries is Predicted ere Long

Entries for the King's Plate this year will probably run about the same in number as last year, but there is every [illegible] anticipate next season the beginning of an increase that will bring the number of nominations to a hundred before many years have passed. Now that two-year-old winners are eligible and the value of the Plate is mounting, and the position of the turf in Canada becoming unassailable, we may look for a $10,000 Plate, with a hundred entries. I have already come across several men who have no horses, but who are in the market for Province-bred yearlings, which they would race next season, and put in the Plate the following year. The value of horses foaled in Canada is bound to be vastly added to by the enlarged opportunities offered them. Coming back to the race to be run on the 18th of May—not far away, in spite of all the snow now on the ground—two owners who were not interested last year are likely to figure largely in the outcome. Up at Barrie the Dyment stable shelters four or five elegibles, from which Trainer John Nixon will probably make Heresy and Tropaeolium his choice. Either one would be good enough for most owners to have in the Plate. The other owner not altogether a new-comer to the guineas, but one whose first serious attempt is now being made, is Mr. Charles Crew of the Half-way House, on the Kingston Road. His jacket will be carried by the three-year-old filly Amberite, by Martimas-Lyddite. A full sister to Shimonese and Powderman, she is better furnished and more forward than either of these at the same age. Her work last fall was perhaps not as fast as anticipated, but it was not her limit and she was always master of her workmate. The very useful Kilo, which won the Quebec King's Plate for Mr. Kenneth Dawes, and followed that up by a vitcory in a selling race from which he went to the Crew stable. One would expect to find Amberite in the Valley Farm stable, and the fact that she is not is one evidence of the bona fides of the annual public sales of the Valley Farm stock. The filly was bid up to $1,000 for the racing stable, which was, and is, quite distinct from breeding interest, and there Col. Hendrie stopped. That was the limit, but Charlie Crew was willing to go still higher. He bid 1,050, and became the owner of a very likely winner of a richer King's Plate than any yet run. It will not be an unpopular victory, you may be sure, if the King's uncle has this year to present the guineas to a man who had pluck enough to pay the record price for a Province-bred yearling.—The Globe.

THE LACROSSE OUTLOOK

Some Healthy Rivalry Between the Eastern and Western Clubs

What lacrosse players will be seen at the Coast and in the big league in the East during the coming season is far from being definitely settled and will probably remain so until the period of the annual migration takes place. One fact remains, however, and that is that there will be some healthy rivalry between the Eastern and Coast clubs, and the league which flourishes the largest wallet will be the one to win out. Following the announcement that the Eastern clubs had decided on a salary limit came an avalanche that this clause had been perpetrated more for a joke than for any other purpose and that the Eastern magnates would be as keen figures in the market as Con Jones or any of the other clubs at the Coast. All of which looks pretty soft for the player. However, the fact that there is to be a merry war is not to be disguised. With the Minto Cup in the possession of Con Jones, who spent thousands of dollars to bring it to this city, it is not to be expected that now that he has the cup in his possession he will let it slip away from him without a struggle. On the other hand, the East has been so long separated from this famous piece of jewelry that the clubs in that part of the country would go to almost any length to have it brought back again. All of which indicates that there will be a scramble for another fight for the pennant, champion team, and a fight in which the size of the bank-roll will be the deciding factor.—Saturday Sunset.

A MODEL HUSBAND

He had been married just a year, and one day strolled into his office grinning all over his face and whistling.

"What is the matter with you?" asked his colleague.

"Matter?" Why when I left home this morning my wife said: 'Dear, you are a model husband.'"

"Well, that is not much of a compliment," said his partner.

"I should like to know why not?" stated the young husband.

"Well, take my advice and look up the English Dictionary, and note what the word 'Model' means."

The young husband did so, and this is what came to his gaze, and dampened his feelings:

"Model, a small pattern, a miniature of something on a larger scale."

TOO MANY COLLECTIONS

A Scot, paying a visit to London, was taken by his nephew to a service in St. Paul's Cathedral. He had no acquaintance with the Liturgy of the Church of England. He picked up a prayer-book and became very interested, but as he turned over the leaves his face became clouded with a look of intense anxiety.

He placed the prayer-book carefully down, looked cautiously round, picked up his hat, and crept stealthily to the door.

His nephew followed him, and said. "Are you ill, uncle? What is the matter?"

The uncle replied, "No, but it is enough to make any man ill, the number of collections made in this kirk!"

[illegible] said the nephew [illegible] certainly won't be more than one."

"Well," replied the uncle, "they shouldna' mark so many in the book. There's naething but 'collect' and a bit of prayer, then 'collect' again, and say I to masel, 'I'll bide here until all these collections are taken, I'll no hae a bawbee left in ma pocket.'"

"The English climate is rather changeable."

A TIP TO BUSINESSLIKE FARMERS

A motor-car had just reached a nice level stretch of road, and the man in the goggles was preparing for a scorch, when an honest-eyed old farmer stepped from the hillside, and held up his hand.

"Reckon you was jest going to slip along tidy fast," he said.

The motorist seemed angry for having been stopped, and wanted to know why he had stopped him. The old farmer replied:

"Look through these 'ere glasses of mine, and then perhaps you will change your mind."

The motorist looked through the glasses, and beheld a policeman on the branch of a tree.

"Great Scott!" he said: "It's nothing but a police-trap. Thanks, old friend." And the clink of coins was heard.

A minute later he went crawling past the tree at six miles per hour, gotten gains, remarked:

"That idea of carting the scarecrow from the pea-field and fixing it to the tree wern't so bad."

IN THE DARK.

"Before I propose, Miss Plainer, I must know if you have anything in the bank?"

"Yes, Mr. Hunter. I have a sweetheart there; he's the manager. We are to be married next month."

GERMAN'S DEADLY NEW SIEGE GUN

Fires Huge Bomb Which Does Not Enter Bore---A Destructive Weapon

A destructive new type of siege gun has just yielded satisfactory results to experiments conducted by the German military authorities.

The new gun was constructed by the firm of Krupp. It is an improvement on an idea much used by the Japanese in the siege of Port Arthur, and is designed to aid the advance of infantry storming an entrenched position. At the same tiem, experiments have been carried out with a new form of hand grenade, which effects much the same purpose.

For long military experts in Germany have been puzzling over the problem of how the long range artillery of an army could render efficient support to its own advancing infantry right up to the trenches of a fortified position. According to present "siege technique" the artillery of an attacking army has to cease bombarding the enemy's entrenchments as soon as the storming infantry gets to close quarters, otherwise the stormers are likely to be shot down by their own guns from the rear.

This cessation of the attackers' bombardment enables the besieged to emerge from their entrenchments and pour a devastating fire at close quarters into the ranks of the attacking force, which is thus deprived of the support of its own artillery just at the moment when it most stands in need of it. The new gun has been devised to overcome this difficulty.

It has an extremely narrow, unrifled bore, and is of very light construction, easily capable of being carried by two men, and is intended to be carried in the front lines of the advancing infantry. Its most remarkable feature is its projectile, which consists of a round bomb of great diameter loaded with a very powerful explosive mixture. The bomb is of far greater diameter than the bore of the gun which throws it, and is provided with a long stick-like tail which is loaded into the barrel of the gun. Its lower end, which is enlarged to a wad or piston-like form, resting on the guncharge att he bottom of the barrel. The bamb itself merely lies on the gun muzzle, quite outside the bore.

On being fired, the trailing stick like tail serves to keep the bomb in its proper direction of flight, and only detaches itself and falls to earth after a certain distance has been covered, leaving the bomb to pursue its course alone.

The experiments have shown that a reasonable precision can be obtained with the new missile up to a distance [illegible] city, is capable of great destruction. serves not only to prevent the defendends emerging from their cover, but also to make great breaches in their entrenchments or fortifications.

CAULIFLOWER SEED

A Woman on Puget Sound Island Grows a Huge Quantity of It

Nine-tenths of the world's supply of Cauliflower seed is grown by a woman on a Puget Sound island. Startling as this statement may seem, the fact remains that it is not due altogether to any supremacy of knowledge or skill that has enabled Mrs. Anne Archibault to achieve what thousands of first rank gardeners hopelessly abandoned. It is due to the peculiar climatic conditions of Whidby island. Outside of Holland no other section affords the climatic requisites for maturing the seed pods of cauliflower plants.

It was an accident, this discovery of Mrs. Archibault, that has made it possible for her to own 1,000 acres of fertile land and to enjoy a business of $100,000 annually. Cauliflower seed will not mature except under certain favorable conditions. One is dampness, humidity, which gives the tiny seeds the plumpness so essential to development. Another is water—not irrigation, rain, nor the wet, boggy mush of a marsh, but a continuous moist soil beneath which a hardpan subsoil acts as a floor to a reservoir. The land of Whidby Island is ideal for this culture.

Cauliflower plants are transplanted like cabbage in rows. The usual cultivation is continued until the seed pods form. Then even the wind should be kept from the fields, for even the flutter of a tiny bird over a cluster of the seed pods will mar the perfect development of the seed. Harvest consists in gathering the dry pods, artificial drying in the sun, a clover-seed separator and a fanning mill.

Mrs. Archibault's first crop amounted to a handful of seed. About this time she read in a bulletin issued by the department of agriculture that the supply of this seed was short and limited to a few hundred pounds. This was five years ago. Like a flash Mrs. Archibault saw her longed for independence. She grew 400 pounds of seed in 1907. Communication with some well-known seedmen brought orders for her supply at $3 a pound. Every year since she has increased the yield of seed until the present world's supply of 30,000 pounds is practically all grown by her.

Farmers all over Whidby island grow this seed and sell their product to Mrs. Archibault, who markets it through her eastern sales agencies.

The cauliflower fields are beautiful at flowering time, the immaculate snow-white blossoms being alive with white butterflies. The mistress does not interfere with these cabbage moths, believing they aid in scattering the pollen from flower to flower.—Gail H. Fickle.

RABIES, HYDROPHOBIA

A History of the Disease and How to Treat It

During the past year many cases of rabies have been reported in Canada, which have caused much loss of live stock, and, in several localities, people have been bitten.

This is one of the oldest diseases known. In the fourth century B. C. it was described by Aristotle, who wrote: "Dogs suffer from a madness which puts them in a state of fury, and all the animals that they bite when in this condition become also attacked by rabies."

The season of the year makes very little difference, as the disease is just as prevalent in winter as it is in summer. This seems contrary to the ideas of many people, who think that July and August, "dog days," are the only time that dogs are subject to rabies.

Cause

Rabies is caused in nearly all cases by the bite of a rabid animal. It is possible to contract the disease from the saliva, the tears from the eyes, or the milk of a rabid animal. The rabid dog is a source of danger a few days before the symptoms of the disease appear, but in no case before he was bitten by a rabid animal, or otherwise innoculated. Hot weather, lack of water or ill treatment will never in themselves produce rabies.

The dog is the principal source of which rabies is spread over the country.

Symptoms

The symptoms seldom develop in less than fourteen days after the animal was bitten, [illegible] commonly three to six weeks, but they may not show for six months [illegible] year. Not all animals bitten develop the disease. It depends somewhat upon the part of the body [illegible]. It man there is [illegible] bitten through the clothing [illegible] parts of the body [illegible] for the symptoms to develop in less than two weeks [illegible] head. The symptoms [illegible] in one of two forms—furious or dumb.

Furious Rabies

With the furious form the dog is at first noticed to seek the company of his master more than usual, or he will hunt dark, secluded places. Sometimes he will make sudden starts towards objects. These conditions last for a day or two. Later he becomes restless, and will often travel twenty to thirty miles in a day. While he is on this trip he is very likely to bite cattle, hogs, and dogs often passing horse and man, unless they interfere with his course. He will usually return home unless he is killed. During this period he is irritable, seldom eating or drinking, not because he does not want food or water, nor because he is afraid of water, for he is not, but from the fact that his throat is paralyzed and he cannot swallow. Often he will force sticks and stones down his throat in efforts to satisfy hunger and thirst. This period of [illegible] which has already taken place in the throat, as shown by the voice, which has already changed to a prolonged howl, and the inability to swallow. This is followed by paralysis and death, the entire symptoms lasting from four to ten days.

Treatment

This consists of a preventative treatment [illegible] given before the symptoms have developed. In order to be effective it must be taken within a few days after having been bitten by a rabid animal. The treatment may also be given to valuable domestic animals.

NINE HEALTH COMMANDMENTS

1. Keep windows open day and night.
2. Do not spit.
3. Breathe through the nose by keeping the mouth shut.
4. Drink pure water.
5. Eat slowly, take well-cooked meals, and cultivate regular habits.
6. Wear loose clothing of seasonable material.
7. Take regular open-air exercise, in sunshine if possible.
8. Wash the whole body at least once a week.
9. Work but do not worry.

A balanced ration is just as essential for poultry as it is for other livestock. A few crumbs from the table or an occasional feed of corn will never produce profitable fowls. It pays to feed a balanced ration.

GROOMS LEFT AT THE ALTAR

[illegible] Instances of Interuptions Which Cancelled the Marriage Ceremony

A recent society wedding sensation, where the bride failed to appear at the altar at the eleventh hour, is not without parallel. Only a short time ago a lady on arriving near the church to be married ordered her coachman to drive her home again. Although astonished at this extraordinary request for the bridegroom was actually waiting in the church, he complied with his mistress's orders. It transpired afterwards that she had merely turned back because the crowd which had gathered to cheer her frightened her away.

In Bristol, some years ago, a marriage failed to take place at the last moment, in the most dramatic circumstances. The bride had been previously engaged. For some reason or other the engagement was broken off, and her fiance sailed for Canada. After some time she became engaged to a local insurance agent. All arrangements were made, and the happy couple were to be married on an Easter Sunday. A large number of people were assembled to witness the ceremony which was just about to begin when the first lover appeared on the scene. The bride fainted, and on regaining her senses she refused to be married to the insurance agent. Since then she has become the wife of her former lover, who has taken her to his homestead in Canada.

On the morning that another happy pair were to be married the bridegroom, who had a moustache and beard, determined to be clean shaven for the ceremony. Why he made up his mind to do such a curious thing on his wedding morn is not known. However, when he was shaved his friends all congratulated him upon his improved appearance. The ceremony was timed for eleven o'clock, and punctually to the moment he appeared at the church. When the bride saw him, however, she had a fit of hysterics, and it was not till some hours too late that she recovered her composure. She then announced that she would not marry her lover in any circumstances, declaring that he was betrayed by his mouth, previously hidden by his moustache and beard, and that he looked to her to be cruel!

Many will remember the sensation caused twelve years ago by the stopping of a fashionable wedding at the very last moment. The bridegroom was an exceedingly well-known figure in the world of sport, and the bride was the widow of a wealthy man. The curious part about it was that the lady was the only one who believed in her lover. Everyone else knew that his reputation was far from spotless, but they could not, nevertheless, convince the charming widow. Everything was ready for the [illegible] church had been [illegible]fusely decorated with flowers, and many well-known and prominent people had taken their places.

The dramatic moment came when the couple met at the altar. The bride noticed that her intended husband was wearing a particularly valuable diamond tie-pin. Suddenly she cried out: "Take me home! Take me home! I cannot say anything more now!" To the consternation of all was stopped. So overcome was the bride that she fainted and had to be carried to her carriage. Later it transpired that this identical pin had been stolen some months before from the widow's rooms.—TIT BITS.

HORSES

Crushed oats are easier digested, and therefore more profitable than whole oats.

The driver's aim should be to manipulate the reins with a light but firm and steady hand.

A roll after a hard day's work is greatly appreciated by the horse. It takes the place of extra feed.

The value of salting the work horse regularly is often underestimated by horsemen. It is a good practice to keep the material before them at all times.

Remember that sudden changes of food may cause colic. New hay, new oats, green corn, etc., are often used. Make the change gradually, and no harm will result.

A horse that is extremely tired should not be given a heavy feed until he has had a little rest. Some feeders act on the supposition that a large amount of feed is what is needed to replace the lost energy. It must be remembered, however, that a horse so exhausted cannot digest food as well as one that is fresh, and, therefore, should be fed accordingly.

TIGHT COLLARS

A well known doctor considers it remarkable that no one seems to have laid stress on the fact that such slight obstacles to the free circulation of the blood through the vessels of the brain may adversely influence the health of those who are in the habit of wearing tightly-fitting neck clothes.

The fact appears to be well known to veterinary surgeons, who tell us that neck constriction through badly fitting harness is a causative factor in "staggers" in horses. It seems to be equally well known that dogs suffer a great deal through having to wear tightly fitting collars. Is it too much, then, he asks, to argue that those of us who wear our own collars too tightly buttoned may find that practice some explanation of symptoms ascribed to other causes?

FORTUNES MAY BE YOURS

How to Become as Rich as a Rothechild or a Rockefeller

There is no doubt that a fortune, and probably a large one, awaits the man who shall solve certain problems. Surgery, for instance, has made wonderful strides of late years, and its allied art of dentistry has become an almost exact science; but, though the dentist can furnish the mouth with new and wonderfully efficient instruments of mastication, yet the surgeon has hitherto entirely failed to replace the worn-out organs of digestion, says Tit-Bits.

He can remove, wholly or in part, almost every organ of the body, but he can do very little towards their artificial replacement. It is said that Mr Rockefeller has offered half a million dollars to anyone who will supply him with a new digestive apparatus, but up to the present we have not heard that anyone has drawn the cash.

The same gentleman is bald, and although he is probably less perturbed about his bald pate than about his dyspeptic stomach, yet doubtless he would be willing to endow that man with a pension for life who would rethatch his roof. Many hair-washes there are which have admirable qualities in the direction of stimulating the growth of the hair and preventing it from falling out, but even the manufacturer of these articles of the toilet would frankly admit that a real and infallible cure for baldness has not been discovered. The man who could rise up and demonstrate to the world that he can make hair spring up on a patch of pate as smooth as a billiard ball would be a millionaire in six months.

Many diseases, like leprosy, the plague, cholera, and smallpox, have been wholly or nearly eradicated from Western Europe, America, and the British Colonies; yet rheumatism continues to cripple tens of thousands, and is considered by most doctors as practically incurable. The man who can find a genuine cure is likely to be a millionaire in life and to have his statue in every city after he is dead.

The same remarks apply to cancer. Investigators are engaged on the problems involved in the cure of this disease in every quarter of the globe. It is no exaggeration to say that millions of pounds have been spent on research work in connection with it, and yet its ravages remain unabated.

So far as consumption is concerned all the above remarks apply; but in this case a more rational treatment of the patients and their more careful isolation have done something to reduce its ravages. There are teeming thousands of men and women who would be willing to shower all their treasures at the feet of the man who, one fine morning, could step forth and say, "Here is a certain cure for consumption," or, "I hold in my hands the antidote to cancer." Aye, the world would beatify him.

No one has ever found a cure for sea-sickness, yet there is a fortune awaiting the man who will do so. Many sailors, even, of whom the "Mighty Nelson" was one, are victims of sea sickness if the weather should be at all rough. It has been a human experience ever since man ventured to embark upon the ocean. Yet nobody [illegible] person you meet will give you a new and infallible cure, so, when you are going for a voyage, short or long, everyone will give you a simple panacea for sea-sickness. If the sea is as calm as a mill-pond the nostrum acts, but in the chops of the Channel it proves a tragical failure. There is a lot of money in an infallible cure for sea-sickness.

TURPENTINE NOW A LUXURY

No Longer the Cheapest Thing a Householder Can Buy

The time was when turpentine was about the cheapest thing a housekeeper could buy. The biggest bottle in the house was sent for five cents' worth of turpentine. Now your sewing-machine oil bottle is big enough for that much. Indeed, turpentine has so grown in value that unless when you call at the paint dealer's and do not specify that you want the genuine article he will hand you out a substitute made largely of crude gasoline. Some years ago turpentine retailed for 20 cents a gallon, and now sells for 10 cents a half pint.

Turpentine is a southern product, and, while the demand has largely increased, the output has largely fallen off. The value of the output in 1910, though much smaller than the previous year, was 40 per cent. greater than in 1909, all of which shows that the south has a very valuable industry and one that demands scientific and careful handling of the pine forests that produce the resin and the turpentine to prevent the destruction of the trees. The old forests are already giving out, and new areas are being worked. The product is taken from the tree by chopping holes in the bark and sap, through which it oozes. The trees have been overworked, and many large areas that were valuable have been killed by the greed of the turpentine companies. The trees are natural growth and cannot be restored by replanting. Their value will steadily increase, and it would be the sheerest folly to keep up the old methods of destruction.

First British Woman to Fly

The distinction of being the first woman of purely British nationality to fly belongs to Miss Gertrude Bacon daughter of the famous aeronaut who was really one of the pioneers of ballooning. Miss Bacon went up with Mr. Sommer in a Farman biplane during the Rheims aviation meeting of 1909, and in her book, "How Men Fly," which has recently been published she provided a fascinating narrative of the sensations of flying. She quotes the unfortunate Mr. Rolls as saying that his "first impression of flying was like trying to drive a motor-car which was skidding in all directions at once."

Three Modern Farmers

The Reeve of Middlemass Township sat back in his great arm chair before a snappy fire, and opened his paper. It was a city daily, dropped at his front gate by the rural mail delivery service. In the half light of the fire, the Reeve's figure loomed large and comfortable. His shoulders [illegible] broad as a door and slightly bowed, suggested but did not proclaim their strength. The head and neck, rough-hewn and massive, capped fittingly the body's column. The eyes of the Reeve were gray and steady; his mouth was a kindly straight line. He was like a tree which had grown from a sapling until it spread its giant branches protectingly over the small shrubbery at its base.

The Reeve of Middlemass was in the cheerful mood which comes to those who count their assets frequently. He was just in the midst of this pastime, when the telephone at his elbow rang.

"Hello!" he said, taking down the receiver.

"Hello, dad," came a voice over the wire.

It was his eldest boy, who was studying at the University of Toronto, fifty miles away. When the conversation was finished the Reeve returned to his paper, after first adjusting the shade of the electric reading lamp. He looked out of the window after a short time, towards the road where the poles of the Hydro-Electric system carried Niagara power past the adjacent farms. The great power mill in his barn ground meal and chopped feed for a hundred cattle. His house was heated by a furnace, and a wind-mill and elevated tank furnished water for his bath room.

The door behind him opened and in rushed a pretty girl of about twenty. She was just home from the MacDonald Institute at Guelph, where she learned not only the practical culinary operations of housekeeping, but also the hundred little feminine devices for making a home attractive. Her touch was everywhere in the great farm house. Cushions, draperies, the piano littered with music all spoke eloquently of her presence.

"Bill and Jim will be home on Thursday," she said.

"No," corrected her father joyously, "On Wednesday."

Bill and Jim were at the Ontario Agricultural College learning how to farm according to scientific methods instead of attempting to enter the crowded professions in the strenuous competition of business life.

The Reeve paid all the bills. He could afford to do so. His land was clear of debt. His annual crops had been excellent and all had sold at a high price. He owned stocks and had recently bought part of an issue of debentures made by the neighboring town.

As the fire burned low, and as the Reeve of Middlemass dozed in his chair, a picture of thirty years ago came [illegible] out of the past and was mirrored in his memory. A log house stood in a clearing, where several small fields made a brave showing against the background of heavy timber. A young man, little more than [illegible] the door [illegible]. A woman, with a patient face and gray hair, came out and climbed into the rig. They drove off in the direction of the nearest town. It was market day and they intended to secure supplies in exchange for their baskets of eggs and butter. The woman had one dollar in cash. Paying the interest on the mortgage had taken so much that year. The Reeve of Middlemass knew that boy. It was himself. He remembered how he had been forced to leave school just when he began to thirst for knowledge. He recalled the struggle upward against bad markets, the lack of farm machinery, the sluggishness which hung over the industrial life of the country until the coming of the good times. It was a bad dream and the Reeve awoke.

He returned to his paper, selecting the market page, and running his keen eye over the lists of prices paid for the products which he had for sale. "Just for amusement," he said, "I'm going to compare prices to-day, December 1st, 1911, with prices on the same day thiry-one years ago."

This is what he got by comparison:

Produce	Dec. 1st, 1880
Hay, ton	$9.00 to $13.00
Straw, ton	7.00 to 8.00
Dressed hogs, cwt	5.75 to 6.00
Chickens, pair	.30 to .40
Ducks, pair	.50 to .60
Turkeys, each,	.75 to 1.25
Geese, each	.45 to .60
Butter, lb.	.30 to .31
Eggs, doz.	.20 to .22
Apples, bbl.	1.00 to 1.75
Potatoes, bag	.45 to .50
Cabbages, doz.	.25 to .50

Produce	Dec. 1st, 1911
Hay, ton	$19.00 to $23.00
Straw, ton	14.00 to 16.00
Dressed Hogs, cwt.	9.25 to 9.50
Chickens, lb.	.14 to .16
Ducks, lb.	.13 to .14
Turkeys, lb.	.23 to .25
Geese, lb.	.14 to .15
Butter, lb	.30 to .33
Eggs, doz	.50 to .60
Apples, bbl.	3.00 to 5.50
Potatoes, bag	1.20 to 1.35
Cabbages, doz.	.75 to 1.00

The Reeve of Middlemass regarded his comparison with considerable pleasure.

"Not only have the prices paid for my produce increased," he observed to himself, "but my markets have also been enlarged."

To prove this to his own satisfaction the Reeve looked up the census returns, showing the growth in the population of Hamilton, Brantford and Berlin, his three nearest and best markets, to which he shipped the choicest of his products direct to consumers.

Markets	1891	1901	1911
Hamilton	48,661	52,634	81,881
Berlin	4,054	9,747	15,193
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

"There is no doubt," observed the Reeve, "that my home market has grown with the expansion of the big manufacturing towns. It now takes 80 per cent. of what we farmers produce."

He then satisfied his curiosity as to the amount of farm produce exported and the increase in exports during the last thirty years. Blue books gave him the following:

Exp'ts	1868	1879	1909
Agricul. Pro.	$12,871,055	$19,628,000	$71,987,000
Animal Pro.	6,893,167	14,100,000	51,849,000
Cheese, lbs.	4,503,370	46,414,000	164,907,000
Wheat, bus.	2,2[illegible]702	6,610,724	49,137,449

The Reeve of Middlemass dozed again, this time with pleasant dreams.

Twenty years before, a friend of the Reeve, had decided to leave Ontario and try his fortune in Saskatchewan. He settled on a homestead and endured the hardships of pioneer life. While the Reeve battled grimly with "the black nineties," the Westerner hung desperately to his homestead in defiance of frost, wind, fire and crops failure. At last the tide turned and a succession of fat years cured his sick exchequer. He harvested hundreds of acres of No. 1 Northern during the summer of 1911 and stored it safely away in great elevators. One day he was going to Winnipeg via Grand Trunk Pacific. He liked travelling that way because he had anticipated the line by nearly twenty years, and it was a novelty to ride on the road which had reached him in the prairie wilderness. The luxurious Pullman coach filled him with subtle satisfaction. Presently he went into the dining car, and enjoyed the attendance of half a dozen colored waiters. Among other things, he ordered poached eggs. The waiter brought two, delicately balanced on fragrant toast.

"Thirty cents for two poached eggs," remarked the Westerner, looking at his check. "Rather high."

"They cost us sixty cents a dozen, sir," replied the waiter.

"The farmers around here must be getting rich," remarked the traveller.

"Not by selling these eggs," said the waiter. "They come from Chicago."

"Chicago," exclaimed the traveller, "What are they doing away up here?"

"Feeding Western farmers who don't keep hens," retorted the waiter.

"I keep a few hens," expostulated the Westerner.

"Do you sell any eggs?" demanded the waiter, smiling.

"No," replied the other thoughtfully, "I even have to buy some occasionally."

"When people buy," said the waiter, "most of them pay through [illegible] and took out a Government blue book, in which he buried himself for the remainder of the journey.

"Say," he called to the waiter as he left the car, "Where does your butter come from?"

"Ontario."

"And your vegetables?"

"Ontario."

"Meats?"

"Ontario mostly."

The Westerner turned up the subject "Eggs" in his blue book. He found that the imports of eggs for consumption had increased from 773,673 dozen in 1903 to 3,378,640 dozen in 1911. Of the latter, 3,212,727 dozen had come from the United States.

He looked over the market columns in the newspaper. In the old provinces, where mixed farming was carried on, farmers had a dozen sources of revenue. Eggs, butter, cheese vegetables, animals, all brought high prices.

"I have only one source of revenue," soliloquized the Westerner, "Wheat, and I'm mining my land. Some day it will give out. Our Western towns and cities are growing fast as the people come from other lands and locate here. They are creating a great home market for us. I am going to stop growing wheat only and begin mixed farming. If I am growing rich with one source of revenue, how rich will I be with half a dozen?"

While the Ontario farmer dozed in comfort, and the aggressive Westerner planned to increase his large revenue, the hardy settler in Northern Ontario smiled to himself.

"I've got them all beaten," he said. "The last census taken of the district served by the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway shows that it has an urban population of 33,550 and a rural population of 17,000. That means that every farmer has two townsmen as steady customers the year round.

And all three farmers were pleased to learn that the Dominion and Provincial parliaments are spending $3,300,000 annually to encourage and develop that most important industry—agriculture, which has passed from its status as a hard, unattractive and unprofitable calling to that of a fairly pleasant, fairly easy, attractive and an utterly independent means of making a good living.

> 'NO goods purchased abroad are cheap that take the place of our own labor and our own raw material."

THE ACQUISITION OF RICHES.

To get rich at all hazards, and to get rich quick if possible seems to be the object to which most men are bending their energies now-a-days. Even—

"The humble man out yonder is working in the ditch,
Has the hope within him hidden that some day he may be rich;
And forgetting all the seasons that so foolishly were spent.
He keeps hoping he may profit by some lucky accident."

If it were not so, many a man who is now able to prey upon the credulity of his fellows would be compelled to seek other employment. The chief Post Office Inspector of the City of New York, reports that last year "Members of the Suckers' List" lost seventy-seven millions of dollars investing in the get-rich-quick schemes; and it is safe to say that all the "suckers" were not caught on the other side of the line. The man who goes through life "taking a flyer" at this and that under the impression that he will some day "strike it rich" is in 999 times out of 1000 only wasting his money and making rapid preparation for an old age of humiliation and penury. The sooner he awakens to the fact that there is no certain short cut to riches, and that the "lucky accident" does not happen to one in one thousand, the better it will be for himself and his family. The only safe plan to adopt, if he hopes to have a competency in his old age, is to live within his income and to systematically lay up something from his earnings no matter how small the amount may be. If he is living beyond his means he should keep in mind Micawbers statement, which was something like this: "Income 20 shillings, expenditure 20 shillings and 6 pence, result misery; income 20 shillings and 6 pence, expenditure 20 shillings, result happiness." If he cannot do more, he should make absolutely certain of an old age of comfort and happiness, which he may do if he will avail himself of the opportunity presented by the Canadian Government Annuities Act, in regard to which information may be obtained at any Post Office or on application to the Superintendent of Annuities, Ottawa. There is no other plan for the purpose which will give him anything like the same returns. So long as his present permanent abode is in Canada, whether he is naturalised or not, he is eligible to make the purchase.

DIZZY HEADACHES CURED IN ONE NIGHT

IF TROUBLED WITH HEAD-FULLNESS, RINGING NOISES, SPECS BEFORE THE EYES, THE STOMACH IS AT FAULT.

"I had terrible pains in my head. My appetite faded away and when I did eat anything it disagreed and made me very sick for hours after each meal. The active pains in my stomach and the dizzy headaches I had to endure almost set one wild. Sometimes attacks came on so severely that I had to go to bed. I would feel so worn, depressed and utterly miserable that for hours I wouldn't speak to my family. My system was poisoned with wastes and nothing helped me till I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Without this grand system-cleaning remedy I would be sick, but each day brought me better health and spirits. I was cured and made strong, ruddy and healthy looking as one could wish, and will always use and recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

THE MORNING TIMES

TUESDAY, MARCH 26, 1912.

TO PROPOGATE OYSTERS.

Now that living expenses are so great that oysters, at their present price, are almost beyond reach of the working man's pocket, the Dominion government has arranged for encouragement of the production of those bivalves. The following amendment to the Fisheries Act is under consideration:

"The Governor in Council may, upon such terms and conditions as are agreed upon, authorize the government [illegible] province to grant leases [illegible] in the sea-coast bays, inlets, harbots, creeks, rivers and estuaries of such province as the government of such province considers suitable for the cultivation and production of oysters and any persons to whom such leases are granted by such province shall, subject to the fishery regulations of Canada, have the exclusive right to the oysters produced or found on the beds within the limits of their respective leases; provided that, in the event of such areas, or any part thereof, being in a public harbor, nothing in this section shall prejudice the right or title of the Dominion to the enjoyment and use of such harbor for every purpose other than the cultivation and production of oysters."

THE NEW MARRIAGE LAW

The Ontario Government is considering an amendment to the Marriage Act, that will meet with general approval. By the amendment, this law will read:

"If any minister, clergyman or other person solemnizes a marriage while either of the parties thereto is under the influence of liquor; or, if he has reason to believe that either of the said parties is an idiot or insane, he shall incur a penalty of five hundred dollars ($500.00) and shall also, in the discretion of the Court, be liable to imprisonment for any period not exceeding twelve months." The said Act is further amended by inserting the following section immediately after Section 20: "If the person having authority to issue the license or certificate has knowledge or has reason to believe that either of the parties to the intended marriage is an idiot, insane, epileptic or imbecile, he shall require the applicant to produce and leave with him the certificate of a duly qualified medical practitioner to the effect that neither of the parties to the intended marriage is idiotic, insane, epileptic or [illegible] and in default of the production of such certificate he shall refuse to issue the license applied for, and if the said person having authority to issue the license or certificate has knowledge or has reason to believe that either of the parties to the intended marriage is an idiot, insane, epileptic or imbecile, and does not require the applicant to produce such certificate of a duly qualified practitioner, he shall incur a penalty of five hundred dollars ($500.00) and shall also, in the discretion of the Court, be liable to imprisonment for any period not exceeding twelve months."

AN ESTIMATE OF BOURASSA.

In discussing Mr. Bourassa a Vancouver paper says that it is reported that Mr. Bourassa is about to return to the House of Commons to organize and lead a third political party. The ground for this action is the refusal of Mr. Borden to impose a Separate School system on the Keewatin addition to Manitoba, and Sir Wilfrid's failure thereupon to join in a vote of censure. Mr. Bourassa is at liberty to waste a few years of his life in that enterprise, which will do neither him nor anyone else any good. He was in the Commons first and left that body to go into Provincial politics. It is quite likely that his restless disposition may take him back to Ottawa if he can find a constituency. But he may as well give up any hope of building up a strong position for himself in Canadian public life by attempting to split Manitoba into two divisions with different educational systems. Sir Wilfrid Laurier did his best to make trouble for Mr. Borden on this issue. He moved an amendment, for which the Nationalists voted as involving the school issue, though it did not mention schools. That was where the Opposition leader desired to stop. But he was not allowed to escape that way and had to stand up and be counted in a direct vote on the school question. Knowing that his own party outside of Quebec would not follow him as leader for a week if he should vote for the Separate Schools amendment Sir Wilfrid came out of his retreat and fell in line behind the Government. If Mr. Bourassa were in Ottawa he could further embarrass Sir Wilfrid by making him vote on other Nationalist issues. He may think that he will embarrass some of Mr. Borden's colleagues from Quebec by asking them to do impossibilities. But these are not tasks for a [illegible] house in Canada, and they will keep him in the ranks of the skirmishers and guerillas all the days of his life. Mr. Bourassa has ability and many elements of popularity. But after sixteen years of public life he is still known as a sectional and local agitator, with no standing or influence outside his own Province. In the Legislature of Quebec he has a chance to accomplish something, as he has some following among his compatriots and has taken an interest in many Provincial issues.

Editorial Notes

The Toronto Star seems to find fault with Hon. Col. Sam Hughes, because the latter, the Minister of Militia, has bought eleven automobiles for public use. The Star seems to claim that $1219 was paid for the autos over and above catalogue prices. Whilst we do not know the weight, the horse power or the cylinder size of these particular motors, there is no denying that a man in the position of Minister of Militia has to use a great deal of personal judgment. Autos, for military purposes, may cost more than machines for ordinary use. Surely there is nothing to be gained by any newspaper, making a little political capital, carping, at, and criticizing every act of a member of the Cabinet. Col. Hughes would certainly not buy these autos unless he knew the country had use for them. Is it likely that, for the little excess price, as claimed, that a Cabinet Minister would authorize an extra thousand dollars to be spent for any personal motives or gain? Such insinuations are too small for serious consideration.

ORANGE MARMALADE

Select one orange and one lemon with a thin skin. Cut in slices and then in cubes. To this add six cupfuls of water. Let stand over night. Next morning boil twenty minutes, measure liquid, and to one cupful of mixture add one cupful of sugar. Boil evenly for one-half hour, or until it jells. This will make eight medium sized glasses.

Grape Sherbet

Two pounds Concord grapes, two lemons, one quart water, one pound sugar; lay a square of cheesecloth over a large bowl, put in the washed grapes and mash thoroughly; squeeze out all the juice and add an equal amount of sugar, the lemon juice. Use sugar enough to make it quite sweet, then freeze.

TAKING NO CHANCES

"Johnny," said the teacher, "this is the third time I have had to punish you this week. Why are you so naughty?"

"Because," answered the incorrigible youngster, "grandpa says the good die young, and I ain't taking any chances."

A MILLINERY THOUGHT

"They say that when an ostrich is surprised he hides his head in the sand."

"I wish to thunder he'd everlastingly hide his tail there," observed the man who had just settled a heavy millinery bill.

SAMUEL H THOMSON,

Had Bad Sore Four Years

ZAM-BUK HAS HEALED IT!

Mrs. Wilson, 110 Wickson avenue, Toronto, says: "About four years ago a sore spot appeared on the right side of my face. This spot increased in size until it became about half an inch in diameter and very painful. I went to a doctor, but the ointment he gave me did not have any good effect. The sore continued to discharge freely, and was most painful. I had it cauterized, tried poultices and all kinds of salves, but it was no good, and I continued to suffer from it for four years!

"A sample of Zam-Buk was one day given to me, and I used it. Although the quantity was so small, it seemed to do me some good, so I purchased a further supply.

"Each box did me more and more good, and, to my delight, before I had been using Zam-Buk three weeks I saw that it was going to heal the sore. In less than a month it was healed!

"I know a lady in the east of the city, whose husband suffered for years with an open sore on his leg. On my recommendation, Zam-Buk was tried in that case. The other day when I saw her, she told me that it had healed the sore completely.

"My daughter, who lives in Lethbridge, Alta., has also used Zam-Buk with the same satisfactory result. I think it is, beyond all doubt the finest healing balm known."

Such is the opinion of all persons who have really tried Zam-Buk. It is a sure cure for eczema, piles, abscesses, ulcers, scalp sores, ringworm, cuts, burns, scalds, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c box, all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. In case of skin disease use also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c tablet.

WOMEN IN PARLIAMENT

A Glance at the Reigns of the Early Edwards

In the very early times the affairs of the nation were not wholly in the hands of the sterner sex, for in the reigns of Henry III. and Edward I four abbesses at least were summoned to Parliament—namely, those of Shaftesbury, Barking, Winchester and Milton. To one of the Parliaments of Edward III. there were summoned by writ ten ladies of noble birth, seven of them countesses. Gurdon, in his "Antiquities of Parliament," goes back still further than this, for he says that "ladies of birth and quality sat in council with the Saxon Witas." A certain Abbess Hilda, according to the historian Bede, presided at an ecclesiastical synod. In Wightred's great council at Beccorield, A.D. 694, the abbesses sat and deliberated, and five of them signed decrees of that council along with the King, Bishops and nobles. King Edward's charter to the Abbey of Crawland, A.D. 961, was with the consent not only of the nobles but also of the abbesses, their names appearing among those who signed it.

DESCRIBES KID McCOY

His Entry into the Fighting Game in Paris.

An interesting description of Kid McCoy's entry into the fighting game [illegible] an English sporting magazine. The Kid was always a clever fellow, both in and out of the ring. But knowing the Parisian's fondness of fine clothes, he entered the ring in a flashy bathrobe, and when he disrobed for the night he had on a fancy pair of silk stockings and a pair of green silk tights. He also was particular before entering the ring to have every hair on his head lying just so. The account also says that there was a lot of "Kid" about the fight, but not much of the McCoy. He was fighting Harry Croxon a big English heavyweight, that could hardly get out of his own way. McCoy was there with all his old time feints and an occasional jab, but was always careful that he did not get hit himself. The farce came to a close in the third round, when McCoy landed one of his old-time left hooks that knocked Croxon down for the count of eight; then put him out for good.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

W. S. S.: Your hair will never grow long, thick and lustrous while you use soap for shampooing. The alkali in soap is too strong for the delicate hairs, causing them to become dull, brittle and faded. If you will wash the hair about twice a month with a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water, rinsing thoroughly afterwards, you will find your hair softer, fluffier and more brilliant than ever before. The hair dries quickly and evenly without streaking or dullness. Canthrox cleanses perfectly, removing all dirt and dandruff, and relieves scalp-irritation instantly.

Della: Peroxide will make the hairs less noticeable, but if you really want to remove that growth from your cheek, apply a paste made with powdered delatone and water. After two or three minutes rub it off, wash the skin and your cheek will be firm, white and hairless. Druggists will charge a dollar for an original one-ounce package of delatone, but it is worth several times its cost, as it never fails.

Rose: Lack of exercise and eating too much solid food during the winter months account for your sallow, pimply complexion and lost energy. You can best overcome this condition by taking a good system-tonic and blood-purifier, made by dissolving one ounce kardene in ½-pint alcohol, then adding ½ cup sugar and hot water to make a quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and in a short time you will feel like a new person; your sallowness will give way to a rosy, healthy complexion. This simple blood-purifier is a wonderful energizer, and cannot be recommended too highly as a reliable system-tonic.

Mrs. T. C.: No one can afford to neglect his or her eyes. If you want bright, clear, beautiful eyes that will be much admired, you can have them with very little care. Get an ounce of crystos at any drug store and dissolve it in a pint of water. Put two or three drops of this tonic in each eye daily and you will be surprised how it will strengthen your weak, tired eyes, and make them strong, healthy and sparkling. Many oculists who use this simple tonic get excellent results in treating eye troubles generally. It is very soothing and has enabled many to dispense with wearing glasses.

Miss Juliet: No wonder the other young people avoid you when you have your face smeared with paint and powder to cover up your freckles and other complexion defects. If you will use this lotion you will find proper relief and nobody can tell but that your complexion is perfectly natural. Dissolve 4 ounces spurmax in ½ pint witch hazel (or hot water), then add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply to the face, neck and arms, rubbing gently until dry, and your skin will take on a very charming look. This lotion is much better than powder as it removes that shiny, oily look to the skin and does not rub off easily. It is the finest skin whitener and complexion-beautifier I ever used.

Della C.: The longer you put off fat reduction, the harder and firmer the tissues will become and the less easily dissolved. The most effective, harmless remedy known to science is made by dissolving 4 ounces of parnotis in 1½ pints hot water. By taking a tablespoonful before each meal, you will soon note a most satisfactory disappearance of your fat without any injury to your health. No dieting or violent exercises are necessary with this wonderful remedy. It leaves the skin smooth and unwrinkled.

Mrs. G. C.: Hair specialists agree that a quinine hair tonic is far superior to any other kind for removing dandruff, stopping falling hair and promoting a healthy growth of lustrous hair. However, the tonic will be worthless if not fresh made. You can prepare a splendid quinine tonic by mixing together ½ pint alcohol and one ounce quinzoin, then adding ½ pint cold water. This is unexcelled for remedying scalp and hair troubles and the only satisfactory hair grower I have ever found.

Dora: If you want a complexion cream that will not grow hair or make the skin shiny and oily, get an ounce of almozoin, 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine, and stir into ½ pint cold water. This cream jelly is good for and prevents chapping, and is very cleansing, healing and softening to the skin. Use morning and night and you will soon note a wonderful improvement in your complexion. This dependable beautifier will tone your skin, stimulating the youthful glow in your face, which comes only from a smooth, clean, healthy complexion.

COURTING A VOICE

Telephone Girl Pursued by Lover Who Finally Married Her

A romantic story of the courtship and marriage of a telephone girl comes from St. Louis, where Mr. William McCalpin married Miss Viola Kortkemp, a young lady employed at the St. Louis telephone exchange. The marriage was the result of a courtship induced by the sweet voice of Miss Viola.

Mr. McCalpin, who is one of the managers of the Waters Pierce Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Trust, whilst telephoning from his office was fascinated by the voice that answered his call, and after several unnecessary calls, for the purpose of listening to the enchanting voice, he introduced himself and asked to be allowed to visit her and "get acquainted." Miss Kortkemp was taken aback by such "rapid" methods, and invariably "rung off" when her admirer persisted, and at length, to escape the chaff of her fellow operators, she obtained her transference to another exchange. Not to be beaten, her admirer set himself to hunt her down, and after a lapse of over two years he was successful.

Calling up a client on the telephone, he heard the long-sought voice from the exchange. He did not waste any time, for in response to the request, "Number, please," he said, "I am William McCalpin. Don't move. I am coming out to get you, and I am coming right away." The sweet, but astonished voice asked for enlightenment, and Mr. McCalpin repeated his former proposal. Persistence of this sort was bound to impress the lady, and after a moment's consideration the voice gave her name and address and permission for her admirer to call upon her father for an orthodox introduction.

Mr. McCalpin immediately went to see the father, who was the chief of the fire brigade of University City, and he consented to introduce Mr. McCalpin, with the happiest results. The "Voice" was quite up to expectations, and the oil man gave an equally good impression. He insisted upon immediate marriage, as he declared that he had been courting her for two years, and again his persistence won, and the young couple were married. Mr. McCalpin is not a millionaire, but as he is connected with the famous "octopus" it will probably not be long before he becomes one.

THE ASPIRING CHAUFFEUR

Chug, chug! Plonk, plonk! Choo choo!

The motor-car dashed along the road at a tremendous speed, missed a woman by a split hair's-breadth, bumped over her less fortunate dog, and came to an abrupt halt.

"Dear me!" said the chauffeur, alighting.

The woman said more than "Dear me!" In fact, what she didn't say isn't worth printing.

"Can I—er—replace your dog?" suggested the chauffeur, getting in a word edgewise at about 3.45.

For a brief moment the woman regarded his be-goggled features. Then she retorted freezingly:

"You flatter yourself!"

A COMMON COMPLAINT

"What's the matter with you?" asked the Army doctor.

The recruit, who had been on the sick list ever since he had enlisted, shook his head sorrowfully.

"I dunno," he replied.

"You look well enough," commented the doctor. "How's the appetite?"

"I'd match an elephant at meals," answered the recruit. "It ain't that kind of illness, sir."

"Then I'm hanged if I know what kind it is!" exclaimed the Army medico. "How does it affect you?"

"Well, I eats well, and I drinks well, and I sleeps well," replied Thomas Atkins, rubbing his nose thoughtfully; "but directly I hear the word 'work,' I come all of a tremble!"

Why Your Fingers Crack.

Dr. Howard Marsh tells in a recent paper that the "snap," which is often both felt and heard when a joint that has long been stiff or at rest is suddenly moved, is a phenomenon to which bonesetters point as a plain demonstration that a bone was out and has been put in. These snaps, however, are not produced by the concussion of two joint surfaces as they come suddenly into contact but, on the contrary, are due to the sudden separation of two surfaces which have been stuck together by a too viscid and tenacious synovial fluid (the synovial fluid is of the consistency of white of egg, and is Nature's lubricator of our joints, in the cavities of which it is present). Many persons can make all their fingers crack by steadily pulling at them till the joint surfaces suddenly separate.

The Ivory Supply.

In view of the rapid disappearance of the herds of elephants which formerly roamed in Africa, and the limited number of those animals remaining in Asia, attention has been called to the enormous supply of ivory which exists in the frozen tundras of Siberia, and which, it is thought, will probably suffice for the world's consumption for many years to come. This ivory consists of the tusks of the extinct species of elephant called mammoths. The tusks of these animals were of great size, and are wonderfully abundant at some places in Siberia.

The Fastest Growing City on the Continent

The growth of a city regulates increase in real estate values. The faster the growth in population, the faster is the growth in prices in both city and suburban real estate, and as Winnipeg is the fastest growing city in Canada, or for that matter on the North American Continent, you could not pick a city where money, either in large or small amounts could be invested to better advantage. Profits are sure if you buy where prices are right.

60,000 HORSE POWER HYDRO ELECTRIC PLANT

This great civic power plant furnishes power to manufacturers at a very low rate and will make Winnipeg Canada's most important industrial centre. Since the power plant has been completed, manufacturing establishments are being completed at an unprecedented rate, and during the past year over forty new factories started operation. This great industrial development means an enormous increase in Winnipeg's population. No one can, with any degree of certainty, foretell what the increase in population will amount to in ten years, but it is safe to assume that in that time Winnipeg's population will have passed the half million mark and real estate values will have doubled many times over. Compare the future with the past five or ten years and figure for yourself the possibilities that lie in an investment in Winnipeg real estate. Six years ago, property that sold for $6 to $8 per foot is now worth anywhere from $40 to $65 per foot, and with a still greater growth in the next five years, the increase in real estate values will be correspondingly greater.

PAKLAND PARK AN IDEAL INVESTMENT.

One of the best real estate investments offered in Winnipeg to-day is Oakland Park, which is located east of the Red River beyond the present northern limits of the city of Winnipeg.

Oakland Park is located in what will be a great industrial centre, lying as it does inside the new line of the C. P. R.

Many factories will locate in the immediate vicinity of Oakland Park, where thousands of men will find employment. Oakland Park will, therefore, become a great residential centre and real estate values will increase rapidly.

The price at which Oakland Park lots are now selling assures the investor of a handsome profit within the next twelve or eighteen months, and values should at least double before the final payments are made. The prices asked for Oakland Park are considerably lower than those of any other property similarly located.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Lake, Lush and Schaffly Are the New Comers as Managers

The managers of the International League teams this season will be as follows.

Toronto—Joseph J. Kelley.
Montreal—William Lush.
Buffalo—George Stallings.
Rochester—John Ganzel.
Providence—Fred Lake.
Jersey City—Larry Schafly.
Newark—Joe McGinnity.
Baltimore—John Dunn.

The newcomers in a managerial capacity in this league are Lush, Schafly, and Lake. Schafly managed the Toronto team the latter part of 1908, when Joe Kelley was in Boston, and practically managed the Newark team when it made such a good showing in 1910 though McGinnity was nominally in charge. Schafly is a clever ball player, and a good leader, and Jersey City can be counted upon as being a factor in the race this year from bell to bell.

Lush is more or less an experiment, though five or six years as coach of the Yale team may give him the necessary experience in the handling of a team. Lush has played in this league, and knows its calibre, so that he will not likely underestimate the strength of the organization.

Lake has had major league experience as a manager, having been with both Boston teams in that capacity. Years ago, when the Toronto team played ball on the diamond "over the Don," Lake was a catcher for the Leafs, and "Jimmy" Casey, the breaking in, was his understudy.

Speaking of the prospects for the future, Spalding's Guide, says of the International League:

"The coming season will probably see a much closer race, as steps have been taken to strengthen the weaker teams. Providence has changed hands, and with Ford as manager, and plenty of good material obtained of, or through, the Detroit Tigers, should give a god account of itself. Frank J. Nevin, William R. Vandusen, Hugh Jennings, and Ty Cobb are interested financially in Providence. Jersey City has been reorganized, and an active campaign for a first division club is on. In Baltimore, Jack Dun held on to the best of his men, and promises to set a fast pace from the start. Toronto, too, has a strong club ready, to take the field, several big offers for players, notably for Tim. Jordan, having been refused. Manager Stallings, in Buffalo, has been very busy in his search for good material, and expects to make a much better showing than that of last season. The champions disposed of several good men by sale last fall, but Manager Ganzel and President Chapin set to work at once to replace them, and have purchased enough players to fill the gaps, in the opinions of critics. At Newark considerable activity is shown, and Manager McGinnity promises to place a strong team in the field."

PULLMAN CAR TRAVEL

A Britisher Writes His Impressions Concerning It

Yet I [illegible], writes an Englishman in Harper's Weekly, even bankruptcy [illegible] as an escape from the horrors of a Pullman, where you travel by day with two or three score people, at least one of whom is certain to be a squalling infant and another a ubiquitous youngster with lungs and legs in an equal state of activity; where you have to rouse yourself every few minutes to resist the carboy's pestiferous attentions, and where the buzz of an incessant movement and conversation make reading and dozing alike impossible. But even that pales before the trials that await one at bedtime.

A Pullman car at night is the most uncivilized thing on the American continent, and one of the most indecent. It quite fascinates my blushes. I sit enthralled as the darky porter strews my seat with other people's belongings, holds a pillow-case in his teeth and squeezes the pillow into it, and hurls sheets and mattresses about, and pulls at chains and sliding doors and levers and curtains. And what can be more enchanting than to hear husband and wife discussing how they shall dispose of themselves for the night, whether they shall share the lower berth or whether he shall be banished to the nest above?

And what pleasanter than to be made conscious by the writhings and heavings and vigorous protuberances of the curtains that just across the aisle some good lady is engaged in the fearsome struggle to undress. To walk the length of a Pullman car at about 10.30 p.m., when most of the berths are made up, and when the curtained contortions of those who are in the agony of "retiring" are at their worst, and when you butt into strange projections of humanity, and stumble over shoes and watch someone scaling the heights of an upper berth, is on the whole the most delirious experience I have ever encountered.

NAPOLEON'S GHOST

The "Ugliest Woman in Paris" Tells of a Strange Apparition

Mlle. Polaire, long known as "the ugliest woman in Paris" and "the actress with the smallest waist," now proudly declares that since she has become the owner of a famous old mansion in the aristocratic Faubourg St. Germain, she has been honored by a visit of the spirit of the great Napoleon, who first met Josephine Beauharnais within the walls of the mansion. Mlle. Polaire relates that towards sunset, a few weeks ago, she was reclining on a couch in her drawing-room. "Suddenly I became aware," she says, "that a man was approaching me in the half light. I looked at him steadily, with emotion but without fear. He was dressed in a strange, old fashioned, military uniform. As I scrutinized him I recognized the features of the great Napoleon, as they have been made familiar to me by David's portrait of the Emperor as a youth. As the Emperor appeared to me, he was as beautiful as a young Greek god, full of love and [illegible] appeared at the time of his [illegible] with Josephine on the eve of the second glorious campaign in Italy. As I looked at him I was thrilled with joy. I felt that I was in the presence of the greatest man that ever lived. His face was thin; with the pure outline of a Greek. His great deep, dark eyes radiated love, passion, world embracing ambition. His beautiful face seemed to be appealing for love. He pressed his hands together, and bent forward, as if imploring me, but without saying a word. Three times the same apparition presented itself to me at the same hour and place. Was he brought back by memories of Josephine, or did he come to see me? I can hardly tell."

A French paper suggests that Mlle Polaire try the cure.

THE GIRL WITH A GROUCH

She is always selfish, unhappy and discontented.

The most selfish girl in the whole world is the girl with a grouch. The most unhappy girl in the whole world is the girl with a grouch. The effect would not be so disastrous if it ended with her own feelings; she not only injures herself—but she injures every one about her, because she seems to enjoy her grouch most when she sees those about her most unhappy. With some girls, this disposition is chronic—the attacks last from four days to four weeks. Girls subject to the grouch, spend nearly all their time thinking of themselves. They also spend much of their time smoothing out with cosmetics the wrinkles that these grouches plow into their faces. They cannot, however, change the facial expression that this disposition cultivates. Elsie Janis, who is famous for her youthful beauty, says: "A sweet disposition does more toward promoting good looks than any other thing. Never think unkind thoughts of anybody, never sulk, never get into a temper. You can't have a nice, frank expression half of the time, if, during the other half of the time you are wearing a frown. Keep your temper and think kind thoughts. Temper is a great wrinkle producer, and a sour expression adds years to one's looks." It is considered as much an asset nowadays for a young lady to have a good disposition as beauty. Lady Diania Manners, who is a recent London debutante, has been named Lady Perfect Manners, because of her beautiful disposition.

LARGEST EGG IN THE WORLD

The Aepyornis Surpassed the Ostrich, the King of Modern Birds

The largest egg in the world has recently been exhibited in the Museums of Natural History of New York and some other cities. It is the egg of the gigantic extinct bird called Aepyornis, which formerly lived in considerable numbers on the island of Madagascar. This was a huge wingless creature, the largest and most formidable bird of prey that ever trod the earth. In life it has been variously estimated to have stood from seven to twelve feet in height possessing massive and powerful limbs. This great bird surpassed the ostrich, the king of modern birds, both in size, herculean strength and build. The Aepyornis egg is six times larger than that of the ostrich, having a capacity of 150 hen eggs. Here are some of the astounding dimensions of the big egg. The shell is about one-eighth of an inch thick, the lengthwise circumference is two feet eight inches, and two feet two inches around the middle. Though termed a fossil egg, it is not petrified or turned to hard stone as in the case of dinosaur bones. It is in a surprisingly perfect condition, unbroken, and has a yellow color, although finely pitted in places. The contents have not been removed, as they have turned to fine dust, which comes out when handled through a small natural perforation on one side. The Aepyornis that laid this colossal egg has not been seen in the life of the present generation of the inhabitants of Madagascar. In former times, several centuries ago, they were quite abundant. Several incomplete fossil remains of the bird have been discovered, but no complete skeleton has yet been found. These show that the bird was not only of massive proportions, but short winged, and has been classed as a distant relative of the Moas and the Apteryx, fossil birds of New Zealand. The natives of Madagascar have for many years used the great eggshells for various domestic purposes, for carrying water and as jars for storing and holding food. Only two or three of these huge eggs have been obtained by Europeans and these were usually found in the sand beds of torrents. The present egg is said to be one of the largest and most perfect ever brought into civilization.

DON'T WASH YOUR HORSE

It Removes the Natural Oil From the Outer Skin

The practice of washing horses, as a rule, is injurious because it removes the natural oil from the outer skin and predisposes the animal to chill, writes a practical man in the Kentucky Stock Farm. The application of water to a [illegible] the temperature of the surface by evaporation and also by conduction, in the event of the temperature of the water being cooler than that of the skin. Even in the tropics, washing a horse always takes the gloss off his coat, no matter how vigorously the subsequent grooming may be performed. This fact is certainly a strong argument against the practice in question. If it is imperative to wash, and there is not sufficient help to have the horse rubbed dry, without loss of time, we may, after scraping and going over him with two or three dry rubbers, take him out and exercise him at a brisk pace until he gets dry. We should then walk him about until his circulation regains its normal condition before taking him in. If we can not give this exercise, we may, after scraping and driving him, put on him a good supply of warm clothing, bandage his legs, and leave him thus to dry under his rugs, which he will do in an hour or less. He should after that be exercised and well rubbed down, so as to prevent his getting chilled. A good plan for getting horses to dry quickly and safely under clothing is to cover the animal's back and loins with straw before putting on a rug, so as to utilize the low heat conducting power of air and to give as little impediment as possible for the escape of moisture.

CHEAPER CUTS OF MEAT

Butchers should endeavor to correct the impression of customers that only the high-priced meats are valuable as food. On the contrary, the cheaper cuts are often more highly flavored and fully as nutritious.

The chuck is one of the cheapest portions of the beef, but when cooked slowly in a small amount of water, either with or without vegetables for seasoning, is a most excellent dish.

In stewing meat, if too high a temperature is used, it will toughen the fibre. Another mistake is to overcook the meat until it falls to shreds. The skirt steak sells for 2 to 3 cents a pound less than the others, but if properly cooked is just as good. Lay the steak on a meat board and score it well with a chopping knife. Then dredge with flour and put it into a smoking hot frying pan that has been greased enough to keep the meat from sticking to it. When well seared over on both sides, pour over it a little boiling water and allow it to simmer slowly for two hours. Season to suit the taste. A bit of carrot or onion or bay leaf and a little vinegar to soften the fibre will add to the flavor of the meat.

DRUG STORES ON SHIPS

As a result of representations made by the General Shipowners' Society, London, the Board of Trade is now reconsidering the scale of drugs prescribed for use on board ships. It has been found that many of the drugs which vessels are compelled to carry are never used, while others which should form part of the medical equipment of every ship, are omitted. With a view to assisting the Board of Trade to arrive at a decision on the subject medical officers of the leading steamship lines have formulated a modern list of supplies which there is reason to believe will be adopted. In drawing this up regard has been had to faster passages now made by steamers as compared with the days of sailing ships, when the existing scale was prescribed.

THE NEED OF MEN

Work in Every Field Not Only Remains But Increases

More men are needed in the world to-day than ever before, because there is more to do—more different things to make, more actual people to support. Fifteen years ago the bicycle makers would have been frightened into bankruptcy if you had told them that in 1910 their trade would have almost disappeared. But what do we see now? The coming of automobiles has given work to all the bicycle men and thousands more. And it is so in other businesses and professions. The point to remember is that, while the form of work changes, the work in every field remains, and even increases. The real claims are not all taken up. Alexander the Great was only a fool when he wept because there were no more worlds to conquer. He didn't use his eyes to see with, but only to weep with.

SAFER!

"You seem to have had a good deal of experience of different kinds," said the hotel guest, as he sipped his nightcap, to the landlord of the little country hotel. "What were you before you took to this sort of life?"

"Well, sir," was the reply, "in me young days I was a lion-tamer in a circus. But then I got married, and me wife she was a knife-thrower in the same show, and she having, what some people might have thought, a nasty temper, I thought I'd had enough of living a risky life—which ain't too long at the best, as you know, sir—so I took on a safe job, and became a steeplejack!"

LIQUID COUGH MIXTURES CAN'T CURE BRONCHITIS

BUT THE HEALING FUMES OF CATARRHOZONE, WHICH ARE BREATHED TO THE FURTHEST RECESSES OF THE BRONCHIAL TUBES, BEING QUICK RELIEF AND SURE CURE.

Every sufferer from coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and chest ailments needs a soothing, healing medicine which goes direct to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs, attacks the trouble at the source, disperses the germs of disease and cures the ailment thoroughly. And this medicine is "Catarrhozone."

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure, medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached, and harm would result through benumbing the stomach with drugs.

"I have been a chronic sufferer from Catarrh in the nose and throat for over eight years. I think I have spent four hundred dollars trying to get relief. I have spent but six dollars on Catarrhozone, and have been completely cured, and, in fact, have been well for some time. Catarrhozone is the only medicine I have been able to find that would not only give temporary relief, but will always cure permanently.

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) WILLIAM RAGAN,
Brockville, Ont."

Death of "Tannie" Gillespie.

The news of the death of Alex. (Tannie) Gillespie, Hamilton, after only a few days' illness, was a shock to hundreds of his friends. Of a robust build, a cheerful disposition, a careful liver, and barely past his fiftieth year, he looked like a man destined for a ripe old age. The late Mr. Gillespie was an active cricketer and curler, and in his younger days a celebrated member of the Hamilton Tigers' Rugby Football Club, working on the forward line according to the rules then in vogue. He played first-class cricket for the Toronto Club, and for Hamilton before he moved here, with the Canada Life Company, a fine batsman and splendid medium-pace bowler. He was a member of the Toronto Curling Club.

SALT FOR MANGOLDS

Best Results Obtained From Use of 10 Per Cent. Per Acre

That application of salt in addition to other fertilizers is useful for the mangold crop is generally acknowledged, but what is the most suitable quantity to apply is a question upon which there is considerable difference of opinion. [illegible] this point the Harper-Adams Agricultural College has been conducting experiments for three years with quantities per acre of 2¼ cwt., 5 cwt., 10 cwt. and 15 cwt. respectively.

The salt was applied in the middle of April and thoroughly worked into the soil by cultivating, harrowing and rolling three times before rowing up, the ridges being again split before sowing.

Special care has to be taken to ensure the salt being completely mixed with the soil, otherwise the seed is liable to be damaged.

The dressings were made across all the manurial and variety trial plots, and the weights are the average of the different plots. The result was the following:—The application of—

2½ cwt. produced an average increase, [illegible] tons roots;

5 cwt. produced an average increase, about 5½ tons roots;

10 cwt. produced an average increase, [illegible] tons roots;

15 cwt. produced an average increase [illegible] roots.

The big application of 15 cwt. was used for the first time last year, just [illegible] what the effect would be.

The [illegible] seems to demonstrate [illegible] quantity of salt that [illegible] the best result is 10 [illegible]

HORSES IN WINTER

Can be Kept on Straw as Well as on Hay

Professor J. H. Shepperd, of the North Dakota Agricultural College, answering a question recently about wintering [illegible] on straw, says:

The North Dakota station did a considerable amount of work in horse feeding a number of years ago and made extensive trials with oat straw, in comparison with hay, for roughage. In the trials it was found that some horses did about as well on it as they did on hay, while others were very much harder to carry, chiefly because their appetites for roughage were too light to allow them to eat enough of it. And with these dainty animals there was much trouble in keeping them up on oat straw as roughage.

The oat straw used was that of a normal [illegible] which was coarser and more woody than that which had been obtained [illegible] year. The trial consisted of a period of sixty days' feeding with oats as the grain ration against a similar period with oats and hay, and sixty days' feeding with a mixture of half and half bran and shorts by weight with hay compared with sixty days' feeding bran and shorts with oat straw.

During the first thirty days winter conditions were present and the horses were used only about enough for good exercise. During the second thirty days they were worked at harrowing, disking and seeding and had nearly all of that work the last half of the month. The horses receiving oats and hay as a ration required nine and one-third pounds of oats with hay to carry them, while those on oats and straw consumed eleven and one-half pounds of oats per day. During the thirty days that they had light work, the horses on hay gained 176 pounds and the three on straw 169 pounds. During the thirty days when they had heavy work one-half of the time, those on hay lost 340 pounds and those on straw 345 pounds.

The similar lots of horses fed on bran and shorts, half and half by weight, gained during the winter conditions, 88 pounds when fed hay, and 63 pounds when fed straw. When they were on the straw ration with heavy work for one-half of the month they lost 225 pounds, and on the hay ration 235 pounds.

These results indicate that horses can be carried almost as successfully on straw as roughage as they can on hay, provided enough aditional grain is given them to supply them with sufficient nourishment. The additional grain required is about one-fifth. If the feeder has facilities for chaffing the straw and will moisten it and mix the grain fed with it during the season when the animals are required to do very little work, a smaller amount of grain will carry them.

SUCKERS ON CORN

In the past suckers on corn were regarded as very undesirable, and oftentimes the small boy had to go through the cornfield and pull them off. Recent experiments show that suckering of the corn plant is merely a response to its surroundings. When the stand is thin there will always be plenty of suckers. The corn plants simply try to remedy the thin stand by suckering.

In an experiment several years ago where there were four plants in a hill eight suckers developed to each one hundred plants; where there were three in a hill, twenty-five suckers developed; where there were two in a hill seventy-six suckers, and where there was only one plant in the hill, 198 suckers developed to each one hundred plants. It was noticed that a large number of the suckers produced ears.

Another cause for suckering is the richness of the land. Rich, new land has been found to produce nearly twice the number of suckers as old, worn-out land. To some extent the tendency to suckers is no doubt inherited, but the main causes of suckering are the thinness of the ground and the weather conditions.

Experiments conducted for two years indicated that it paid to leave the suckers on. The average yield for two years of corn with the suckers left on was eighty-one bushels, while for corn with suckeers pulled off it was sixty-four bushels.

How Local Property has Raised.

On Saturday a Times reporter, on the Market Square, happened to get into conversation with two old residents of the city and county. One of them Mr. John Howden recalled when Peterborough only had eight houses. The other older citizen remembered when two hundred acres of land, just west of the city and almost adjoining, was traded for a pair of cow-hide boots. Recently a few acres of that same farm was sold for $3,000.

HOW TO STAND AND WALK CORRECTLY

Physical training forms part of the [illegible] education of good manners.

The [illegible] woman who carries herself [illegible] at all times is like an accomplished actress—she has mastered the art which conceals art. [illegible] be taught.

The correct position is to stand with the weight on both feet, the shoulders held well back, the chin in, and head high, but not turned up.

Do not stand with one knee bent or on one foot. This gives the figure a [illegible] effect and will in time make one hip higher than the other. One shoulder will also drop. This position throws the body into unsymmetrical lines that are most ungraceful.

If you stand in the position described in the above paragraph you will find that you can stand for a long time without becoming the least bit tired, but if you shift your weight from one foot to the other in a restless manner you will soon tire and lose that repose of manner that has such charm.

You hear so much written of the American girls' walk. It has been called ungraceful, too atheletic, and many other things, but with all that is said of the American girls' carriage she has a freedom in her walk that is not without attraction.

With the head held up, shoulders bent forward ever so little, and a slight swing to the arms (not enough to be ungraceful), she walks with a quick, firm step, and looks every inch a queen.

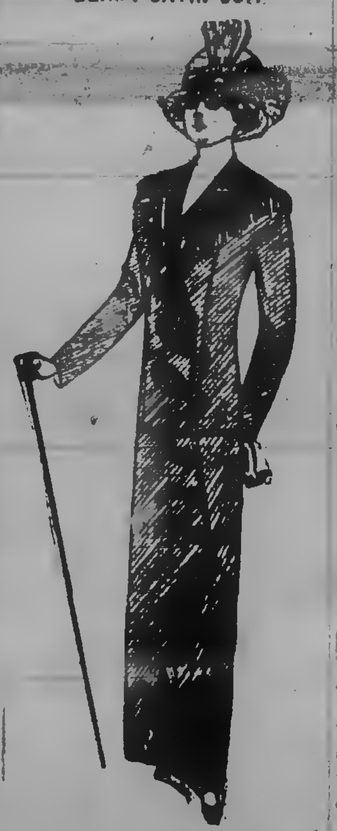
Each step should be taken from the hips, not from the knees. A knee walk is awkward, incorrect and does not give the proper exercise, and is very tiring.

For the drawing-room this athletic walk must be toned down. The girl who is accustomed to walking in the country and swinging her arms often feels ill at ease in the drawing-room, and does not know what to do with her arms and hands, but after a little training she should be as much at ease in the ball-room as on the tennis court and golf course.

These games, if not overdone, will give grace and good courage to the girl who indulges in them.

Just now there is a fad for walking and standing with the head and chin down. This is wrong, both from an artistic and healthful standpoint. The girl who walks with her head up as though she were unafraid of the world, and who looks at you in a frank, fearless manner and smiles pleasantly when you meet her is the girl who will always attract pleasant attention and is a treat to see as she swings along the avenue with that unaffected but natural grace.

BLACK SATIN SUIT



Black satin suits are again to be seen in favor, and our illustration today shows a pretty design for such a costume.

Suggestions About Dress

A pair of very thin, coarsely-woven silk stockings will give the effect of the most expensive, heavy ones if worn over a pair of thin lisle thread or cotton hose. They are particularly good for street wear, when very sheer stockings are unsuitable. A black velvet dress will be much less difficult to keep clean if you brush it with a new, dry sponge. The difficulty in using dress shields with kimono sleeves may be obviated by sewing them in at right angles to their usual position.

Anniversary Services at St. James.

An interesting event will be suitably commemorated at St. James' Methodist church on Sunday, March 31st, the occasion being the third anniversary of the dedication of the edifice. Special services will be held on that day, and Rev. P. P. Bryce, of Erlscourt Methodist church, Toronto, will deliver special sermons. The day will also be observed as a thank offering Sunday. On the following Monday evening there will be a congregational gathering and supper in the church.

FUTURE OF GEOGRAPHY

Traveller of the Future Should be a Trained Topographer

Major Leonard Darwin, the President of the Geographical Society, says "that in looking to the future it is important to inquire, not how their past history would then be regarded, but rather how the society would be able [illegible] its reputation and its usefulness in the new conditions of geographical knowledge. It was true that the South Pole was as yet uncaptured, that the map of Arabia was still largely composed of great blank spaces, and that the bend of the Brahmaputra was drawn by guesswork in their atlases. But it was probable that all those problems would be solved before long, and where then would be the field in which the explorer might hope to win renown in robbing the unknown of its romance? They must sooner or later face the fact that the work by which the society had become best known in the past represented an almost finished chapter in geographical history, and to that condition of things the society would have to adapt itself. In view of the changing conditions, they ought, no doubt, to direct their efforts with more persistence than heretofore in the direction of encouraging travellers to make systematic and detailed examinations of camparatively small areas, and not merely to cover long distances with the result of doing little more than to confirm the impressions of previous explorers. The traveller of the future ought to be a trained topographer, or to have thoroughly prepared himself in advance for some definite class of investigation, if he wished to win their praises."

JAPANESE COMMANDMENTS

A Salutary and Natural Code of the Orientals

There can be no doubt that the majority of these Japanese rules are nearer scientific exactitude than the rules of Moses or the ordinary practice of modern English life. Here are the Japanese commandments:

(1) Spend as much time as possible in the open air.

(2) Never eat more than once a day.

(3) Take a very hot bath daily.

(4) Wear rough warm clothes.

(5) Early to bed and early to rise.

(6) Sleep at least six hours each night and at most seven and a half in a dark room with open windows.

(7) Rest on the seventh day, and during that day do not read or write.

(8) Avoid every expression of anger; never exercise the brain too much or too long.

(9) Marry early; widows and widowers should re-marry as soon as possible.

(10) Drink coffee and tea in the strictest moderation; do not smoke at all; and never touch alcohol in any form.

(11) Avoid hot rooms, and, indeed, all rooms heated artificially.

(12) In order to strengthen such organs as may be weakened by age or [illegible]

A LONG WAIT

It is Mr. Arnold Daly, the famous American actor who recently made such a hit in "Arms and the Man" at the Criterion, who tells this story. He attended a dinner some time ago at which a lady who had risen from obscurity to fame on the stage told of how, one morning when unknown, she had called at Mr. Frohman's office in New York. She approached a particularly lordly office-boy and humbly inquired if Mr. Frohman were in. "He's not in," replied the boy, putting his feet on the desk. "Then I'll wait," she said, and seated herself in a chair. After an hour's wait she became weary, and ventured to make a second attack on the office-boy. "Will he be in soon?" she inquired. "I don't know," was the reply. "Will he be in to-day?" she persisted. "Not likely. He's in Europe!" At this point Mr. Daly sat up and took notice. "Were you that girl?" he asked. "Indeed, yes. Why?" Said Mr. Daly, "I was the office-boy."

LOVE SEEKS ASSURANCE

V. J. Warren, Calgary.

Too well, dear heart, too well you answer me!
Why do I ask to have you put in words
That which no human language can express?
Speech of the gods alone can compass that,
Which lifts us to the gods and lets us taste
Of heaven's bliss.

Ah, yes! I know what next you would reply.
Have I not read it in your sad, soft eyes—
Those heavenly windows of an angel's soul?
Have I not felt it in your warm caress,
Your clinging arms and sweet, red lips?
Do I not know?

Ah, yes!—even as the morning knows the sun!
The dew-kissed rosebud feels the same as I,
And shares a common secret with the world.
I know, and yet, ah yet, dear heart,
My ears are deaf, until I hear you say,
"I love you"

A "FAITHFUL HENCHMAN"

Romantic to a degree has been the career of Mr. Jesse Collings, upon whom Birmingham has decided to confer the honorary freedom of that city. He was born in a Devonshire cottage, and knew what it was to struggle on the pitiful wages of an agricultural laborer before he made his mark. Nobody is so ready as he to tell how he went to Birmingham with a solitary five-pound note in his pocket and started to carve out fame and fortune as a junior clerk in a firm of hardware merchants. Then he interested himself in social reforms and politics, and made the acquaintance of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, whose "faithful henchman," to quote the political description, he has been for many past years.

HIS OPPORTUNITY.

English tourist to cabman (whom he has been pestering with senseless "sights"): "I say, my man, I've been in Ireland for a week now, and I haven't seen a single Irishman driving a troublesome pig along the road, same as you see in picture postcards, you know."

Cabman (his patience exhausted): "Oh, just wait two minutes, sir. There's a big mirror in Casey's window up the street here."

There was peace.

ANCIENT BULLION

Portion of Soudan Treasure Trove for Ontario Museum

Charles T. Currelley, director of the new museum of Toronto University, [illegible] of the treasure trove of royal bullion, brought to light recently by Professor Garstang, of Liverpool University, England, in the course of his excavations at the ancient City of Meroe, in the Soudan, Africa, which existed about the time of Christ, was on its way to the museum. The bullion belonged to the ancient kings. Mr. Currelley related the very interesting circumstances associated with this sensational find. "Shortly after the time of Christ," he said, "the Soudan had a sudden burst of energy and greatness that those who have followed the Mahdi and Khalifa in recent times can understand, at least, to some extent. The great centre of this period was the town of Meroe, in the Soudan. Here great monuments were built and work was done that is surprisingly skilful and beautiful, though, of course, it is impossible to say how much of it was actually done by the Etheopians, or the Soudanese themselves, or how far it was the result of imported slave or free labor from Northern Africa, or, in fact, from anywhere on the Mediterranean. For some time Professor Garstang, of Liverpool, has been carrying on most sucessful excavations at Meroe, and last year the Royal Ontario Museum received, through the kindness of Mr. Robert Mond, of London, England, who is partially financing the expedition, some exquisite pieces of the ceramics of this period. This last winter Professor Garstang discovered the ancient treasure house of the Kings of Meroe, and there was still in the place a quantity of the royal bullion in gold nuggets, dust, etc., to the value of many thousands of dollars. It is probable that this new gift of a portion of bullion is also through the kindness of Mr. Mond.

"One is apt to speculate as to what happened to that ancient Minister of Finance and to the whole staff of clerical and manual helpers, or in any way why a large mass of such portable treasure should have been left for nearly 2,000 years. At any rate, we are very glad that a part of it will find a home in Toronto"

Mr. Currelley added that the records of ancient history threw very little light on the existence of the City of Meroe. There is a script at the ancient site of the once great city, and two men have been working on it, but so far have not been able to make head or tail out of it.

ECONOMY OF GOOD ROADS

The Cost of Haulage is Enormously Decreased

The value of good roads becomes evident when we look at the financial side of the problem. The cost of hauling one ton one mile is nine cents in Germany and twenty-five cents in the United States; the difference is largely one of road bed. If we apply these figures to hauling, say, 5,000 bushels of wheat five miles, the cost in Europe would be $67.50, in the United States $187.50, or $120 more. It will be safe to say that where 5,000 bushels of wheat is raised, as much more hauling will be done which would represent another $120, or $240, the extra outlay caused by poor roads. This is only one item. Good roads increase the value of the land—$5 an acre is putting it too low, but at that it amounts to $1,600 for a half section—then the convenience and the ability to market at any time, so that advantage can be taken of the highest prices. The man in town realizes the value of good roads, and he gets them. He paves the sidewalks and streets. He knows that they will increase his business, his comforts and social advantages, but no more so than in the country for the farmer.—North Dakota Agricultural College.

THE HIGHEST DIGNITY

There joined the police force of London a young Scotchman but recently arrived from his native land. Being detailed one day to block the traffic on a certain thoroughfare where members of royalty were expected to pass, he was accosted by a lady hurrying to keep an appointment who thrust her head from the carriage window to remonstrate with him over the delay. "I canna let you pass, ma'am," answered the man of the baton. "But, sir, do you know who I am. I am the wife of a Cabinet Minister." "It disna mak no difference, ma'am," he answered. "I couldn'a let you pass if you were the wife of a Presbyterian minister."—Presbyterian Standard.

RAISE MORE HORSES

George B. Hulme Says There is Money in This Industry

When George B. Hulme, the noted horse judge, was in Winnipeg recently placing the ribbons on choice animals in many of the horse classes, says The Farmers' Advocate, he took advantage of an opportunity at the stock luncheon to tell farmers of the Canadian West that they should go in extensively for raising horses of all kinds, including army remounts. "In Western Canada," he said, "you have the best climate in the world, and an abundance of food and water that the horse wants."

This is just what many others who are in a position to speak with authority have said. Feed can be produced in abundance at low cost; for the most part the water is satisfactory; the climate is such that with reasonable care horse flesh is developed to perfection.

In spite of these facts, it is remarkable how few farmers really try to raise enough horses to increase their annual cash returns. Some will not be bothered with colts around the place; others consider that there is a chance that after they have paid the stallion service fee the foal will die. They have a sort of holy horror of anything that entails more risk than the growing of wheat. But there are men in the prairie provinces who are making money from breeding mares of the proper type—and they are becoming more numerous year by year. They have realized that it should not be necessary to bring thousands of dray and farm horses from the East every year. They have found out that there is profit in a horse at three or four years when he can be exchanged for cash totalling almost as many hundred dollars.

The horse-raising industry is worth considering.

WINTERING FARM HORSES

How to Keep Idle Horses Cheaply in the Winter

There are three or four methods of wintering farm horses. Some turn out the idle horse and let them "rustle," some winter them in protected yards and others winter in the stable. Horses that will not be required to work from freeze-up in the fall till seeding begins in spring can be wintered as well outside as in, and more cheaply. If given a protected yard, into which a liberal supply of oat straw has been blown, they will come through the winter in as good shape or better than horses that have been closely confined and fed liberally on grain. An idle horse given plenty of good straw, some prairie hay, a few oat sheaves and water can be wintered in the yard at a minimum cost in labor and feed. Nature provides a heavy coat of hair, so the horse does not suffer any from the cold.

Horses thus wintered should have all the straw and rough fodder they will eat. Oat is the best straw. Corn stalks are an excellent feed for horses thus wintered. With oat straw and some hay no grain is required. Six weeks before spring work opens, light grain feeding should begin.

Colts may be wintered in the same way, but it is preferable to stable the weanling the first winter. Two colts in a box stall are company for each other, and if fed the usual rough fodder ration, and what oats they will clean up, do better than foals that rustle in the yard.—Farmers' Advocate.

CELERY HAS RUST

There will likely be a shortage in the celery crop this year. The recent storms have brought with them a rust known by growers as a celery disease, and it is playing havoc with the celery. Local growers claim that it was brought by the storms of the past month or so. The first sign noticeable is when the leaves turn red in spots. This gradually spreads over the leaves until they wither and decay. Then it strikes the roots of the celery and the root and stalks rot and die. Local dealers say that growers throughout the whole country are being bothered.—St. Thomas Journal.

FINE HORSES FOR CANADA

Nearly 1,000 horses have made the transatlantic voyage to the St. Lawrence this year. Mostly Hackneys and Clydesdales, the animals are to be distributed in a dozen different cities and towns throughout the Dominion. Mr. Robert Ness, of Howick, is the owner of twelve of the animals. Forty-four of the ponies are going to Mr. Sinton, of Regina, while Mr. Bogue is taking fifteen more to the West. All are bred from high-grade British stock and their coming will be welcomed by horsemen throughout Canada.

ORIGIN OF "GO TO BLAZES"

When Mr. Bodkin applied for the Bishop Blaize public-house, England, to be closed, he remarked to the chairman (Mr. R. Wallace, K.C.): "You may have heard of the ejaculation: 'Go to blazes!'"

"Yes" answered Mr. Wallace, "I think I have."

"Well," said Mr. Bodkin, "the origin of the expression is what the Bench seem to think it is. There was a Bishop Blaize and when anyone wanted advice it was the custom to say, 'Go to Blaizes.'" (Laughter.)

The government of British Columbia has asked the Senate whether Dominion government has taken any steps to prevent the immigration of Chinese and Japanese into Canada, as wanted by that Province. This is a subject of vital interest to the West, and will undoubtedly be given serious attention by the authorities at Ottawa. The Jap and the Chink are seemingly displacing the white laborer. Still, had it not been for Chinese labor, it is claimed, in some quarters, that the transcontinental railways would not

His Majesty Finds His Chief Relaxation Among the Children

In his own home, and especially in the nursery of his children, the King [illegible] He dislikes functions which take him away from those whom he loves best in the world. Nothing pleases him more than to be able to steal an hour from the duties of State in order to take part in the innocent amusements of the nursery. From the birth of his first child he has always been delighted to bring home toys, chiefly of the mechanical order. He is regarded by the children, indeed, as the greatest living expert in the art of constructing mimic fortifications and in the manoeuvring of toy soldiers.

The story goes that on one occasion one of his children was asked which he liked best, his father or his mother. The boy replied, "I like them both the same"; then he added, after a moment's reflection, "I think dadda spoils me most." It is not only in their games, but in their education, that the King has taken the keenest personal interest in the upbringing of his little ones.

A story was told that once, while at Balmoral, the Prince of Wales was away for a few days on a visit to London to do some shopping. The children, even on holiday in the Highlands, were kept under firm but kind discipline by their mother. "While she was away, however," says a lady who was at Balmoral at the time, "the Prince of Wales had his sons and daughter to himself. He romped with them, and they had the time of their lives."

The same lady is the authority for a pretty story with respect to King Edward's partiality for his granddaughter, the Princess Mary. The Royal party were travelling southwards, by special train, of course. The children had a saloon carriage to themselves. The little Princess, however, found her way to the saloon of her grandfather and grandmother and there remained. When Prince Edward attempted to follow her, he was firmly checked, and had it impressed upon him that his sister was a privileged person with the King, and was allowed liberties that were not meant for boys.—From "King George and Queen Mary," by Henry Warwick.

CATS IN JAPAN

In the Beginning the Felines Were Only for the Best Homes

According to the Japanese, the domestic cat appeared in their country at a relatively recent epoch, having travelled from China with the missionaries of Buddhism. In the middle of the sixth century of the Christian era sacrifices were offered to the cat, which was known by all as "the guardian of the manuscripts."

"The guardian of the manuscripts" kept away the mice, which otherwise would have eaten the precious papyrus. In some instances placards were set in conspicuous places among manuscripts as a warning to the mice: "Beware! The cat is here. She drives the mice." Portraits of cats were also placed in parts frequented by mice.

The cats were revered. For a long time they were kept in the temples. But their beauty, their general desirability and the charm of their grace, affection for man, and adaptability to human conditions, so appealed to the layman that one by one very gradually their kittens were permitted to leave the temples and to become the pets of the nobility. After entering the families of the high officials of the empire they won their way into humbler households.

PERILS OF BOTANY

A particularly exciting episode in the career of that veteran botanist, Sir Joseph Hooker, who recently celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday, occurred when some sixty years ago, he undertook a mission to unfamiliar regions in India, penetrated the Himalayan fastnesses, and, being detected botanizing on the Tibet border, was seized, imprisoned, and beaten, and came very near losing his life. It is to Sir Joseph that we owe our knowledge of the flora of the Antarctic, and seventy years have passed since he visited the South Polar regions.

STORIES OF A BISHOP

A hundred and one stories are told concerning Dr. Glyn, the Bishop of Peterborough, who was recently presented with a magnificent cope by the clergy and laity of his diocese. A rich and benevolent millionaire was once boasting to Dr. Glyn of the amount he gave annually in charity, as though he was certain it would secure him one of the best seats in Paradise. "Well," remarked the Bishop, on hearing the amount, "that is the largest insurance against fire I have ever heard of."

A SPORTING PRINCE

Polo and hockey player, cyclist, motorist, yachtsman, and steeplechase rider, the German Crown Prince is steadily acquiring a reputation as an all-round sportsman. An enthusiastic admirer, indeed, has predicted that he will make the German nation the first sporting people in the world. The Prince has had many adventures and curious experiences, and only a few months ago, during his visit to India, while on a motoring tour from Lucknow, lost his way completely. Eventually his car broke down in the wilds, and he had to return to civilization by means of a devious cross-country journey by boat, carrier, and rail, having meanwhile missed an important official fête which had been organized in his honor.

About Actresses

Ellen Terry was one day talking about the many women who asked her to help them get on the stage, when she said: "Every woman under thirty imagines that she is an actress. And every actress believes that she is under thirty."

Ontario is to get its demand for a Federal subsidy for the Provincial Government Railway. Hon. Peterborough Not Only Sufferer.

Belleville Ontario: Coal is very scarce in the city to-day. One dealer is completely sold out while another has only 30 tons in store, so great has been the demand for fuel this winter, and so difficult the task to get cars through from the mines. Moving Picture Houses on Trial.

The three moving picture house owners of this city were yesterday summoned to appear before the police magistrate at the morning session of the police court. The charge, as laid against these places of amusement, is that their proprietors allow patrons to stand in the aisles, or passage ways, contrary to the regulations of the license department. Toronto. It is understood that the owners of these places deny allowing people to stand in the aisles, but admit that the part of their respective places, back of the seats have, on busy nights, ever since the inception of the motion picture houses in the city, always been fully occupied.

Local Citizen and Dog Collide.

Yesterday afternoon a local citizen whose years number three times the count of his combined fingers and toes, entered the Post Office. Just as he tried to open one of the swing doors, a large hound, with more than a suspicion of carriage dog in its make up, rushed out. The dog and the local citizen's legs came into collision. The citizen made a half somersault, that resulted in his sitting down on the pavement. Either he or the sidewalk must have seen stars! Fragments of language are still to be found at the Post Office corner, that would help keep the family furnace warm.

THE EYE LIKE A CAMERA.

The eye is constructed so wonderfully and ingeniously that the handicraft of man has not as yet been able to construct as delicate an instrument. It is like a camera—the lens to focus, the lid as a shutter, the iris or color as the diaphragm, the thick coatings of the eye-ball as the dark room, the nerve as the sensitive plate, and strange as it may seem, the images are bottom side up exactly as the image in the camera. Now so delicate and sensitive an instrument as the eye should have good care. Let us explain more fully to you how to care for the eyes.

ALL LOCAL PICTURE HOUSES FINED FOR OVER-CROWDING

Magistrate Dumble Asserts he Would Like to Have Them all Closed—Appeal to Follow.

Yesterday morning's police court was well filled, despite the prevailing aroma of the apartment, to hear the cases against each of the three local moving picture houses, charged with allowing people to stand in the aisles last Saturday night.

The first case taken up was that against the Royal Theatre.

Chief Thompson testified to transfer of the license of that place to the present owner. Mr. Miles Henry, manager of the Royal, in the witness box, said that the approach to the cellar was not blocked.

His Worship was evidently acquainted with the "lay-out" of this theatre, as he took his pen and quickly drew a diagram from memory to show that the aisle described by Mr. Henry was used, or could be used by people going to the seats, or leaving the place in case of fire. The point was that the Act of Parliament says "People shall not stand in the aisles to obstruct the passage ways." He continued with the remark that "upstairs is a machine that might go off like a flash and cause a panic. The trouble is "you try to make too much money. Why don't you stop selling tickets when the place is full?"

Mr. Henry said that on Saturday night they sold 850 tickets, and people often stop for two shows.

His Worship did not know or did not care about the number of tickets sold, or the seating capacity. The whole thing is that the law had been broken, at least so he then thought.

The Chief of Police asked that the case of E. J. King, proprietor of the Princess Theatre be tried. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for Mr. King. The same charge was laid against him. Mr. Gordon pleaded "not guilty."

Chief Thompson swore that on Saturday night he was at the Princess at 8.30. It is a moving picture house. He found the same condition [illegible] at the Royal at the rear. The rear space was filled. No one was in the aisles. The seats were all filled. The space behind the seats is about ten feet deep and the width of the theatre. All the picture house proprietors have been warned before. There were enough people standing in the rear passage way to obstruct exit. To Mr. Gordon, Chief Thompson said he did not notice that the shows were just changing. No one was moving when he was there. No one was in the aisles only at the rear of the seats. There are ushers to take people to their seats. The seats were filled, as far as he could see.

P. C. Kidd swore that at 8.30 on Saturday night, people were standing behind the seats right to the doors. The centre aisle was free.

Mr. Gordon said, it has always been the custom here, for years, as in the larger shows, for people to wait their turn for seats. If his client would give an assurance that hereafter, people would not be allowed to stand in the theatre, the ends of justice would be satisfied. A conviction would mean the loss of his client's license, and his client would not be able to get a license in Ontario again.

Chief Thompson said the moving picture men had been warned before.

The Magistrate retorted, "people in the seats, to get out in a hurry, would be blocked by a hundred people at the rear. You are the worst sinner of the two!"

Mr. Gordon answered, "wait till you hear the next man's case."

A similar case was heard against Mr. Clayton, proprietor of the Red Mill. Mr. Ozias De La Plante, appeared for the defence.

Chief Thompson said, "to get into the outside lobby, he had to shove several people back." A man opened one of the inside doors. He thought one of the inside doors was bolted. The inside passage, behind the seats was crowded. The north aisle was filled for five or six seats in depth. To Mr. La Plante, the people in the north aisle were standing against the wall. There are two rear exits. The trouble is that tickets are sold after the place is filled. If there was a panic inside, those in the outside lobby would not know anything about it, so as to leave those inside get out.

Mr. Clayton, proprietor of the Red Mill, said when he saw the Chief come in, without uniform on, he asked for a ticket, but noticing his size he took him for a policeman. He had ushers on duty to keep the aisles clear, and show people to their seats. There were twenty-five seats vacant, but one cannot see them whilst the picture is on. Another policeman came in a few minutes later, whose name he did not know, who said everything was "all right."

To Chief Thompson, witness said no door was bolted that night.

Chas. Leahy, an usher at the Red Mill, swore he was hired to keep the aisles clear. George Eytes, singer and usher, at the same place, gave similar evidence. Mr. Donaldson, singer, sometimes usher, although not paid said, "when one enters such a theatre, in the afternoon, you can see no seats vacant, coming from the light to darkness."

Mr. Gordon, asked for a warning to be given, as the loss of license would mean the loss of a man's business.

His Worship said, the Government had laid down strict laws to protect people in such dangerous places. It is, in just such places, where the dead have been piled ten deep. He could understand that the local moving picture houses were simply converted stores, and consequently arrangements were not made for proper handling of the crowds. He could only inflict a penalty, as he found the law had been broken. He did not think that the $50.00 fine he imposed would necessarily lose their licenses. He said that all the regulations were plainly stated on the license forms issued to each of the convicted. He said he wished "his judgment could put them all out of business." This means that the Princess, the Red Mill, and the Royal Theatres each are assessed $50.00 with ten days in which to settle. The fines go to the Government.

Mr. Gordon and Mr. De La Plante will appeal the cases of their respective clients.

CLOSE THE BARS, KEEP SHOPS OPEN SAYS LIBERAL LEADER

Toronto, Mar. 26.—The Liberal caucus this afternoon was unanimous for this platform with the exception of two men, Messrs. Racine, of Russell, and Evanturel, of Prescott. Immediately on the opening of the House Mr. Rowell, the leader, submitted his resolution. The discussion of the motion cannot, under the rules of the house, be allowed until Thursday afternoon.

It is understood that Mr. Rowell has at last managed to get the party pretty well lined up behind him on the issue and will make it the chief plank in his platform. The element in the party which persuaded Sir George Ross in 1905 to throw the temperance party overboard have been fighting the new leader and have done everything in their power to dissuade Mr. Rowell from taking such a course. The Liberal chieftan has always been a strong temperance advocate.

Mr. Rowell's position has long been known to the general public and something had been expected from him on the question before the last election, but this was not forthcoming. Now it is stated on good authority that he has intimated to the party that they must either follow him or again look for a new leader.

is, like the fever after a wound—the most serious part of the trouble.

Caffeine, the drug in tea and coffee, "wounds" the nerves of the body and the reaction is like a slow, destroying fever!

Why trifle with beverages such as tea and coffee which contain a drug, when it is so easy to find a wholesome, delightful hot beverage—good for all the family.

LIVING CORPSE IN RUSSIA

St. Petersburg, Mar. 26.—A "living corpse" puzzles the medical authorities. Since March of last year, Ivan Moissejenko has been in a lethargic sleep. The man was charged with train robbery and murder. When he learned that his sweetheart had betrayed him he dropped unconscious and all efforts have failed to arouse him. The movement of the heart is barely discernible. During all this time he has been fed through a tube. Needles, hot irons, or electric shocks have no effect upon him.

A RIDICULOUS MISTAKE

Corporation Man Attacks a Letter and Paper Box With His Pick.

A ridiculously amusing mis-interpretation of orders occurred yesterday, which jeopardized one of our street letter boxes. The city's Street Commissioner instructed a corporation employee to take a pick and remove the snow and ice from beneath and around a letter and paper box at the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets. The man with commendable alacrity, proceeded to the scene of his orders, but instead of getting to work at the ice and snow at once attacked the letter and paper box with a vigor that threatened quickly to sever the mail receptacles from their substantial supports. A passing citizen, seeing what the man was at, wanted to know what fool trick he was up to. The busy laborer did not take the enquiry kindly, in fact, grew quite warm on the subject. "He had his orders," he said, "from the Commissioner to remove the mail boxes, and was going to do so." The citizen, seeing that argument was useless, proceeded on his way, and running across the heaviest man on the City Council—from an averdupois point of view, at least—put him wise as to what was doing at the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte streets. This representative of the people hurried to the scene, where he found the man still busy with his pick, industriously picking away at the iron bands which keep the boxes in place. The worthy alderman lost no time in convincing the son of Erin of his mistake, but it required Aldermanic language to persuade him that he must have mistaken his orders in thus committing an unwarranted act of vandalism on his Majesty's mail property.

SATAN REPROVING SIN.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Does it not appear silly and inconsistent for a man to write to a newspaper over a nom de plume, finding fault with others for doing the same thing? In the Examiner of Monday, a party styling himself "Elector," puts up a bluff of offering $30 to the Children's Aid Society if Mr. [illegible] his own signature, that he did not write or inspire a certain article which recently appeared in The Times. I have no authority to speak for Mr. Burnham, who very properly pays no attention to such silly twaddle, and who is quite able to defend himself if defense is needed, but I would suggest that "Elector" make good by disclosing his identity and putting up the money in the hands of some responsible party, before he goes any farther. I question if "Elector," judging from his underhand style, ever had $30 to spare in his life.

So far as I am aware, and I have known Mr. Burnham all his life, he is not the kind of man who writes articles for the papers under cover. He is too manly to stop in the dark, and is not afraid to sign his name to anything he writes.

MURDERER HUNG

Maryville, Mo., Mar. 26.—Hez Rasco, murderer of the Hubbell family of four, was hanged in the yard of the county jail this morning. He protested his innocence on the scaffold, and recited the twenty-third Psalm.

Rasco murdered Mr. and Mrs. Oda Hubbell and their two small children at their home near Guilford, Mo., on November 20, 1910, and then set fire to the house to cover the crime. Bloodhounds taking the scent at the scene of the crime, followed a trail to Rasco's room in his father's home where a blood-stained pair of overalls was found. The motive assigned by the State was Rasco's desire to recover money won from him by Hubbell in a poker game.

ANCIENT ORDER OF HIBERNIANS

Society That is Said to be Treasonable With Many Branches in Canada

Ireland has always been a land of secret societies. The particular one on which the Irish Unionists rely for support is, of course, the Orange Order. At present, the great secret society which forms the backbone of the Irish Nationalist party, is known as the Ancient Order of Hibernians. According to the late Mr. Michael Davitt, this order is the most powerful pro-Celtic organization in the world. It has branches in many lands, and in America the number of lodges has reached a total of six thousand. A few years ago, it was officially stated that its membership in Ireland numbered 380,000.

The Irish Nationalists defend this order, termed by their opponents the "Molly Maguires," as a harmless benefit society, existing mainly for the purpose of giving sick relief to its members, and assisting them when out of work. But their opponents contend that its one supreme object is the driving of the English Government, bag and baggage, out of Ireland. Said Mr. William O'Brien, the Independent Nationalist leader, on September 13th, 1910: "Whether it is a question of custom, office, public contracts, or positions on public boards, Molly Maguires are pledged always to support a Catholic as against a Protestant. The domination of this society would make this country a hell. The fact is that the salvation of the Irish cause depends on the utter rooting out of this baneful sectarian organization."

Still more strenuously is it denounced by Mr. Peter Kerr Kerr-Smiley, Unionist member for one of the Ulster constituencies. He writes, so lately as last November, as follows: "The membership of this order is divided into two degrees, the first of which has the majority. The oath is not administered nor secrets communicated to members of the first degree. The second degree consists of the initiated, who are bound to one another by terrible oaths." One of these oaths, known as "The Ribbon Oath," is given by Mr. Kerr-Smiley, but it is probably no more authentic than the "Charter Oath" credited to some Protestants by Mr. W. T. Stead. According to Mr. Kerr-Smiley, it runs in part:

"I further swear to owe no allegiance to any Protestant or Heretic Sovereign, Ruler, Prince, or Potentate, and that I will not regard any oath delivered to my by them or by their subjects, be they judge, magistrate, or else, as binding. And, in revenge for the suffering of our forefathers, and in protection of our rights, I further solemnly swear to aid as best I can in exterminating all Protestants and Heretics out of Ireland; to hunt, pursue, shoot, and destroy all Protestant or Heretic landlords, proprietors, or employers. And I further solemnly swear to aid as best I can in burning down, sacking, and destroying all Protestant or Heretic places of worship. I also solemnly swear to have no intercourse, communion, or trade, neither to buy or sell, barter or exchange, or have any dealings whatever with the said Protestants unless on such occasions as cannot be avoided."

"The form of this oath," adds Mr. Kerr-Smiley, "will suffice to show what a disloyal, treasonable, and, above all, purely sectarian body of men composed its membership. If the English people hand over the Protestants of Ireland to their rule, they will do so with a [illegible] their extermination. The only hope left to the Protestants would be to meet [illegible] physical force."

PLANS FOR THE NEW EAST CITY SCHOOL APPROVED OF BY BOARD OF EDUCATION

The Board of Education met in special session last night. There were present, the Chairman, Mr. John Crane, Dr. Burnham, Col. Miller, R. Fair, V. Eastwood, W. H. Hill, T. H. Adams, Dr. Morrison and B. F. Ackerman.

The meeting was called to consider plans for the new East City school, prepared by Architect F. H. Bartlett. The same model, if accepted, will be followed out in West City.

Dr. Morrison reported that, as regards the new site, the Board's Solicitor had been notified of the Board's action in approving of the purchase of the six acres of the Armour Estate property, at a lump sum of $3,300.

Mr. Corkery sent a message through the chairman that he is entirely in concurrence with the Board's action re the new site.

The plans submitted by Mr. Bartlett show a handsome twelve room of two stories and a basement. In the basement, 4,250 feet of class and play-rooms are provided for. In each ground floor and upper story class rooms, the windows in size equal one-fifth of the floor area. The whole interior arrangement promises to meet all approved modern requirements in detail and otherwise. These plans met with the Board's approval and were thought an improvement on the King Edward school, which is generally conceded to be one of the best public schools in the province.

Mr. Bartlett was instructed to prepare specifications for a building from the plans submitted, when, should his estimate of costs prove satisfactory, tenders will be invited. The plans have been drawn with a view to building therefrom at an expenditure of within $40,000. This amount is the Board's appropriation for the East City school, and it is fully expected that the cost of the site therefor will be more than realized from the sale of the old school site.

WILL LINDSAY LOSE BY I. B. and O. Order?

Lindsay Post: A recent order issued by the Canadian Northern Railway in regard to the I.B. & O. railway, promises, if put into effect, to injure the town of Lindsay.

As is well known the C.N.R. acquired the I.B. & O. Railway some time ago, according to the order referred to all shipments from Bancroft on that line must in future go via Trenton Junction.

This is a serious blow, not only to Lindsay, but also to Fenelon Falls.

WOMAN'S DEATH IN TORONTO GIVES POLICE LOTS OF TROUBLE

Toronto, Mar. 26.—Without giving his victim the slightest warning of his intention, some unknown man for whom every available police officer in the city is now looking, drew a revolver and fatally shot Rebecca Berger, 32 years of age, an Austrian Jewess, through the mouth on the threshhold of her lodging house at 160 Chestnut street at 7.30 last night. Immediately the bullet was fired the woman staggered forward a half a dozen paces to the sidewalk, and fell face downward. Her assailant disappeared.

Patrol Sergeant Lannon and Constable Lougheed, who were walking down Elm street, attracted by the shouts of some boys, ran to the scene of the murder. They found that a Mrs. Cohen, the landlady of the house, was supporting the woman in her arms. She was carried into the front room where she died five minutes after the shot had been fired.

TWO ARRESTS MADE.

In the midst of the confusion a man named Abel Berger, who is also known as Cohen, walked into the room where the body of the woman lay.

"I am her brother," he said. He wished, he added, to take possession of a watch which had been found on the Berger woman.

Detective Taylor questioned the man and then placed him under arrest. Both he and Mrs. Cohen were taken to headquarters.

The woman's story of the affair told to the police was that she was standing in her kitchen when she heard the report of a pistol, followed by the cry from the Berger woman, "I am shot."

She rushed to the door and saw her lodger reel and fall to the sidewalk. A man was standing close by the stricken woman, she said, and seeing that he had a revolver, she tried to grab it from his hand.

In this she was unsuccessful.

Abel Berger, who at first said that the murdered woman was his sister and that his name was Cohen, told a different version to the officials at headquarters, where he admitted he had been living with her as man and wife.

When searched a 22-calibre revolver was found on him. It was unloaded and according to the police had been discharged recently.

T. EATON CO. TO ERECT A TEN STOREY BUILDING IN TORONTO

Toronto, Mar. 26.—It seems true that the T. Eaton Company has begun the excavation for a ten-storey building on the northwest corner of James and Albert streets.

Another significant commentary on a former Carleton Block report is found in the circumstance that other structures are going up on Terauley street for the T. Eaton Company.

The proposed new building at James and Albert will have one noticeable effect, the removal of the delivery horses from James street opposite the City Hall. The parcels from the big store will be carried on belts to the basement of the new building and in this connection the tunnel system of the store plant will be increased proportionately.

HON. MR. WHITE WHILST GUARDING PUBLIC PURSE—OH YOU WELLAND

—Hon. Mr. White Whilst guarding

Ottawa, Mar. 26.—Hon. W. T. White is guarding the supplementary estimates as they were his life, although news has leaked out in regard to some items. It is understood that there will be liberal sums for the improvement of Canada's national waterways systems. It is understood there will be a million and a half in the estimates for the improvement and deepening of the St. Lawrence River and six millions for the completion of the improvements to Montreal Harbor. There will be an item running up into the millions to start work on the Welland Canal, and on a number of important Lake Ontario harbors, the most substantial item being $250,000 for the improvement of Goderich harbor.

The Toronto Federal Square scheme was approved by the Cabinet but it was decided to hold over starting work until the fall.

An appropriation will be placed in the supplementary estimates to permit a careful revision by engineers and experts of the cost of the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal.

N. Y. SUFFRAGETTES INTERRUPT MEETING AND WERE EJECTED

New York, Mar. 26.—In the fifth of six meetings which Col. Roosevelt addressed in the east side last night on the eve of the primary elections to-morrow, he faced a situation which had the better of him and other leaders at the meeting for fully 15 minutes. It was all due to a woman.

After Col. Roosevelt had begun to speak, one of the few women in the audience upset things by crying in a loud voice: "How about the women?"

SUFFRAGETTE INTERRUPTS.

Many identified the interrupter as Maude Malone, a militant suffragette who had upset similar political meetings in the same way. There was at once wild confusion of hisses and cries of "put her out."

Mr. Roosevelt was self-possessed, and after the clamor had quieted somewhat, he replied affably: "Madame, I have asked that you women yourselves be allowed to vote to determine whether you shall vote."

This was greeted with general cheering, but Miss Malone kept her feet and was about to make further interruptions when the colonel said: "Apparently you don't feel contented with this. In that case I have a great deal better opinion of your sex than you have." The men auditors added to the sally by wadding up their paper programmes and throwing them and other missiles at Miss Malone. The colonel pleaded for courtesy, but the crowd persisted in the pandemonium, notwithstanding the colonel's shouting from the platform, and the effort of the chairman to rap the crowd to order. The riotous demonstration continued for a quarter of an hour. The situation was saved only by sending for a special policeman, who ejected the militant Miss Malone.

Ungava Exploration Company

Off For The New Gold Fields

The purpose of this organization is to explore the practically unknown mineral resources of Ungava. The Company is in possession of information as to the location of rich placer diggings in that country, and is equipping an expedition to reach the gold fields about the middle of June. The Company is purchasing a schooner of about one hundred tons. The vessel will be outfitted with all necessary machinery for placer mining, and provisioned for one year. The complement of men will be ten in number, comprising experienced placer miners, who have had long association with placer operations in Alaska. The leader of the party is a man of wide knowledge of this kind of mining, having spent seven years in the Yukon and Nome. Each man of the expedition will have an equal interest in the results of the findings. No wages will be paid and they will sign up for one year, agreeing to turn all discoveries into the Company. Hence, it will be seen the confidence these men have in the outcome of their voyage into this rich, but unexplored country of Ungava. One of the parties is a man who was employed by one of the big trading companies of the North for nine years, during which time he made some startling placer discoveries, and it is to these fields the expedition will go first.

To those who are at all familiar with the vast wealth that has been, and is being, taken from the Alaska gold fields, the possibilities of this Company will make a strong appeal.

Placer diggings, unlike any other kind of mining, means almost immediate return, and it is not at all unlikely that this Company will produce big returns before the end of the present year. The man who will pilot the expedition, and who spent nine years in Ungava and Labrador, positively states that he got pannings as high as 80 cents to the pan, besides discovering big gold-bearing quartz ledges and immense deposits of iron ore. Thus it will be seen that the possibilities of the Company are practically unlimited.

The Company is working under a Dominion charter, which is very broad and comprehensive in its scope. It does not limit the activities of the Company to mining, but permits its embarking in almost all branches of commercial industry that might grow out of its explorations in Ungava and Labrador.

This may, indeed, be the nucleus of a great and wealthy concern, whose assets in a few years may represent sums which to mention at this present writing would sound like madness. However, this vast North Country is now coming into its own, and undoubtedly large fortunes will be the reward of those intrepid pioneers who commercialize its teeming natural resources: Gold, silver, copper, iron, coal—all the cardinal elements of commerce.

SUMMARY

FIRST. It has been known for years that Ungava contains great areas of rich mineral deposits.

SECOND. We believe we will be the first expedition to reach the Eldorado, although there are some fourteen private expeditions going in this spring.

THIRD. Our men are experienced prospectors and placer miners, and their only hope of remuneration is their interest in what they find.

FOURTH. There is no guesswork about going directly to the right place, as one of the parties spent nine years in the country and knows just where to go.

KEPT HIM BUSY.

"I think Tom is the busiest man in town."

"How so?"

"Well, he has a fifty cent watch and the hives."

STOPPING A RUN.

Many years ago, in consequence of a commercial panic, there was a severe run on a bank in South Wales, and the small farmers jostled each other in crowds to draw their money. Things were rapidly going from bad to worse, when the bank manager, in a fit of desperation, suddenly bethought him of an expedient. By his direction a clerk, having heated some sovereigns in a frying-pan, paid them over the counter to an anxious applicant.

"Why, they're quite hot?" said the latter, as he took them up.

"Of course," was the reply; "what else could you expect? They are only just out of the bank's own mint. We are coining them by hundreds as fast as we can."

"Coining them!" thought the simple agriculturist; "then there is no fear of the money running short." With this their confidence revived, the panic abated, and the bank was enabled to weather the storm.

LADIES, READ THIS!

"A king, my child, is a person whose authority is practically unlimited, whose word is law, and whom everybody must obey."

"Papa, is mamma a king?"

FINE PROSPECTS

"You may laugh at my cooking, George, but Mr. Lang says he thoroughly appreciates it."

"Yes, I know. But he looks at it from a professional point of view. He's going to be a doctor."

HIS BUSY DAY.

"Hard work!" Jobson snorted, after a particularly heavy day at the office. "Don't talk to me! What do you know about it?"

Smith, who didn't go to an office, smiled.

"Well, I guess I know something," he answered gently. "Since I got up this morning, for instance, I've put down a linoleum, laid three carpets, papered two rooms, fixed a fire-grate, swept the hall——"

"Good Scott!" Jobson began to grow compassionate—sympathetic.

"Mended a chair," Smith went on, "made two beds, set the table, washed the dishes, moved a piano and a sideboard, and hung nine pictures!"

"Poor old chap!" gasped Jobson. "Was it—your wife—made you?"

"No; my little girl did," said Smith sorrowfully. "You see, I bought her a new doll's-house last night!"

A SIMPLE INVENTOR.

"I understand that Rushleigh made his fortune out of a simple invention."

"No. Out of a simple inventor."

VERY EVIDENT.

Mrs. Suffragette—Everything I take up I believe in going into thoroughly.

Mr. Suffragette—Right! There was only a dime left out of $10 I had in my trousers last night before retiring.

A MODEL HUSBAND.

He had been married just a year, and one day strolled into his office grinning all over his face and whistling.

"What is the matter with you?" asked his colleague.

"Matter? Why when I left home this morning my wife said: 'Dear, you are a model husband.'"

"Well, that is not much of a compliment," said his partner.

"I should like to know why not?" stated the young husband.

"Well, take my advice, and look up the English Dictionary, and note what the word 'Model' means."

The young husband did so, and this is what came to his gaze, and dampened his feelings:

"Model, a small pattern, a miniature of something on a larger scale."

INSULTING.

Lawyer: "What! You a doctor? Why, you couldn't cure a ham!"

Doctor: "And you, sir, you could not try a case of cheese!"

NOT THE ONLY ONE.

She—But suppose I sue you for breach of promise?

He—You'd better not or you'll get crushed in the mob!

TOO MANY COLLECTIONS

A Scot, paying a visit to London, was taken by his nephew to a service in St. Paul's Cathedral. He had no acquaintance with the Liturgy of the Church of England. He picked up a prayer-book and became very interested, but as he turned over the leaves his face became clouded with a look of intense anxiety.

He placed the prayer-book carefully down, looked cautiously round, picked up his hat, and crept stealthily to the door.

His nephew followed him, and said, "Are you ill, uncle? What is the matter?"

[illegible] enough to make any man ill, the number of collections made in this 'kirk!'"

"Collections," said the nephew in surprise. "If there is any at all there [illegible] be more than one."

"Weel, [illegible] shouldna' mark so many in the b ok. There's naething but 'collect' and a bit of prayer, then 'collect' again, and say I to masel, 'I'll bide here until all these collections are taken, I'll no hae a bawbee left in ma pocket.'"

CHANGEABLE CLIMATE

"The English climate is rather changeable."

"Yes, rather. We seem to get every kind of weather there is, except, of course, good weather."

A TIP TO BUSINESSLIKE FARMERS

A motor-car had just reached a nice level stretch of road, and the man in the goggles was preparing for a scorch, when an honest-eyed old farmer stepped from the hillside, and held up his hand.

"Reckon you was jest going to slip along tidy fast," he said.

The motorist seemed angry for having been stopped, and wanted to know why he had stopped him. The old farmer replied:

"Look through these 'ere glasses of mine, and then perhaps you will change your mind."

The motorist looked through the glasses, and beheld a policeman on the branch of a tree.

"Great Scott!" he said; "it's nothing but a police-trap. Thanks, old friend." And the clink of coins was heard.

A minute later he went crawling past the tree at six miles per hour. gotten gains, remarked:

"That idea of carting the scarecrow from the pea-field and fixing it to the tree weren't so bad."

"Before I propose, Miss Plainer, I must know if you have anything in the bank?"

"Yes, Mr. Hunter. I have a sweetheart there; he's the manager. We are to be married next month."

Sir James spoke of the days he spent with Sir George Simpson and other Hudson Bay factors at the home of the late Mr. Macdonald, and how the [illegible] always turned to the wonderful work of the Hudson Bay Company from the Atlantic to the Pacific in the fur trade. Mr. Macdonald lost his eyesight two years after Sir James first met him, and the latter was asked to take charge of the bulk of Mr. Macdonald's correspondence, and Sir James said that in this way he was in a position to learn a great deal about the workings of the historic fur-trading company, and of the extent of its influence on the future of Canada's commerce. He said that in 1863 he delivered in the city of Ottawa, where he moved in 1854, an address on the desirability of closer union between the different Provinces of the Dominion, and of the early construction of the Trans-continental Railway. Sir Jonh Macdonald asked the speaker where he got so much information relative to these subjects, and [illegible] reply was that he got [illegible] result of his close association with the factors of the Hudson Bay Company.

[illegible] alcohol is used for heating and lighting, in chemicals, in various [illegible] explosives, and as a fuel for engines. For some years the tax laws [illegible] that alcohol was too expensive [illegible] for engines. For this reason machinery has not been adapted for using denatured alcohol. But it is coming into use.

The United States Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin recently on this subject. Denatured alcohol is being extracted from potatoes in other countries with success.

A distillery for this sort of work might be conducted by a farmer's coöperative association or as a private enterprise. A plant with a daily capacity of eight thousand pounds of potatoes would cost approximately $12,000. This is larger, considerably than would be practicable for a coöperative enterprise. The plant would have to be in a potato growing country with good railway facilities.—Kansas Industrialist.

USING WOOD SCRAPS

Tag Ends Left from Big Work Not Wasted Nowadays

In these days of high-priced lumber the utilization of the small pieces of wood formerly considered of little or no value assumes considerable importance. The Woodworker gives a number of uses for these scraps.

Brush manufacturers have made some headway in using waste from furniture factories, but the pieces are of so many sizes and of such irregular shapes that success has been only partial. A small porch chair shop has been able to draw a considerable part of its raw material from the waste of boat factories.

Wheelwrights save the ends cut from spokes and shape them in lathes for chisel, gimlet, auger and other small tool handles. Wagon builders occasionally make use of scraps of hardwoods for lining brake blocks. Sash and blind makers save their scraps for the match factories, or if the pieces are large enough they are worked into corner blocks, rose blocks and balusters.

Coopers recut broken or defective staves of the larger sizes and make kegs or smaller vessels of them. Small headings are economically manufactured in that way. Occasionally defective staves and headings are made into dowels. Basket makers save the cores from which veneer has been cut and saw them into thin slats for baskets and crate covers.

Some of the makers on interior finish work their odds and ends of soft woods into small boxes and the hardwood scraps are made into parquet flooring. Planing mills work scraps and broken pieces, unsalable in that form, into boxes for apples medicines and other articles and into brackets, balusters, rose blocks and small quarter-round moulding.

THE FORMATION OF ICEBERGS

They Originate from Glaciers in Western Greenland and Assume Every Shape

Icebergs usually originate in western Greenland. Everywhere, according to a bulletin of the Hydrographic Office, Greenland's mountainous belt "is penetrated by deep fiords, which reach to the inland ice and are terminated by the perpendicular fronts of huge glaciers, while in some places the ice comes down in broad projections close to the margin of the sea. All of these glaciers are making their way toward the sea, and, as their ends are forced out into the water, they are broken off and set adrift as bergs. This process is called calving. The size of the pieces set adrift varies greatly, but a berg from 60 to 100 feet to the top of its walls, whose spires or pinnacles may reach from 200 to 250 feet in height and whose length may be from 300 to 500 yards, is considered to be or ordinary size in the Arctic.

"These measurements apply to the part above water, which is about one-eighth or one-ninth of the whole mass. Many authors give the depth under water as being from eight to nine times the height above. This is incorrect, as measurements above and below water should be referred to mass and not to height. It is even possible to have a berg as high out of the water as it is deep below the surface, for if we imagine a large, solid lump of any regular shape which has a very small sharp high pinnacle in the centre, the height above water can easily be equal to the depth below. An authentic case on record is that of a berg grounded in the Strait of Belle Isle in sixteen fathoms of water, that had a thin spire about 100 feet in he[illegible]

"Bergs are made all the year round, but in greater numbers during the summer [illegible] and thousands are set adrift [illegible]. Once adrift in the Arctic they find their way into the Labrador [illegible] and begin their journey to the southward. It is not an unobstructed [illegible], but one attended with many [illegible] and mishaps. Many [illegible] in the Arctic basin and break up there; others reach the shores of Labrador, where from one end to the other they continually ground and [illegible] some break up and disappear entirely, while others get safely past and reach the Grand Bank. The whole coast of Labrador is cut up by numerous islands, bays, and headlands, shoals and reefs, which makes [illegible] adds greatly to the destruction of the bergs by disappearing and by causing them to break up. [illegible] melting action of the oceanic waters that accounts for the rapid disappearance of the ice after it has reached the northern edge of the warm circulatory drift currents of the North Atlantic Ocean. If these processes of disintegration did not go on and large bergs should remain intact, several years might elapse before they would melt, and they would ever be present in the transatlantic routes. In fact, instances are on record in which masses of ice, escaping the influences of swift destruction or possessing a capability for resisting them, have, by phenomenal drifts, passed into European waters and been encountered from time to time throughout that portion of the ocean which stretches from the British Isles to the Azores.

"They assume the greatest variety of shapes, from those approximating to some regular geometric figure to others crowned with spires, domes, minarets, and peaks, while others still are pierced by deep indentations or caves. Small cataracts precipitate themselves from the large bergs, while many icicles hang in clusters from every projecting ledge. They frequently have outlying spurs under water, which are as dangerous as any other sunken reefs. For this reason it is advisable for vessels to give them a wide berth, for there are a number of cases on record where vessels were seriously damaged by striking when apparently clear of the berg. It is generally best for vessels to go to windward of them, because the disintegrated fragments will have a tendency to drift to leeward, while open water will be found to windward. Serious injury has occurred to vessels through the breaking up or capsizing of icebergs."

TO PROPOGATE OYSTERS.

Now that living expenses are so great that oysters, at their present price, are almost beyond reach of the working man's pocket, the Dominion government has arranged for encouragement of the production of those bi valves. The following amendment to the Fisheries Act is under consideration:

"The Governor in Council may, upon such terms and conditions as are agreed upon, authorize the government of any province to grant leases of such areas of the sea-coast, bays, inlets, harbots, creeks, rivers and estuaries of such province as the government of such province considers suitable for the cultivation and production of oysters and any persons to whom such leases are granted by such province shall, subject to the fishery regulations of Canada, have the exclusive right to the oysters produced or found on the beds within the limits of their respective leases; provided that, in the event of such areas, or any part thereof, being in a public harbor, nothing in this section shall prejudice the right or title of the Dominion to the enjoyment and use of such harbor for every purpose other than the cultivation and production of oysters."

THE NEW MARRIAGE LAW

The Ontario Government is considering an amendment to the Marriage Act, that will meet with general approval. By the amendment, this law will read:

"If any minister, clergyman or other person solemnizes a marriage while either of the parties thereto is under the influence of liquor; or, if he has reason to believe that either of the said parties is an idiot or insane, he shall incur a penalty of five hundred dollars ($500.00) and shall also, in the discretion of the Court, be liable to imprisonment for any period not exceeding twelve months." The said Act is further amended by inserting the following section immediately after Section 20: "If the person having authority to issue the license or certificate has knowledge or has reason to believe that either of the parties to the intended marriage is an idiot, insane, epileptic or imbecile, he shall require the applicant to produce and leave with him the certificate of a duly qualified medical practitioner to the effect that neither of the parties to the intended marriage is idiotic, insane, epileptic or imbecile and in default of the production of such certificate he shall refuse to issue the license applied for, and if the said person having authority to issue the license or certificate has knowledge or has reason to believe that either of the parties to the intended marriage is an idiot, insane, epileptic or imbecile, and does not require the applicant to produce such certificate of a duly qualified practitioner, he shall incur a penalty of five hundred dollars ($500.00) and shall also, in the discretion of the Court, be liable to imprisonment for any period not exceeding twelve months."

CALGARY

The City Of Opportunity

Capitol Hill

One of Calgary's close-in residential sub-divisions. City water is now in the adjoining divisions and sewer system is to be installed this spring. We expect these improvements in Capitol Hill this summer. Street car service is at present within two or three blocks of Capitol Hill. The City of Calgary has purchased Block 68, Capitol Hill, on which to build a large public school. A number of nice homes have already been built in Capitol Hill, and many more are in course of construction.

Lots in this sub-division are selling in pairs at $250 to $350 per lot. We offer you one block of forty lots, close to Block 68 at $210 per lot, on terms of Third Cash and Balance four, eight and twelve months, with interest at 8 per cent. on deferred payments. This block will readily sell for $300 per lot, or more, within the next six months. The block is high and level, and every lot is perfect. This is a gilt-edged investment. If you cannot handle it alone have some friend join you.

The Toronto Star seems to find fault with Hon. Col. Sam Hughes, because the latter, the Minister of Militia, has bought eleven automobiles for public use. The Star seems to claim that $1219 was paid for the autos over and above catalogue prices. Whilst we do not know the weight, the horse power or the cylinder size of these particular motors, there is no denying that a man in the position of Minister of Militia has to use a great deal of personal judgment. Autos, for military purposes, may cost more than machines for ordinary use. Surely there is nothing to be gained by any newspaper, making a little political capital, carping at, and criticizing every act of a member of the Cabinet. Col. Hughes would certainly not buy these autos unless he knew the country had use for them. Is it likely that, for the little excess price, as claimed, that a Cabinet Minister would authorize an extra thousand dollars to be spent for any personal motives or gain? Such insinuations are too small for serious consideration.

Boston, Mass., Mar. 25.—Arthur Willis Shaw, the absconding Freeport Me., shoe manufacturer, who, for love of Mrs. Georgia M. Stuart of the Back Bay, deserted his wife and children and mulcted his firm of thousands of dollars has arrived in Boston from Los Angeles under arrest on an indictment charging him on eight counts with the larceny of $19,000.

Taken to police headquarters by Capt. Armstrong and Inspector Gaddis, the police officials who brought him back from the California city, he was booked and measured and immediately afterward remanded to the Charles street jail. It is probable that he will plead to the indictment before the superior court, at which time bail will be fixed.

"I'll clear myself of the charges."

Such was the statement Shaw made to a reporter who met him at Springfield and came through to Boston with him. But there was not much force of vigor to his words. Looking from eyes almost hidden by swollen lids, mute testimony of sleepless, nervous nights, his whole attitude was one of dejection.

GROOMS LEFT AT THE ALTAR

Strange Instances of Interuptions Which Cancelled the Marriage Ceremony

A recent society wedding sensation, where the bride failed to appear at the altar at the eleventh hour, is not without parallel. Only a short time ago a lady on arriving near the church to be married ordered her coachman to drive her home again. Although astonished at this extraordinary request for the bridegroom was actually waiting in the church, he complied with his mistress's orders. It transpired afterwards that she had merely turned back because the crowd which had gathered to cheer her frightened her away.

In Bristol, some years ago, a marriage failed to take place at the last moment, in the most dramatic circumstances. The bride had been previously engaged. For some reason or other the engagement was broken off, and her fiance sailed for Canada. After some time she became engaged to a local insurance agent. All arrangements were made, and the happy couple were to be married on an Easter Sunday. A large number of people were assembled to witness the ceremony which was just about to begin when the first lover appeared on the scene. The bride fainted, and on regaining her senses she refused to be married to the insurance agent. Since then she has become the wife of her former lover, who has taken her to his homestead in Canada.

On the morning that another happy pair were to be married the bridegroom, who had a moustache and beard, determined to be clean shaven for the ceremony. Why he made up his mind to do such a curious thing on his wedding morn is not known. However, when he was shaved his friends all congratulated him upon his improved appearance. The ceremony was timed for eleven o'clock, and punctually to the moment he appeared at the church. When the bride saw him, however, she had a fit of hysterics, and it was not till some hours too late that she recovered her composure. She then announced that she would not marry her lover in any circumstances, declaring that he was betrayed by his mouth, previously hidden by his moustache and beard, and that he looked to her to be cruel!

Many will remember the sensation caused twelve years ago by the stopping of a fashionable wedding at the very last moment. The bridegroom was an exceedingly well-known figure in the world of sport, and the bride was the widow of a wealthy man. The curious part about it was that the lady was the only one who believed [illegible] lover. Everyone else [illegible] spotless, but they could not, nevertheless, convince the charming widow. Everything was ready for the ceremony. The church had been profusely decorated with flowers, and many well-known and prominent people had taken their places.

The dramatic moment came when the couple met at the altar. The bride noticed that her intended husband was wearing a particularly valuable diamond tie-pin. Suddenly she cried out: "Take me home! Take me home! I cannot say anything more now!" To the consternation of all was stopped. So overcome was the bride that she fainted and had to be carried to her carriage. Later it transpired that this identical pin had been stolen some months before from the widow's rooms.—TIT BITS.

HORSES

Crushed oats are easier digested, and therefore more profitable than whole oats.

The driver's aim should be to manipulate the reins with a light but firm and steady hand.

A roll after a hard day's work is greatly appreciated by the horse. It takes the place of extra feed.

The value of salting the work horse regularly is often underestimated by horsemen. It is a good practice to keep the material before them at all times.

Remember that sudden changes of food may cause colic. New hay, new oats, green corn, etc., are often used. Make the change gradually, and no harm will result.

A horse that is extremely tired should not be given a heavy feed until he has had a little rest. Some feeders act on the supposition that a large amount of feed is what is needed to replace the lost energy. It must be remembered, however, that a horse so exhausted cannot digest food as well as one that is fresh, and, therefore, should be fed accordingly.

TIGHT COLLARS

A well-known doctor considers it remarkable that no one seems to have laid stress on the fact that such slight obstacles to the free circulation of the blood through the vessels of the brain may adversely influence the health of those who are in the habit of wearing tightly-fitting neck clothes.

The fact appears to be well known to veterinary surgeons, who tell us that neck constriction through badly fitting harness is a causative factor in "staggers" in horses. It seems to be equally well known that dogs suffer a great deal through having to wear tightly fitting collars. Is it too much, then, he asks, to argue that those of us who wear our own collars too tightly buttoned may find that practice some explanation of symptoms ascribed to other causes?

FORTUNES MAY BE YOURS

How to Become as Rich as a Rothschild or a Rockefeller

There is no doubt that a fortune, and probably a large one, awaits the man who shall solve certain problems. Surgery, for instance, has made wonderful strides of late years, and its allied art of dentistry has become an almost exact science; but, though the dentist can furnish the mouth with new and wonderfully efficient instruments of mastication, yet the surgeon has hitherto entirely failed to replace the worn-out organs of digestion, says Tit-Bits.

He can remove, wholly or in part, almost every organ of the body, but he can do very little towards their artificial replacement. It is said that Mr Rockefeller has offered half a million dollars to anyone who will supply him with a new digestive apparatus, but up to the present we have not heard that anyone has drawn the cash.

The same gentleman is bald, and although he is probably less perturbed about his bald pate than about his dyspeptic stomach, yet doubtless he would be willing to endow that man with a pension for life who would rethatch his roof. Many hair-washes there are which have admirable qualities in the direction of stimulating the growth of the hair and preventing it from falling out, but even the manufacturer of those articles of the toilet would frankly admit that a real and infallible cure for baldness has not been discovered. The man who could rise up and demonstrate to the world that he can make hair spring up on a patch of pate as smooth as a billiard ball would be a millionaire in six months.

Many diseases, like leprosy, the plague, cholera, and smallpox, have been wholly or nearly eradicated from Western Europe, America, and the British Colonies, yet rheumatism continues to cripple tens of thousands, and is considered by most doctors as practically incurable. The man who can find a genuine cure is likely to be a millionaire in life and to have his statue in every city after he is dead.

The same remarks apply to cancer. Investigators are engaged on the problems involved in the cure of this disease in every quarter of the globe. It is no exaggeration to say that millions of pounds have been spent on research work in connection with it, and yet its ravages remain unabated.

So far as consumption is concerned, all the above remarks apply; but in this case a more rational treatment of the patients and their more careful isolation have done something to reduce its ravages. There are teeming thousands of men and women who would be willing to shower all their treasures at the feet of the man who, one fine morning, could step forth and say, "Here is a certain cure for consumption," or, "I hold in my hands the antidote to cancer." Aye, the world would beatify him.

No one has ever found a cure for sea-sickness; yet there is a fortune awaiting the man who will do so. Many sailors even, of whom the "Mighty Nelson" was one, are victims of sea-sickness if the weather should [illegible] ventured to embark upon the ocean. Yet nobody has ever found a remedy for it.

Just as, when you have a cold, every person you meet will give you a new and infallible cure, so, when you are going for a voyage, short or long, everyone will give you a simple panacea for sea-sickness. If the sea is as calm as a mill-pond the nostrum acts, but in the chops of the Channel it proves a tragical failure. There is a lot of money in an infallible cure for sea-sickness.

TURPENTINE NOW A LUXURY

No Longer the Cheapest Thing a Householder Can Buy

The time was when turpentine was about the cheapest thing a housekeeper could buy. The biggest bottle in the house was sent for five cents' worth of turpentine. Now your sewing-machine oil bottle is big enough for that much. Indeed, turpentine has so grown in value that unless when you call at the paint dealer's and do not specify that you want the genuine article he will hand you out a substitute made largely of crude gasoline. Some years ago turpentine retailed for 20 cents a gallon, and now sells for 10 cents a half-pint.

Turpentine is a southern product, and, while the demand has largely increased, the output has largely fallen off. The value of the output in 1910, though much smaller than the previous year, was 40 per cent. greater than in 1909, all of which shows that the south has a very valuable industry and one that demands scientific and careful handling of the pine forests that produce the resin and the turpentine to prevent the destruction of the trees. The old forests are already giving out and new areas are being worked. The product is taken from the tree by chopping holes in the bark and sap, through which it oozes. The trees have been overworked, and many large areas that were valuable have been killed by the greed of the turpentine companies. The trees are natural growth and cannot be restored by replanting. Their value will steadily increase, and it would be the sheerest folly to keep up the old methods of destruction.

First British Woman to Fly

The distinction of being the first woman of purely British nationality to fly belongs to Miss Gertrude Bacon daughter of the famous aeronaut who was really one of the pioneers of ballooning. Miss Bacon went up with Mr. Sommer in a Farman biplane during the Rheims aviation meeting of 1909, and in her book, "How Men Fly," which has recently been published, she provided a fascinating narrative of the sensations of flying. She quotes the unfortunate Mr. Rolls as saying that his "first impression of flying was like trying to drive a motor-car which was skidding in all directions at once."

SALT FOR MANGOLDS

Best Results Obtained From Use of 10 Per Cent. Per Acre

That application of salt in addition to other fertilizers is useful for the mangold crop is generally acknowledged, but what is the most suitable quantity [illegible] is a question upon which there is considerable difference of opinion.

To obtain definite information on this point, the Harper-Adams Agricultural College has been conducting experiments for three years with quantities per acre of 2½ cwt., 5 cwt., 10 cwt. and 15 cwt. respectively.

The salt was applied in the middle of April and thoroughly worked into the soil by cultivating, harrowing and rolling three times before rowing up, the ridges being again split before sowing.

Special care has to be taken to ensure the salt being completely mixed with the soil, otherwise the seed is liable to be damaged.

The drills were made across all the manurial and variety trial plots, and the weights are the average of the different plots. The result was the following:—The application of—

2½ cwt. produced an average increase, about 4 tons roots;

5 cwt. produced an average increase, about 5½ tons roots;

10 cwt. produced an average increase, about [illegible] tons roots;

15 cwt. produced an average increase, about 4 tons roots.

The big application of 15 cwt. was tried for the first time last year, just to see what the effect would be.

The experiment seems to demonstrate that the quantity of salt that can be used with the best result is 10 cwt. per acre.

HORSES IN WINTER

Can be Kept on Straw as Well as on Hay

Professor J. H. Shepperd, of the North Dakota Agricultural College, answering a question recently about wintering horses on straw, says:

The North Dakota station did a considerable amount of work in horse feeding a number of years ago and made extensive trials with oat straw, as compared with hay, for roughage. In the trial it was found that some horses did about as well on it as they did on hay. While others were very much harder to carry, chiefly because their appetites for roughage were too light to cause them to eat enough of it. Aside from those dainty animals there was little trouble in keeping them up on oat straw as roughage.

The oat straw used was that of a normal season, which was coarser and more woody than that which had been obtained this year. The trial consisted of a period of sixty days' feeding with oats as the grain ration against a similar period with oats and hay, and sixty days' feeding with a mixture of half and half bran and shorts by weight with hay compared with sixty days' feeding bran and shorts with oat straw.

During the first thirty days winter conditions were present and the horses [illegible] exercise. During the second thirty days they were worked at harrowing, discing and seeding and had nearly all of that work the last half of the month. The horses receiving oats and hay as a ration required nine and one third pounds of oats with hay to carry them, while those on oats and straw consumed eleven and one-half pounds of oats per day. During the thirty days that they had light work, the horses on hay gained 176 pounds and the three on straw 169 pounds. During the thirty days when they had heavy work one-half of the time, those on hay lost 240 pounds and those on straw 345 pounds.

The similar lots of horses fed on bran and shorts, half and half, by weight, gained during the winter conditions, 85 pounds when fed hay, and 53 pounds when fed straw. When they were on the straw ration with heavy work for one-half of the month they lost 225 pounds, and on the hay ration 235 pounds.

These results indicate that horses can be carried almost as successfully on straw as roughage as they can on hay, provided enough aditional grain is given them to supply them with sufficient nourishment. The additional grain required is about one-fifth. If the feeder has facilities for chaffing the straw and will moisten it and mix the grain fed with it during the season when the animals are required to do very little work, a smaller amount of grain will carry them.

SUCKERS ON CORN

In the past suckers on corn were regarded as very undesirable, and oftentimes the small boy had to go through the cornfield and pull them off. Recent experiments show that suckering of the corn plant is merely a response to its surroundings. When the stand is thin there will always be plenty of suckers. The corn plants simply try to remedy the thin stand by suckering.

In an experiment several years ago where there were four plants in a hill eight suckers developed to each one hundred plants; where there were three in a hill, twenty-five suckers developed; where there were two in a hill seventy-six suckers, and where there was only one plant in the hill, 198 suckers developed to each one hundred plants. It was noticed that a large number of the suckers produced ears.

Another cause for suckering is the richness of the land. Rich, new land has been found to produce nearly twice the number of suckers as old, worn-out land. To some extent the tendency to suckers is no doubt inherited, but the main causes of suckering are the thinness of the ground and the weather conditions.

Experiments conducted for two years indicated that it paid to leave the suckers on. The average yield for two years of corn with the suckers left on was eighty-one bushels, while for corn with suckears pulled off it was sixty-four bushels.

FIRST BOXING RULES

Boxer Who Was Buried in Westminster Abbey

Few people are aware of the fact that a pugilist was buried in Westminster Abbey. In an article of much interest in "London Stories," it is stated that Jack Broughton, sometimes described as the founder of the British School of boxing, was buried in the West Cloister in 1789. Late in life Broughton became a Yeoman of the Guard, and the inscription on the [illegible] the remains of Mrs. Elizabeth Broughton, died Sept. 7, 1784, aged 58 years. Also of Mr. John Broughton, one of His Majesty's Ushers of the Yeomen of the Guard, died July 8, 1789, aged 86 years." The gravestone also has an inscription but there is a blank between the name and the year. It is stated that but for the objection of the Dean this would have been filled with the words, "Champion of England."

Broughton was born in 1704 and was the first winner of Doggett's Coat and Badge. He made his first appearance as a pugilist at George Adam's famous booth at the Adam and Eve in Tottenham Court road. Later he set up an establishment of his own, and maintained his ascendency for many years, being eventually unexpectedly beaten by Slack in April, 1750 at Birmingham. Broughton made his own rules, which lasted from 1743 until 1838, when, after the contest between Owen Swift and Brighton Bill, the "New Rules of the Ring" came in. Broughton's rules are of more than ordinary interest, and were as follows:—

That a square of a yard be chalked in the middle of the stage; and every fresh set-to after a fall, or being parted from the rails, each second is to bring his man to the side of the square, and place him opposite to the other; and till they are fairly set-to at the lines it shall not be lawful for the one to strike the other.

That, in order to prevent any disputes, the time a man lies after a fall, if the second does not bring his man to the side of the square, within the space of half a minute, he shall be deemed a beaten man.

That no champion be deemed beaten unless he fails coming up to the line in the limited time; or that his own second declares him beaten. No second is to be allowed to ask his man's adversary any questions or advise him not to give out.

That, to prevent disputes, in every main battle, the principal's shall, on the coming on the stage, choose from among the gentlemen present two umpires, who shall absolutely decide all disputes that may arise about the battle; and if the two umpires cannot agree, the said umpires to choose a third, who is to determine it.

That no person is to hit his adversary when he is down, or sieze him by the ham, the breeches, or any part below the waist; a man on his knees to be reckoned down.

VANCOUVER HARNESS RACING

Apparently the conduct of harness-racing is satisfactory at the Vancouver Exhibition. They encourage it on the Pacific coast, while Toronto Exhibition has abandoned it entirely. All kinds of horses are provided for in the speed program at Vancouver, and the list of stakes and purses totals twenty thousand dollars. Two stakes are of $3,000 and two of $2,000 each.

AN ESTIMATE OF BOURASSA.

In discussing Mr. Bourassa a Vancouver paper says that it is reported that Mr. Bourassa is about to return to the House of Commons to organize and lead a third political party. The ground for this action is the refusal of Mr. Borden to impose a Separate School system on the Keewatin addition to Manitoba, and Sir Wilfrid's failure thereupon to join in a vote of censure. Mr. Bourassa is at liberty to waste a few years of his life in that enterprise, which will do neither him nor anyone else any good. He was in the Commons first and left that body to go into Provincial politics. It is quite likely that his restless disposition may take him back to Ottawa if he can find a constituency. But he may as well give up any hope of building up a strong position for himself in Canadian public life by attempting to split Manitoba into two divisions with different educational systems. Sir Wilfrid Laurier did his best to make trouble for Mr. Borden on this issue. He moved an amendment, for which the Nationalists voted as involving the school issue, though it did not mention schools. That was where the Opposition leader desired to stop. But he was not allowed to escape that way and had to stand up and be counted in a direct vote on the school question. Knowing that his own party outside of Quebec would not follow him as leader for a week if he should vote for the Separate Schools amendment Sir Wilfrid came out of his retreat and fell in line behind the Government. If Mr. Bourassa were in Ottawa he could further embarrass Sir Wilfrid by making him vote on other Nationalist issues. He may think that he will embarrass some of Mr. Borden's colleagues from Quebec by asking them to do impossibilities. But these are not tasks for a man who aspires to a position of influence in Canada, and they will keep him in the ranks of the skirmishers and guerillas all the days of his life. Mr. Bourassa has ability and many elements of popularity. But after sixteen years of public life he is still known as a sectional and local agitator, with no standing or influence outside his own Province. In the Legislature of Quebec he has a chance to accomplish something, as he has some following among his compatriots and has taken an interest in many Provincial issues.

Couldn't Get Strong

SEEMED TO HAVE LOST ALL AMBITION, WAS PALE AND ANAEMIC.

Made Wonderful Recovery When Dr. Hamilton's Pills Were Used.

"I was never actually sick," writes Mrs. La Pierre, wife of a well-known resident of Labeniene, "yet I never could get strong like other women. I ate well enough, but somehow blood rich and red I could never make. When I married I took a great pride in my housekeeping, but it kept me tired all the time. Mrs. Lechance, my neighbor, looked well — she told me her health had been made by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I only thought of pills as a physic, but now I know that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are more, for they quickened my stomach, liver and bowels—made me stouter and stronger, gave me such color in my cheeks as I never had before. They do good to parts in ways I need not mention in this letter, but I sincerely believe Dr. Hamilton's Pills should be used at regular intervals by every woman—that's why I write this letter."

No medicine invigorates a woman like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box, all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

THE MORNING TIMES

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 27, 1912

YESTERDAY'S DECISION ON PICTURE HOUSES.

Whilst The Times has no animus against any, or all of the moving picture houses, there has most undoubtedly been such a condition. There may or there may not be a panic. The point to consider is this: Suppose you, or more especially your wife or family was in one of these places. Suppose again, one of the films caught fire, and they are almost as inflammable as gun powder, what would be the result? A flash of flame through the hole or window of the operating [illegible] entrance doors. If [illegible] inside the ticket office were crowded, as it often is, and suppose the inside lobby were filled as usual every night, i. e. the space between the entrance doors and the rear of the seats, inside the building, what would be the result? Several hundred people would rise from their seats, see the flame rushing out, above their heads. Which direction would they take? If the crowd, as crowds will, take a unanimous action, they might make for the entrance doors. The crowd in the outside lobby, not knowing of the threatened peril inside, would not budge. Those coming up the aisles would have to contend with the people standing in the space behind the seats inside. This would result in a most terrible holocaust, which would cause crape being hung on scores of local houses.

FREEDOM AND COERCION.

In discussing Mr. Bourassa, The News says that he is strong just now on "British citizenship." When he heard that Mr. Borden would have no school clause in the Manitoba Boundaries Act he said to The Montreal Herald: "It makes my British blood boil." His claim was that a minority in the District of Keewatin was under oppression, that discrimination against it had been shown by the Government and that because of their race and and creed Roman Catholics were being treated as secondary citizens. This is contrary to British practice, and therefore Mr. Bourassa lifted up his flag and wept.

But the argument is based on a fallacy, that the Federal Government is competent to legislate on education. Under the British North American Act education is the sole care of the Provinces. If a Province has oppressed unduly any minority an appeal lies to the Federal House. Parliament would be insolent to the Provincial authorities if it should assume that future legislation of any Province might require a preliminary "safeguard." The first requirement of British citizenship is respect for the law, and for all contracts and undertakings upon which the law is based.

Mr. Bourassa has urged and still urges the violation of the Canadian Constitution for the benefit of a religious sect. He has taken similar ground in the past. He drafted the drastic school clauses in the proposed Saskatchewan and Alberta Acts which drove Mr. Sifton out of the ranks of official Liberalism and shook the party loyalty of many other members. When these clauses were modified he protested. The opinion of the West was against him, but he pressed for legislation contrary to that opinion and contrary to the law of the land. He was in spirit and in speech a coercionist, a tyrant, who would substitute for the British method of respect for law and trust in the people the iron hand of the autocrat. Mr. Bourassa does not do well to use his British citizenship as a justification for such coercive measures.

Editorial Notes

Kingston, Ont., has gone Peterborough one better (or one worse) in the matter of assessment. The Limestone City has fixed their rate for the coming year. This is an advance of one and a half mills since last year.

Hetty Green, the richest woman in the world, has found New York dull, and has moved to a flat in Hoboken. Say, Hetty, why not try Peterborough for one winter, after leaving your cheque book behind. It is guaranteed that you will not find things dull. They may be cold, however, under such circumstances.

It seems that Peterborough is not the only city that has trouble over [illegible]. [illegible] house of refuge has to get rid of its sewerage. The town found they would have to spend $6000 for a drain to the lake, and now Dr. Bruce Smith, of the Provincial Board of Health, says the town cannot put their sewerage into the lake. A septic tank seems the only way to solve the difficulty.

As several young men of Peterborough seem to look for the easy work and pay of government positions, it might be noted that the last issue of the Canada Gazette says that: "Public notice is hereby given that a general competitive examination under the direction of the Civil Service Commission of Canada, will be held on Monday, the 13th day of May, 1912, and the following days, at Ottawa, Toronto, and other large cities. Such examination will have reference to positions to be filled during the period from the 1st July to the 31st December, 1912, in the Inside Division of the Civil Service of Canada.

A PAYING IDEA

A Boy Who Developed a Business From Growing Sweet Peas

This is the story of a boy with a $2,000 idea and perhaps more. He was seventeen and just out of the Manual Training High School in Kansas City when the great thought came to him.

"I shall grow sweet peas for the city florists," he told his astonished parents, "there's money in that business."

Happily for Bryson's idea his father owned several acres of unused land ten miles from the city and in close touch with good transportation. Bryson borrowed about 100 feet of it, got enough money from the bank backed by his father to build the necessary greenhouses so that winter should not interfere with his work, and buy seed and tools. His seed he bought from the best [illegible] in California. He did most of the work himself because, you see, he had learned carpentry in the manual training school; and he studied [illegible] catalogue and all the [illegible] he could get. [illegible] this period to [illegible] school friend. [illegible] a few [illegible] neighbors laughed at the project. When they learned that he had [illegible] and had paid back some of the borrowed capital they quit laughing. One hundred dollars was a mighty pile in Bryson's opinion that fall. He had learned something valuable about the dignity of labor and also he had a few pertinent ideas about money. He learned that with a good reputation one had good credit and with credit he could do many things. Therefore he rented more land from his father, signed up a few more customers, and went to work more eagerly than ever. At the end of the year—the second—he had paid his last note and had $400 to his own account. By this time he had two people working for him. Incidentally, Bryson's father was willing by this time to back him in anything. The boy cleared $[illegible] the third year.

This boy, now twenty-one, has not given all his time to sweet peas, but these were his principal product. He grew violets and lilies-of-the-valley also, but sweet peas were by far the most successful flowers on the little place. He sold and still sells his products almost exclusively to city dealers in wholesale lots. He received prices ranging from $25 a thousand at Christmas to $5 a thousand for his sweet peas in the summer midseason. Early in the spring, before the snows had gone, he got $7.50 to $10 a thousand and sold from five to ten thousand a day. The sweet peas were arranged twenty-five to the bunch. Bryson has from ten to fifteen girls for the picking and employs six or seven laborers and gardeners for the setting out and care of beds.—Charles [illegible]

McGILL AND VARSITY

McGill gave Varsity an unmerciful beating the intercollegiate contests taking every one of the four college titles at stake. They won the hockey honors, and followed this up by defeating the Toronto students in water polo, basketball and in the aquatic events. The Montreal athletes outclassed the blue and white representatives, and with the defeat of the hockey team, Varsity downfall was complete

AN EXPERT WITNESS.

Time after time the counsel had tried to draw something important from the sea-faring man who stood in the box.

"You say your boat picked up the accused at nine o'clock," said the barrister wearily, but still determined to gain some ground.

"Now, it has been stated that he jumped overboard nearly an hour before that time. Tell me, Captain Muffarty, how he appeared to you when you picked him up. If you had been asked to give an opinion of him then, what would you have said?"

There was a long pause. The captain looked thoughtful, then yawned, then stroked his beard.

"A-ah," he answered at long last, "Well, I'll tell you candid now. If somebody'd asked me then—just when we took him aboard—what I thought of him, I should have said straight out, insult or no insult, that he was one of the wettest men, if not the very wettest man, that ever I see'd. Fack, mister!"

POPULAR THOUGH POOR

"Be forgetful of self; think, and think kindly, of others."

"Say a kind rather than a smart thing."

"Be ready to help whenever you can."

"Give others credit for doing and knowing something."

"Be courteous to all, in or out of business."

"Don't talk scandal."

"Pay what you owe, and never borrow money."

KING AND HIS CHILDREN

His Majesty Finds His Chief Relaxation Among the Children

In his own home, and especially in the nursery of his children, the King has always found his chief relaxation. He dislikes functions which take him away from those whom he loves best in the world. Nothing pleases him more than to be able to steal an hour from the duties of State in order to take part in the innocent amusements of the nursery. From the birth of his first child he has always been delighted to bring home toys, chiefly of the mechanical order. He is regarded by the children, indeed, as the greatest living expert in the art of constructing mimic fortifications and in the manoeuvring of toy soldiers.

The story goes that on one occasion one of his children was asked which he liked best, his father or his mother. The boy replied, "I like them both the same"; then he added, after a moment's reflection, "I think dadda spoils me most." It is not only in their games, but in their education, that the King has taken the keenest personal interest in the upbringing of his little ones.

A story was told that once, while at Balmoral, the Prince of Wales was away for a few days on a visit to London to do some shopping. The children, even on holiday in the Highlands, were kept under firm but kind discipline by their mother. "While she was away, however," says a lady who was at Balmoral at the time, "the Prince of Wales had his sons and daughter to himself. He romped with them, and they had the time of their lives."

The same lady is the authority for a pretty story with respect to King Edward's partiality for his granddaughter, the Princess Mary. The Royal party were travelling southwards, by special train, of course. The children had a saloon carriage to themselves. The little Princess, however, found her way to the saloon of her grandfather and grandmother and there remained. When Prince Edward attempted to follow her, he was firmly checked, and had it impressed upon him that his sister was a privileged person with the King, and was allowed liberties that were not meant for boys.—From "King George and Queen Mary," by Henry Warwick.

PERILS OF BOTANY

A particularly exciting episode in the career of that veteran botanist, Sir Joseph Hooker, who recently celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday, occurred when, some sixty years ago, he undertook a mission to unfamiliar regions in India, penetrated the Himalayan fastnesses, and, being detected botanizing on the Tibet border, was seized, imprisoned, and beaten, and came very near losing his life. It is to Sir Joseph that we owe our knowledge of the flora of the Antarctic, and seventy years have passed since he visited the South Polar regions.

A Hangman Resigns.

News come from Sydney that the hangman has resigned his position. It seems that seven death sentences have been commuted recently by the Labour Government, and as the executioner would have gained $50 in the case of each malefactor, as a special remuneration, he doubtless considers that his emoluments have been trifled with. His fixed wage was $10 a week, whether anybody was to be hanged or not. He may have suffered from monotony, for, in his three years' service, he had not operated in a single instance

SAFER!

"You seem to have had a good deal of experience of different kinds," said the hotel guest, as he sipped his nightcap, to the landlord of the little country hotel. "What were you before you took to this sort of life?"

"Well, sir," was the reply, "in me young days I was a lion-tamer in a circus. But then I got married, and me wife she was a knife-thrower in the same show, and she having, what some people might have thought, a nasty temper, I thought I'd had enough of living a risky life—which ain't too long at the best, as you know, sir—so I took on a safe job, and became a steeplejack!"

THE ASPIRING CHAUFFEUR

Chug, chug! Plonk, plonk! Choo choo!

The motor-car dashed along the road at a tremendous speed, missed a woman by a split hair's-breadth, bumped over her less fortunate dog, and came to an abrupt halt.

"Dear me!" said the chauffeur, alighting.

The woman said more than "Dear me!" In fact, what she didn't say isn't worth printing.

"Can I—er—replace your dog?" suggested the chauffeur, getting in a word edgewise at about 3.45.

For a brief moment the woman regarded his be-goggled features. Then she retorted freezingly:

"You flatter yourself!"

A COMMON COMPLAINT

"What's the matter with you?" asked the Army doctor.

The recruit, who had been on the sick list ever since he had enlisted, shook his head sorrowfully.

"I dunno," he replied.

"You look well enough," commented the doctor. "How's the appetite?"

"I'd match an elephant at meals," answered the recruit. "It ain't that kind of illness, sir."

"Then I'm hanged if I know what kind it is!" exclaimed the Army medico. "How does it affect you?"

"Well, I eats well, and I drinks well, and I sleeps well," replied Thomas Atkins, rubbing his nose thoughtfully; "but directly I hear the word 'work,' I come all of a tremble!"

LIGHT THAT DOES NOT FAIL

A Volcanic Beacon in San Salvador Republic

The republic of San Salvador is the only goverment on earth that collects lighthouse fees on account of a volcano that it owns, and without the slightest cost of upkeep.

The volcanic beacon is about eight miles inland from the port of Acajutla, and its pillar of cloud by day and its fire sky by night are visible for many miles out to sea. It bursts forth every seven minutes, and is just as accurate as any revolving light that warns mariners of danger in any part of the world.

This volcano has been keeping up this seven-minutes' service of eruptions ever since anyone can remember. It is a favorite amusement of visitors to sit by the hour during the lazy afternoons, and, watch in hand, to time the eruptions till they tire of the occupation and fall asleep. No one has ever caught the volcano napping, however.

Every vessel that puts in at Acajutla has to pay its lighthouse fee. There is no other lighthouse than the volcano, but that is a sufficient excuse for the Government of Salvador to make a charge for its services. The explosions that accompany the eruptions sound like detonations of heavy charges of dynamite, but, fortunately, they are not sufficient to shake the ground perceptibly more than about a mile or two from the summit of the crater.

The Fastest Growing City on the Continent

The growth of a city regulates increase in real estate values. The faster the growth in population, the faster is the growth in prices in both city and suburban real estate, and as Winnipeg is the fastest growing city in Canada, or for that matter on the North American Continent, you could not pick a city where money, either in large or small amounts could be invested to better advantage. Profits are sure if you buy where prices are right.

60,000 HORSE POWER HYDRO ELECTRIC PLANT

This great civic power plant furnishes power to manufacturers at a very low rate and will make Winnipeg Canada's most important industrial centre. Since the power plant has been completed, manufacturing establishments are being completed at an unprecedented rate, and during the past year over forty new factories started operation. This great industrial development means an enormous increase in Winnipeg's population. No one can, with any degree of certainty, foretell what the increase in population will amount to in ten years, but it is safe to assume that in that time Winnipeg's population will have passed the half million mark and real estate values will have doubled many times over. Compare the future with the past five or ten years and figure for yourself the possibilities that lie in an investment in Winnipeg real estate. Six years ago, property that sold for $6 to $8 per foot is now worth anywhere from $40 to $65 per foot, and with a still greater growth in the next five years, the increase in real estate values will be correspondingly greater.

PAKLAND PARK AN IDEAL INVESTMENT.

One of the best real estate investments offered in Winnipeg to-day is Oakland Park, which is located east of the Red River beyond the present northern limits of the city of Winnipeg.

Oakland Park is located in what will be a great industrial centre, lying as it does inside the new line of the C. P. R.

Many factories will locate in the immediate vicinity of Oakland Park, where thousands of men will find employment. Oakland Park will, therefore, become a great residential centre and real estate values will increase rapidly.

The price at which Oakland Park lots are now selling assures the investor of a handsome profit within the next twelve or eighteen months, and values should at least double before the final payments are made. The prices asked for Oakland Park are considerably lower than those of any other property similarly located.

DRUG STORES ON SHIPS

As a result of representations made by the General Shipowners' Society, London, the Board of Trade is now reconsidering the scale of drugs prescribed for use on board ships. It has been found that many of the drugs which vessels are compelled to carry are never used, while others which should form part of the medical equipment of every ship, are omitted. With a view to assisting the Board of Trade to arrive at a decision on the subject medical officers of the leading steamship lines have formulated a modern list of supplies which there is reason to believe will be adopted. In drawing this up regard has been had to faster passages now made by steamers as compared with the days of sailing ships, when the existing scale was prescribed.

ONE TO THE PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Asquith, the Prime Minister, is in [illegible] regarded as such a particularly [illegible] gentleman that the following anecdote is interesting.

Long years ago he attended a small preparatory school for boys, the principal of which was a learned clergyman, and a strict grammarian.

One night, after ten o'clock, when all the boys should have been in bed, he was passing silently along the corridor when he heard sounds of revelry from a darkened dormitory.

He rapped on the door. Silence within. Then:

"Who's there?" called out the future Premier.

"It's me, the principal. Open the door!"

"Ha, ha, ha, ha!" answered young Asquith. "If it were the principal he would say, 'It is I.'"

Seeing the force of this argument the schoolmaster passed on.

DESCRIBES KID McCOY

His Entry into the Fighting Game in Paris.

An interesting description of Kid McCoy's entry into the fighting game in Paris is given in an English sporting magazine. The Kid was always a clever fellow, both in and out of the ring. But, knowing the Parisian's fondness of fine clothes, he entered the ring in a flashy bathrobe, and when he disrobed for the night he had on a fancy pair of silk stockings and a pair of green silk tights. He also was particular before entering the ring to have every hair on his head lying just so. The account also says that there was a lot of "Kid" about the fight, but not much of the McCoy. He was fighting Harry Croxon, a big English heavyweight, that could hardly get out of his own way. McCoy was there with all his old time feints and an occasional jab, but was always careful that he did not get hit himself. The farce came to a close in the third round, when McCoy landed one of his old-time left hooks that knocked Croxon down for the count of eight; then put him out for good.

PULLMAN CAR TRAVEL

A Britisher Writes His Impression Concerning It

Yet [illegible] writes an Englishman in Harper's Weekly, even bankrupt [illegible] an escape from [illegible] a Pullman, where you travel by day with two or three score people, at least one of whom is certain to be a squalling infant and another a [illegible] youngster, lungs and legs in an equal state of activity; where you have to rescue yourself every few minutes to [illegible] the carboy's pestiferous attention; and where the buzz of an incessant movement and conversation make reading and dozing alike impossible. But even that pales before the [illegible] that await one at bedtime.

A Pullman car at night is the most uncivilized thing on the American continent, and one of the most [illegible]. It quite fascinates my [illegible]. I am enthralled as the darky porter strips my seat with other people's belongings, holds a pillow-case in his teeth and squeezes the pillow into it, hurls sheets and mattresses about, and pulls at chains and sliding doors and levers and curtains. And what can be more enchanting than to hear husband and wife discussing how they shall dispose of themselves for the night, whether they shall share the lower berth or whether he shall be banished to the nest above?

And what pleasanter than to be made conscious by the writhings and heavings and vigorous protuberances of the curtains that just across the aisle some good lady is engaged in the fearsome struggle to undress. To walk the length of a Pullman car at about 10.30 p.m., when most of the berths are made up, and when the curtained contortions of those who are in the agony of "retiring" are at their worst, and when you butt into strange projections of humanity, and stumble over shoes and watch someone scaling the heights of an upper berth, is on the whole the most delirious experience I have ever encountered.

NAPOLEON'S GHOST

The "Ugliest Woman in Paris" Tells of a Strange Apparition

Mlle. Polaire, long known as "the ugliest woman in Paris" and "the actress with the smallest waist," now proudly declares that since she has become the owner of a famous old mansion in the aristocratic Faubourg St. Germain she has been honored by a visit of the spirit of the great Napoleon, who first met Josephine Beauharnais within the walls of the mansion. Mlle. Polaire relates that towards sunset, a few weeks ago, she was reclining on a couch in her drawing-room. "Suddenly I became aware," she says, "that a man was approaching me in the half light. I looked at him steadily, with emotion, but without fear. He was dressed in a strange, old fashioned, military uniform. As I scrutinized him I recognized the features of the great Napoleon, as they have been made familiar to me by David's portrait of the Emperor as a youth. As the Emperor appeared to me, he was as beautiful as a young Greek god, full of love and fire. It is thus that he must have appeared at the time of his courtship with Josephine, on the eve of the second glorious campaign in Italy. As I looked at him I was thrilled with joy. I felt that I was in the presence of the greatest man that ever lived. His face was thin, with the pure line of a Greek. His great deep, blue eyes radiated love, passion, world embracing ambition. His beautiful face seemed to be appealing for me. He pressed his hands together, and bent forward as if imploring me, but without saying a word. Three times the same apparition presented itself to me at the same hour and place. Was he brought back by memories of Josephine or did he come to see me, I can hardly tell."

A French paper suggests that Mlle. Polaire try the cure.

THE GIRL WITH A GROUCH

She Is always selfish, unhappy and discontented.

The most selfish girl in the whole world is the girl with a grouch. The most unhappy girl in the whole world is the girl with a grouch. The effect would not be so disastrous if it ended with her own feelings; she not only injures herself, but she injures every one about her, because she seems to enjoy her grouch most when she sees those about her most unhappy. With some girls, this disposition is chronic—the attacks last from four days to four weeks. Girls subject to the grouch, spend nearly all their time thinking of themselves. They also spend much of their time smoothing out with cosmetics the wrinkles that these grouches plow into their faces. They cannot, however, change the facial expression that this disposition cultivates. Elsie Janis, who is famous for her youthful beauty, says: "A sweet disposition does more toward promoting good looks than any other thing. Never think unkind thoughts of anybody, never sulk, never get into a temper. You can't have a nice, frank expression half of the time, if, during the other half of the time you are wearing a frown. Keep your temper and think kind thoughts. Temper is a great wrinkle producer, and a sour expression adds years to one's looks." It is considered as much an asset nowadays for a young lady to have a good disposition as beauty. Lady Diania Manners, who is a recent London debutante, has been named Lady Perfect Manners, because of her beautiful disposition.

ANCIENT BULLION

Portion of Soudan Treasure Trove for Ontario Museum

Charles T. Currelley, director of the new museum of Toronto University, has received word that a good sample of the treasure trove of royal bullion, brought to light recently by Professor Garstang, of Liverpool University, England, in the course of his excavations at the ancient City of Meroe, in the Soudan, Africa, which existed about the time of Christ, was on its way to the museum. The bullion belonged to the ancient kings. Mr. Currelley related the very interesting circumstances associated with this sensational find. "Shortly after the time of Christ," he said, "the Soudan had a sudden burst of energy and greatness that those who have followed the Mahdi and Khalifa in recent times can understand, at least, to some extent. The great centre of this period was the town of Meroe, in the Soudan. Here great monuments were built and work was done that is surprisingly skilful and beautiful, though, of course, it is impossible to say how much of it was actually done by the Etheopians, or the Soudanese themselves, or how far it was the result of imported slave or free labor from Northern Africa, or, in fact, from anywhere on the Mediterranean. For some time Professor Garstang, of Liverpool, has been carrying on most sucessful excavations at Meroe, and last year the Royal Ontario Museum received, through the kindness of Mr. Robert Mond, of London, England, who is partially financing the expedition, some exquisite pieces of the ceramics of this period. This last winter Professor Garstang discovered the ancient treasure house of the Kings of Meroe, and there was still in the place a quantity of the royal bullion in gold nuggets, dust, etc., to the value of many thousands of dollars. It is probable that this new gift of a portion of bullion is also through the kindness of Mr. Mond.

"One is apt to speculate as to what happened to that ancient Minister of Finance and to the whole staff of clerical and manual helpers, or in any way why a large mass of such portable treasure should have been left for nearly 2,000 years. At any rate, we are very glad that a part of it will find a home in Toronto"

Mr. Currelley added that the records of ancient history threw very little light on the existence of the City of Meroe. There is a script at the ancient site of the once great city, and two men have been working on it, but so far have not been able to make head or tail out of it.

ECONOMY OF GOOD ROADS

The Cost of Haulage Is Enormously Decreased

The value of good roads becomes evident when we look at the financial side of the problem. The cost of hauling one ton one mile is nine cents in Germany and twenty-five cents in the United States; the difference is largely one of road bed. If we apply these figures to hauling, say, 5,000 bushels of wheat five miles, the cost in Europe would be $67.50, in the United States $187.50, or $120 more. It will be safe to say that where 5,000 bushels of wheat is raised, as much more hauling will be done which would represent another $120, or $240, the extra outlay caused by poor roads. This is only one item. Good roads increase the value of the land—$5 an acre is putting it too low, but at that it amounts to $1,600 for a half section—then the convenience and the ability to market at any time, so that advantage can be taken of the highest prices. The man in town realizes the value of good roads, and he gets them. He paves the sidewalks and streets. He knows that they will increase his business, his comforts and social advantages, but no more so than in the country for the farmer.—North Dakota Agricultural College.

THE HIGHEST DIGNITY

There joined the police force of London a young Scotchman but recently arrived from his native land. Being detailed one day to block the traffic on a certain thoroughfare where members of royalty were expected to pass, he was accosted by a lady hurrying to keep an appointment who thrust her head from the carriage window to remonstrate with him over the delay. "I canna let you pass, ma'am," answered the man of the baton. "But, sir, do you know who I am, I am the wife of a Cabinet Minister." "It disna mak no difference, ma'am," he answered. "I couldn'a let you pass if you were the wife of a Presbyterian minister."—Presbyterian Standard.

WOMEN IN PARLIAMENT

A Glance at the Reigns of the Early Edwards

In the very early times the affairs of the nation were not wholly in the hands of the sterner sex, for in the reigns of Henry III. and Edward I four abbesses at least were summoned to Parliament, namely, those of Shaftesbury, Barking, Winchester and Milton. To one of the Parliaments of Edward III. there were summoned by [illegible] ten ladies of noble birth, seven of them countesses. Gurdon, in his "Antiquities of Parliament," goes back still further than this, for he says that "ladies of birth and quality sat in council with the Saxon Mitas." A certain Abbess Hilda, according to the historian Bede, presided at an ecclesiastical synod. In Wightred's great council at Becconfeld, A.D. 694, the abbesses sat and deliberated, and five of them signed decrees of that council along with the King, Bishops and nobles. King Edward's charter to the Abbey of Crowland, A.D. 961, was with the consent not only of the nobles but also of the abbesses, their names appearing among those who signed it.

Death of "Tannie" Gillespie.

The news of the death of Alex. (Tannie) Gillespie, Hamilton, after only a few days' illness, was a shock to hundreds of his friends. Of a robust build, a cheerful disposition, a careful liver, and barely past his fiftieth year, he looked like a man destined for a ripe old age. The late Mr. Gillespie was an active cricketer and curler, and in his younger days a celebrated member of the Hamilton Tigers' Rugby Football Club, working on the forward line according to the rules then in vogue. He played first class cricket for the Toronto Club, and for Hamilton before he moved here, with the Canada Life Company, a fine batsman and splendid medium pace bowler. He was a member of the Toronto Curling Club.

THE OLDEST FLAG

The flag of Denmark, a plain red banner bearing on it a white cross, is the oldest flag now in existence. For 300 years both Norway and Sweden were united with Denmark under this flag. In the year 1219 King Waldemar of Denmark, when leading his troops to battle against the Livonians, saw, or thought he saw, a bright light in the form of a cross in the sky. He held this appearance to be a promise of Divine aid, and pressed forward to victory. From this time he had the cross placed on the flag of his country, and called it the Dannebrog—that is, strength of Denmark.

Belgium's Population

Belgium, with 542 inhabitants to the square mile, is the most densely populated country in Europe; England's figure is 557, Germany's 306, France's 202, Russia's 194, and Spain's 101.

Storm of Long Ago

In the great English storm of 1703 which lasted two days, 8,000 people were drowned, 20,000 trees were uprooted in Kent, and two million pounds' worth of damage was done in London alone.

You Can't Cure Catarrh by Swallowing Drugs

COUGH SYRUP, TABLETS AND SPRAYS SICKEN THE STOMACH BUT DON'T REACH THE GERMS OF CATARRH—HENCE THEIR FAILURE TO HELP.

To cure an ailment in the throat or chest, to rout out Catarrh or Asthma, it is essential that the medicine be conveyed direct to the affected parts. This is why no other remedy has achieved such world-wide success as Catarrhozone, which alone can be breathed in one second to every air cell in the breathing organs. The healing vapors of Catarrhozone mix with the breath and descend through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, to the deepest air cells in the lungs—all parts are saturated with the rich piney essences that ease, heal and cure.

Catarrhozone has entirely displaced the old-fashioned remedies, such as cough syrups, sprays, tablets, and sedative powders. It contains none of the opium, chloral and drowsy narcotics so commonly found in liquid cough and catarrhal remedies.

Couldn't Breathe — "Catarrhozone" Cured.

"No one ever contracted a more obstinate attack of nasal catarrh than I suffered a month ago," writes Mr. G. E. Root, a well-known resident of Bridgetown, W.I. "My head ached terrifically, I sneezed about every three minutes, but still my nostrils were entirely closed and I couldn't breathe through them. Ten minutes inhaling Catarrhozone gave me a little relief, so I continued to use Catarrhozone every hour, and before the day was out I had improved. Catarrhozone quickly cured me. I am well ever since."

There is no remedy so certain and safe as Catarrhozone, but being a good remedy it is imitated. Beware of the substitutor. Large Catarrhozone lasts two months, price $1.00; smaller sizes 25c. and 50c. All reliable dealers or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE NEED OF MEN

Work in Every Field Not Only Remains But Increases

More men are needed in the world to-day than ever before, because there is more to do—more different things to make, more real people to support. Fifteen years ago the bicycle makers would have been frightened into bankruptcy if you had told them that in 1912 their trade would have almost disappeared. But what do we see now? The coming of automobiles has given work to all the bicycle men and thousands more. And it is so in other businesses and professions. The point to remember is that, while the form of work changes, the work in every field remains, and even increases. The real claims are not all taken up. Alexander the Great was only a fool when he wept because there were no more worlds to conquer. He didn't use his eyes to see with, but only to sleep with.

CHANGING THE WORLD

Look Around You and Examine Your Environment Occasionally

"You cannot change the world; only yourself."

The above saying is apt to be a little misleading. For though the world is so vast, huge, and complex that to change the whole of it in any way would require powers far greater than most of us possess, yet, on the other hand, by changing ourselves we do much towards changing the world. "He who reforms himself has done more to reform the community than a crowd of noisy, impotent talkers." Few of us properly realize the greatness of the influences which we exert, very often unconsciously, on all with whom we are constantly in contact.

When you change yourself, you cannot help but change your influence, and your influence changes others to some extent, and thus changes their influence, too—and so on, like the ripples caused by a stone flung into a pond. So if you reform yourself, you are taking a hand in the great task of reforming the world.

"Your world" is your mission-ground. "Your world" is the place where your best work is needed. Your friends, your workmates, above all, your family, are the people who are the most affected by you. To reform yourself is hard, but it is not a hopeless task.

You can alter your whole outlook on life. If you are inclined to be sad and gloomy, you can, by persistently forcing yourself to think cheerfully, in time develop the habit of cheerfulness to such an extent that it becomes second nature to you.

Look around you, and examine your world occasionally. See where a change for the better is most needed, and set to work at once to make that change. Here is one, perhaps, who needs cheering up; go and cheer him. Here is one who seems to want advice; give it to him. Here is one who requires help; let him have any such help as lies in your power to give.

But, above all, look to yourself. Reform, like charity, should begin at home.—Budget and Family Journal.

THINGS TO KNOW

To poach an egg so that the water does not touch it, put a piece of butter at the bottom of an old teacup, then break in the egg, place the cup in a small saucepanful of boiling water, and in about five minutes the egg will be [illegible]. Pass a knife round the sides and slip out on to the toast; this prevents the toast getting damp.

For Watery Potatoes

When potatoes are likely to be watery, cook in the following way: Score the skin with a sharp knife—not too deeply—then boil in salted water. The incisions made let out the water in the potato, and renders it dry and floury when cooked.

Try Grating Your Apples

Line a plate with paste, and then grate in the apples instead of slicing them. This will ensure the fruit being cooked when the paste is done, and it also takes less quantity of apples. Tried with great success.

Snow-White Tables and Boards

If a kitchen table becomes dirty looking, cut a lemon in two and rub it all over the table. Then rinse well with pure, clean water, and the result will be a smooth and snow white top. Pasteboards may be treated in the same way.

Lemon Roly-Poly

Take threequarters of a pound of flour, six ounces of lard, the juice of one lemon, one teaspoonful of sugar, and one extra teaspoonful of flour. Mix the flour and lard into a smooth paste, and roll it out to the thickness of about half an inch. Squeeze the lemon juice (strained)) into a cup. Stir the teaspoonful of flour and sugar into the juice to make a stiff paste. Spread this mixture over the paste and roll it up. Then tie the pudding into a floured cloth. Boil for two hours.

Stewed Chicken

Take a chicken, cut into joints; put into a stewpan two large onions (chopped fine), four tomatoes, some parsley, a little sage, a few bits of bacon cut small, and half a cupful of good stock. Stew gently for two hours. Just before dishing up, add a wineglassful of sherry.

Barley Pudding

Take half a pound of pearl barley, well washed; add one quart of new milk, half a pound of refined sugar, and half a nutmeg, grated; then bake it in a deep dish. Remove it from the oven when half cooked, beat up three eggs, mix well together, pour it into a well-buttered dish, and bake again for nearly an hour.

Fish for an Invalid

Half a saucepanful of water boiling and place a nice cutlet of fish in a soup plate with a tablespoonful of cold water and a nice piece of butter on the top of the cutlet, and cover with another soup plate. Place this over the boiling water and steam gently for twenty minutes. By cooking it this way you have all the nutriment that the fish contains.

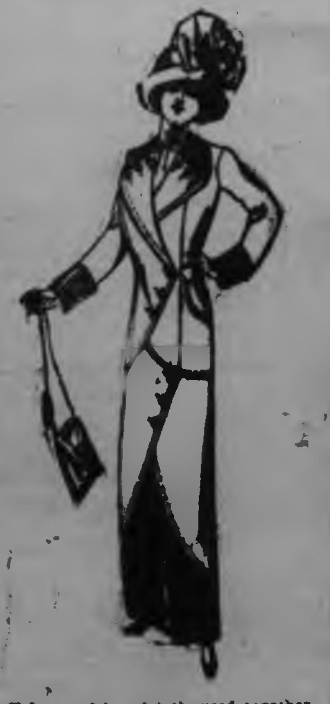
[illegible] of Cheese

Four ounces of cheese, three ounces of breadcrumbs, one egg, one small onion, pepper, cayenne and salt to taste. Grate cheese, and put in a mortar with breadcrumbs, minced onion, and seasoning. Pound to a smooth paste with enough beaten egg to moisten, then make into little balls, flatten out slightly, dip in frying batter, and cook in deep fat (which must be smoking hot before they are put in). When a delicate brown, drain well, and pile in a pyramid, garnish, and serve as quickly as possible.

Iced Fruit Cakes

One cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, two cupfuls of flour, four large eggs, one teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat the butter and sugar to a cream; add each egg separately. Mix the flour and baking powder and add to the rest of the ingredients, stirring well. Cut the paste in thick, narrow strips, and set in rounds, so as to form a deep cuplike shape; place on a well-buttered tin, and bake. When done, fill with iced fruit, prepared as follows: Take rich, ripe peaches (canned ones will do), cut in dice, dip in white of egg that has been slightly beaten, and then into pulverized sugar, and fill centre of the cakes. Set in the oven until the meringue is nicely browned. Serve with rich cream and coffee.

VELVET AND BROADCLOTH



Velvet and broadcloth, used together, would make a good suit for between seasons. This model has a distinct style.

WOMEN FENCERS

They Are to be Admitted in Competitions With Men

Women are to be admitted as competitors to the national championship tournaments of the Amateur Fencers' League of America. That was the declaration of Dr. Graeme M. Hammond, president of the league, and he even went further, in stating that the Fencers' Club of New York was about to inaugurate a series of weekly sol[i]ees, in which teams of women fencers, with the foils, would meet teams of men.

KING GEORGE AND FASHIONS

His Majesty Will Not Be Such [illegible] as His Father

King Edward was commonly regarded as the best-dressed man in Europe, and so he was accepted as the leader of masculine fashion, not in England alone, but almost everywhere. Take a case in point. It was King Edward who some years ago introduced a modification of the ordinary frock coat for summer wear, the fronts of which were so cut away that they would hardly meet across the chest, and were held together when necessary by a link connecting with a button. One remembers also that one time, when he was staying at Marienbad, it was noticed that his late Majesty wore a red tie every day, and forthwith all the hosiers in Vienna made a great display of red cravats in their windows, and called them King Edwards. The news was telegraphed to different places; Paris went in for red ties, and later in London also the red tie became a favorite, but not to the same etxent as on the Continent.

It was King Edward, too, who first popularized the white vest-slip; for if he was not the very first man to wear it in England, he was the first who was noticed to do so, and then the future of the new slip was no longer in doubt. But here it might be said that as a general thing the King discarded it long before his death. In some other matters of dress, involving possibly a great upheaval in established custom, his late Majesty was very cautious lest by example he should influence the men of his country towards a new fashion which might not be altogether to their liking, and cause much inconvenience. Thus it was not until he saw that the double collar, which has now been so popular for many years, had become thoroughly established, that he took it up himself, and so set the seal upon it. If he had never done so, it is quite likely that, despite the excellent start that it gained, it would not have survived as it did.

Besides uniforms, he had about 200 suits at Windsor castle, Buckingham Palace, and Sandringham; and it was certainly the fact that he had a larger wardrobe than any other monarch in the world, and it might very well have been that, with one kind and another he had more suits than any other man alive.

It is hardly likely that King George will be quite so much of a force in sartorial affairs as was his royal father, for the good reason that he does not think so much of dress, and is strongly disposed to be quite conventional in his attitude towards it; but one must hasten to add that, of course, His Majesty takes the utmost care [illegible] detail, and his taste, while careful in its sobriety, is quite perfect. His Majesty is not disposed to take advantage of his high estate in this matter, and generally follows the lead of others; and the chief tailors in the West End will watch his appearances with rather less [illegible], not to say, anxiety, than they did those of the first gentleman in the last reign. He has, of course, a variety of clothes for town wear, [illegible] kind for the most part being several times repeated; while for country wear, especially on the sporting side, the wardrobe is perhaps quite the equal of that of the late King. As is well known, however, His Majesty is a very keen sportsman in those pursuits which involve wandering over the moors and hills with a gun in his hand, and he displays more interest in the selection of his shooting suits than he does perhaps in any others; while it may be added, as an interesting and pleasing circumstance, that he always exercises the utmost effort toward giving help to home industries in the matter of the cloths he selects, most of them being in the nature of homespun tweeds.

Then, as befits his strong naval interests and training, he has probably more naval uniforms than any other man. Indeed, the Kaiser is the only ruler who emulates him in this matter; for not only have these monarchs a very large wardrobe of uniforms for the naval and other maritime purposes of their own country, but each holds complimentary naval rank in foreign navies, and has complete sets of uniforms accordingly. Also, King George is honorary colonel in many foreign regiments, in addition to holding similar rank in several of our own.—Chambers' Journal.

GOOD COOK BETTER THAN DOZEN DOCTORS

The Secret of Health, Wealth and Happiness is Concealed in the Pots and Pans of the Kitchen.

"The secret of health, wealth, and happiness is concealed in the pots and pans and kitchen ranges of the humblest flat. One poor cook makes one bad stomach; one bad stomach makes one cranky husband; one cranky husband makes the family sick; ten poor cooks make one doctor rich—and, on the other hand, one good cook can do more real good than a dozen doctors." This excerpt from his culinary arithmetic was the climax of the address of Charles Laparque, imported chef, before the Chicago School of Domestic Science. "It is easy, ladies," he continued. "Study cooking and practice it and the doctors will go out of business. Don't be frightened by the menus you see in cafes. Make the dishes yourselves; they are all easy."

THE USES OF DRIPPING

With the price of butter continuing to soar, it surely behooves the household economist to inquire into the possibilities of substitutes. For making [illegible] cake, as almost [illegible] you may use one quarter of the butter your recipe calls for and the other three-quarters pork dripping, or, if it has been kept in very good condition, beef dripping. For frying croquettes, doughnuts or anything else that requires deep fat use one-half lard and one-half dripping. Keep a tin especially for this mixture, which can be poured back into it, through a cheesecloth, after each using. For potatoes and other foods fried on a griddle dripping is just as good as butter. Bacon fat is excellent for frying fish or veal.

All dripping should be strained through cheesecloth and kept in a warm place. Do not on any account let it get chilled. This is particularly important with beef dripping, which very easily becomes tallowy and rancid. Pork dripping keeps very well and is the best of all. Lamb dripping is good for nothing but soap. In fact the fat from soups or from any other cooking may be saved for this purpose and the soap recipes accompanying packages of the best brands of lye will be found quite satisfactory.

If you have butter which has become strong work soda into it, half a teaspoonful to a pound, and used with an equal quantity of lard. It is excellent for pie crust.

When making baked or boiled custard, the milk to be used should be scalded and set aside to cool. Then make the custard in the ordinary way, and it will be perfectly smooth.

HIS OPPORTUNITY.

English tourist to cabman (whom he has been pestering with senseless "sights"): "I say my man, I've been in Ireland for a week now, and I haven't seen a single Irishman driving a troublesome pig along the road, same as you see in picture postcards, you know."

Cabman (his patience exhausted): "Oh, just wait two minutes, sir. There's a big mirror in Casey's window up the street here."

There was peace.

SPORT ON THE UPGRADE

Englishmen Are Distinguishing Themselves on Many Fields

The Daily Mail says editorially: "The warmest congratulations of all lovers of cricket will go out to the M.C.C. team for their notable victorr over the Australians by an innings and 225 runs in the fourth test match at Melbourne." As the second and third matches had fallen to England by 8 wickets and 7 wickets respectively, the mother-country has won the rubber and so recovered possession of the mythical "Ashes" lost to the Australians in 1903. The achievement of the Englishmen is a remarkable one in every way since Mr. Warner, the captain, fell ill before the first test match and has been unable to take part in any of them. The trying duties of captaincy thus devolved on Mr. Douglas, the Essex amateur, who had had no previous experience of test match cricket or of the game in Australia. Mr. Douglas is to be congratulated warmly on his success. After Australia had won the first test match by 146 runs, the Egnlishmen never looked back, but defeated their formidable opponents by very large margins. To Hobbs especially is a tribute of admiration due, for in three successive test matches he has topped the much-coveted "century" and done a lion's share in winning the rubber. Rhodes, too, has given of his best, while the performances of Mr. Foster, Marnes and Mr. Douglas in dismissing Australian batsmen, are likely to be long remembered among the notable achievements in international cricket. Such a happy outcome of the tour is all the more welcome as the team that was sent out to Australia was regarded as an experimental one, most of the players being inexperienced in test match cricket.

Nor is it in cricket alone that English sport is on the up-grade. The English Rugby fifteen at Twickenham disposed of Ireland with unexpected ease and won the game with five tries to nothing. In the opinion of the best judges, such a pack of forwards as England possesses has rarely been seen before. Another feat accomplished was at Dublin, where the English association eleven quite overran the Irish team and scored 6 goals to 1. Thus, in the year 1912, England stands to carry off the rugby championship, they are gringing the "Ashes" back from Australia, and they promise to start first favorite in the great triangular cricket turnament.

MOTORED ON ICE

Kulick Travelled at Rate of 109 Miles An Hour.

Frank Kulick, traveled over the frozen surface of Lake St. Clair recently at a rate of 109 miles an hour, covering one mile in 33 2-5 seconds. The mark set a new record for an automobile speed contest on ice, the former mark being held by Henry Ford, who, [illegible] Kulick [illegible] broke the former record. The first time he went over the course he carried his mechanician with him and his time was 34 4-5 seconds. On his second attempt he went the distance alone and succeeded in clipping his first mark by almost two seconds. The conditions for Kulick's try for the record were not bad, but they could have been better. The lake was covered with almost a foot of snow and this had to be scraped off for a distance of almost two miles in order to allow for a flying start and to give room at the finish for stopping. The ice, being uncovered, was rough, and although the little machine was let out to the limit by Kulick the speed was somewhat retarded by the bumps in the ice. Kulick was fairly flying when he had his machine opened up at top speed. When the machine passed the spectators it was hardly visible. At times the slightest raise in the ice would send the machine into the air and it sped on with all four wheels in the air.

AUSTRALASIAN WONDER

A letter from Australia says that athletes from wherever they hail will have tough nuts to crack at the Olympic games in members of the team from the land of the cornstalks. One of the bright particular stars will be G. N. Hill, a youth from Auckland, N. Z., who at the recently held tenth biennial Australasian amateur championship games paralyzed the onlookers with his perfomances in the distance races, against a gale of wind for the last furlong, and the 3-mile in 15 min. 28¾ sec., on a heavy track. On Wednesday he won a two-mile handicap from scratch, making a horrible gap in the field. The clocks recorded 9 min. 30 sec., which time upsets A. A. Shrubb's record of 9 min. 33 3-5 sec., established in N. S. W. in 1905, and the M. L. record of 9 min. 42 1-5 sec., by W. F. Simpson. Shrubb's world record, however, is 9 min. 9 3-5 sec., done at Glasgow, June 11, 1904.

LITTLE PARISENNE

Helene Avril draws a charming picture of a day in the life of the little Parisienne. It is a cold morning in February, dull and chilly. Out of doors passers-by hurry along wrapped and miserable looking. Simonne wakens early in her warm little bed, and as soon as she opens her eeys she smiles at the thought of the happiness that is in store for her. This is the day on which she has been invited to a children's party at the home of her little friend Jeanne, and they are going to have such fun. The night before the dressmaker sent her the dress specially made for the part. It is a "robe fourreau," in dark green velvet, which makes her look ever so tall. In a few hours everybody will be admiring her at Jeanne's house; her little friends first, but perhaps also their big brothers. In Simonne's heart is already awakened the desire to please "ces messieurs," the oldest of whom is not yet sixteen years of age.

While her little brain is still excited at the thought of what the day is destined to bring her, Simonne's mother enters to give her the usual good-morning kiss. She bends over the bed, puts her ar munder the frail body, which clings to her with affection, and mother and daughter pass a delightful moment.

But eight o'clock strikes. "Vite, Monette, levons nous." You will amuse yourself this afternoon, but this morning we must work hard. The French teacher will be hear shortly. Are you quite ready with your lessons? Simonne hesitates to reply. Trying on her new dress last night kept her behind with her lessons, and she has not had time to go over her grammar again. She hurries, however, and dressing does not take her long this morning. Five minutes to swallow her chocolate—then there is a ring at the bell. It is mademoiselle. Already? And Simonne has not even looked at the second page, which she does not know at all. She runs to meet her teacher, throws her arms around her neck, and kisses her. "Oh, ma petite mademoiselle," she exclaims. "If you knew how delighted I am. This afternoon I am invited chez Jeanne. Mamma has had a new dress made for me, and we are going to have lots of fun."

Mademoiselle is used to these effusions. With both hands she takes the girl's head between hers and gives her a long maternal kiss on the forehead. Her pupils are almost as dear to her as if they were her own children. Simonne knows it well, the sly little minx. Now she feels is the moment to admit that she does not know her lessons very well. Mademoiselle does not scold her, but improves the occasion to give her some wise council.

Mademoiselle does not like vain and coquettish little girls, and their beautiful dresses leave her absolutely indifferent, but she draws a pleasing portrait of simple good-hearted children, and makes it so attractive that little Simonne feels a wee bit ashamed [illegible] needed to add to Simonne's happiness it is provided in the auto that whisks her to Jeanne's house, where nearly all the other children have arrived and are gathered in the hall. In a corner, seated by a little table, where they are turning over the leaves of a picture book, are a little boy and his sister who seem out of place in these surroundings. The boy is thirteen years of age, his sister eleven or twelve. No one takes any notice of them. Simonne asks Jeanne who they are.

"Oh," replied Jeanne, "they are the children of a post-mistress mamma knows. She invited them so that they might have an opportunity of amusing themselves—a thing that does not happen often. But I am sure they will be rather bored here, for no one knows them. Have you noticed the girl's dress. It must have been her mother who made it; it is not elegant. And anyone can see that the boy's suit is ready-made."

Simonne stood thinking for a while. These little ones "whom no one knew" interested her. She remembered what mademoiselle had told her in the morning, and found that they resembled in an astounding manner the portrait of the little ones whose greatest charm was their simplicity. Her heart was stirred. It was true that they were not very fashionably dressed, but a generous movement sent her to their side. Might she sit by them and look at the pictures. In a few moments all three were chattering away as if they had known each other for years. Their laughter soon brought the other children around them. They joined in the games they organized and during the whole afternoon they amused themselves with a heartiness that made Simonne very pleased. She forgot all about her beautiful dress. Besides, other girls were as well dressed as she, so it was not really worth while to make any fuss about her dress, even if it was a "robe fourreau." What a delightful afternoon she had had, making two other children happy, who, but for her, would have been left out in the cold. She would be sure to tell mademoiselle how she had carried her lesson into practice.

LUNACY STATISTICS

Interesting Figures of the British Commissioners—Unemployment as a Cause of Insanity

Some figures of interest to life insurance are contained in the sixty-fifth report of the British Commissioners on Lunacy. Their returns show that alcohol is responsible for about 16 per cent. of the cases reported, while 20 per cent. were traced to unemployment. One of the commissioners thinks that lunacy will be largely lessened directly some method is found of increasing the general prosperity of Great Britain.

It is pointed out in the commissioners' report that in 9.6 per cent. of the cases has mental stress alone been the assignable cause of attack, though it is also explained that prolonged mental strain has been associated with nearly every other assignable factor in the category of causes. In confirmation of the assertion that insanity is an hereditary disease, the report states that:—

"Our statistics show—and since their introduction, upwards of fifty years ago, have shown—that there is a family history of insanity in persons admitted to asylum care amounting, on an average, in the case of males, to 19 per cent., and of females to 23 per cent., of the total yearly admissions. This is probably an under-estimate, for there is always a considerable residuum concerning whom it is impossible to obtain positive information on this point."

But the report states that to ignore the factor of inheritance because three times the number of insane apparently come of sane stock would be unwarrantable. It is gratifying to note, further, that:—

At marriageable ages—twenty-five and upwards—the proportion of the unmarried of both sexes is considerably higher amongst the insane than it is in the general population, and to a slighter extent also in the widowed. Considerably more single than married or widowed persons were admitted to care.

It also appears from the report that the proportions of the sexes certified yearly as insane are exactly the same, so far as relation to the number of persons in the country is concerned. There are, it is well known, more females than males in the country, and the estimated proportion per 1,000 in the general population for the middle of 1910 are—males, 482.8; females, 517.2.

The proportions amongst the insane annually admitted to care are practically identical—males, 484.0; females, 516.0. Concerning readmissions to care, it is stated that they form from 17 to 18 per cent. of the total admissions, and may be considered to consist mainly of those who, in previous years, have been discharged as "relieved" or "not improved," and also of patients who, having left an asylum "recovered" are admitted with a recurrent attack. So far as asylum statistics go, the proportion of such recurrences is about one-fourth of those originally discharged as "recovered."

THE USEFUL CEDAR

Used by Indians for Everything, From Canoe to Food.

The Indians made much use of Western red cedar before white men became acquainted with the region in which it grew. From it they obtained food, clothing, shelter, means of transportation and apparatus for fishing and the chase. From the tree trunks the savages made canoes of all sizes, from the small trough that carried two men to the enormous dugouts that transported fifty or more upon long expeditions in war and peace. Before the Indians obtained metal tools from white traders they hollowed their canoes with fire and with their primitive stone and bone implements. Some of their dugouts are of enormous size, hewed from single trunks, and with lines so perfect that civilized men can scarcely suggest improvement. The making of a canoe of moderate size, by the crude means at the Indians' command in the early days, required several months of hard labor with flint adzes that chipped away pieces of wood not much larger than grains of sawdust.

The Indians of the region where western red cedar abounded generally chose it for such carpentry as they were capable of doing. Their choice was due to the softness of the wood, which meant a great deal to beams and doors with no better tools than fire, flint, bone and shell. They made fully as much use of the bark as of the wood. With it they roofed, ceiled, floored, and papered their huts. They wove long strips of bark—sometimes thirty feet in length—into mats, which they used for beds, tables, blankets, and on ceremonial occasions. They made clothing of the same material. They twisted the bark into ropes for dog harness, ladders, fishlines and snares for wild animals and nets for catching fish. The list of uses for the bark did not end there, for they were able to make food of it. They beat the bark to a pulp, baked in cakes, and after completely saturating it with salmon oil they pronounced it a palatable and nutritious article of diet. It is believed, however, that the food value of the cakes was derived more from the fish oil than from the bark.—Agricultural Report.

SERMONS BOILED DOWN

The best place to feel for the needy is in your pocket.

The cross Christian is not bearing the Christian's cross.

Many mistake the worship of customs for the custom of worship.

People who are hungry to be martyrs make a good many miserable.

Love may seem to serve blindly, but the service illumines the world.

Many a saint would stoop in service but for fear of losing his tin halo.

What Are Market Tolls Worth?

What is the worth for Peterborough's market clerk's time and work? This subject was discussed yesterday morning by those who frequent that part of the city. The present man in charge of that office claimed that, after paying a necessary assistant, the man buying the tolls would only have a living salary. Tenders for the office, we understand, are still open. The present market clerk claims that hogs and cattle are coming in much reduced numbers to the local market.

THE HIRED MAN

Alberta Paper Hands Out Advice to the Farmer

The "Alberta Homestead," which should know what conditions are, hands out this bit of left-handed advice to the farmer:—

"The hired man will soon be with you for the harvest. He can have his sleeping quarters in the hay loft or the caboose, as he ought to want nothing better.

"Should he show unusual readiness for work, this is a quality which should be encouraged, and 18 hours should be got out of him a day.

"Set him to work right after each meal, as a hired man has no business to fear indigestion, and he can get his rest at night.

"If he's inexperienced at farming, an occasional sneer when he makes a mistake will brace him up, and prevent him from repeating the blunder.

"Give him as many chores to do as possible, especially on Sundays, or he might get into idle ways.

"Try and prevent him from running off to town on Saturday nights, where habits of dissipation might get hold of him. A couple of hours' relaxation with the bucksaw will soon stop this.

"A policy of this kind will put any hired man in love with farming and with you, too."

HIS OPPORTUNITY.

English tourist to cabman (whom he has been pestering with senseless "sights"): "I say, my man, I've been in Ireland for a week now, and I haven't seen a single Irishman driving a troublesome pig along the road same as you see in picture postcards, you know."

Cabman (his patience exhausted): "Oh, just wait two minutes, sir. There's a big mirror in Casey's window up the street here."

There was peace.

THE EYE LIKE A CAMERA.
The eye is constructed so wonderfully and ingeniously that the handicraft of man has not as yet been able to construct as delicate an instrument. It is like a camera—the lens to focus, the lid as a shutter, the iris or color as the diaphragm, the thick coatings of the eye-ball as the dark room, the nerve as the sensitive plate, and strange as it may seem, the images are bottom side up exactly as the image is in the camera. Now so delicate and sensitive an instrument as the eye should have good care. Let us explain more fully to you how to care for the eyes.

MAYOR AND THE POLICE STOOD OFF THE RIOTERS

One Man Killed and Nine Wonnded in Riot in Rock Island And Illinois State Militia Called Out

Rock Island, Ill., Mar. 27.—The police announced this morning that they had practical control of the situation which arose late last night when rioters attacked a police station in a demonstration of hostility to Mayor H. P. Schriver. It is now announced that only one rioter, J. E. Kelly, a blacksmith, was killed outright when the police had fired into the mob. Two others probably will die. Nine others were wounded.

Three companies of militia have been ordered to mobilize in the city. The Mayor has issued orders that all saloons be closed to-day.

Several hundred persons were in the mob that last night surrounded police headquarters, where two of the leaders of disorders that had previously occurred were detained.

BULLETS FLEW.

Bricks were thrown and windows of the police station were smashed. Mayor Schriver, directing the police squad, ordered the officers to charge the mob. Shots were fired by the police and a number of men were seen to fall. This caused the rioters to temporarily withdraw.

After the dead and wounded had been removed, the mob reorganized, and one of the leaders directed the crowd to a hardware store for the purpose of breaking down the doors and securing a fresh supply of arms. This move was checked by a squad of police which was at the hardware store when the mob arrived.

Mayor Schriver recently began a campaign to rid the city of undesireable persons, so he announced, but his enemies declared he wanted to oust his political enemies.

The other day the editor of a weekly newspaper, published an article which denounced Mayor Schriver, and the Mayor ordered that the issue of the paper be suppressed.

The Mayor's opponents were angered by the fact that Mayor Schriver had physically chastised the editor of the paper for previous editorial asperations.

John Looney, editor of the paper which angered the Mayor, is in the hospital recovering from the injuries inflicted in his encounter with the Chief Magistrate.

LEPROSY DISCOVERED IN TORONTO A CHINESE BOY THE SUFFERER

Toronto, Mar. 27.—For six weeks Sing Foo, a bright little Chinese boy, of 13 years, has lain in the public ward of the General Hospital smitten with leprosy. Hundreds of patients in that time have passed the little figure in the cot without dreaming that the skin disease which disfigured him was the most dreaded scourge of the Far East.

To-day, he occupies a small room in isolation, waiting until the summons comes for deportation to the leper colony of Tracadia on the New Brunswick coast.

Since his arrival some two months ago, suffering with a peculiar skin disease, his ailment has been the puzzle to the authorities, and not until late last week did the diagnosis bring forth the startling fact that he was suffering from an advanced stage of leprosy.

LOSING USE OF LIMBS.

For the last two weeks doctors and students who had been freely admitted to examine him, would after coming out, resort to the most rigid system of disinfection, for in conjunction with the spreading of the rash the lad has begun to lose the use of his limbs. At the present time the left arm is powerless and he has lost completely any strength in his fingers.

Steps were taken for his immediate removal and since last Tuesday he has been in seclusion.

"How long have you been here?" he was asked as he sat propped up in bed this morning.

"About two months," he replied in fairly good English.

His name, he said, was Sing Foo, and an uncle, Ho Get, had brought him to the hospital.

"JUST SORE ALL OVER."

"I was not sick when I came here" he volunteered, "just sore all over."

"What school did you go to?" was asked.

"Lansdowne," he said, and began to talk quite freely of his teacher and adventures over there.

He was born in Canada, but had come over from China two years ago with an uncle.

His father, who had kept a fruit store in China, had died recently, but his mother and two little brothers were still living.

The uncle of the lad when in conference with the hospital authorities was subjected to a strict cross-examination as to the antecedents and family relations of his nephew in the home land.

WILL BE DEPORTED.

He stoutly denied that the boy had in any way come in contact with leprous people either across the sea or since landing. He had brought him directly from his home in a laundry at [illegible] Spadina avenue when the affection had become troublesome.

The hospital officials immediately entered communication with the Dominion authorities, stating their case and asking what should be done.

Yesterday afternoon a reply came to the effect that some slight delay would be necessary until the date of the boy's landing in Canada was ascertained.

This information will decide whether the patient will be deported to China or to the reservation at Tracadia on the New Brunswick coast.

The disease which seemingly started on the boy's face was recognized from the first as no ordinary skin affection and the final diagnosis was felt to proclaim it as one of two things—Psoriasis or leprosy.

The fact that psoriasis is not a contagious ailment would account for the prolonged stay of the boy in the public ward.

STAFF OBJECTED.

When the result of the investigation was pronounced quite a flurry of excitement took place among the nurses who had been working in that ward and it is understood that several objected seriously to having anything to do with the case. The authorities, however, deem the infection which is contagious only through bodily contact to be improbable as their must be a predisposition to the disease.

CASH GRANT TO CHAIRMAN HYDRO-ELECTRIC COMMISSION

Recognition of Hon. Adam Beck's Services Will Take This Form

Toronto, Mar. 27.—The remuneration to be provided for Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission, will, it is understood, take the form of a cash grant of $25,000.

Hon. Mr. Beck, when asked this morning whether he would have any objections to receiving monetary recognition, smilingly intimated that he would place no barrier in the way.

The Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission has given five years of service to the Government without a penny of recompense. His annual expenses incurred in the public interest are understood to reach nearly $3,000.

A PLEA FOR HOCKEY.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir, Would you please find space in your columns for the following:

Is it not time the Peterborough hockey teams were getting some recompense for their good showing this season. Other teams in the O.H.A., having had poorer support than the boys here, have had banquets in their honor, also gold watches and other tokens have been received. Why not the same here? A club taking in $18.00 could do something to show the town's appreciation by getting a memento of last year's work. Nothing was done in this respect. Who is treasurer of the Peterborough Hockey Club? My idea is "Boost Hockey—don't kill it," but apparently the Peterborough Hockey Club Executive's is different to that.

ENGLISH EMIGRANTS AND HOUSE RENT.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—At the last meeting of the Board of Trade the subject of assisting English emigrants to bring their wives and families to Peterborough was discussed. Mr. Johns put the case before the Board in a very creditable and able manner. The Board endorsed the sentiments expressed by Mr. Johns and showed clearly its sympathy with the project. I should like to bring before the public notice one phase of the

STONES AND HAMMERS

Witness Says Were Served Out By Suffragettes During Window Smashing Campaign.

London, Mar. 27. Mrs Pankhurst, Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, the joint editors of Votes for Women and Mrs. Mabel Tuke appeared again at Bow Street Police Court yesterday to answer to the charge of conspiracy and inciting to commit malicious damage to property.

A prisoner who is serving a term in Holloway jail after conviction for window smashing, testified that bags of stones and hammers had been served out to herself and others from the suffragette headquarters with orders to break windows. The prisoners were again remanded.

AVALANCHE BURIED MEN

Party of Skiers Overwhelmed And All Were Killed But One.

Vienna, Mar. 27.—A party of eleven skiers were overwhelmed by an avalanche near the summit of Schnee Berg, near Vienna, yesterday afternoon and ten persons were killed.

Two woodcutters coming down the mountain heard groans from beneath the snow. They dug hastily and discovered a woman so exhausted that there is little hope of her recovery. She gasped "avalanche. Dig deeper" and then fainted.

Owing to the heavy snow storm last night the relief expedition was without result but this morning nine bodies including that of one woman, were recovered.

FARMER COMMITS SUICIDE

Mildmay, Mar. 27.—Subject to fits of melancholy, Dan Staemlet, aged 60, a farmer residing a few miles from this place, committed suicide yesterday afternoon by hanging.

80 MINERS MET DEATH

Welch, W. Va., Mar. 27.—Eighty-two miners are known to be dead as a result of the explosion of gas at the United States Coal and Coke Company's Mines at Jed, three miles from here, yesterday. 60 bodies have been recovered and 15 more located.

WINSTON CHURCHILL MAY TAKE LLOYD GEORGES OFFICIAL PIACE

London, Mar. 27.—It is rumored that Lloyd-George will resign forthwith and that Winston Churchill will succeed him. Mr. Lloyd-George is in wretched health and his supporters agree he is profoundly disappointed because his influence was unavailing to induce the Premier to accept the conditions laid down by the miners.

CANADA OBJECTS TO TAKING MORE WATER FOR CANAL

Washington, March 27.—With the hearing of Canadians who object to increasing from 4,000 cubic feet to 10,000 cubic feet of the amount of water to be taken from Lake Michigan, to supply Chicago's great drainage canal, U.S. Secretary of War Stimson expects to close his inquiry.

British Ambassador Bryce had arranged to present the delegation of official experts to lay before the Secretary Canada's objections. In the party were William J. Stewart, Chief Hydrographer of the Canadian Navy Department; Victor W. Forneret Superintendent Engineer of the St. Lawrence ship canal; Arthur St. Laurent, Assistant Deputy Minister of Public Works; John Kennedy, Consulting Engineer of the Montreal Harbor Commission, and Daniel Mullen, K.C., of St. Johns, N.B.

MINERS FEDERATION ASKS MEN TO RETURN PENDING SETTLEMENT

London, Mar. 27.—At a full meeting of the Miners' Federation this morning it was decided to take an immediate ballot among the men as to whether or not they desire to accept the Government's Minimum Wage bill and return to work.

The miners' delegates will return to their respective districts at the earliest moment, so that no time shall be lost in carrying the result of the ballot, whatever it may be, into effect. The text of the ballot paper is as follows:

"Are you in favor of resuming work pending the settlement of the minimum rates of wages in the various grades by the district boards to be appointed under the Coal Mines Minimum Wage Act?"

The more moderate members tried to get the federation to insert a recommendation on the ballot paper, but it was decided to leave the men a free hand.

RESULT KNOWN BY APRIL 3.

The Miners' Federation at a meeting this afternoon decided that the ballot papers must be returned not later than April 3rd, when the federation will reassemble at Manchester to count the votes and decide on its future action.

The feeling of the miners' leaders as to the probable result of the ballot follows largely their attitude throughout the negotiations. Those of the federation are anticipating the acceptance of the wage bill by the miners, while those from South Wales and Scotland expect a strong majority against it in those districts.

A bare majority of votes will be sufficient for the acceptance or rejection of the proposition.

SIX WEEKS MARRIED, GROOM IS ARRESTED

Police, Seeking Clue in the Berger Murder, Lock Up Tony Geamanto—Entirely New Description of Murderer

Toronto, Mar. 27. While touring the Ward last night in search of information which might lead to the discovery of the man who shot Rebecca Berger on Monday night, as she stood upon her doorstep, Detectives Tipton and Taylor placed Tony Geamanto, of 128 Chestnut street, under arrest on a charge of vagrancy. He will be held on this charge for a week while further investigations are made. The police seized a revolver and a razor.

The police have received an entirely new description of the murderer from a woman who witnessed the tragedy from a closer range than the three boys who gave the first description. The woman claims to have been passing along the opposite side of Chestnut street when the man stepped up to the doorway and did the shooting. She has informed the police that the man appeared to be an Italian. Geamanto has been married only six weeks and the police received a complaint from his wife.

HENRI BOURASSA IS TIRED OF THE PROVINCIAL SCUM

Quebec, Mar. 27. Henri Bourassa is definitely out of Provincial politics. He stated that this morning, and also announced that the missionary trip he will make through Canada to the Pacific Coast will take place next fall. Said Mr. Bourassa:

"I have been sitting in the scum of Provincial politics for 15 years. I am going to Europe to cleanse my mind, to rejuvenate myself."

Mr. Bourassa also said that the papers in Toronto with one exception failed to catch the main point of his speech there, which was that if the progress of Canada was to be assisted, the Province of Ontario should try to have a better understanding with the Province of Quebec, and should not treat the Maritime Provinces with the contempt it did show.

Mr. Bourassa says the Globe treated him "dishonest,y" while he was in Toronto.

TURKISH FORCES WIN VICTORY ITALIANS LOSE 3,500 MEN

News Received at Benghazi by Commander of Turkish Army—Entire Italian Camp Taken by Turks

London, Mar. 27. The Turkish army in Tripoli has just achieved a great victory over the Italian army, whose losses were 27 officers and 3,500 men killed and wounded, according to the report of the Turkish commander at Benghazi received here to-day from a special correspondent at the Turkish headquarters.

The location of the battle is not given in the report, which says that the entire camp equipment of the Italians fell into the hands of the Turkish troops. The Turkish commander says that the casualties among the Turks and Arabs numbered only 150 killed and wounded.

MR. J. GIBSON, PRESIDENT OF THE ALLIANCE SPEAKS OF THE EVIL

Toronto, Mar. 27.—In response to questions put to him, Mr. Joseph Gibson, Ingersoll, president of the Dominion Alliance, has said: "The banishment of the bar, which would destroy the treating system, is a long step in the right direction, and so far I am pleased with Mr. Rowell's statement. I cannot, however, commit myself in favor of his whole pronouncement until I know more about how he proposes to deal with club and shop licenses. The former, being in my judgment, one of the worst forms of the license system. However, public opinion is at work and some early day I hope the Christian forces of Canada will blot out the licensed liquor traffic with all its fearful consequences from our fair Dominion."

TEMPERANCE PEOPLE WANT MORE THAN LIBERAL LEADERS POLICY

Kingston, Ont., Mar. 27.—(Special)—Feeling is divided here concerning the policy of Mr. Rowell to banish the bar in Ontario. Temperance people as a whole seem inclined to regard the policy as a step in the right direction, although some contend it does not go far enough. One temperance worker described it as "a good half-way measure." He wished, however, that it could have been more comprehensive and that no liquor should be sold in shops or clubs. A Liberal hotelman thought the barless policy an unwise one. The selling of liquor in shops would lead to more home consumption with disastrous effect on the young who would have temptation placed right under their eyes.

HAMILTON MAYOR WANTS PROHIBITION.

Hamilton, Ont., Mar. 27.—(Special)—"This is a political question and I cannot afford to discuss it or give you authority to use my name, but I look on the decision of the Opposition as a bad move," declared a life-long Liberal to-day. He is at present occupying a position to which he was appointed by the Ross Government.

The "banish the bar" platform was heralded with joy by "extreme" temperance men like Thos. S. Morris of the Liberal Association executive, but more conservative Liberals did not care to discuss it.

Mayor Lees declared that he would have preferred a prohibition platform, but looked on the platform of Rowell as a satisfactory beginning.

LOOKING TO SIR JAMES.

London, Ont., Mar. 27.—(Special)—With the general principle of abolishing the bar in Ontario, the sentiment in London heartily concurs. This is evidenced by the comment this morning. With the taking up of that policy by a political party, so very plainly for party purposes there is by no means the same view taken.

"I would vote for the abolition of the bar," said a prominent politician "but I will not vote for it as I have to swallow all that the Liberal party stands for to-day when I do so."

This expresses perhaps the opinion of a majority in London and this is a town where temperance sentiment that Sir James Whitney will see his way clear, now that local option has is strong. There is a general hope carried the wave to such a height, to adopt even more advanced legislation with respect to this question.

SEVERAL BOARDERS FOR CASTLE NESBITT

At yesterday's session of the Police Court, Alfred Cooney who, as explained by Chief Thompson, was just off the Indian list, was charged with having been D. & D. Cooney pleaded guilty. He intimated that, even while on the black list he obtained the ambrosia he loves. The result was a ten day sojourn in Castle Nesbitt in default of a $2 fine.

Robert Shearer also pleaded guilty to having indulged in the "extract de corn." Shearer was handed out a $10 fine, with the privilege of spending thirty days over Victoria Park.

"Has anyone here seen Kelly?" Yes, they saw Bill Kelly, from the back county at the court. He also had a D. & D. charge against him. Kelly looked as though about 25 cents worth of Sunrise soap, a gallon of hot water and a scrubbing brush, applied simultaneously and externally would improve his appearance. Kelly is a blacklister. He also rambled up Brock street to Board at the city's expense for 10 days.

THE WEATHER.

Mostly fair and warm.

GET CALGARY LAND BEFORE THE CARS RUN

Many people from this section of Canada, as well as from Quebec and the Maritime Provinces are "going west" or sending their money west for investment. Those seeking investment in safe and profitable Western property should consult the advertisement in this issue of "Gladstone Heights," Calgary, Alberta. It is a generally known fact that Calgary's progress and enlargement equals, if not excels that of Winnipeg, at its boom. The Gladstone Heights are only 20 minutes' ride from the center of Calgary by electric cars, which will be in operation next summer. As soon as these cars are running property will advance rapidly. The man who buys property close to Calgary will reap a rich harvest as soon as the street cars, noted above, are in operation. The prices of the property mentioned may be seen in the adv. of this issue.

Ungava Exploration Company

Off For The New Gold Fields

The purpose of this organization is to explore the practically unknown mineral resources of Ungava. The Company is in possession of information as to the location of rich placer diggings in that country, and is equipping an expedition to reach the gold fields about the middle of June. The Company is purchasing a schooner of about one hundred tons. The vessel will be outfitted with all necessary machinery for placer mining, and provisioned for one year. The complement of men will be ten in number, comprising experienced placer miners, who have had long association with placer operations in Alaska. The leader of the party is a man of wide knowledge of this kind of mining, having spent seven years in the Yukon and Nome. Each man of the expedition will have an equal interest in the results of the findings. No wages will be paid and they will sign up for one year, agreeing to turn all discoveries into the Company. Hence, it will be seen the confidence these men have in the outcome of their voyage into this rich, but unexplored country of Ungava. One of the parties is a man who was employed by one of the big trading companies of the North for nine years, during which time he made some startling placer discoveries, and it is to these fields the expedition will go first.

To those who are at all familiar with the vast wealth that has been, and is being, taken from the Alaska gold fields, the possibilities of this Company will make a strong appeal.

Placer diggings, unlike any other kind of mining, mean almost immediate return, and it is not at all unlikely that this Company will produce big returns before the end of the present year. The man who will pilot the expedition, and who spent nine years in Ungava and Labrador, positively states that he got pannings as big as 80 cents to the pan, besides discovering big gold-bearing quartz ledges and immense deposits of iron ore. Thus it will be seen that the possibilities of the Company are practically unlimited.

The Company is working under a Dominion charter, which is very broad and comprehensive in its scope. It does not limit the activities of the Company to mining, but permits its embarking in almost all branches of commercial industry that might grow out of its explorations in Ungava and Labrador.

This may, indeed, be the nucleus of a great and wealthy concern, whose assets in a few years may represent sums which to mention at this present writing would sound like madness. However, this vast North Country is now coming into its own, and undoubtedly large fortunes will be the reward of those intrepid pioneers who commercialize its teeming natural resources: Gold, silver, copper, iron, coal—all the cardinal elements of commerce.

SUMMARY

FIRST. It has been known for years that Ungava contains great areas of rich mineral deposits.

SECOND. We believe we will be the first expedition to reach the Eldorado, although there are some fourteen private expeditions going in this spring.

THIRD. Our men are experienced prospectors and placer miners, and their only hope of remuneration is their interest in what they find.

FOURTH. There is no guesswork about going directly to the right place, as one of the parties spent nine years in the country and knows just where to go.

MAN OF THE PAST

Sir Ja[illegible] Refers to Some Cana[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] Ottawa, addressing the [illegible] Masonic Lodge [illegible] said in part: "Canada [illegible] an [illegible] people, [illegible] or archaeological [illegible] but she has a pride in the [illegible] of the past century who, throughout the country, have taken an [illegible] attraction in the civilized [illegible]. In 1850 I entered McGill University, Montreal as a student of medicine and resided with the late Mr. Allan Macdonald, ex-chief factor of the Hudson Bay Company in the Northwest, who was a gentleman of high culture and refinement of taste, and was a [illegible] example of the intellectual ability common amongst the factors of the Hudson Bay Company." Sir James spoke of the days he spent with Sir George Simpson and other Hudson Bay factors at the home of the late Mr. Macdonald, and how the conversations always turned to the wonderful work of the Hudson Bay Company from the Atlantic to the Pacific in the fur trade. Mr. Macdonald lost his eyesight two years after Sir James [illegible] met him, and the latter was asked to take charge of the bulk of Mr. Macdonald's correspondence, and Sir James said that in this way he was in a position to learn a great deal about the workings of the historic fur-trading company, and of the extent of its influence on the future of Canada's commerce. He said that in 186[illegible] he delivered in the city of Ottawa, where he moved in 1854, an address on the desirability of closer union between the different Provinces of the Dominion, and of the early construction of the Trans-continental Railway. Sir John Macdonald asked the speaker where he got so much information relative to these subjects, and Sir James's reply was that he got most of it as a result of his close associations with the factors of the Hudson Bay Company.

FUEL FROM POTATOES

In the Form of Denatured Alcohol They Will be Valuable

Culled potatoes will be furnishing the power for the gang plow and the engine on the farm before many more years go by.

A bushel of culled potatoes is worth fifty-six cents. Turned into denatured alcohol they would be worth seventy-two cents. The process of extracting the alcohol is not one that every farmer can carry on, but the alcohol is there all right.

Alcohol is produced by the fermentation of sugar. Potatoes contain starch that may be converted into sugar by the addition of malt and then fermented. The potatoes are steamed until the starch is cooked thoroughly. Then the malt is added. When the starch has been converted into sugar a yeast mash is added and the sugar is fermented [illegible] from the potato [illegible] can be fed to cattle. Experiments have proved that the mash [illegible] [illegible] chemicals, in varnishes, in explosives, [illegible] for engines. For some years the tax laws were such that alcohol was too expensive as fuel for engines. For this reason machinery has not been adapted for using denatured alcohol. But it is coming into use.

The United States Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin recently on this subject. Denatured alcohol is being extracted from potatoes in other countries with success.

A distillery for this sort of work might be conducted by a farmer's coöperative association or as a private enterprise. A plant with a daily capacity of eight thousand pounds of potatoes would cost approximately $12,000. This is larger, considerably than would be practicable for a coöperative enterprise. The plant would have to be in a potato growing country with good railway facilities.—Kansas Industrialist.

USING WOOD SCRAPS

Tag Ends Left from Big Work Not Wasted Nowadays

In these days of high-priced lumber the utilization of the small pieces of wood formerly considered of little or no value assumes considerable importance. The Woodworker gives a number of uses for these scraps.

Brush manufacturers have made some headway in using waste from furniture factories, but the pieces are of so many sizes and of such irregular shapes that success has been only partial. A small porch chair shop has been able to draw a considerable part of its raw material from the waste of boat factories.

Wheelwrights save the ends cut from spokes and shape them in lathes for chisel, gimlet, auger and other small tool handles. Wagon builders occasionally make use of scraps of hardwoods for lining brake blocks. Sash and blind makers save their scraps for the match factories, or if the pieces are large enough they are worked into corner blocks, rose blocks and balusters.

Coopers recut broken or defective staves of the larger sizes and make kegs or smaller vessels of them. Small headings are economically manufactured in that way. Occasionally defective staves and headings are made into dowels. Basket makers save the cores from which veneer has been cut and saw them into thin slats for baskets and crate covers.

Some of the makers on interior finish work their odds and ends of soft woods into small boxes and the hardwood scraps are made into parquet flooring. Planing mills work scraps and broken pieces, unsalable in that form, into boxes for apples medicines and other articles and into brackets, balusters, rose blocks and small quarter-round moulding.

THE FORMATION OF ICEBERGS

They Originate from Glaciers in Western Greenland and Assume Every Shape

Icebergs [illegible] in Western Greenland, [illegible], according to a [illegible] the Hydrographic Office, Greenland's mountainous belt "is penetrated by deep fiords, which reach to the inland ice and are terminated by the perpendicular fronts of huge glaciers, while in some places the ice comes down in broad projections close to the margin of the sea. All of these glaciers are making their way toward the sea, and, as their ends are forced out into the water, they are broken off and set adrift as bergs. This process is called calving. The size of the pieces set adrift varies greatly, but a berg from 60 to 100 feet to the top of its walls, whose spires or pinnacles may reach from 200 to 250 feet in height and whose length may be from [illegible] yards, is considered to be of ordinary size in the Arctic.

"These measurements apply to the part above water, which is about one-eighth or [illegible] of the whole mass. Many authorities give the depth under water as [illegible] from eight to nine times the height above. This is incorrect, as measurements above and below water should be referred to mass and not to height. It is even possible to have a berg as high out of the water as it is deep below the surface, [illegible] imagine a large, solid berg of [illegible] regular shape which has a [illegible] high pinnacle in the [illegible] height above water can easily [illegible] equal to the depth below. A[illegible] on record is that [illegible] in the Strait of B[illegible] fathoms of water, [illegible] a thin spire about [illegible] feet in [illegible].

"Bergs [illegible] all the year round but in [illegible] numbers during the summer [illegible] and thousands are set adrift [illegible]. Once adrift in the Arctic they find their way into the Labrador current and begin their journey to the southward. It is not an unobstructed drift, but one attended with many [illegible] and mishaps. Many [illegible] in the Arctic basin [illegible] break up [illegible] others reach the shores of Labrador, where from one end to the other they continually ground and [illegible], some break up and disappear [illegible], while others get safely past and reach the Grand Bank. The whole [illegible] of Labrador is cut up by numerous islands, bays and headlands, shoals and reefs, which makes the journey of all drift a long one, and adds greatly to the destruction of the bergs by [illegible] and by causing them to break up. [illegible] surface which [illegible] expose to the melting [illegible] of the oceanic waters that [illegible] disappear[illegible] the northern edge of the warm [illegible] of the North Atlantic Ocean. If these processes of disintegration did not go on and large bergs should remain intact, several years might elapse before they would melt, and they would ever be present in the transatlantic routes. In fact, instances are on record in which masses of ice escaping the influences of swift destruction or possessing a capability for resisting them, have, by phenomenal drifts, passed into European waters and been encountered from time to time throughout that portion of the ocean which stretches from the British Isles to the Azores.

"They assume the greatest variety of shapes, from those approximating to some regular geometric figure to others crowned with spires, domes, minarets, and peaks, while others still are pierced by deep indentations or caves. Small cataracts precipitate themselves from the large bergs, while many icicles hang in clusters from every projecting ledge. They frequently have outlying spurs under water, which are as dangerous as any other sunken reefs. For this reason it is advisable for vessels to give them a wide berth, for there are a number of cases on record where vessels were seriously damaged by striking when apparently clear of the berg. It is generally best for vessels to go to windward of them, because the disintegrated fragments will have a tendency to drift to leeward, while open water will be found to windward. Serious injury has occurred to vessels through the breaking up or capsizing of icebergs."

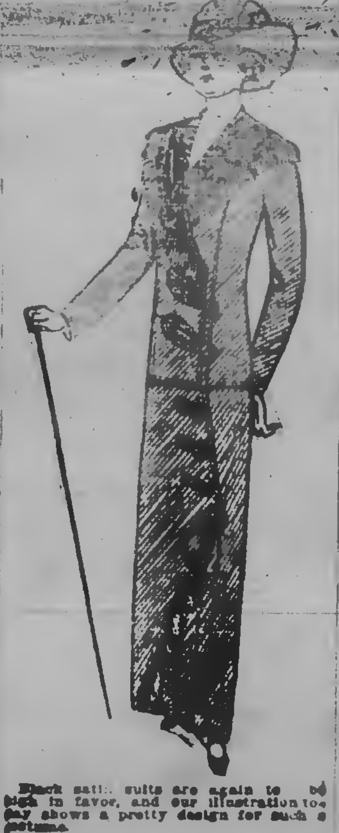
[illegible] SATIN SUIT



Black satin suits are again to be high in favor, and our illustration today shows a pretty design for such a costume.

Suggestions About Dress

A pair of very thin, coarsely-woven silk stockings will give the effect of the most expensive, heavy ones if worn over a pair of thin lisle thread or cotton hose. They are particularly good for street wear, when very sheer stockings are unsuitable. A black velvet dress will be much less difficult to keep clean if you brush it with a new, dry sponge. The difficulty in using dress shields with kimono sleeves may be obviated by sewing them in at right angles to their usual position.

GERMAN'S DEADLY NEW SIEGE GUN

Fires Huge Bomb Which Does Not Enter Bore---A Destructive Weapon

A de[illegible] type of siege gun [illegible] by the German [illegible].

The [illegible] constructed by the firm of [illegible]. It is an improvement on [illegible] such used by the Japanese in the siege of Port Arthur and is designed to aid the advance of infantry [illegible] entrenched position. [illegible] them, experiments have been carried out with a new form of [illegible], which effects much the same [illegible].

[illegible] military experts in Germany [illegible] puzzling over the [illegible] long range artillery of [illegible] could render efficient support to advancing infantry right up to the trenches of a fortified position. [illegible] to present "siege technique" [illegible] artillery of an attacking army [illegible] bombarding the enemy's [illegible] as soon as the storming [illegible] to close quarters, [illegible] the stormers are likely to be [illegible] their own guns from the [illegible].

This [illegible] the attackers' bombardment [illegible] the besieged to emerge [illegible] entrenchments and pour a [illegible] at close quarters [illegible] of the attacking force, [illegible] deprived of the support [illegible] artillery just at the [illegible] it most stands in need of [illegible] gun has been devised to [illegible] difficulty.

It has [illegible] narrow, unrifled bore, and [illegible] light construction, easily [illegible] being carried by two men, [illegible] to be carried in the front [illegible] advancing infantry. [illegible] remarkable feature is its projectile, [illegible] consists of a round bomb [illegible] diameter loaded with a [illegible] explosive mixture. The bomb is of far greater diameter than the bore of the gun which throws it, [illegible] provided with a long stick-like [illegible] is loaded into the barrel of the gun. Its lower end, which is enlarged [illegible] head or piston-like form, rests on the guncharge at the bottom of the barrel. The bomb itself merely rests on the gun muzzle, quite outside the bore.

On being fired, the trailing stick like tail serves to keep the bomb in its proper direction of flight, and only detaches itself and falls to earth after a certain distance has been covered, leaving the bomb to pursue its course alone.

The experiments have shown that a reasonable precision can be obtained with the new missile up to a distance of 800 to [illegible] yards, and the bomb itself, which owing to its large capacity, is capable of great destruction, [illegible] defenders emerging from their cover, but also to make great breaches in their [illegible] of fortifications.

CAULIFLOWER SEED

A Woman on Puget Sound Island Grows a Huge Quantity of It

Nine-tenths of the world's supply of Cauliflower seed is grown by a woman on a Puget Sound island. Startling as the statement may seem, the fact remains that it is not due altogether to any supremacy of knowledge or skill that has enabled Mrs. Anne Archibault to achieve what thousands of first [illegible] abandoned. It is due to the peculiar climatic conditions of Whidby Island. Outside of this land no other section affords the climatic requisites for maturing the seed pods of cauliflower plants.

It was an accident, this discovery of Mrs. Archibault, that has made it possible for her to own 1,000 acres of fertile land and to enjoy a business of $100,000 annually. Cauliflower seed will not mature except under certain favorable conditions. One is dampness, humidity, which gives the tiny seeds the plumpness so essential to development. Another is water—not irrigation, rain, nor the wet, boggy mush of a marsh, but a continuous moist soil beneath which a hardpan subsoil acts as a floor to a reservoir. The land of Whidby Island is ideal for this culture.

Cauliflower plants are transplanted like cabbage in rows. The usual cultivation is continued until the seed pods form. Then even the wind should be kept from the fields, for even the flutter of a tiny bird over a cluster of the seed pods will mar the perfect development of the seed. Harvest consists in gathering the dry pods, artificial drying in the sun, a clover-seed separator and a fanning mill.

Mrs. Archibault's first crop amounted to a handful of seed. About this time she read in a bulletin issued by the department of agriculture that the supply of this seed was short and limited to a few hundred pounds. This was five years ago. Like a flash Mrs. Archibault saw her longed for independence. She grew 400 pounds of seed in 1907. Communication with some well-known seedmen brought orders for her supply at $3 a pound. Every year since she has increased the yield of seed until the present world's supply of 30,000 pounds is practically all grown by her.

Farmers all over Whidby island grow this seed and sell their product to Mrs. Archibault, who markets it through her eastern sales agencies.

The cauliflower fields are beautiful at flowering time, the immaculate snow-white blossoms being alive with white butterflies. The mistress does not interfere with these cabbage moths, believing they aid in scattering the pollen from flower to flower.—Gail M. Fickle.

MOTOR CAR ON SKIS

A Novel Conveyance Built for Count de Lesseps

There are characteristics suggestive of the automobile, the areoplane, the motor-boat, and the cutter, too, in the mechanical sleigh that has been manufactured in France for the Count de Lesseps, for use in Canada. As the count is an accomplished areoplanist as well as an automobilist, and the snow craft was built to his order by the designer of the Chauviere laminate areoplane propeller, it is not strange that so many features from different sources should have been combined in the attempt to produce a succesful and satisfactory mechanical sleigh. The automobile hood of the body blends neatly into the boat-shaped body, which terminates in a stern with a cutter effect that carries the two-bladed areoplane screw. There is room for two persons in the front seat, and a third passenger can be accommodated in a single seat behind them. The frame of the machine is of wood, and there are no springs between it and the flat, ski-like runners. The forward runners can be turned by the steering-wheel as in an automobile. A light, four-cylinder motor of aeronautical type furnishes the power. The forward end of the propeller shaft is connected with the rear end of the driving shaft by a chain and sprockets that reduce the engine speed of 1,200 revolutions per minute to 800 revolutions for the propeller. Instead of the usual automobile change-speed gearing there is a marine type reverse gear. For use in stopping there is a hinged bar under the centre of the body which has strong iron teeth, which can be raised or lowered into contact with the ground or ice by means of rods and a lever.

The City of Calgary has purchased Block 68, Capitol Hill, on which to build a large public school. A number of nice homes have already been built in Capitol Hill, and many more are in course of construction.

Lots in this sub-division are selling in pairs at $250 to $350 per lot. We offer you one block of forty lots, close to Block 68 at $210 per lot, on terms of Third Cash and Balance four, eight and twelve months, with interest at 8 per cent. on deferred payments. This block will readily sell for $300 per lot, or more, within the next six months. The block is high and level, and every lot is perfect. This is a gilt-edged investment. Living Corpse In Russia

St. Petersburg, Mar. 26.—a "living corpse" puzzles the medical authorities. Since March of last year, Ivan Moissejenko has been in a lethargic sleep. The man was charged with train robbery and murder. When he learned that his sweetheart had betrayed him he dropped unconscious and all efforts have failed to arouse him. The movement of the heart is barely discernible. During all this time he has been fed through a tube. Needles, hot irons, or electric shocks have no effect upon him.

GROOMS LEFT AT THE ALTAR

Strange Instances of Interuptions Which Cancelled the Marriage Ceremony

A re[illegible] [illegible]ty wedding sensation, where the [illegible] failed to appear at the altar at the eleventh hour, is not without parallel. Only a short time ago a lady on arriving near the church to be married ordered her coachman to drive her home again. Although astonished at this extraordinary request for the bridegroom was actually waiting in the church, he complied with his mistress's orders. It transpired afterwards that she had merely turned back because the crowd which had gathered to cheer her frightened her away.

In Bristol, some years ago, a marriage failed to take place at the last moment, in the most dramatic circumstances. The bride had been previously engaged. For some reason or other the engagement was broken off, and her fiance sailed for Canada. After some time she became engaged to a local insurance agent. All arrangements were made, and the happy couple were to be married on an Easter Sunday. A large number of people were assembled to witness the ceremony which was just about to begin when the first lover appeared on the scene. The bride fainted, and on regaining her senses she refused to be married to the insurance agent. Since then she has become the wife of her former lover, who has taken her to his homestead in Canada.

On the morning that another happy pair were to be married the bridegroom, who had a moustache and beard, determined to be clean shaven for the ceremony. Why he made up his mind to do such a curious thing on his wedding morn is not known. However, when he was shaved his friends all congratulated him upon his improved appearance. The ceremony was timed for eleven o'clock, and punctually to the moment he appeared at the church. When the bride saw him, however, she had a fit of hysterics and it was not till some hours later that she recovered her composure. She then announced that she would not marry her lover under any circumstances, declaring that he was betrayed by his mouth, previously hidden by his moustache and beard, and that he looked to her to be cruel!

Many will remember the sensation caused [illegible] years ago by the stopping of a fashionable wedding at the very last moment. The bridegroom was an exceedingly well-known figure in the world of sport, and the bride was the [illegible] of a wealthy man. The [illegible] [illegible] was that the [illegible] only one [illegible]. Everyone else knew th[illegible] was far from [illegible]. Everything was ready for the ceremony. The church had been profusely decorated with flowers, and many [illegible] and prominent people had taken their places.

The dramatic moment came when the couple met at the altar. The bride noticed that her intended husband was wearing a particularly valuable diamond tie-pin. Suddenly she cried out, "Take me home! Take me home! I cannot say anything more now!" To the consternation of all [illegible] overcome [illegible] as the bri[illegible] and had to be carried to her carriage. Later it [illegible] pin had been [illegible] months before from the [illegible].—TIT BITS.

TIGHT COLLARS

A well-known doctor considers it remarkable that no one seems to have laid stress on the fact that such slight obstacles to the free circulation of the blood through the vessels of the brain may adversely influence the health of those who are in the habit of wearing tightly-fitting neck clothes.

The fact appears to be well known to veterinary surgeons, who tell us that neck constriction through badly fitting harness is a causative factor in "staggers" in horses. It seems to be equally well known that dogs suffer a great deal through having to wear tightly fitting collars. Is it too much, then, he asks, to argue that those of us who wear our own collars too tightly buttoned may find that practice some explanation of symptoms ascribed to other causes?

FORTUNES MAY BE YOURS

How to Become as Rich as a Rothschild or a Rockefeller

There is no doubt that a fortune, and probably a large one, awaits the man who shall solve certain problems. Surgery, for instance, has made wonderful strides of late years, and its allied art of dentistry has become an almost exact science; but, though the dentist can furnish the mouth with new and wonderfully efficient instruments of mastication, yet the surgeon has hitherto entirely failed to replace the worn-out organs of digestion, says Tit-Bits.

He can remove, wholly or in part, almost every organ of the body, but he can do little toward their artificial replacement. It is said that Mr. Rockefeller has offered half a million dollars to anyone who will supply him with a new digestive apparatus, but up to the present we have not heard that anyone has drawn the cash.

The same gentleman is bald, and although he is probably less perturbed about his bald pate than about his dyspeptic stomach, yet doubtless he would be willing to endow that man with a pension for life who would rethatch his roof. Many hair-washes there are which have admirable qualities in the direction of stimulating the growth of the hair and preventing it from falling out, but even the manufacturer of these articles of the toilet would frankly admit that a real and infallible cure for baldness has not been discovered. The man who could rise up and demonstrate to the world that he can make hair spring up on a patch of scalp as smooth as a billiard ball would be a millionaire in six months.

Many diseases, like leprosy, the plague, cholera, and smallpox, have been wholly or nearly eradicated from Western Europe, America, and the British Colonies, yet rheumatism continues to cripple tens of thousands, and is considered by most doctors as practically incurable. The man who can find a genuine cure is likely to be a millionaire in life and to have his statue in every city after he is dead.

The same remarks apply to cancer. Investigators are engaged on the problems involved in the cure of this disease in every quarter of the globe. It is no exaggeration to say that millions of pounds have been spent on research work in connection with it, and yet its ravages remain unabated.

So far as consumption is concerned, all the above remarks apply; but in this case a [illegible] rational treatment of the patients and their more careful isolation have done something to reduce its ravages. There are teeming thousands of men and women who would be willing to shower all their treasure at the feet of the man who, one fine morning, could step forth and say, "Here is a certain cure for consumption," or, "I hold in my hands the antidote to cancer." Aye, the world would beatify him.

[illegible] ever found a cure for [illegible] there is a fortune [illegible] will go to [illegible]

First British Woman to Fly

The distinction of being the first woman of purely British nationality to fly belongs to Miss Gertrude Bacon daughter of the famous aeronaut who was really one of the pioneers of ballooning. Miss Bacon went up with Mr. Sommer in a Farman biplane during the Rheims aviation meeting of 1909, and in her book, "How Men Fly," which has recently been published she provided a fascinating narrative of the sensations of flying. She quotes the unfortunate Mr. Rolls as saying that his "first impression of flying was like trying to drive a motor-car which was skidding in all directions at once."

SALT FOR MANGOLDS

Best Results Obtained From Use of 10 Per Cent. Per Acre

That application of salt in addition to other manures is useful for the mangold crop is generally acknowledged, but what is the most suitable quantity to apply is a question upon which there is considerable difference of opinion.

To obtain definite information on this point, the Harper-Adams Agricultural College has been conducting experiments for three years with quantities per acre of 2½ cwt., 5 cwt., 10 cwt. and 15 cwt. respectively.

The salt was applied in the middle of April and thoroughly worked into the soil by cultivating, harrowing and rolling three times before rowing up the ridges being again split before sowing.

Special care has to be taken to ensure the salt being completely mixed with the soil, otherwise the seed is liable to be [illegible].

The dressings were made across all the manurial and variety trial plots and the weights are the average of the different plots. The result was the following:—The application of—

2½ cwt. produced an average increase, about [illegible] tons roots;

5 cwt. produced an average increase about 5½ tons roots;

10 cwt. produced an average increase, about [illegible]½ tons roots;

15 cwt. produced an average increase, about [illegible] tons roots.—

The big application of 15 cwt. was tried for the first time last year, just to see what the effect would be.

The experiment seems to demonstrate that the quantity of salt that can be used with the best result is 10 cwt. per acre.

HORSES IN WINTER

Can be Kept on Straw as Well as on Hay

Professor J. H. Shepperd, of the North Dakota Agricultural College, answering a question recently about wintering horses on straw, says:

The North Dakota station did a considerable amount of work in horse feeding a number of years ago and made extensive trials with oat straw, as compared with hay, for roughage. In the trials it was found that some horses did about as well on it as they did on hay, while others were very much harder to carry, chiefly because their appetites for roughage were too light to cause them to eat enough of it. Aside from those dainty animals there was little trouble in keeping them up on oat straw as roughage.

The oat straw used was that of a normal season, which was coarser and more woody than that which had been obtained that year. The trial consisted of a period of sixty days' feeding with oats as the grain ration against a similar period with oats and hay, and sixty days' feeding with a mixture of half and half bran and shorts by weight with hay compared with sixty days' feeding bran and shorts [illegible]

During the first thirty days while conditions [illegible] present and the horses were [illegible] about enough for [illegible]

[illegible] half of the month. The horses receiving oats and hay, as a ration required nine and one third pounds of oats with hay to carry them, while those on oats and straw consumed [illegible] and one-half pounds of oats per day. During the thirty days they had light work, the horses on [illegible] gained 176 pounds and the three on straw 169 pounds. During the [illegible] days when they [illegible] heavy [illegible] half of the time, those on hay [illegible] pounds and those on straw [illegible] pounds.

The [illegible] of horses fed on bran and shorts, half and half by weight, [illegible] during the winter conditions, 8[illegible] pounds when fed hay, and 83 pounds [illegible] straw. When they were on the [illegible] ration with heavy work for one half of the month they lost 225 pounds, and [illegible] hay ration 235 pounds.

These [illegible] indicate that horses can be carried almost as successfully on straw for roughage as they can on hay, provided enough additional grain is given them to supply the [illegible] sufficient nourishment. The additional grain [illegible] is about one-fifth. If the feeder has facilities for cutting the straw and will moisten it and mix the grain feed with it during the season [illegible] animals are required to do very little work, a smaller amount of grain will carry them.

SUCKERS ON CORN

In the past suckers on corn were regarded as very undesirable, and oftentimes the small boy had to go through the cornfield and pull them off. Recent experiments show that suckering of the corn plant is merely a response to its surroundings. When the stand is thin there will always be plenty of suckers. The corn plants simply try to remedy the thin stand by suckering.

In an experiment several years ago where there were four plants in a hill eight suckers developed to each one hundred plants; where there were three in a hill twenty-five suckers developed; where there were two in a hill seventy-six suckers, and where there was only one plant in the hill, 198 suckers developed to each one hundred plants. It was noticed that a large number of the suckers produced ears.

Another cause for suckering is the richness of the land. Rich, new land has been found to produce nearly twice the number of suckers as old, worn-out land. To some extent the tendency to suckers is no doubt inherited, but the main causes of suckering are the thinness of the ground and the weather conditions.

Experiments conducted for two years indicated that it paid to leave the suckers on. The average yield for two years of corn with the suckers left on was eighty-one bushels, while for corn with suckers pulled off it was sixty-four bushels.

VANCOUVER HARNESS RACING

Apparently the conduct of harness-racing is satisfactory at the Vancouver Exhibition. They encourage it on the Pacific coast, while Toronto Exhibition has abandoned it entirely. All kinds of horses are provided for in the speed program at Vancouver, and the list of stakes and purses totals twenty thousand dollars. Two stakes are of $3,000 and two of $2,000 each.

SPEAKS OUT HIS FIRM BELIEF

THAT THERE IS NO BETTER MEDICINE THAN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

New Liskeard Man Tells the Public What He Thinks of the Remedy That Never Fails to Cure Diseased Kidneys.

New Liskeard, Ont., March 22.—(Special)—Mr. Isaac Grant, well-known and highly respected here, is a firm believer in the old and still growing belief that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one sure cure for all forms of Kidney Disease.

Mr. Grant is outspoken in his belief. "Any person suffering with kidney disease," he says, "should use Dodd's Kidney Pills, as there is no better medicine on earth to-day."

When a man makes a statement like that he believes what he says. Hundreds of others in Canada are making the same statement every day, and for the same reason. They have used Dodd's Pills and found them good.

For Dodd's Kidney Pills not only cure the backache or rheumatism or dropsy or other ailment at which they are aimed, but they build up the system and make you feel stronger and healthier all over the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the kidneys, and cured kidneys mean pure blood. Pure blood cures the ailment by making the body strong enough to shake off any and all disease.

Kingston, Ont., has gone Peterborough one better (or one worse) in the matter of assessment. The [illegible] [illegible] their rate for the [illegible] [illegible] and a half mills since last year.

Hetty Green, the richest woman in the world, has found New York dull, and has moved to a flat in Hoboken Say, Hetty, why not try Peterborough for one winter, after leaving your cheque book behind. It is guaranteed that you will not find things dull. They may be cold, however, under such circumstances.

It seems that Peterborough is not the only city that has trouble over disposing of its sewerage. Cobourg's house of refuge has to get rid of its sewerage. The town found they would have to spend $6000 for a drain to the lake, and, now Dr. Bruce Smith, of the Provincial Board, of Health, says the town cannot put their sewerage into the lake. A septic tank seems the only way to solve the difficulty.

HOW EDITORS ARE LED ASTRAY

From the Emporia Gazette.

It is rumored that Whitlaw Reid has been talking too much and may get in trouble. A hundred editors might be mentioned whose worries began when they neglected their newspapers to save the country.

WOMEN'S AILMENTS CAUSED BY NEGLECT

ARE QUICKLY CURED AND ROBUST, SOUND HEALTH RESTORED BY DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS.

Women are on the whole more sickly than men. One reason is that their system is more complicated; another and more important reason is they put off measures of relief too long. At the beginning, constipation is the cause of nine-tenths of women's ailments. The blood becomes weakened and polluted—the nerves suffer, and a run down condition takes root.

Because of their mildness of action as a system regulator, because of their undoubted power to remove constipation, irregularities, no medicine for women can compare with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The kidneys quickly respond to the remedial action of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and the result is as you would expect, pain in the back and side, shortness of breath, and bad color disappear—the functions of the body then operate naturally, congestion and pain are prevented and perfect health returns.

Thousands of happy women say Dr Hamilton's Pills are the greatest and best blood-purifier, the finest complexion renewer, the most certain regulating medicine known. All dealers in 25c. boxes, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

THURSDAY, MARCH 28, 1912.

GOVERNMENT'S SANE ACTION.

The Ontacio government, with commendable zeal, is considering an act to prevent the procreation of feeble-minded or epileptic persons. This act says, in part:

"The Lieutenant-Governor may appoint for each of the Provincial institutions for the care of the Insane, feeble-minded and epileptic, respectively, two skilled Surgeons, who, shall examine such persons as are reported to them by the superintendent or the [illegible] in charge, to be persons by whom procreation would be inadvisable, such Board shall examine the physical and mental condition of such person and their record and family history, and if, in the judgment of the majority of said Board, procreation by any such person would produce children with an inherited tendency to crime, insanity, feeble-mindedness, idiocy or imbecility, then the said Board shall appoint one of its members to perform the operation of vascotomy or oophorectomy as the case may be upon such person."

Our older citizens will remember a case right here in Peterborough, where such conditions, as noted above, were in evidence. Two persons, man (?) and woman (?) desired to be united in wedlock. They went to the clergyman of two churches of the city to get the nuptial knot tied. Both of the clergy approached, realizing that both of those seeking marriage, were not of sound mind, refused to perform the ceremony. The two then went to a third minister. He, whether from zeal to perform his duty, or for the incidental fee, made the couple man and wife. What is the result. The minister possibly got $2, the married pair have to seek charity to live and a child will, if it lives, in all human probability be a burden on the public purse.

Editorial Notes

"The fiat has gone forth," says an esteemed contemporary that "students as fire rangers shall be fired." This was evidently meant as a pun and was an all-fired poor one.

The barristers and solicitors of Ontario, want their fees raised one hundred per cent. Under present conditions, the man who goes to law to recover $100 is in dead luck, if he wins his suit, to get $15, his lawyer retaining the balance. Should the proposed change be made, the litigant would only get $7.50. Fortunately all lawyers do not exact the pound of flesh, as intimated above.

Mr. W. McDonald, M.P.P. for Center Bruce, is asking for an Act, under the Legislature, whereby bars shall be closed on all statutory and civic holidays. It will be remembered that last season the Toronto house passed a law compelling hotelkeepers to close their bars on Christmas Day. Whilst not, in any sense or degree, advocating the bar, does such intermittent action have any lasting effect on the young men of the Province?

A Toronto report says that a white Leghorn hen, in that city, has laid an egg that is certainly a freak. There was a spherical cup over the large end of the egg in question, and on this a dark point protruded. On close examination, it was found that the dark spot was caused by the beak of a chicken. This is an age of advance and progress. Even the hens seem to be laying eggs with the chickens already formed. Many of our citizens have found, at breakfast time, traces of a chicken in their eggs, but to get a chicken in a freshly laid egg is somewhat of a surprise.

HE COULD NOT WALK OR SLEEP

BUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED HIM.

Quebec Postmaster's Remarkable Recovery is the Talk of the Whole Country Side.

RUMPLEVILLE, Megantic Co., Que., March 27 (Special) The remarkable cure of Mr. Achille Vachon, the well-known merchant and postmaster here, is the talk of the whole country side. Mr. Vachon was confined to his bed with kidney disease. One box of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him. But let him tell his story in his own words:

"I was troubled with kidney disease," Mr. Vachon says. "I got so bad I could not walk, while my sleep was broken, and I could not rest. It was then I sent for Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"From the second day after starting to take them I rested better, and before I had finished the box I was in excellent health.

"You can publish this statement, for I want my friends to know what a grand remedy Dodd's Kidney Pills are."

Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure sick kidneys. They have never been known to fail. Cured kidneys make pure blood, and pure blood will cure nine-tenths of the ills to which the flesh is heir. If you haven't used Dodd's Kidney Pills yourself ask your neighbors.

HINTS ON FOOD

Marion Harland Gives Some Advice to Housewives

"Things to avoid in food and drink," is the subject of an interesting article in The Public Health Journal of Canada, by Marion Harland, who says in part:

Mouldy bread is a lurking place for ptomaines. I have heard housekeepers gravely assert that "mould does not hurt bread." A woman who had studied domestic science in college argued with me, to her own satisfaction, that mould, being a vegetable growth, when it appears on stale bread, is as harmless as yeast. "Of which it may be said to be a by-product," she concluded. "Under the microscope you would see a miniature forest in that slice of mouldy bread. Toast it and you have dead wood—nothing worse."

She may have been right. I may err in trying to keep bread from moulding, if possible, and to throw it to pigs and chickens when the blue-edged forests appear upon it. I do the same with regard to musty loaves. I am positive in the conviction that musty flour and souring Indian meal are unsafe as food for human creatures. Left to their own destruction as foods, the flour will develop weevils and the meal mealworms in due time. The germs of both must have been in the must and sourness. I actually knew one frugal housewife who sifted the weevils out of the flour and put it back into the barrel for family use! It never occurred to her that there might be [illegible] invisible germs in the sifted flour as there were living wrigglers before she used the sieve.

Sprouting potatoes are unwholesome. I maintain that the water in which raw potatoes are cooked should be thrown away as unfit for culinary purposes. In some countries it is reckoned poisonous. Old potatoes should be cooked in two waters. Sprouting potatoes should not be cooked at all, except for chickens and pigs. Luckily, the rank smell that goes with the pale, dingy green of the peeled vegetable repels the would-be eater.

Since prevention is, always and everywhere, better than cure, it behooves the wise manager of the household to shield her provisions, raw and cooked, from the peril of contagion. A fly will deposit enough eggs in meat in a second of time to stock it with larvae in less than forty-eight hours. Therefore, keep meats behind wire, and if they are to be kept a day or two without cooking, wash over with vinegar and a dash of red pepper.

Lay a lump of charcoal in the bottom of the chamber of the refrigerator in which milk and butter are kept.

Make free use of the whitewash brush in the root cellar, and everywhere let in the free air and sunshine once a day. Have wire screens in your windows and doors all summer.

Corruption breeds in warm darkness, and is carried into your dwellings upon the feet and feelers of insects. The price of security from perils, visible and microscopic, is intelligent vigilance.

FEEDING CATTLE WANTED

The Supply of Feeders is Far Behind the Demand

The demand for feeding cattle has come on with a rush. On Toronto cattle market one day last week there were ten buyers for every load of stockers and feeders offered. Good feeders are scarce at any price, and farmers who are accustomed to put up a bunch of feeding cattle at this season are finding it very hard to have their wants supplied. Ontario will have a lot of rough feed this year, and will be able to make use of a larger number than usual of cattle for feeding purposes. That the supply is so small will serve to remove any doubts there may be regarding the future of the cattle market. Cheap cattle are a good ways off and the farmer who is so fortunate as to have choice, well finished cattle for sale this coming winter is likely to realize pretty well on his investment. The situation is being relieved somewhat by Western feeding cattle which have been offering in larger numbers of late. But even with this larger supply it looks as if there will not be enough of the good kind to go around. —Canadian Farmer.

TAKING NO CHANCES

"Because," answered the incorrigible youngster, "grandpa says the good die young, and I ain't taking any chances."

A MILLINERY THOUGHT

"I wish to thunder he'd everlastingly hide his tail there," observed the man who had just settled a heavy millinery bill.

A RAPID EDUCATION

Travellers Who Went Through School Very Quickly

When travelling some years ago in the Far West I met with an experience which happily does not fall to the lot of many people, says a correspondent. We were travelling on a special night train from Seattle to Tacoma. The train was going at high speed, when in the small hours of the morning the sleeping travellers were suddenly awakened by a terrific shock. Everyone believed that there had been a collision, and rose up to see what was the matter. A collision there certainly had been, but of a most unusual nature. The train had run through a wooden schoolhouse which some workmen, in moving, had stupidly left on the line. I doubt if many people have passed through school so quickly before or since.

HER LOVE STORY

The Queen of Roumania's Own Description of Meeting the Prince

Here is the Queen of Roumania's charming account of her own love story. The Prince of Roumania (as he then was) came to woo her, and, although "Carmen Sylva" hesitated at first, her mother talked to her of the Prince's good qualities, and, finally, in her own words, "As my mother went on talking, my hesitation seemed to fade away, and it was not long before I said to her, 'Let him come. He is the right one.' In a very short time the Prince had returned, I was summoned to the room, and I remember going towards him with my hand outstretched, which he raised to his lips, and I remember, too, the words he spoke, but my words to him I do not recall, though my mother treasured them in her heart, and had them inscribed below my portrait she sent to him."

Now, the Queen's granddaughter, Princess Elizabeth of Roumania, is about to become engaged to Prince George of Greece, eldest son of the Crown Prince of Greece, whom she will meet for the first time at the Coronation in London.

AN HOUR'S OVERTIME

"I see you claim one hour's overtime, Bill," said the employer. "How's that? I thought no one worked over time last week."

Bill passed a horny hand across his mouth.

"Quite right," he replied, "One hour's my due."

The master regarded him suspiciously.

"Come, when was it?" he inquired.

"Last Thursday," responded Bill. "I was sent up to your own house to help shake the carpets."

"Yes, I remember that distinctly," cut in the boss. "But you got off at six sharp."

"Ah, that's true as far as it goes," assented the man. "But your missus give me half a meat pie to take home and that there hour is for bringing the dish back!"

THE ASPIRING CHAUFFEUR

Chug, chug! Plonk, plonk! Choo choo!

The motor-car dashed along the road at a tremendous speed, missed a woman by a split hair's-breadth, bumped over her less fortunate dog, and came to an abrupt halt.

"Dear me!" said the chauffeur, alighting.

The woman said more than "Dear me!" In fact, what she didn't say isn't worth printing.

"Can I—er—replace your dog?" suggested the chauffeur, getting in a word edgewise at about 3.45.

For a brief moment the woman regarded his be-goggled features. Then she retorted freezingly:

"You flatter yourself!"

A COMMON COMPLAINT

"What's the matter with you?" asked the Army doctor.

The recruit, who had been on the sick list ever since he had enlisted, shook his head sorrowfully.

"I dunno," he replied.

"You look well enough," commented the doctor. "How's the appetite?"

"I'd match an elephant at meals," answered the recruit. "It ain't that kind of illness, sir."

"Then I'm hanged if I know what kind it is!" exclaimed the Army medico. "How does it affect you?"

"Well, I eats well, and I drinks well, and I sleeps well," replied Thomas Atkins, rubbing his nose thoughtfully; "but directly I hear the word 'work,' I come all of a tremble!"

LIGHT THAT DOES NOT FAIL

A Volcanic Beacon in San Salvador Republic

The republic of San Salvador is the only goverment on earth that collects lighthouse fees on account of a volcano that it owns, and without the slightest cost of upkeep.

The volcanic beacon is about eight miles inland from the port of Acajutla, and its pillar of cloud by day and its fire sky by night are visible for many miles out to sea. It bursts forth every seven minutes, and is just as accurate as any revolving light that warns mariners of danger in any part of the world.

This volcano has been keeping up this seven-minutes' service of eruptions ever since anyone can remember. It is a favorite amusement of visitors to sit by the hour during the lazy afternoons, and, watch in hand, to time the eruptions till they tire of the occupation and fall asleep. No one has ever caught the volcano napping, however.

Every vessel that puts in at Acajutla has to pay its lighthouse fee. There is no other lighthouse than the volcano, but that is a sufficient excuse for the Government of Salvador to make a charge for its services. The explosions that accompany the eruptions sound like detonations of heavy charges of dynamite, but, fortunately, they are not sufficient to shake the ground perceptibly more than about a mile or two from the summit of the crater.

WINNIPEG
WHERE MONEY DOUBLES QUICK
LAC DU BONNET POWER PLANT
POINT DUBOIS POWER PLANT

The Fastest Growing City on the Continent

The growth of a city regulates increase in real estate values. The faster the growth in population, the faster is the growth in prices in both city and suburban real estate, and as Winnipeg is the fastest growing city in Canada, or for that matter on the North American Continent, you could not pick a city where money, either in large or small amounts could be invested to better advantage. Profits are sure if you buy where prices are right.

60,000 HORSE POWER HYDRO ELECTRIC PLANT

This great civic power plant furnishes power to manufacturers at a very low rate and will make Winnipeg Canada's most important industrial centre. Since the power plant has been completed, manufacturing establishments are being completed at an unprecedented rate, and during the past year over forty new factories started operation. This great industrial development means an enormous increase in Winnipeg's population. No one can, with any degree of certainty, foretell what the increase in population will amount to in ten years, but it is safe to assume that in that time Winnipeg's population will have passed the half million mark and real estate values will have doubled many times over. Compare the future with the past five or ten years and figure for yourself the possibilities that lie in an investment in Winnipeg real estate. Six years ago, property that sold for $6 to $8 per foot is now worth anywhere from $40 to $65 per foot, and with a still greater growth in the next five years, the increase in real estate values will be correspondingly greater.

PAKLAND PARK AN IDEAL INVESTMENT.

One of the best real estate investments offered in Winnipeg to-day is Oakland Park, which is located east of the Red River beyond the present northern limits of the city of Winnipeg.

Oakland Park is located in what will be a great industrial centre, lying as it does inside the new line of the C. P. R.

Many factories will locate in the immediate vicinity of Oakland Park, where thousands of men will find employment. Oakland Park will, therefore, become a great residential centre and real estate values will increase rapidly.

The price at which Oakland Park lots are now selling assures the investor of a handsome profit within the next twelve or eighteen months, and values should at least double before the final payments are made. The prices asked for Oakland Park are considerably lower than those of any other property similarly located.

Pou'try Pointers

George Hansman, a poulterer of Hillsboro, N.D., gives the following good advice:—

Grit to the fowl is what teeth are to the ruminating animal, a necessity.

A corn sheller is not essential. The hens will do their own shelling if you throw out the ears in short, broken pieces.

Let the fowls have as wide range as possible, but if they must be confined give them plenty of shade and dig the ground frequently.

Young geese do not lay as many fertile eggs or produce as many goslings in the first breeding season as they do in the second.

Fresh air and sunshine are the best disinfectants that the poultry-raiser has at his disposal, and ought to be more often used in his work.

A plat of ground 50 feet square divided into two lots will be ample accommodation for 25 fowls. Confine them in one lot for a week at a time, meanwhile spading up the other.

The well hatched chicks in the carefully-cared-for brooder will amount to little unless the food is supplied in proper amounts and at right intervals.

More harm results to flocks during the summer months than at any other time owing to the neglect of the owners, not keeping the house and bodies of the birds clean.

Prices of grain feeds are high, and the poultryman must watch his feeding closely. Feeding has become a science, and costs are now figured in fractions of a cent.

Always handle ducks and geese by their necks, and never by the legs, as fowls are handled, for their limbs are not strong enough to serve as handles.

A poulterer can well afford to pay one cent per quart for skim-milk. Feed quantities of whole milk and you will find it pays.

ELECTRICITY ON FARMS

Labor Will Be Trifling—Nothing to Do But Turn on Current

In these days when the metropolitan city may be described as a great electrical laboratory and consuming station, it should not be overlooked that the farm itself is coming in for its share of this universal source of power.

There are many ways through which the farm that can afford the use of the electric current may have it for the trouble of installation. Some nearby inter-urban electric line may have its surplus current for sale; some stream close at hand may have a gravity waterfall to develop electricity sufficient for half a dozen farmers; or the gasoline engine in connection with a dynamo is within comparatively easy reach of the prosperous farmer who discovers that to keep his boys on the farm—or even to make certain that his hired help will stay with him through the season—it is up to him to lighten those old drudgeries of twenty years ago.

In the house of the farmer, the first adaptation of the electric current would be in displacing the kerosene lamp. A motor in the basement and a pump and tank on the outside would effect a system of waterworks for the house. In the dairy the cream separator, [illegible] for dairy [illegible] can be operated. Laundry work—that bugbear of the farmer's wife—is simplified and lightened to the last degree. Even the long-sought milking machine is to receive an impetus at the hands of Yankee ingenuity, and, if it shall be perfected, the electric current must drive it.

In the cow barns and horse stables the electric bulb attached to wires in gaspipe housings not only will give the safest light for winter mornings and evenings, but already the vacuum cleaner has made its appearance adapted to the easiest and most thorough currying and cleaning of the coats of cows and horses.

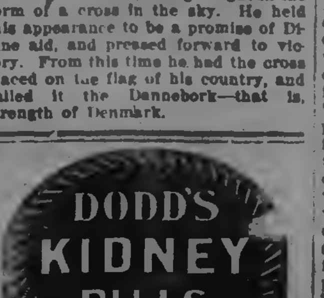
Instead of the long and laborious process of ice cutting from ponds, the electric current will operate the refrigerating room's ammonia fluids with automatic stoppage of the motor when the required degree of cold is reached. The power may be directed to the farm workshops, where lathes and grindstones and emery wheels may be run for the farm's "jack-of-all trades," saving not only the charges of the village blacksmith in hundreds of troubles, but saving the time of driving to and from the town.

In some of the northern fruit growing sections the electric warning signal is set for arousing the whole farm population any time in the night when the "danger" temperature is reached out of doors. This means at the present time that every available worker turns out and kindles fires in the smudge pots that are set in the orchards, prepared for the torches that shall wipe out the dangers of frost. But as electricity is light, power, and heat, all in one, may not the present smudge pots become electrical heaters, automatically turned on?

To-day there is not a practical electrical engineer who does not look upon the present state of electrical service as in its infancy. We have the electrical city. How long before the electrical farm?

THE OLDEST FLAG

The flag of Denmark, a plain red banner bearing on it a white cross, is the oldest flag now in existence. For 200 years both Norway and Sweden were united with Denmark under this flag. In the year 1219 King Waldemar of Denmark, when leading his troops to battle against the Livonians, saw, or thought he saw, a bright light in the form of a cross in the sky. He held this appearance to be a promise of Divine aid, and pressed forward to victory. From this time he had the cross placed on the flag of his country, and called it the Dannebork—that is, strength of Denmark.



DRUG STORES ON SHIPS

As a result of representations made by the General Shipowners' Society, London, the Board of Trade is now reconsidering the scale of drugs prescribed for use on board ships. It has been found that many of the drugs which vessels are compelled to carry are never used, while others which should form part of the medical equipment of every ship, are omitted. With a view to assisting the Board of Trade to arrive at a decision on the subject medical officers of the leading steamship lines have formulated a modern list of supplies which there is reason to believe will be adopted. In drawing this up regard has been had to faster passages now made by steamers as compared with the days of sailing ships, when the existing scale was prescribed.

ONE TO THE PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Asquith, the Prime Minister, is in these days regarded as such a particularly [illegible] gentleman that the following anecdote is interesting:

Long years ago he attended a small preparatory school for boys, the principal of which was a learned clergyman, and a strict grammarian.

One night, after ten o'clock, when all the boys should have been in bed, he was passing silently along the corridor when he heard sounds of revelry from a darkened dormitory.

He tapped on the door. Silence within. Then:

"Who's there?" called out the future Premier.

"It's me, the principal. Open the door!"

"Ha, ha, [illegible]!" answered young Asquith. "If it were the principal he would say, 'It is I.'"

Feeling the force of this argument the schoolmaster passed on.

DESCRIBES KID McCOY

His Entry Into the Fighting Game in Paris.

An interesting description of Kid McCoy's entry into the fighting game in Paris is given in an English sporting magazine. The Kid was always a clever fellow, both in and out of the ring. But, knowing the Parisian's fondness of fine clothes, he entered the ring in a flashy bathrobe, and when be disrobed for the night he had on a fancy pair of silk stockings and a pair of green silk tights. He also was particular before entering the ring to have every hair on his head lying just so. The account also says that there was a lot of "Kid" about the fight, but not much of the McCoy. He was fighting Harry Croxon, a big English heavyweight, that could hardly get out of his own way. McCoy was there with all his old time feints and an occasional jab, but was always careful that he did not get hit himself. The farce came to a close in the third round, when McCoy landed one of his old-time left hooks that knocked Croxon down for the count of eight; then put him out for good.

CHANGING THE WORLD

Look Around You and Examine Your Environment Occasionally

"You cannot change the world; only yourself."

The above saying is apt to be a little misleading. For though the world is so vast, huge, and complex that to change the whole of it in any way would require powers far greater than most of us possess, yet, on the other hand, by changing ourselves we do much towards changing the world. "He who reforms himself has done more to reform the community than a crowd of noisy, impotent talkers." Few of us properly realize the greatness of the influences which we exert, very often unconsciously, on all with whom we are constantly in contact.

When you change yourself, you cannot help but change your influence, and your influence changes others to some extent, and thus changes their influence, too—and so on, like the ripples caused by a stone flung into a pond. So if you reform yourself, you are taking a hand in the great task of reforming the world.

"Your world" is your mission-ground. "Your world" is the place where your best work is needed. Your friends, your workmates, above all, your family, are the people who are the most affected by you. To reform yourself is hard, but it is not a hopeless task.

You can alter your whole outlook on life. If you are inclined to be sad and gloomy, you can, by persistently forcing yourself to think cheerfully, in time develop the habit of cheerfulness to such an extent that it becomes second nature to you.

Look around you, and examine your world occasionally. See where a change for the better is most needed, and set to work at once to make that change. Here is one, perhaps, who needs cheering up; go and cheer him. Here is one who seems to want advice; give it to him. Here is one who requires help; let him have any such help as lies in your power to give.

But, above all, look to yourself. Reform, like charity, should begin at home.—Budget and Family Journal.

ENGLAND'S COAL SUPPLY

Sir William Ramsay Says 175 Years Will End It

Sir William Ramsay gave a surprise to the members of the British Association, in a grave warning to England that the present rate of consumption of her coal supply she will be a bankrupt nation 175 years hence. "It may be said that 175 years is a long time," said Sir William. "In the life of a nation it is a mere span." Sir William urged Governmental afforestation and general economy in the use of coal, in order that "our life as a nation may be prolonged." Both in industrial life and in the home there was, he said, room for economy. He advocated the appointment of a permanent commission, whose object should be to keep abreast with the diminution of the stores of natural energy, and to take steps to lessen its rate.

GROWING TOBACCO

Twenty Acres Set Out in Plant at Kelowna this Year

Louis Holman, of Kelowna, has planted 20 acres in tobacco this year. A much larger area would have been placed under cultivation had Mr. Holman been able to secure experienced help.

In discussing the future of the tobacco industry in the Okanagan Mr. Holman observed that for the success of the industry it was essential that one or more experienced men should take up tobacco-growing in each of the different districts of the interior where it might profitably be gone in for. These would be, as it were, guide-posts for other ranchers who went in for the project, and with this assistance there should be no failures in crops even at the commencement, with the exception of those caused very occasionally in this province by exceptionally cold winters. It took about three years, Mr. Holman stated, for a man starting in "green" to properly master planting, irrigating and harvesting without any aid from experienced planters. As far as ultimate success was concerned he was certain of it.

WOMEN IN PARLIAMENT

A Glance at the Reigns of the Early Edwards

In the very early times the affairs of the nation were not wholly in the hands of the sterner sex, for in the reigns of Henry III. and Edward I four abbesses at least were summoned to Parliament namely, those of Shaftesbury, Barking, Winchester and Milton. To one of the Parliaments of Edward III. there were summoned by writ ten ladies of noble birth, seven of these countesses. Gurdon, in his "Antiquities of Parliament," goes back still further than this, for he says that "ladies of birth and quality sat in council with the Saxon Witas." A certain Abbess Hilda, according to the historian Bede, presided at an ecclesiastical synod. In Wightred's great council at Becconfeld, A.D. 694, the abbesses sat and deliberated, and five of them signed decrees of that council along with the King, Bishops and nobles. King Edward's charter to the Abbey of Crawland, A.D. 961, was with the consent not only of the nobles but also of the abbesses, their names appearing among those who signed it.

AN EXPERT WITNESS.

Time after time the counsel had tried to draw something important from the sea-faring man who stood in the box.

"You say your boat picked up the accused at nine o'clock," said the barrister wearily, but still determined to gain some ground.

"Now, it has been stated that he jumped overboard nearly an hour before that time. Tell me, Captain Bluffarty, how he appeared to you when you picked him up. If you had been asked to give an opinion of him then, what would you have said?"

There was a long pause. The captain looked thoughtful, then yawned, then stroked his beard.

"A-ah," he answered at long last. "Well, I'll tell you candid now. If somebody'd asked me then—just when we took him aboard—what I thought of him, I should have said straight out, insult or no insult, that he was one of the wettest men, if not the very wettest man, that ever I see'd. Fack, mister!"

ORANGE MARMALADE

Select one orange and one lemon with a thin skin. Cut in slices and then in cubes. To this add six cupfuls of water. Let stand over night. Next morning boil twenty minutes, measure liquid, and to one cupful of mixture add one cupful of sugar. Boil evenly for one-half hour, or until it jells. This will make eight medium sized glasses.

Grape Sherbet

Two pounds Concord grapes, two lemons, one quart water, one pound sugar; lay a square of cheesecloth over a large bowl; put in the washed grapes and mash thoroughly; squeeze out all the juice and add an equal amount of sugar, the lemon juice. Use sugar enough to make it quite sweet, then freeze.

Death of "Tannie" Gillespie.

The news of the death of Alex. (Tannie) Gillespie, Hamilton, after only a few days' illness, was a shock to hundreds of his friends. Of a robust build, a cheerful disposition, a careful liver, [illegible] tieth year, he looked like a man destined for a ripe old age. The late Mr. Gillespie was an active cricketer and curler, and in his younger days a celebrated member of the Hamilton Tigers' Rugby Football Club, working on the forward line according to the rules then in vogue. He played first-class cricket for the Toronto Club, and for Hamilton before he moved here, with the Canada Life Company, a fine batsman and splendid medium-pace bowler. He was a member of the Toronto Curling Club.

Greatest Invention of age for Hoarseness, Weak Throat

Nothing So Far Discovered Is so Beneficial to Public Speakers, Ministers, Singers and Teachers as CATARRHOZONE.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. Catarrhozone keeps the mucous surfaces in perfect condition, and its regular use absolutely prevents colds and throat irritation, thereby removing the singer's greatest source of anxiety—unfitness of voice. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Catarrhozone, and credit is no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

Singer Recommends Catarrhozone.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the 'Progress' a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it.

"Catarrhozone cured me and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some from suffering, and I will always remain.

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering with throat weakness or catarrh.

Complete outfit, consisting of a beautifully polished hard rubber inhaler, and sufficient liquid for recharging to last two months, costs one dollar. Sold by all druggists, or sent safely to your address by mail if price is forwarded to the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., or Kingston, Ont.

BABYLONIAN SURGEON'S FEES

The French newspapers contain interesting references to the discovery of a Babylonian stone which shows the fees that were paid to surgeons some four thousand centuries ago. The fees, considering the risk, were extremely moderate; and they were fees literally with a vengeance, and not honorariums. In those far-away days, an operation to the neck, we learn, cost about five francs. Setting a broken leg is, we are informed, put down at $3. Dentistry was paid for at a better rate, seeing that the tariff for removing a tooth was $1.25. This seems a very stiff sum relatively, but there is a reverse to this beautiful medal. If the operation turned out badly, and the patient died, then the unfortunate practitioner had both his hands cut off.

London Pensioners

Of the 69,200 odd in receipt of old-age pensions in London, 61,314 receive the full amount of $1.25; [illegible] 25c.

SAFER!

"You seem to have had a good deal of experience of different kinds," said the hotel guest, as he sipped his nightcap, to the landlord of the little country hotel. "What were you before you took to this sort of life?"

"Well, sir," was the reply, "in me young days I was a lion-tamer in a circus. But then I got married, and me wife she was a knife-thrower in the same show, and she [illegible] some people might have thought a nasty temper. I thought I'd had enough of living a risky life—while ain't too long at the best, as you know, sir—so I took on a safe job, and became a steeplejack!"

YESTERDAY'S DECISION ON PICTURE HOUSES.

Whilst The Times has no animus against any, or all of the moving picture houses, there has most undoubtedly been such a condition. There may or there may not be a panic. The point to consider is this: Suppose you, or more especially your wife or family was in one of these places. Suppose again, one of the films caught fire, and they are almost as inflammable as gun powder, what would be the result? A flash of flame through the hole or window of the operating box, right over the entrance doors. If the lobby, outside the ticket office were crowded, as it often is, and suppose the inside lobby were filled as usual every night, i. e. the space between the entrance doors and the rear of the seats, inside the building, what would be the result? Several hundred people would rise from their seats, see the flame rushing out, above their heads. Which direction would they take? If the crowd, as crowds will, take a unanimous action, they might make for the entrance doors. The crowd in the outside lobby, not knowing of the threatened peril inside, would not budge. Those coming up the aisles would have to contend with the people standing in the space behind the seats inside. This would result in a most terrible holocaust, which would cause crape being hung on scores of local houses.

FREEDOM AND COERCION.

In discussing Mr. Bourassa, The News says that he is strong just now on "British citizenship." When he heard that Mr. Borden would have no school clauses in the Manitoba Boundaries Act he said to The Montreal Herald: "It makes my British blood boil." His claim was that a minority in the District of Keewatin was under oppression, that discrimination aginst it had been shown by the Government, and that because of their race and and creed Roman Catholics were being treated as secondary citizens. This is contrary to British practice, and therefore Mr. Bourassa lifted up his flag and wept.

But the argument is based on a fallacy, that the Federal Government is competent to legislate on education. Under the British North American Act education is the sole care of the Provinces. If a Province has oppressed unduly any minority an appeal lies to the Federal House. Parliament would be insolent to the Provincial authorities if it should assume that future legislation of any Province might require a preliminary "safeguard." The first requirement of British citizenship is respect for the law, and for all contracts and undertakings upon which the law is based.

Mr. Bourassa has urged and still urges the violation of the Canadian Constitution for the benefit of a religious sect. He has taken similar ground in the past. He drafted the drastic school clauses in the proposed Saskatchewan and Alberta Acts which drove Mr. Sifton out of the ranks of official Liberalism and shook the party loyalty of many other members. When these clauses were modified he protested. The opinion of the West was against him, but he pressed for legislation contrary to that opinion and contrary to the law of the land. He was in spirit and in speech a coercionist—a tyrant, who would substitute for the British method of respect for law and trust in the people the iron hand of the autocrat. Mr. Bourassa does not do well to use his British citizenship as a justification for such coercive measures.

THINGS TO KNOW

To poach an egg so that the water does not touch it, put a piece of butter at the bottom of an old teacup, then break in the egg, place the cup in a small saucepanful of boiling water, and in about five minutes the egg will be set. Pass a knife round the sides and slip out on to the toast—this prevents the toast getting damp.

For Watery Potatoes

When potatoes are likely to be watery, cook in the following way: Score the skin with a sharp knife—not too deeply—then boil in salted water. The incisions made let out the water in the potato, and renders it dry and floury when cooked.

Try Grating Your Apples

Line a plate with paste, and then grate in the apples instead of slicing them. This will ensure the fruit being cooked when the paste is done, and it also takes less quantity of apples. Tried with great success.

Snow-White Tables and Boards

If a kitchen table becomes dirty looking, cut a lemon in two and rub it all over the table. Then rinse well with pure, clean water, and the result will be a smooth and snow white top. Pasteboards may be treated in the same way.

Lemon Roly-Poly

Take three-quarters of a pound of flour, six ounces of lard, the juice of one lemon, one teaspoonful of sugar, and one extra teaspoonful of flour. Mix the flour and lard into a smooth paste, and roll it out to the thickness of about half an inch. Squeeze the lemon-juice (strained) into a cup. Stir the teaspoonful of flour and sugar into the juice to make a stiff paste. Spread this mixture over the paste and roll it up, then tie the pudding into a floured cloth. Boil for two hours.

Stewed Chicken

Take a chicken, cut into joints; put into a stewpan two large onions (chopped fine), four tomatoes, some parsley, a little sage, a few bits of bacon cut small, and half a cupful of good stock. Stew gently for two hours. Just before dishing up, add a wineglassful of sherry.

Barley Pudding

Take half a pound of pearl barley, well washed; add one quart of new milk, half a pound of refined sugar, and half a nutmeg, grated; then bake it in a deep dish. Remove it from the oven when half cooked, beat up three eggs, mix well together, pour it into a well-buttered dish, and bake again for nearly an hour.

Fish for an Invalid

Half a saucepanful of water boiling and place a nice cutlet of fish in a soup plate with a tablespoonful of cold water and a nice piece of butter on the top of the cutlet, and cover with another soup plate. Place this over the boiling water and steam gently for twenty minutes. By cooking it this way you have all the nutriment that the fish contains.

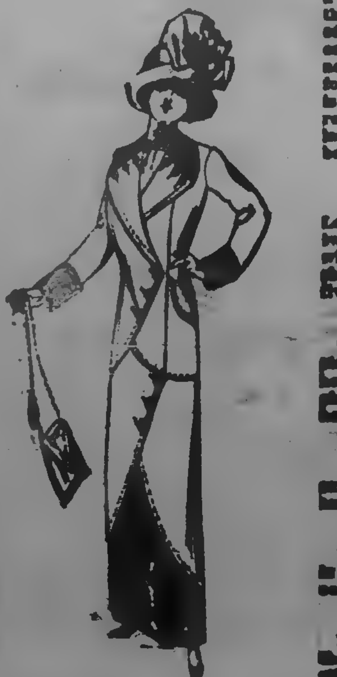
Croquettes of Cheese

Four [illegible] cheese, three ounces of breadcrumbs, one egg, one small onion, pepper, cayenne and salt to taste. Grate cheese, and put in a mortar with the breadcrumbs, minced onion, [illegible]. Pound to a [illegible] egg to moisten [illegible] into little balls, flatten out slightly, dip in frying batter, and cook in boiling fat (which must be smoking [illegible] before they are put in). When a delicate brown, drain well, and pile in a pyramid, garnish, and serve as quickly as possible.

Iced Fruit Cakes

One cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, two cupfuls of flour, four large eggs, one teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat the butter and sugar to a cream; add each egg separately. Mix the flour and baking powder and add to the rest of the ingredients, stirring well. Cut the paste in thick, narrow strips, and cut in rounds, so as to form a deep cuplike shape; place on a well-buttered tin, and bake. When done, fill with iced fruit, prepared as follows: [illegible] rich, ripe peaches (canned or fresh will do), cut in dice, dip in white of egg that has been slightly beaten, and then into pulverized sugar, and fill centre of the cakes. Set in the oven until the meringue is nicely browned. Serve with rich cream and coffee.

VELVET AND BROADCLOTH



Velvet and broadcloth, used together, would make a good suit for between seasons. This model has a distinct style.

KING GEORGE AND FASHIONS

His Majesty Will Not Be Such a Force in Sartorial Affairs as His Father

[illegible] Edward was commonly regarded as the best dressed man in Europe, and so he was accepted as the leader of masculine fashion, not in England alone, but almost everywhere. Take a case in point. It was King Edward who some years ago invented a modification of the ordinary frock coat for summer wear, the fronts of which were so cut away that they would hardly meet across the chest, and were [illegible] together when necessary by [illegible] connecting with a button. [illegible] remembers also that one time, when he was staying at Marienbad, it was noticed that his late Majesty wore a red tie every day, and forthwith all the hosiers in Vienna made a great display of red cravats in their windows, and called them King Edwards. The news was telegraphed to different places; Paris went in for red ties, and later in London also the red tie became a favorite, but not to the same etxent as on the Continent.

It was King Edward, too, who first popularized the white vest-slip; for if he was not the very first man to wear it in England, he was the first who was noticed to do so, and then the future of the new slip was no longer in doubt. But here it might be said that as a general thing the King discarded it long before his death. In some other matters of dress, involving possibly a great upheaval in established custom, his late Majesty was very cautious lest by example he should influence the men of his country towards a new fashion which might not be altogether to their liking and cause much inconvenience. It was not until he saw that the [illegible] collar, which has now been so popular for many years, had become thoroughly established, that he took it himself, and so set the seal upon it. If he had never done so, it is quite likely that, despite the excellent start that it gained, it would not have survived as it did.

Besides uniforms, he had about 200 suits at Windsor castle, Buckingham Palace, and Sandringham; and it was certainly the fact that he had a larger wardrobe than any other monarch in the world, and it might very well have been that, with one kind and another he had more suits than any other man alive.

It is hardly likely that King George will be quite so much of a force in sartorial [illegible] as was his royal father, for the [illegible] reason that he does not think so much of dress, and is strongly [illegible] to be quite conventional in his attitude towards it: but one must hasten to add that, of course, His Majesty takes the utmost care at all times to be strictly correct in every detail, and [illegible] taste, while careful in its sobriety, [illegible] perfect. His Majesty is not [illegible] to take advan[illegible] [illegible] End will [illegible] his appearances with rather less [illegible], not to say, anxiety, than did those of the first gentleman [illegible] reign. He has, of course [illegible] variety of clothes for town wear, [illegible] kind for the most part being [illegible] repeated; while for country [illegible] especially on the sporting [illegible] wardrobe is perhaps quite [illegible] of that of the late King. As is well known, however, His Majesty is [illegible] keen sportsman in those pursuits which involve wandering over [illegible] and hills with a gun in his hand and he displays more interest in [illegible] selection of his shooting suits than he does perhaps in any others; [illegible] may be added, as an interesting [illegible] pleasing circumstance, that he always exercises the utmost effort towards giving help to home industries in the matter of the cloths he selects, most of them being in the nature of [illegible] tweeds.

Then, as befits his strong naval interests and training, he has probably more naval uniforms than any other man. Indeed, the Kaiser is the only ruler who emulates him in this matter; for not only have these monarchs a very large wardrobe of uniforms for the naval and other maritime purposes of their own country, but each holds complimentary naval rank in foreign navies, and has complete sets of uniforms accordingly. Also, King George is honorary colonel in many foreign regiments, in addition to holding similar rank in several of our own.—Chambers' Journal.

GOOD COOK BETTER THAN DOZEN DOCTORS

The Secret of Health, Wealth and Happiness is Concealed in the Pots and Pans of the Kitchen.

"The secret of health, wealth, and happiness is concealed in the pots and pans and kitchen ranges of the humblest flat. One poor cook makes one bad stomach; one bad stomach makes one cranky husband; one cranky husband makes the family sick; ten poor cooks make the doctor rich—and, on the other hand, one good cook can do more real good than a dozen doctors." This excerpt from his culinary arithmetic was the climax of the address of Charles Laparque, imported chef, before the Chicago School of Domestic Science. "It is easy, ladies," he continued. "Study cooking and practice it and the doctors will go out of business. Don't be frightened by the menus you see in cafes. Make the dishes yourselves; they are all easy."

THE USES OF DRIPPING

With the price of butter continuing to soar, it [illegible] behooves the household economist to inquire into the possibilities of substitutes. For making cookies, Johnny cake or almost anything [illegible] make you may use one-quarter of the butter your recipe calls for and the other three-quarters [illegible] kept in [illegible] good condition, beef [illegible] doughnuts or anything else that requires deep fat use one-half lard and one-half dripping. Keep a tin especially for this mixture, which can be poured back into it, through a cheesecloth, after each using. For potatoes and other foods fried on a griddle dripping is just as good as butter. Bacon fat is excellent for frying fish or veal.

All dripping should be strained through cheesecloth and kept in a warm place [illegible] not on any account let it get chilled. This is particularly important with beef dripping, which very easily becomes tallowy and rancid. Pork dripping keeps very well and is the best of all. Lamb dripping is good for nothing but soap. In fact the fat from soups or from any other cooking may be saved for this purpose and the soap recipes accompanying packages of the best brands of lye will be found quite satisfactory.

If you have butter which has become strong work soda into it, half a teaspoonful to a pound, and used with an equal quantity of lard. It is excellent for pie crust.

When making baked or boiled custard, the milk to be used should be scalded and set aside to cool. Then make the custard in the ordinary way, and it will be perfctly smooth.

SPORT ON THE UPGRADE

Englishmen Are Distinguishing Themselves on Many Fields

The Daily Mail says editorially: "The warmest congratulations of all lovers of cricket will go out to the M.C.C. team for their notable victory over the Australians by an innings and 225 runs in the fourth test match at Melbourne. As the second and third matches had fallen to England by 5 wickets and 7 wickets respectively, the [illegible] won the rubber and so recovered possession of the mythical "Ashes" lost to the Australians in 1909. The achievement of the Englishmen is a remarkable one in every way since Mr. Warner, the captain, fell ill before the first test match and has been unable to take part in any of them. The trying duties of captaincy thus devolved on Mr. Douglas, the Essex amateur, who had had no previous experience of test match cricket or of the game in Australia. Mr. Douglas is to be congratulated warmly on his success. After Australia had won the first test match by 146 runs, the Englishmen never looked back, but defeated their formidable opponents by very large margins. To Hobbs especially is a tribute of admiration due, for in three successive test matches he has topped the much-coveted "century" and done a lion's share in winning the rubber. Rhodes, too, has given of his best, while the performances of Mr. Foster, Barnes and Mr. Douglas in dismissing Australian batsmen, are likely to be long remembered among the notable achievements in international cricket. Such a happy outcome of the tour is all the more welcome as the team that was sent out to Australia was regarded as an experimental one, most of the players being inexperienced in test match cricket.

Nor is it in cricket alone that English sport is on the up-grade. The English Rugby fifteen at Twickenham disposed of Ireland with unexpected ease and won the game with five tries to nothing. In the opinion of the best judges, such a pack of forwards as England possesses has rarely been seen before. Another feat accomplished was at Dublin, where the English association eleven quite overran the Irish team and scored 6 goals to 1. Thus, in the year 1912, England stands to carry off the rugby championship, they are gringing the "Ashes" back from Australia, and they promise to start first favorite in the great triangular cricket turnament.

MOTORED ON ICE

Kulick Travelled at Rate of 109 Miles An Hour.

Frank Kulick, traveled over the frozen surface of Lake St. Clair recently at a rate of 109 miles an hour, covering one mile in 33 2-5 seconds. The mark set a new record for an automobile speed contest on ice, the former mark being held by Henry Ford, who, nine years ago, drove a mile at 39 4-5 seconds over practically the same course. Kulick twice broke the former record. The first time he went over the course he carried his mechanician with him and his time was 34 4-5 seconds. On his second attempt he went the distance alone and succeeded in [illegible] seconds. The conditions for Kulick's try for the record were not bad, but they could have been better. The lake was covered with almost a foot of snow and this had to be scraped off for a distance of almost two miles in order to allow for a flying start and to give room at the finish for stopping. The ice, being uncovered, was rough, and although the little machine was let out to the limit by Kulick the speed was somewhat retarded by the bumps in the ice. Kulick was fairly flying when he had his machine opened up at top speed. When the machine passed the spectators it was hardly visible. At times the slightest raise in the ice would send the machine into the air and it sped on with all four wheels in the air.

AUSTRALASIAN WONDER

A letter from Australia says that athletes from wherever they hail will have tough nuts to crack at the Olympic games in members of the team from the land of the cornstalks. One of the bright particular stars will be G. N. Hill, a youth from Auckland, N. Z., who at the recently held tenth biennial Australasian amateur championship games paralysed the onlookers with his performances in the distance races, against a gale of wind for the last furlong, and the 3-mile in 15 min. 28⅘ sec., on a heavy track. On Wednesday he won a two-mile handicap from scratch, making a horrible gap in the field. The clocks recorded 9 min. 30 sec., which time upsets A. A. Shrubb's record of 9 min. 33 3-5 sec., established in N. S. W. in 1905, and the M. L. record of 9 min. 42 1-5 sec., by W. F. Simpson. Shrubb's world record, however, is 9 min. 9 3-5 sec., done at Glasgow, June 11, 1904.

LITTLE PARISENNE

Helene April draws a charming picture of a day in the life of the little Parisienne. It is a cold morning in February, dull and chilly. Out of doors passers-by hurry along wrapped and miserable looking. Simonne wakens early in her warm little bed, and as soon as she opens her eyes she smiles at the thought of the happiness that is in store for her. This is the day on which she has been invited to a children's party at the home of her little friend Jeanne, and they are going to have such fun. The night before the dressmaker sent her the dress specially made for the part. It is a "robe fourreau," in dark green velvet, which makes her look ever so tall. In a few hours everybody will be admiring her at Jeanne's house; her little friends first, but perhaps also their big brothers. In Simonne's heart is already awakened the desire to please "ces messieurs," the oldest of whom is not yet sixteen years of age.

While her little brain is still excited at the thought of what the day is destined to bring her, Simonne's mother enters to give her the usual good-morning kiss. She bends over the bed, puts her arm under the frail body, which clings to her with affection, and mother and daughter pass a delightful moment.

But eight o'clock strikes. "Vite, Monette, levons nous." You will amuse yourself this afternoon, but this morning we must work hard. The French teacher will be hear shortly. Are you quite ready with your lessons? Simonne hesitates to reply. Trying on her new dress last night kept her busy with her lessons, and she has not had time to go over her grammar again. She hurries, however, and dressing does not take her long this morning. Five minutes to swallow her chocolate—then there is a ring at the bell. It is mademoiselle. Already? and Simonne has not even looked at the second page, which she does not know at all. She runs to meet her teacher, throws her arms around her neck, and kisses her. "Oh, ma petite mademoiselle," she exclaims. "If you knew how delighted I am. This afternoon I am invited chez Jeanne. Mamma has had a new dress made for me, and we are going to have lots of fun."

Mademoiselle is used to these effusions. With both hands she takes the girl's head between hers and gives her a long maternal kiss on the forehead. Her pupils are almost as dear to her as if they were her own children. Simonne knows it well, the sly little minx. Now she feels is the moment to admit that she does not know her lessons very well. Mademoiselle does not scold her, but improves the occasion to give her some wise council.

Mademoiselle does not like vain and coquettish little girls, and their beautiful dresses leave her absolutely indifferent, but she draws a pleasing portrait of simple good-hearted children, and makes it so attractive that little Simonne feels a wee bit ashamed of the sentiments that agitated her shortly before.

Two o'clock! If anything were needed to add to Simonne's happiness, it is provided in the auto that whisks her to Jeanne's house, where nearly all the other children have arrived and are [illegible] in the hall. In a [illegible] they are [illegible] over the [illegible] a picture book are a little boy and his sister who seem out of place in these surroundings. The boy is thirteen years of age, his sister eleven or twelve. No one takes any notice of them. Simonne asks Jeanne who they are.

"Oh," replied Jeanne, "they are the children of a post-mistress mamma knows. She invited them so that they might have an opportunity of amusing themselves—a thing that does not happen often. But I am sure they will be rather bored here, for no one knows them. Have you noticed the girl's dress. It must have been her mother who made it; it is not elegant. And anyone can see that the boy's suit is ready-made."

Simonne stood thinking for a while. These little ones "whom no one knew" interested her. She remembered what mademoiselle had told her in the morning, and found that they resembled in an astonishing manner the portrait of the little ones whose greatest charm was their simplicity. Her heart was stirred. It was true that they were not very fashionably dressed, but a generous movement sent her to their side. Might she sit by them and look at the pictures. In a few moments all three were chattering away as if they had known each other for years. Their laughter soon brought the other children around them. They joined in the games they organized and during the whole afternoon they amused themselves with a heartiness that made Simonne very pleased. She forgot all about her beautiful dress. Besides, other girls were as well dressed as she, so it was not really worth while to make any fuss about her dress, even if it was a "robe fourreau." What a delightful afternoon she had had, making two other children happy, who, but for her, would have been left out in the cold. She would be sure to tell mademoiselle how she had carried her lesson into practice.

Night Constable:—"I don't know. I haven't seen her this seven years."

Night Constable:—"Yes; but she's a charwoman and is out all day, and I'm out on duty all night, so we haven't met since we settled after our honeymoon."

MUST BE CLEVER

"She will be a clever woman that I marry" declared a confirmed bachelor, who was being chaffed on the subject.

"Thought you didn't like these clever women," said a friend.

"I don't," rejoined the bachelor, "But if ever I marry, it'll be a clever woman who does it."

LUNACY STATISTICS

Interesting Figures of the British Commissioners—Unemployment as a Cause of Insanity

Some figures of interest to life insurance are contained in the sixty-fifth report of the British Commissioners on Lunacy. Their returns show that alcohol is responsible for about 16 per cent. of the cases reported, while 20 per cent. were traced to unemployment. One of the commissioners thinks that lunacy will be largely lessened directly some method is found of increasing the general prosperity of Great Britain.

It is pointed out in the commissioners' report that in 9.6 per cent. of the cases has mental stress alone been the assignable cause of attack, though it is also explained that prolonged mental strain has been associated with nearly every other assignable factor in the category of causes. In confirmation of the assertion that insanity is an hereditary disease, the report states that:—

"Our statistics show—and since their introduction, upwards of fifty years ago, have shown—that there is a family history of insanity in persons admitted to asylum care amounting, on an average, in the case of males, to 19 per cent. and of females to 23 per cent., of the total yearly admissions. This is probably an under-estimate, for there is always a considerable residuum concerning whom it is impossible to obtain positive information on this point."

But the report states that to ignore the factor of inheritance because three times the number of insane apparently come of sane stock would be unwarrantable. It is gratifying to note, further, that [illegible]

At marriageable ages—twenty-five and upwards—the proportion of the unmarried of both sexes is considerably higher amongst the insane than it is in the general population, and to a slighter extent also in the widowed. Considerably more single than married or widowed persons were admitted to care.

It also appears from the report that the proportions of the sexes certified yearly as insane are exactly the same, so far as relation to the number of persons in the country is concerned. There are, it is well known, more females than males in the country, and the estimated proportion per 1,000 in the general population for the middle of 1910 are males, 482.8; females, 517.2.

The proportions amongst the insane annually admitted to care are practically identical: males, 484.0; females, 516.0. Concerning readmissions to care, it is stated that they form from 17 to 18 per cent. of the total admissions, and may be considered to consist mainly of those who, in previous years, have been discharged as "relieved" or "not improved," and also of patients who, having left an asylum "recovered," are admitted with a recurrent attack. So far as asylum statistics go, the proportion of such occurrences is about one-fourth of those originally discharged as "recovered."

THE USEFUL CEDAR

Used by Indians for Everything

The Indians made much use of Western red cedar before white men became acquainted with the region in which it grew. From it they obtained food, clothing, shelter, means of transportation and apparatus for fishing and the chase. From the tree trunks the savages made canoes of all sizes, from the small trough that carried two men to the enormous dugouts that transported fifty or more upon long expeditions in war and peace. Before the Indians obtained metal tools from white traders they hollowed their canoes with fire and with their primitive stone and bone implements. Some of their dugouts are of enormous size, hewed from single trunks, and with lines so perfect that civilized men can scarcely suggest improvement. The making of a canoe of moderate size, by the crude means at the Indians' command in the early days, required several months of hard labor with flint adzes that chipped away pieces of wood not much larger than grains of sawdust.

The Indians of the region where western red cedar abounded generally chose it for such carpentry as they were capable of doing. Their choice was due to the softness of the wood, which meant a great deal to beams and doors with no better tools than fire, flint, bone and shell. They made fully as much use of the bark as of the wood. With it they roofed, ceiled, floored, and papered their huts. They wove long strips of bark—sometimes thirty feet in length—into mats, which they used for beds, tables, blankets, and on ceremonial occasions. They made clothing of the same material. They twisted the bark into ropes for dog harness, ladders, fishlines and snares for wild animals and nets for catching fish. The list of uses for the bark did not end there, for they were able to make food of it. They beat the bark to a pulp, baked in cakes, and after completely saturating it with salmon oil they pronounced it a palatable and nutritious article of diet. It is believed, however, that the food value of the cakes was derived more from the fish oil than from the bark.—Agricultural Report.

Venerable Warsaw Couple.

On Tuesday, Mr. and Mrs. John Sanders of the village of Warsaw, celebrated their 60th anniversary of their marriage. Whilst such an event is seldom in evidence the anniversary was marked with little display. A few friends were asked at a quilting bee. The combined ages of Mr. and Mrs. Sanders amount to 167 years. They were married at Evesham, Worcestershire, England, and came to Canada in 1874.

East City Wants Better Facilities.

The good citizens of East City seem to have some cause for complaint. Their representatives at the indignation meeting held Tuesday evening, stated that the lack of bridge communication retards the growth of that part of the city. Now that the C.P.R. has withdrawn the privilege the East City residents used to have, of crossing their bridge hundreds of employees, in the south part of the city have to make a long detour to get to work.

To Look After the Boys.

At an inaugural meeting held in the Y.M.C.A., to find why boys do not attend Sunday school, a committee was formed to investigate composed of Mr. S. Keyes, Mr. John Lang and Mr. John Edgar. They meet on Saturday, and on Tuesday nights will hold a meeting at the Y.M.C.A. with the Sunday school superintendents of the city. The committee will divide the city into districts and will determine the number of men required to take the census.

To Help St. Joseph's Hospital.

On Friday evening a special meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of St. Joseph's Hospital (Mrs. N. T. La-Plante, president, Mrs. J. B. Dunn, hon. President), will be held in the Ladies' Parlour of St. Alphonsus' Lyceum, Simcoe street. The chief function or duty of the Auxiliary is to provide minor equipment for the hospital—linen bandages, etc., etc. The funds for this purpose result from the membership fees of $1.00 per year, so that necessarily the larger the membership the larger the Auxiliary fund. St. Joseph's hospital is maintained entirely by voluntary contributions, apart from the usual Government grant.

While You Work and While You Sleep

Wage earners make money only while they work. My lot buyers and gardeners make money while they sleep. Those who have bought from me during the past four years have made by increasing value of lots, more than 50 per cent. per annum on the amount invested. And they are worth from $200 to $1200 to-day, because of having wisely imposed a "must" upon themselves to save a little of what they earned. Come in and let us show you a very easy way to do the same.

Gardens: I know one man who planted 1 acre of onions, and sold his crop for $800 cash. Was this not making money while he slept? We can supply a few acres ploughed to men who would wish to do likewise. Also a larger place with good buildings and orchards suitable for gardens, and a large poultry plant. Immediate possession. Decide at once and call for particulars.

Steamboat Conditions in Lindsay.

Lindsay Warder: Supt. A. J. McClellan, F. Fairen and E. H. Bartlett, Trent Valley Canal officers, were in town to-day looking over the Government dredge and accompanying boats which have been tied up at the local wharf during the winter. Everything was found to be in excellent order, the boats having wintered well. In conversation with one of the above gentlemen it was stated that five men would be started to work on the dredge tomorrow to overhaul and make improvements, and prepare the dredge for the summer's work. Considerable dredging will be done in Lindsay this summer, and the Scugog channel will be made a proper depth as well as cleaned out. Largely through the instrumentality of Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, other improvements will follow, including the building of a new wharf.

Presentation to Mr. R. Mann.

On Tuesday night, Mr. R. Mann was honored at his boarding house, when Mrs. Bickle and her other roomers presented him with a silver shaving set. Mr. Mann, who has been overseer of the finishing department at Auburn Mills, is leaving for the West to rejoin his wife and daughter, near Grand Forks, Dakota. He has sons in business there. The evening was one of merriment, a regular Scotch banquet being held. In response to the presentation, Mr. Mann said:

My dear friends and Mrs. Bickle—I can assure you all that this is a great surprise to me. I never expected anything like this, and it is really too much. I cannot do more than thank you one and all for this beautiful present, and also the "guid auld Scotch" sentiment, expressed in your address. I can again assure you I take this with me, that I never will forget the ten months I have spent with you all. In fact barring the absence of my wife and family, it has been one of the happiest times of my life, and now I would ask you all to join with me in singing Auld Lang Syne, and now I'll bid you all good-bye.

A GOOD WORK BEGUN

What the Standard of Empire, London, England, Says of the Imperial Home Re-Union Association Work Now Being Started in Peterborough.

"This is the kind of work which, more perhaps than any other, deserves the description of Empire-building. This is true patriotism of the most practical and productive order.

"The men who became the guarantors of the fund for assisting British workmen were not moved by desire for gain or a yearning for limelight. They simply wished to be of genuine assistance to their fellowmen. Their ambition, at the highest, was the unselfish aim of strengthening the bonds of Empire by getting the biggest possible infusion of British blood into the population of Winnipeg. To this end, the gentlemen who make up the list of guarantors not only back the scheme financially, but a number of them, selected to act as an advisory board, give time and attention to holding meetings, at which applications are presented and acted upon.

"Within the field of its operations the Imperial Home Re-Union Association strengthens and tightens the bonds of Empire, and draws old country born and Canadian born citizens closer together; gives them a better understanding of each other, and sets up that cordial relationship that should exist between the newcomers and the home people of this great land of opportunity, this home of promises, which are more nearly kept than those of any other land on earth."

question that I consider is a very vital and important one, and that is, the housing of these English emigrants and their families when you get them here.

I maintain strongly that to get emigrants of the right sort here is only half the problem. When they reach here they want and expect to find, houses to live in, and here it seems to me, arises a need that must be faced. Have we in Peterborough enough houses, at a rental suitable to the purses of the emigrants when they reach here and start to work? We know the average wage of the mechanic and the laborer, and we know also the right proportion of those wages which should be devoted to rent. I say there is certainly not near enough of the class of houses here, at a rental to suit the wages of the emigrants who come here to work and live, and further to make any scheme for assisting English emigrants to come here with their wives and families complete, this problem of providing suitable dwellings at a reasonable rent, must be met and solved in a businesslike way.

I am not a builder, nor do I know anything of the cost of erecting houses but I submit that houses could be built and made to pay well, to suit the needs of the workers, at a rental of from $7 to $8 per month. I think the city or the Board of Trade should take this matter up in earnest. The Board of Trade is composed of our leading business and professional men, and amongst them they could devise a scheme that would ensure to the English emigrants, when they arrive here, suitable houses for them to live in, at a rental suited to their earnings, and that this scheme could be made to pay.

In advertising itself in England as a good city for emigrants to come to, Peterborough could show many advantages, and if a scheme for the object I suggest were carried out, one of the chief attractions to the emigrant would be, the certainty of suitable homes at a reasonable rent, and that would go a long way in inducing emigrants of the right stamp, to locate here, and thus help to make our city prosperous, in the best sense of the word. I humbly submit this to those who are interested in, and sympathize with the movement, as so ably outlined by Mr. Johns.

THE EYE LIKE A CAMERA.

The eye is constructed so wonderfully and ingeniously that the handicraft of man has not as yet been able to construct so delicate an instrument. It is like a camera—the lens to focus, the lid as a shutter, the iris or color as the diaphragm, the thick coatings of the eye-ball as the dark room, the nerve as the sensitive plate, and strange as it may seem, the images are bottom side up exactly as the image in the camera. Now so delicate and sensitive an instrument as the eye should have good care. Let us explain more fully to you how to care for the eyes.

WOMAN KNOCKED UNCONSCIOUS

S. H. BLAKE'S VIEWS

WOMAN STRUCK BY AN AUTO IS TAKEN TO THE HOSPITAL

Toronto, Mar. 28.—So badly injured that her recovery is deemed unlikely, Mrs. May Hayden, 42 years of age, a widow living at 15 Denison avenue, is in St. Michael's Hospital as the result of being struck by an automobile at University avenue and Queen street at 7.40 this morning, while Joseph Rednor, 2 Cumberland street, the driver of the car, is under arrest.

Going at High Speed.

An eye witness of the occurrence stated that the automobile was coming south on University at a great speed. There were four men in the car, which attracted his attention, owing to the erratic course steered by the driver.

It approached Queen street without any slackening of speed and without any warning from the horn, and swerved west, Mrs. Hayden had just stepped off the sidewalk at Queen street on the north side of University, when without the slighest warning, the swift moving car crashed into her, hurling her fifteen feet to the centre of the street.

Companions Escaped.

The car proceeded west as far as Simcoe street, where the driver halted and endeavored to turn his machine. When he returned a crowd gathered around both him and his prostrate victim.

In the confusion the three companions of Rednor, who were with him in the car, got away. Rednor approached the unfortunate woman and dismounting from his car, asked the assistance of another man to place her in the automobile.

The request was complied with and the two men with the injured woman started east on Queen street for St. Michael's Hospital.

Up to this time Mrs. Hayden had been unconscious, but recalled to her senses by the motion of the speeding car, she uttered shriek after shriek in her agony.

Seriously Hurt.

The woman was placed on the operating table. There it was found that her right arm was broken, her skull fractured and in addition internal injuries are feared.

HON. S. H. BLAKE DECLARES THAT ABOLITION OF BAR WILL DO GOOD

Toronto, Mar. 28.—Hon. S. H. Blake, when asked for his views on the new Liberal platform and the plank therein which calls for the abolition of the bars throughout the Province, said:

"I feel that this is a most important question," he continued, "but the more I consider it over, the more perplexed I am as to what should be the answer to it.

"If one was satisfied that the abolition of the bar would end the degrading system of treating, then it would be well to pass such resolution as would give this splendid result; but is there any sufficient reason for considering that it would have this effect?

Question of Compensation.

"If it is proper to abolish treating then deal directly with the matter, and make an offence against the person who gives or receives the treat. If it is thought well to strike at the root of the evil, then do so, and don't flirt with the branches.

Is not this a matter which peculiarly calls for a most carefully thoughtout system which will deal with the question of granting or refusing compensation, and not so deal with the matter that in attempting to close one door others will be widely thrown open and largely used to replace the one that has been apparently blocked.

I believe that this matter should be taken out of the political arena, and that the whole subject should be so dealt with that it is apparent that what is proposed will really abate the nuisance, and that the machinery suggested will so approve itself to the public generally that the citizens will be educated fully to the thought that it is as great a disgrace to be guilty of a breach of the liquor laws of the land as those which are passed against theft, arson or the like.

Silence of the Church.

"I must be allowed to say that to me it is a matter of deep humiliation that the voice of the Church is unheard in regard to the moral questions which are to-day agitating the world.

"Take the question of drink, the question of strikes, the [illegible] generally of dishonesty in mercantile transactions, whether in Cobalt, [illegible] cities, or our rural districts, the question of immorality, etc."

USED HIS SHOTGUN ON A DETECTIVE

Louisville, Miss., Mar. 29.—While seated at the supper table at the home of Elbert Vowell, a farmer living 16 miles from this place, a detective named Ben. Walker, who figured in the Permenter case in the courts recently, was assassinated Wednesday night by parties who have so far escaped detection. He received a full load from a shotgun in his body and fell from his chair in a heap, being virtually riddled.

Walker figured in the employ of the defense in the Permenter case. Rhen that young man was called for trial for the murder of Miss Jane Sharp, producing evidence that went toward implicating others, including a man named McElroy.

PATRIOTIC MEETING OF 57TH CHAPTER

One good patriotic cause was inaugurated over a truly patriotic idea, and that occurred in the Armouries recreation room, when the 57th Regiment Chapter Imperial Order met. This meeting was quite informal and for the purpose of working up an interest in the order and explaining its objects. Mrs. (Col.) Clegg occupied the chair. There were about forty members present. All those in attendance seemed to take a great and active interest in the future of the Chapter. Mrs. V. Eastwood, the secretary of the Chapter is an ardent enthusiast over the good to be accomplished by the Association. The objects of the Chapter were fully explained to those present. They include among other matters: The visiting and administering assistance to sick or distressed members of the regiment and their families; the placing of flags on Decoration Day on the graves of deceased members of the 57th; to try and inculcate a spirit of patriotism among both old and young. In this latter connection special attention will be paid to breeding a spirit of patriotism among the younger generation. A veneration for the Old Flag will be preached and the meaning of its emblem explained. Taken, all in all, few meetings have been held in Peterborough where a more general display of practical patriotism and loyalty were exhibited.

WHITE SLAVE WITNESS TO GO TO SAN FRANCISCO

New Orleans, La., March 28.—William McGee, a sack maker, 511 St. Louis street, was taken into custody to-day by Deputy Marshal Pecot as a witness in a San Francisco white slavery case, and shortly afterwards he was on the train en route for the California city. He will testify in the trial of Sam Postell, a former resident of New Orleans, who is held on a white slavery charge to be tried Monday in the United States District Court of San Francisco.

The arrest was requested by the United States district attorney of San Francisco. Instructions were also issued to United States Marshal Victor Loisel to defray all expenses for the transfer of McGee on the long trip to the Pacific coast.

POPULATION IN IRELAND GROWS

Shows an Increase in Spite of the Drain Caused by Emigration

HOME RULE NOT CERTAIN

Will Be Impossible for England to Grant Ireland What the Nationalists Demand—Hence There Will be No Peace or Harmony—Control of Customs the Crucial Question.

Dublin, March 28.

THE optimistic statements regarding the Home Rule bill are not warranted by facts. There is no chance of the Asquith government granting the terms that Redmond, Dillon, and the other leading Nationalists demand, which practically means the nationalizing of Ireland. The English people would not stand for any such demand, and no government could live twenty-four hours that made any such terms. It is an open secret that the real object of the Nationalists is to secure complete independence of Ireland.

Population Growing.

Ireland's population is at last growing. The Redmondites claim that this is a result of the practical certainty of home rule and is an earnest of what is to come when Ireland really does govern herself.

During the quarter ended December 31st last there were registered in the 827 registrars' districts 22,875 births—a number equal to an annual birth rate of 21.9 in every 1000 of the estimated population—and 17,025 deaths, representing an annual rate of 15.6 per 1000. In the same period (according to the returns obtained by the Royal Irish constabulary and the metropolitan police, who acted as enumerators at the several seaports) 4791 persons emigrated. As the births exceeded the deaths by 6850, there is a gain of 2,[illegible] rate for the quarter was 0.2 below the average for the corresponding quarter of the ten years 1901-1910, and 0.1 below the rate for the fourth quarter of 1910.

A Respected Figure.

By the death of Patrick Malone at his residence, Barrow house, Queen's county, an interesting and much respected figure passed away. He was born in June, 1817, and thus lived under six British monarchs, one of whom occupied the throne for sixty years. Deceased attained the age of 94 years, and died in the residence where he was born, and which had been in the occupation of his family since 1640. He lived the quiet, uneventful life of an Irish farmer, and for the past 25 years enjoyed the happiness of owning the holding which his family have occupied so long.

CELEBRATED CHEMIST INSULTS DRUGGISTS

Washington, March 29.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, appearing Thursday as a private citizen before the pure food committee in advocacy of regulations guarding strictly the uses and sale of opium, morphine, cocaine and other habit forming drugs, aroused the anger of drug representatives by referring to them as "dopers."

HAIR RATS SAVE GIRL FROM BURGLARS BLOW

New York, March 29.—The resistance to shock offered by the "rats" in the coiffure of Lillian Seimberg, an 18-year-old East New York girl, probably accounts for her being alive to tell how she captured a burglar to-day.

A two-foot "jimmy," wielded by the intruder, broke the girl's hold upon the man, after she had pulled him back from the fire escape by the legs. But though the blow stunned her, the substantial coiffure so mitigated the shock that she soon recovered her senses and gave an alarm, which resulted in the arrest of a man. He said he was David Miller, but refused to give an address. He was held in $1000 bail.

THE PRICE OF COAL.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I have seen, in both your bright daily sheet, and in the evening papers, a good many articles about the price of coal. I see, by both the local and the Toronto papers, that practically no hard coal is being shipped to Canada. I am not in the coal business and have no interest in such line of trade. The papers all seem glad to get a crack at the "Coal Barons" or "Coal Magnates." Now right is right. The coal dealers of Peterborough realize as could any other citizen that a coal famine is threatened. Those dealers, naturally have more or less coal on hand. If they were the hogs the papers try to describe them, here is their golden opportunity to make a killing. They did not take this advantage, however. I think it's about time the papers stopped roasting the coal merchants.

MOVING PICTURE HOUSES.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I happened to be in the Police Court on Monday and heard the evidence in the trial of the three moving picture houses of this city. I am a regular attendant at these places. I can say, however, that a grave danger exists. Any sensible man or woman can realize that, should an alarm of fire be raised, there would be a panic. Without any animus against all or any of the picture houses, there is no gainsaying the fact that a panic would follow. What would be the result? Now, in at least two of such places here, the fire would most likely start in the operating box, right over the entrance door. People in a panic, do not stop to think. They simply rush for what the moment's impulse suggests safety. This means that half of them would rush towards the front doors and the remainder towards the rear exits. Should the front entrance or entrances be crowded with people waiting for seats, how could they get out? Again, those seeking safety, by the rear entrance, how could they get away. Why, simply by climbing a narrow flight of stairs to a narrow door. It is all very well, whilst all is well, to look at the entrances and the exits. The real thing to consider is, what could be done with a frightened crowd in case of a panic? That is the whole thing. Now is it right that because three or four men want to sell so many tickets every day, that hundreds of human lives should be put in danger of a catastrophe? Let the motion picture men fill their houses, but, let them stop selling as soon as the seats are filled. If they cannot make money under such conditions, they had better retire and resume some other trade or profession.

FRENCH CANADIAN MEMBERS ARE PLEASED WITH MERCHANTS REPORT

Toronto, Mar. 28.—The caucus of Conservative members in the Legislature this morning dealt with one subject: Bi-lingual schools.

What should be done in the face of the Merchant report and the conditions it exposed in certain of the schools was debated for exactly two hours, from 10.45 to 12.45.

One of the French-Canadian members who was present, came from the room laughing heartily. He expressed himself as having agreed with the sentiment of the caucus.

Sir James Whitney, Hon. Dr. Pyne Hon. Dr. Reaume, Hon. J. W. Hanna and others of the Cabinet were present, and several of them took a part in the discussion.

As the meeting confined itself principally to the bi-lingual question, more than two dozen speakers contributed their views, and the applause was noticeably hearty from beginning to end of the caucus.

Carry Out Recommendations.

It is understood that as a result of the conference, the Government's course was fully determined. This in turn is believed on good authority to be simply an arrangement to have Dr. Merchant's recommendations carried out, which would mean the retention of English-French or bi-lingual schools, but under a radically improved system of inspection arrangements may be made to limit the teaching of French to the first year.

Another on Temperance.

Although many of the members believed that the temperance question might be the main subject of discussion before the caucus, it was as a matter of fact scarcely touched on, but will be taken up before another caucus to be held before the end of the session.

TREES FOR KING EDWARD PARK WILL COST $208

THIS INCLUDES PLANTING OF SAME.

Mr. Frank Wise Awarded the Contract for Above—Plumbing Inspector's Annual Report Received—J. Girven Secures the Market Tolls—Toronto Sunday World to Publish Pictures of Peterborough and Officials—Hog Pens Must Be Removed From the Market Square.

The City's Property Committee met last night with Chairman Ald. Geo. Duncan presiding. There were also present Mayor W. H. Bradburn, Aldermen Graham, Morgan and Brown.

Tenders for Market Tolls.

The following tenders for Market tolls were received:

From Walter Fisher, offering $851 for the tolls. J. Girven, the present Market Clerk, tendered at $860.

On motion of Aldermen Morgan and Graham, the tender of Mr. Girven was accepted.

Ald. Duncan contended that this year the Market Arcade must be kept in a cleaner condition and the building at a more equitable temperature than last year.

Regarding the question of removing the hog pens on the Market Square, Ald. Brown offered that it would be necessary to retain one pen in which to run a few cattle in on occasions. But the pen privilege had been heretofore sadly abused.

Ald. Morgan replied that even were one pen retained its privilege would be abused.

Ald. Brown suggested that the one pen be kept for cattle alone, which animals are difficult to handle while being weighed unless a pen is available in which to run them. This would be an accommodation for farmers. Hogs can be handled quite handily without a pen.

To Remove Hog Pens.

Moved by Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Graham,—That all the pens on the Market be removed.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Graham, seconded by Ald. Brown,—That the market scales be renovated as soon as possible, refrost the front windows of the City Clerk's office, and furnish the windows of the assessor's office with blinds.—Carried.

Trees for Park.

The following tenders for trees for the King Edward Park were opened: John Best, city—For trees alone, $158; for trees and planting same, $170.

J. A. Peters—For trees alone, $240; for trees and planting same, $275.

B. T. Welch—For trees alone $162.95; for planting same $47.36 additional.

Frank Wise, city—For trees, $168; for planting, $40 additional.

H. A. Parker—For trees and planting same, $190.45, providing the city sends a man to assist in planting.

On motion of Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Graham, the tender of Mr. F. Wise for supplying and planting the trees, at a total cost of $208, was accepted, the trees to be planted under the chairman's supervision.

The matter of taking down and disposing of the old fence around new addition to King Edward Park was left in the hands of the chairman.

The new addition to King Edward Park will also be ploughed up and leveled.

To Photograph Alderman and Others

A photographer for the Toronto Sunday World will to-day take pictures of the Mayor and Aldermen, Fire Brigade, some of the schools, and the C.G.E. Works, when employees are leaving at noon, for publication.

Plumbing Inspector's Report.

Plumbing Inspector Thompson reported that during the past year he had made 151 tests of plumbing work including 10 smoke tests, and had also made 579 visits.

On motion of Aldermen Graham and Brown, this report was received and will be furnished to the Council. The Inspector will be instructed to report on the blank forms furnished him, to the Property Committee every month.

MACKAY WILL PRESS QUESTION AS TO THE BI-LINGUAL SCHOOLS

Toronto, Mar. 28.—A discussion of an unusual character in the Legislature is promised by a resolution of which Hon. A. G. MacKay has given notice. Mr. MacKay takes objection to several rulings made by Hon. W. H. Hoyle, Speaker of the House, in regard to questions put on the order paper by members of the Opposition dealing with bilingual schools. The first of these questions dealt with Hon. J. J. Foy's statement that bilingual schools were illegal. As first put on the order paper the enquiry was as to whether it was the intention of the Government to abolish the schools which the Attorney-General said were illegal and the existence of which Dr. Merchant's report proved. The question in this form was ruled out of order by the Speaker on the ground that it was directed to the Attorney-General while it dealt with a matter for which his department was not responsible. The question was struck off, but put back in new form, being directed to the Minister of Education, and asking him if he was aware of the Attorney-General's statement. In this form also the question was ruled out of order.

The general enquiries dealt generally with the bilingual school question asking the Minister of Education if he had been aware of certain conditions disclosed by Dr. Merchant and what he was going to do to remedy them. These questions were also ruled out of order.

LIABILITIES WERE $39,000 WITH ASSETS OF $70.00

New Orleans, March 28.—Frank A. Smith, a clerk, filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy to-day in the United States District Court. He places his liabilities at $39,000 and his assets at $70.

The petition, on account of the discrepancy between assets and liabilities, is considered one of the most remarkable of any filed for years in the Federal courts.

"Caffeine"—the Drug in Tea and Coffee Hits some Folks Hard

A few can stand it for a time, but sooner or later, most regular tea or coffee drinkers suffer from its effects.

It shows in a variety of forms, such as indigestion, nervousness, sleepless nights and dull brain.

Why trifle with drug beverages when you can have a pure, wholesome, hot food-drink, such as

POSTUM

If you value sturdy health and a clear brain, the sensible thing is to quit tea and coffee and use well-made POSTUM.

"There's a Reason"

A TROUBLE MAKER

Tea and Coffee Poison Breeds Variety of Ills.

A California woman who didn't know for twenty years what kept her ill, writes to tell how she won back her health by quiting coffee. (Tea contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee).

"I am 54 years old," she says, "have used coffee all my life and for 20 years suffered from indigestion and insomnia. Life was a burden and a drag to me all the time, and about once a year my ailments got such hold upon me that I was regularly 'sick in bed' for several weeks each time.

"I was reluctant to conclude that coffee was the cause of my trouble, but I am thankful that I found out the truth.

"Then I determined to use Postum exclusively—for a week at first—for I doubted my ability to do without coffee for any length of time. I made the Postum carefully, as directed, and before the week expired had my reward in a perceptible increase in strength and spirits.

"Seeing the good that my short experiment had accomplished, I resolved to continue the use of Postum, cutting out the coffee entirely. This I did for nine months, finding, daily, increased cause for gratification at my steadily improving health. My indigestion gradually left me, my sleep returned, I gained 26 pounds in weight, my color changed from sallow to a fresh, rosy hue, and life became a blessing.

"Then I thought I would try coffee again, and did so for a few weeks. The punishment for deserting my good friend, Postum, was a return of my old troubles.

"That taught me wisdom, and I am now and shall be all my life hereafter using Postum exclusively and enjoying the benefits it brings me." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ungava Exploration Company

Off For The New Gold Fields

The purpose of this organization is to explore the practically unknown mineral resources of Ungava. The Company is in possession of information as to the location of rich placer diggings in that country, and is equipping an expedition to reach the gold fields about the middle of June. The Company is purchasing a schooner of about one hundred tons. The vessel will be outfitted with all necessary machinery for placer mining, and provisioned for one year. The complement of men will be ten in number, comprising experienced placer miners, who have had long association with placer operations in Alaska. The leader of the party is a man of wide knowledge of this kind of mining, having spent seven years in the Yukon and Nome. Each man of the expedition will have an equal interest in the results of the findings. No wages will be paid and they will sign up for one year, agreeing to turn all discoveries into the Company. Hence, it will be seen the confidence these men have in the outcome of their voyage into this rich, but unexplored country of Ungava. One of the parties is a man who was employed by one of the big trading companies of the North for nine years, during which time he made some startling placer discoveries, and it is to these fields the expedition will go first.

To those who are at all familiar with the vast wealth that has been, and is being, taken from the Alaska gold fields, the possibilities of this Company will make a strong appeal.

Placer diggings, unlike any other kind of mining, means almost immediate return, and it is not at all unlikely that this Company will produce big returns before the end of the present year. The man who will pilot the expedition and who spent nine years in Ungava and Labrador, positively states that he got pannings as high as 90 cents to the pan, besides discovering big gold-bearing quartz ledges and immense deposits of iron ore. Thus it will be seen that the possibilities of the Company are practically unlimited.

The Company is working under a Dominion charter, which is very broad and comprehensive in its scope. It does not limit the activities of the Company to mining, but permits its embarking in almost all branches of commercial industry that might grow out of its explorations in Ungava and Labrador.

This may, indeed, be the nucleus of a great and wealthy concern, whose assets in a few years may represent sums which to mention at this present writing would sound like madness. However, this vast North Country is now coming into its own, and undoubtedly large fortunes will be the reward of those intrepid pioneers who commercialize its teeming natural resources: Gold, silver, copper, iron, coal—all the cardinal elements of commerce.

SUMMARY

FIRST. It has been known for years that Ungava contains great areas of rich mineral deposits.

SECOND. We believe we will be the first expedition to reach the Eldorado, although there are some fourteen private expeditions going in this spring.

THIRD. Our men are experienced prospectors and placer miners, and their only hope of remuneration is their interest in what they find.

FOURTH. There is no guesswork about going directly to the right place, as one of the parties spent nine years in the country and knows just where to go.

GOVERNMENT'S SANE ACTION.

The Ontario government, with commendable zeal, is considering an act to prevent the procreation of feeble-minded or epileptic persons. This act says, in part:

"The Lieutenant-Governor may appoint for each of the Provincial institutions for the care of the Insane, feeble-minded and epileptic, respectively, two skilled Surgeons, who, shall examine such persons as are reported to them by the superintendent or the physician in charge, to be persons by whom procreation would be inadvisable, such Board shall examine the physical and mental condition of such person and their record and family history, and if, in the judgment of the majority of said Board, procreation by any such person would produce children with an inherited tendency to crime, insanity, feeble-mindedness, idiocy or imbecility, then the said Board shall appoint one of its members to perform the operation of vascotomy or oophorectomy as the case may be upon such person."

Our older citizens will remember a case right here in Peterborough, where such conditions, as noted above, were in evidence. Two persons, man (?) and woman (?) desired to be united in wedlock. They went to the clergyman of two churches of the city to get the nuptial knot tied. Both of the clergy approached, realizing that both of those seeking marriage, were not of sound mind, refused to perform the ceremony. The two then went to a third minister. He, whether from zeal to perform his duty, or for the incidental fee, made the couple man and wife. What is the result. The minister possibly got $2, the married pair have to seek charity to live and a child will, if it lives, in all human probability be a burden on the public purse.

The barristers and solicitors of Ontario, want their fees raised one hundred per cent. Under present conditions, the man who goes to law to recover $100 is in dead luck, if he wins his suit, to get $15, his lawyer retaining the balance. Should the proposed change be made, the litigant would only get $7.50. Fortunately all lawyers do not exact the pound of flesh, as intimated above.

Mr. W. McDonald, M.P.P. for Center Bruce, is asking for an Act, under the Legislature, whereby bars shall be closed on all statutory and civic holidays. It will be remembered that last season the Toronto house passed a law compelling hotelkeepers to close their bars on Christmas Day. Whilst not, in any sense or degree, advocating the bar, does such intermittent action have any lasting effect on the young men of the Province?

TRIALS BY WATER

A Distinctly Unpleasant Way of Proving One's Innocence.

Throwing people into the water to let it determine their innocence or guilt was [illegible] in use in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. A synod of West Prussia forbade its use in 1745. Sporadic cases, however, occurred during the whole of the nineteenth century.

Professor E. P. Evans wrote in 1895 of its use in Dalmatia, where in some districts it was still customary to throw all the women into the water on a specified day to see whether they would sink or swim.

A rope was attached to each in order to save from drowning those who proved their innocence by sinking, while those believed to be guilty because they floated were rescued and made to promise to forsake their evil ways on pain of being toned.

A traveller has described a modern survival of the ordeal used in detecting thieves in Southern Russia. All the servants of the household where a robbery occurred were assembled and as many balls of bread were made as there were suspected persons.

A sorceress then adressed each one of the number, saying that the particular ball of bread which she held in her hand would sink or swim as the party addressed was guilty or innocent. She then flung it into the water.

Boiling water was used in ordeals by the Persians, and it is referred to in the Avesta. It contained both the sacred elements, water and fire, suggesting the deluge past and the fiery doom of the future. In the simplest form of the hot-water test the bare arm was plunged to the wrist in trivial cases, and to the elbow in more serious trials, usually to bring out rings or coins thrown therein.

In Thibet plaintiff and defendant settle their cases judicially by plunging their arms into boiling water containing a black and white stone, when he who brings up the white stone wins the verdict. A king of the Goths in the seventh century, with the sanction of the Council of Toledo, recommended the boiling-water ordeal for crime.

CANNOT UPSET IT

Two Tests Made of New Lifeboat and Both are Successful

The new Harry Fisher lifeboat was successfully launched at Polson's Iron Works, Toronto. It was dropped from two heights, and demonstrated its self-righting principle in both. The first drop was made from an iron cradle ten feet from the water. Although the framework of the cradle broke just as the boat was being tipped, thus turning it nearly upside down, it righted itself in a few feet, and fell in the water right side up.

A rope was then let down from an overhead crane and fastened by an ordinary hook to the top of the boat. When the boat was raised a few feet from the water the hook snapped owing to the weight of the vessel nearly four tons, and the boat dropped back into the water. [illegible] of twenty feet, suspended from the overhead crane, and at a given signal was dropped into the water. It landed right side up.

The boat, which is of steel, is shaped somewhat like a cigar, and inside has a steel boat working on pivots, so that it is always in proper position.

It is claimed for the boat that it is fireproof, non-sinkable and non-capsizable. It has capacity for fifty persons, and with the aid of running-boards on the sides and top could, if necessary, carry another fifty. It is twenty-four feet long and seven feet wide, and is propelled by a screw operated by a crank.

Light is obtained through a number of glassed-in port holes, and air by special self-closing devices.

WATER POWERS ACQUIRED

To be Used in Connection with Electrification of C. P. R.

In connection with the probable ultimate electrification of a portion of its line in the Rocky Mountains, the Canadian Pacific Railway acquired a water power on the Adams River, which flows out of Adams Lake, and experts have reported that it is capable of developing a hundred thousand horse-power at two different points between the lake and its confluence with the South Thompson. It is in a heavily timbered country where extensive lumbering operations are now being carried on.

ELEPHANT PULLS TOOTH

Unusual Operation Witnessed by Visitors to Riverdale Zoo

The elephant at the Riverdale Zoo, Toronto, acts as his own dentist. A few days ago it pulled a tooth which had been bothering it, the operation being witnessed by a number of persons who were watching the animal at the time. It appeared to be in pain, and worked it strunk around in its mouth as though to dislodge something unpleasant. At last, after moving its trunk frantically, the animal drew something from its mouth. It cast the tooth thus extracted out of the enclosure. The molar was large, and had evidently broken off in the gum, as all the root did not come out. The crown was in a good state of preservation, but there were signs of decay lower down.

Highest Building in the World.

Plans have been filed for the construction at Broadway and Park Place, New York City, of the highest building in the world. From the curb to the apex of the tower it will stand 750 feet and contain 55 stories. The Metropolitan tower is 700 feet 3 inches, and the Singer tower 612 feet.

THE FIRST CARPET-MAKING

Carpet-making, as a modern industry, was first developed in France. That country had large factories and a monopoly in Europe of the art of carpet weaving when a rush-strewn floor was the rule even in the Royal palaces of Britain. But the edict of Nantes, that great disperser of French artisans and artistry, caused many of the carpet craftsmen to cross the Channel. They settled at Bristol, Axminster, and other places in the south-west of England. From there the secrets of the industry spread to Glasgow, Kidderminster, and the towns of Yorkshire. These places are still the great carpet-weaving centres of Great Britain.

"ORDER! ORDER!"

Commotions Caused in the Commons When Excitement has run High.

The almost unparalleled scene—or, perhaps, it would be more correct to say, series of scenes—which took place in the House of Commons a short time ago, suggest the question whether Parliament is not deteriorating.

Such scenes are not only discreditable, they lower the tone of our legislature, and give rise to doubts whether our law-makers are as level-headed to-day as they have had the reputation of being for so many centuries.

It is only fair to state, however, that, from the point of view of mere disorderliness, the recent "scene" was a much tamer affair than the one in the House of Commons in March, 1901.

The trouble on that occasion was created by some of the Irish members, and it was rightly described at the time as without parallel since the time of Cromwell, when soldiers cleared the House at the point of the bayonet.

As a matter of fact, most of the "scenes" which have taken place at Westminister must be laid at the door of the Irish members. There was a sensational incident in the last decade of the nineteenth century over the vexed question of Home Rule.

On that occasion members actually came to blows, but very little damage was done except to the prestige and dignity of the Mother of Parliaments. It must be said, too, that members were heartily ashamed of their conduct, and showed that they were when their hot blood had cooled down.

Thirty years ago there was an indescribable uproar in the House of Commons when thirty-five members of the Irish party were forcibly removed, in addition to being suspended from attendance.

That scene was almost paralleled in the following year, 1882, when the House sat at a stretch for the lengthy period of twenty-eight hours. As many as twenty-five Irish members were suspended on that occasion, most of them for refusing to leave when the House was about to be cleared for a division.

The name of the late Charles Bradlaugh is associated with more than one diorderly scene in Parliament, on account of his "conscientious objection" to take the oath. Perhaps the one that occasioned the most excitement was when he essayed to take his seat by sheer force.

On that memorable occasion the House was treated to the eddifying spectacle of the hon. member for Northampton struggling desperately with half a dozen burly policemen, who forcibly ejected him from the Chamber. It was a most painful scene to all who witnessed it.

The British Parliament is, however, "not in it" wth foreign legislatures for the creation of scenes. The French Chamber has provided not a few, some of the worst being in connection with the Dreyfus question, which agitated the whole of France, not to say Europe, some thirteen years ago.

In the course of a "full-dress" debate on this question, one speaker called another "a liar and a coward," receiving the next moment a smashing [illegible] more was needed [illegible] whole Chamber in an uproar, and free fights became the order of the day. Before the disturbance could be quelled, not only police, but foot and mounted soldiers had to be called out.

Perhaps the Austrian Parliament is the most unruly of all the legislatures of Europe. There even Ministers, who were members of the same Cabinet, have hammered each other on the floor of the House, and day after day it has been the scene of rough-and-tumble encounters.

CANADA'S GREAT FUTURE

Former Vice-President of the U. S. Expresses His Admiration

Canada has an unparalleled future, according to former vice-president of the United States, Chas. W. Fairbanks. "Why, you people have just commenced to build a nation," he said, "and judging the future by the past and taking into consideration your marvellous resources, the greatest on earth, I have in my mind's eye the position Canada will occupy among the earth's great nations."

THAT NUMBER "13"

The Duke of Connaught is Apparently Not Afraid of It

It is to be presumed that His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, is not superstitious. If he were, or if Her Royal Highness, the Duchess, had any personal aversion to the much-maligned number "13," it is doubtful if their Excellencies would have consented to set foot on Canadian shores on Friday, the thirteenth day of October. For even royalties are human, and human frailty is at no time more visible than when old acquaintances, in the guise of time-honored superstitions, are brought to mind.

Apparently men are no more exempt from a dislike to the tabooed number than women; and in hotels the average between guests of both sexes who refuse to be placed in a room labelled "13," is struck pretty fairly. Cases have also come to the notice of hotel managers, in which new "bell-hops" have objected to wearing upon the surface of their spick and span liveries the little badge of metal by which they were expected to become known to the office as "No. 13."

In police circles the robust individuals who are known to the public as the "arms of the law" take the unhappy number as philosophically as they march the newest victim of funny water off to the cooler; but civilians who have found themselves inside the fast-locked door of Cell No. 13 have been known to consider themselves exceedingly unlucky.

Great Britain's barley acreage has decreased by 139,731 acres this year.

TAKING NO CHANCES

"Johnny," said the teacher, "this is the third time I have had to punish you this week. Why are you so naughty?"

"Because," answered the incorrigible youngster, "grandpa says the good die young, and I ain't taking any chances."

A MILLINERY THOUGHT

"They say that when an ostrich is surprised he hides his head in the sand."

"I wish to thunder he'd everlastingly hide his tail there," observed the man who had just settled a heavy millinery bill.

REMARKABLE WORK IN SAVING LIVES

Story of Ida Lewis, Known as "The Grace Darling of America."

When Ida Lewis passed away in the Newport lighthouse, one of the bravest women in the United States ended her career. Indeed, according to the official records of the American Society of the Cross of Honor, she was the bravest woman. Well was she called the "Grace Darling of America," and worthily did she sustain the resemblance to the great English heroine, for while her life-saving exploits were not as numerous, nor quite as sensational, they were frequent enough and thrilling enough to command the attention of the whole country. Between twenty and thirty people were saved from death in Ida Lewis' rowboat, and her faithful tending of the great lamp in the lighthouse made the sea safe for thousands more. Idawalley Zoraida Lewis was born in Newport in 1842, and when the Lime Rock lighthouse was built in 1850 her father was appointed keeper. Her father was a man well on in years, and when his health failed Ida used to do the work for him, besides rowing her younger brothers and sisters to Newport every day to attend school. Her first rescue was made when she was only 16 years old.

The title of "Grace Darling of America" was given to her in 1869, when she put out in a raging sea to the rescue of two soldiers and a boy who had capsized their sailboat. Although the men were unconscious when she got to them, she hauled them into her own frail boat and made her way back to the lighthouse, where they were revived. Her life was in peril every moment of the trip, for a fierce storm was blowing and the waves rose like mountains. For this exploit the young woman was thanked by Congress, and by the General Assembly of Rhode Island, and received a medal and $400 in cash. In January, 1867, she rescued three laborers who had taken to a boat in pursuit of a flock of frightened sheep that were swimming out to sea. The previous Winter she had saved three more soldiers, and a fortnight after her adventure with the laborers she rescued a man off the masthead of a sunken vessel. In 1881 she was pulled through the ice in the harbor by two soldiers whom she was rescuing, and when she brought them to safety finally she was near the point of death herself. From 1861 to 1896 she saved the lives of 18 people, and had formal recognition from a dozen bodies. Each Sunday she rowed ashore to attend the Methodist Church, no matter what the weather was like, for the sea could no more turn her from this duty than from her efforts to save life. Ida Lewis was married in the Fall of 1869, her husband being William H Wilson, the skipper of a yacht. They did not get on well together, however, and in a couple of years he deserted her, and has not been heard of since. Had not Grace Darling preceded her, it would have been thought impossible for any woman to perform the feats of strength and skill and endurance that Ida Lewis accomplished on many occasions. [illegible] General [illegible] occasion, [illegible] a soldier under [illegible] that matched her for daring and devotion to duty.

LARGE IRRIGATION PROJECT

Three Thousand Laborers at Work in Mesopotaminia.

Work has just been begun on the irrigation of the Mesopotamin desert, a long projected scheme, and the first 3,000 laborers are at work with the preliminary preparations. The British contracting engineer, Sir John Jackson, famous for dock works, has control of the contract, with Arthur Noel Whitley, another Britisher, who has been second in command on the railway construction work across the Andes, as a commander on the spot.

The work is a huge one, for it entails opening a gap through the mountains, building watercourses, dams and reservoirs. Three great barges will be built, the first at Hindia on the Euphrates; whence the first section, irrigating 600,000 acres at a cost of $7,500,000 will be worked. It will then match the work the British government has done in the lower Nile in consequence of the bliulding of the great Assouan dam. It is expected when a regular supply of water once more reaches the arid zone it will be worth at least $200,000,000.

ALPINE DEATH ROLL

16 Climbers Killed in 1911; All But Two Were Without Guides.

The Alpine death roll for 1911 though probably not quite complete, shows that 115 persons were killed and 87 injured during the season. The killed include 33 Germans, 29 Austrians, 27 Swiss, 9 Frenchmen, 5 Italians, 3 Englishmen, 3 Russians, 1 Hollander, and 1 American.

As usual the majority of the accidents seem to have been preventible, as there were only two fatal accidents to climbers who provided themselves with guides. Thirteen of the victims were looking for Edelweiss and other Alpine blooms.

Three Viennese, a man and two women, were killed on the easy climb of the Great Pyrgas, in the Tyrol. The man's boots were not even hobnailed. One of the girls wore a hobble skirt, while both wore high-heeled shoes.

Though there are many English climbers, the number of accidents among them is small, as they invariably take guides.

Presentation to Mr. R. Mann.

On Tuesday night, Mr. R. Mann was honored at his boarding house, when Mrs. Bickle and her other room ers presented him with a silver shaving set. Mr. Mann, who has been overseer of the finishing department at Auburn Mills, is leaving for the West to rejoin his wife and daughter, near Grand Forks, Dakota. He has sons in business there. The evening was one of merriment, a regular Scotch banquet being held. In response to the presentation, Mr. Mann said:

My dear friends and Mrs. Bickle—I can assure you all that this is a great surprise to me. I never expected anything like this, and it is really too much. I cannot do more than thank you one and all for this beautiful present, and also the "guid auld Scotch" sentiment, expressed in your address. I can again assure you I take this with me, that I never will forget the ten months I have spent with you all. In fact barring the absence of my wife and family, it has been one of the happiest times of my life, and now I would ask you all to join with me in singing Auld Lang Syne, and now I'll bid you all good-bye.

LION AND BULL FIGHT

Thrilling Encounter in an Arena at Lima, South America

Not many people, outside Spain or Spanish American countries, have witnessed a bull-fight—a matter which they need not deplore—and perhaps still fewer have seen the rather unusual spectacle of a lion and bull fight. Two magnificent lions, male and female, finer than any I ever saw in any menagerie or zoo (says one who was present) had been purchased by the Peruvian Government for the Botanical Gardens at Lima, and by orde rof the authorities the male lion was pitted against a bull on a fixed day in the bull-ring.

A large iron structure was erected in the centre of the bull-ring, and into this the male lion had been introduced. As he lay crouched on the ground at full length, looking up with half shut eye at the sea of faces, and, no doubt wondering what all the fuss was about, one could not help admiring his noble proportions. From the door of this iron structure a long boarded alley-way led to the pen where the bull was housed.

A great hush falls on the multitude as the doors of the pen are rolled back and out rushes a bull of large proportions, heading down the alley way (there was no other road for him), straight into the lion's den. With a sharp roar the lion sprang to his feet, and, nimbly as a cat, vaulted in his first spring right over the back of the bull, missing him. The latter, instantly taking in the situation, backed and lowered his head to charge, but ere he could move the lion was upon him, seized his muzzle between his own enormous jaws, and encircled the bull's neck with his fore paws.

Thus locked in mortal embrace did the bull make frantic efforts to free himself, and at times almost lifted the lion bodily off the ground, such was his strength; but it was all in vain, for the lion held him as in a vice. The struggle lasted about three minutes, and so great was the tension among the spectators that one could have heard the proverbial pin drop. Then there was a perceptible tottering of the bull's hind legs, a swaying of both bodies from side to side that nearly overturned the structure, and finally a great lurch, in which both rolled over together. The bull lay stone dead.

Slowly relaxing his death grip, the lion rose, sniffed all around his prey, and, placing one of his fore paws on the bull's haunch, glared proudly round on the crowd, as if demanding approval.

OIL DRIVEN SHIP

A Description of the "Toiler," the First of Her Kind in Canada

The first oil-driven ship on Canadian waters is the "Toiler," a vessel without a funnel. In many ways the Toiler is more economical than a steam-driven boat. She has a greater deadweight capacity owing to the fact that the Diesel engines are much lighter than steam engines and boilers. Furthermore, as she carries no boilers the boiler space is saved and besides the oil fuel is carried in the double bottom in place of water ballast, thus saving bunker space. The consumption of oil is much less in weight than the consumption of coal for steam engines. In the Toiler the consumption at full speed does not exceed 1.75 tons per day of oil fuel of 18 B. T. U. calorific value, whereas with steam engines of equal power the consumption would not be less than eight tons per day.

Not only is the economy of this vessel shown in the increased deadweight of cargo carried, and the increased cubic capacity and the low fuel consumption, but the staff on board to attend to the Diesel engines is less than the staff required for steam engines and boilers, the engine-room staff being about the same while the firemen are not required.

The deck machinery and engine room accessories of the Toiler are driven by compressed air, being furnished by a compressor driven by a Diesel engine. The electric light, with which the vessel is fitted, obtains its power from a paraffin engine. The accommodation is heated by hot water, the heat being obtained from the exhaust gases of the main engine. There is thus no steam on board the boat, and the vessel, therefore, presents an unusual appearance in having no funnels, and as the masts are mainly used for hoisting purposes and, therefore, very small, her appearance is decidedly different from that of the types of boats to which we are accustomed.

The accommodation for the officers and crew is well fitted up and excellent in every respect.

Venerable Warsaw Couple.

On Tuesday, Mr. and Mrs. John Sanders of the village of Warsaw, celebrated their 60th anniversary of their marriage. Whilst such an event is seldom in evidence the anniversary was marked with little display. A few friends were asked at a quilting bee. The combined ages of Mr. and Mrs. Sanders amount to 167 years. They were married at Evesham, Worcestershire, England, and came to Canada in 1874.

CLEANING FURNITURE

How to Keep in Order the Upholstered Variety

The cleansing of upholstered furniture has ever been a source of work and worry to the housewife, and anything that comes as a help in this phase of her daily grind is welcomed with a sigh of relief and with a spirit of thankfulness.

The expedient of a dampened cloth and a carpet beater is one of the more recent ideas, and while it acts as a vacuum cleaner, it has none of its expenses.

This is a proceeding that can be attended to without fearing damage to the upholstery, and at the same time it keeps all dust from arising and covering other articles of furniture in the room, as well as spreading on the draperies.

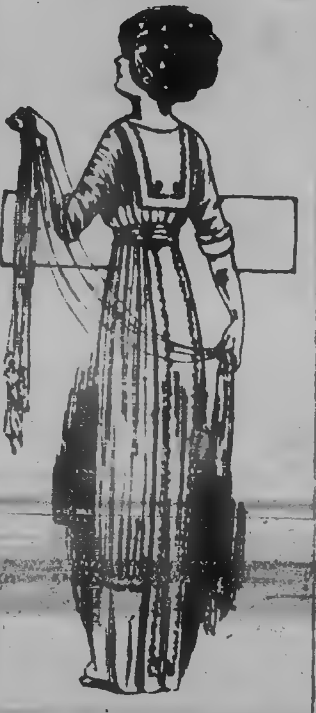
Take a cloth which has been made from a piece of old sheeting, which will be lintless, and moisten it very slightly—too much water is as bad as none for it will soil tapestry. Lay this on the article that you are going to clean, and beat with a carpet beater or a thin switch.

As the dust arises it will adhere to the cloth, therefore it should be changed quite often.

Do not beat too violently, as a slow, steady tapping will not spring the buttons or tacks, or loosen any of the cords of the upholstering, while too strong beating will disorganize the whole structure, thus causing destruction instead of accomplishing a cleaning.

The woodwork on upholstered furniture is generally of the varnished variety. To keep this spotless, rub it once a week with furniture oil, which is composed of one part of benzine and two parts of crude oil.

Slightly moisten a rag with this mixture, and after rubbing over briskly, wipe off with a soft lintless cloth.



DAINTY EMBROIDERED COSTUME

A panel back effect with the modish sailor collar is illustrated in the sketch shown to-day, and presents the rather unusual feature of a dainty design in embroidery, outlining the panel and collar. The effect is exceedingly attractive on cream batiste, with the dainty design in blue and pink flowers and pale green leaves. The embroidery is also carried about the cuffs and the deep side border of the skirt.

HOW TO WALK

A Woman Should Not Look Like a Soldier on Parade

An artist has lately been complaining that his chief objection to fashionable dress is that it reveals so completely the inability of the average Englishwoman to walk well. He says that most of us either slouch or strut, and he gives the following instructions on "how to walk":—

"The head should not be held erect as if by effort—a woman should not look like a soldier on parade. The steps should not be jerky—however quick, they should be 'smooth.' The movement should be from the hips and the knees bent as little as possible. A slight a very slight—bend forward is graceful, if the walker be tall and slim. The arms should not swing noticeably, but should hang freely—elbow should be unobservable. The feet should turn out slightly, and walking should appear to be done chiefly on the toes—the heel down first style is unpardonable. But the chief feature and charms of a good carriage are its seemingly leisureliness, the absence of 'strut' and 'slouch,' and a certain air of unconscious grace."

The same critic recommends daily practice in front of a full-length mirror—exercises to be taken preferably in cycling knickers, as the movements of the limbs can then be better studied.

TO REMOVE STAINS

Coffee or cream stains may be removed from delicate silk or woollen fabrics by first of all brushing the stains with glycerine, and then well rinsing them in lukewarm water. But the stain should not be allowed to dry in. Later, press the material on the wrong side with a warm iron.

TO POLISH LINOLEUM

The following mixture is excellent for polishing linoleum: Mix together one gill of methylated spirit and one ounce of shellac. Let the shellac thoroughly dissolve, and then apply with a soft flannel. The polish will remain on the linoleum even after it has been washed.

East City Wants Better Facilities.

The good citizens of East City seem to have some cause for complaint. Their representatives at the indignation meeting held Tuesday evening, stated that the lack of bridge communication retards the growth of that part of the city. Now that the C.P.R. has withdrawn the privilege the East City residents used to have, of crossing their bridge hundreds of employees, in the south part of the city have to make a long detour to get to work.

WOMAN'S DRESS CENTURIES AGO

Modern Garb Not as Absurd as it Was in the Elizabethan Century

Absurd as some of our modern fashions may be they cannot equal in absurdity those of a century ago.

For instance, in 1794, the heavy tax that was placed upon hair-powder brought the Georgian wigs into disfavor, and women being forced to wear merely their own hair adopted a hundred extravagant modes of dressing it. One of the most ridiculous was that of wearing very enormous feathers. These feathers were so high that it was impossible to wear them in carriages with tops, and The Times, commenting caustically upon an accident, stated that "a young lady, only ten feet high, was overset yesterday in a gale of wind, and the upper mast of her feather blown upon Hamstead Hill."

At this period, the distinguishing characteristic of the dress for nearly twenty years was the high waist—so high that gowns were made all in one. They had no sleeves, merely shoulder straps elaborately embroidered, while a cape or collarette was donned when the wearer went out of doors. In 1801 the scanty skirts became a little fuller, but the next year they were scantier than before and very short. The "Titus" or Roman style of hairdressing had come in and many women had their hair cut close to the head. With arms and neck bare, skirts reaching only half way below the knee, and short hair, the fashionable dames must have cut a sorry figure.

Immediately upon the heels of this Roman craze came a reaction in favor of Stuart ruffs and caps, and sleeves suddenly reappeared, so long as to completely hide the hands. The famous Spencer made its debut, and the Capote or greatcoat, Queen Charlotte's favorite dress, became very popular. It was like a man's coat, having a velvet collar. A passion for imitating man's dress then burst forth. A portrait of a lady of this period in driving dress is eloquent of the follies committed in the name of fashion. She is wearing a box-coat and cape, a round white beaver hat, a white cravat, and Hessian boots; the coat is open, showing the costume beneath—a cambric dress cut as low at the neck as our evening dress and fitting close to the body without any fullness in such a manner as to disclose the lines of the figure. At this time the thin gowns were even damped in order that they should cling more closely to their wearers as they dried, and the lighter the clothing the more it was admired.

In 1809 the turban came into prominence. It was a curiously shaped cap, fitting closely over the forehead, over which was wound many yards of silk of eastern manufacture. A jewelled aigrette or a feather was negligently placed amongst the folds.

[illegible] began to gradually grow fuller. In [illegible] sleeves made their appearance. Some of them were so large as to require almost as much material as the dress itself.

The first bonnets came into style about 1820. They completely enshrouded the face, being tied with broad ribbons under the chin. Then they became enormously large, covered with tufts of marabout feathers, and well meriting the name "majestic monuments of millinery." The hair, too, was massively arranged, interwoven with ribbons and of a fantastic height. After this phase came the hideous mode of straining the hair away from the face so tightly that it was impossible to close one's eyes, whilst a long ringlet fell down the sides of the face, corresponding in size to the pendant earrings then worn.

In the matter of colors our grandmothers were totally ignorant of the "art shades." Primary colors in all their crudity were the delight of their hearts, and greens and yellows of aggressive density were worn together, read feathers sometimes being added to these. The more inharmonious the whole effect, the greater the success of the costume. Naturally, a vulgar display of jewellery accompanied the lack of taste in color. For nearly fifty years the topaz was the favorite precious stone.

"Oblivion is not to be hired"; yet from the annals of our ancestresses women may learn much—among other things, the real proportion of dress in everyday life, and the ludicrous folly of excess therein.—Amelia Sedley.

PIVOT OF THE HOUSEHOLD

Make Home Attractive for the Boys and Girls

It is a most common complaint amongst parents that their children, as soon as they arrive at years of independence, drift away from their homes, or that the boys and girls never seem to be happy at home but always want to be out. They usually blame the children for lack of parental affection instead of turning their thoughts inward to solve the problem. It never seems to occur to some parents that they have not made such a pleasant place that their children find their greatest happiness within it. Young people of both sexes have a great natural craving for happiness and recreation, but they are too often sacrificed at the altar of parental comfort.

The idea that the comfort of the parents is the pivot on which the household should revolve has been the cause of more discontented and restless sons and daughters than anything else, and has led to many hasty, ill-considered youthful marriages.—Mrs. Bull.

The Sudbury News gives about 50 lines over the resignation of H. E. Nolan, dog catcher of that town. If Mr. Nolan is any use at his former trade, he can get a job here, that would keep him busy for a month. It would be a dog-gone good situation at that!

HELPFUL HINTS

Household Information Which May Come in Handy

Get a nice thick piece of lean steak, cover it with good olive oil, and let it remain in the oil for an hour before cooking. This will make it tender and the oil forms a coating, thus keeping in all the juice. The same method applies to cutlets.

Removing Inkstains

To remove ink from colored materials, dip the stained part in warm milk that has been boiled, and rub it lightly with the finger. As the milk becomes inked, change it, and continue the process till the stain fades away, then rinse the fabric, dry it quickly, and smooth it with a warm iron.

When Boiling Greens

If some hot water is poured over the greens before putting into the saucepan they will boil much quicker and look much greener. A little bicarbonate of soda used instead of washing soda will keep the greens a better color and make them much more tender.

A Time-Saving Hint

Where the family washing is large, much time, labor and fuel can be saved if this method is followed: First shake out all bath towels, and spread evenly on the table; then hand and roller towels; next the pillow covers. Fold the bed sheets, place them over all, and then cover with the ironing sheet. Commence ironing all the underwear, tablecloths, and handkerchiefs—all except the starched clothes. Then remove ironing sheets and all the linen underneath will be as smooth as if put through the mangle. Fold same, and place on clothes horse to air.

Blanket Washing

Take half a cupful of pure ammonia, half a cupful of turpentine, and pour into a vessel that will hold two quarts of water; then cut up a small piece of soap about the size of a walnut not more—or else the solution will be too stiff when cold. Then pour on two quarts of boiling water. When the liquid is cool, bottle off, and keep the bottle tightly corked. Be careful when pouring on the water, as the fumes are very strong. When washing the blankets add half a cupful of this mixture to each tub of water, and you will be more than pleased at the result. The blankets will come up quite soft and fluffy, and if this is carefully carried out they will never shrink.

Hints on Renovating

Light colored velvets may be cleaned by rubbing with benzoin or paraffin oil.

Chiffon can be washed in tepid water in which has been dissolved a small piece of Castile soap.

White silk should be washed in lukewarm water, rolled in a cloth, and ironed quite damp.

Where money is an object, it is a wise plan for everyone to know as much as possible about the art of renovating.

Crepe should be wound round a bottle, and steamed over boiling water.

Ribbon should be well brushed, [illegible] tissue paper.

Chip hats should be first well brushed, [illegible] cleaned by rubbing with equal quantities of oil and ink.

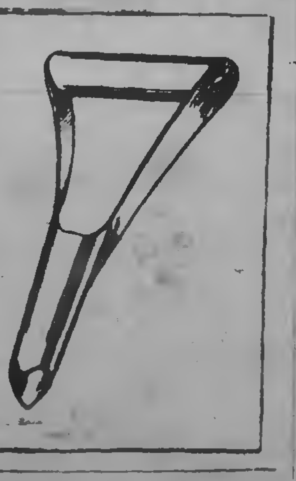
White felt hats, if white, may be cleaned by rubbing with oatmeal.

For instance, velvet may be made as good as new by the following process: Place a damp cloth over a hot iron, and draw the back of the velvet over the cloth. When the creases are all out, remove the cloth, and dry by rubbing the back of the velvet over the iron.

HANDY FRUIT CORER

Extracts Centre of Apple or Pear at One Quick Stroke

A simple and effective device for extracting stones and cores from fruit has been designed by a Virginian man and will probably become a popular kitchen utensil. At first glance it resembles the top of a suade handle broken off. A single sheet of metal is rolled into a tube, tapering towards the bottom and with a pair of arms extending above, joined at their tops to a wooden handle between. The lower end of the tube has two sharp lips projecting opposite each other. To core an apple or pear the fruit is placed on the table, stem up, and the cutter thrust down through the centre. It is then pulled out again, bringing with it the centre of the fruit with the seeds and the hard substances that are so unpleasant to encounter in baked or stewed fruit. The same operation will remove stones from fruits that are not easily split in two, as are peaches, and cleaned in that way.

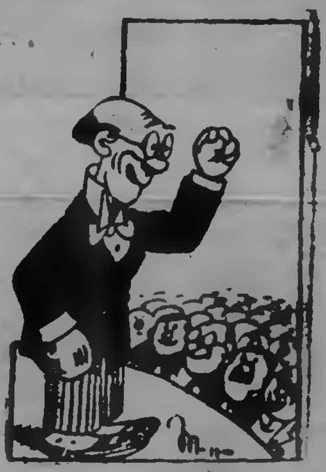


MACHINE OIL

Should any machine oil get on the material you are sewing, tack a piece of cotton-wool over the spot at once, and leave it for a short time. The cotton-wool absorbs the oil, and no trace of the stain will be left.

Steamboat Conditions in Lindsay.

Lindsay Warder: Supt. A. J. McClellan, F. Fairen and E. H. Bartlett, Trent Valley Canal officers, were in town to-day looking over the Government dredge and accompanying boats which have been tied up at the local wharf during the winter. Everything was found to be in excellent order, the boats having wintered well. In conversation with one of the above gentlemen it was stated that five men would be started to work on the dredge tomorrow to overhaul and make improvements, and prepare the dredge for the summer's work. Considerable dredging will be done in Lindsay this summer, and the Scugog channel will be made a proper depth as well as cleaned out. Largely through the instrumentality of Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, other improvements will follow, including the building of a new wharf.



SPECIAL THANKS

HIS ONLY HOPE.

"Yes," said the sufferer faintly.

"Who is it?"

"Another doctor."

GENEROUS.

Grandma: "Johnny, I have discovered that you have taken more barley sugar than I gave you."

Johnny: "Yes, Grandma. I've been making believe there was another little boy spending the day with me."

A POOR ADVISER.

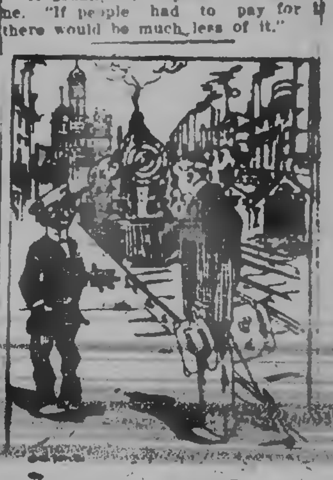
Skinflint: "I have no money, but will give you a little advice."

Beggar: "Well, if yer hain't got no money your advice can't be very valuable."

NOTHING IN IT.

"I regard conversation as a gift," remarked the studious woman.

"It usually is," replied Miss Cayenne. "If people had to pay for it there would be much less of it."



TIME TO SPRINT

Traveller: "Can I catch the Boston express?"

Porter: "It depends on how fast you can run, sir. It's got nearly three minutes' start."

"FOWL" LANGUAGE.

"John," said his wife, "why do they quarrel so much about poultry in these disgraceful prize fights?"

"Poultry!" said he, laying down his newspaper. "Now, my dear, whatever do you mean?"

"Yes," she went on, "it says here that at first the white man was inclined to show his chicken heart, but gave a very pretty duck to avoid his colored opponent. Why did he want to avoid him? Just because the colored man claimed a fowl in the seventh round. Was that the duck the white man gave?"

MEN OF THE JURY.

The Lawyer: "Are you acquainted with any of the men on the jury?"

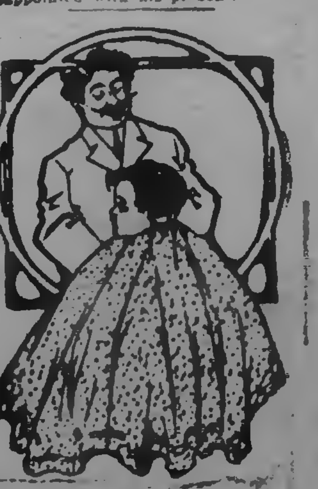
The Witness: "Yes, sir; more than half of them."

The Lawyer: "Are you willing to swear that you know more than half of them?"

The Witness: "If it comes to that, I'm willing to swear that I know more than all of them put together."

A PASTE DIAMOND.

"I can overlook his past," sighed the aggrieved and mortified young woman, after a careful inspection of the ring she had just received from her lover; "but I own I am bitterly disappointed with his present."



JUST LIKE FATHER'S

Barber:—"Well, my little man, how do you want your hair cut?"

Freddy:—"Just like father's. And don't forget the little round hole at the top where the head comes through."

DECREASE IN RURAL POPULATION.

A special report on area and population just issued by the Census Office and including details of the township population in 1901 and 1911 settles the facts as to decrease of rural population in old Ontario. In the forty-three counties south of Georgian Bay, that is, in all Ontario excepting Muskoka, Parry Sound, Algoma, Nipissing Thunder Bay and Rainy River, the township population has fallen off in the past ten years 90,865. That is the township decrease, including those living on farms and in unincorporated villages and hamlets. The actual decrease of rural population may [illegible] unascertainable overflow of urban population into the townships adjacent to Toronto, Hamilton, London, Brantford, Welland, Windsor, Niagara Falls and other rapidly growing urban municipalities. The rural population of old Ontario fell off at least ten thousand a year during the past ten years.

THE SOCIALIST PROPAGANDA.

Not long ago Victor Berger, the only Socialist in the U. S. Congress, was asked how he accounted for the strength of Socialism in Milwaukee. This was the answer: "We put nine-tenths of our income into literature, and every Sunday morning, fifty-two times a year, there are three hundred of our men out at five o'clock putting polyglot pamphlets into the homes of the people. For the Poles we have Polish literature, for the Germans we have pamphlets in German, and so in all the races that make up the population of our city." This helps to explain the rapid growth of the Socialist vote. In reference to this The Christian Guardian says that another fact also should be noted, that before any one can join the order he must certify that he is a reader of the Socialist newspaper. Can the Methodist church not learn something from the Socialist propaganda? Is it not a fact that Methodism is weak just at this point? Our pulpits are ably manned, but they reach, in the main, only those who attend church. What are we doing to reach the non-church goers? Is there not room here for a Methodist and Christian propaganda which would reach tens of thousands of those who never attend church? Surely this field, now largely neglected, would abundantly repay cultivation!

Editorial Notes

Toronto Telegram: Ontario does not need two more High Court judges to the same extent that some party favorites need two high court judgeships. It is estimated that almost one half the high court legislation has been settled in the county courts since the jurisdiction of these tribunes was increased to $500 in damages and $800 in contracts.

A Boston despatch says a steamer from Hull, England, passed through thousands of cases of champagne, evidently the cargo of a foundered ship. If a few of those cases could be discovered adrift on the Otonabee River or the Little Lake, almost every canoe punt, rowboat or gasoline launch in the city would be out with crews provided with binoculars and boat hooks.

As Peterborough takes great interest in the local garrison the following amendments to the Militia Act will be of interest: "In time of peace no officer shall be appointed to a higher permanent rank in the Militia than that of major-general or surgeon-general, and the number of such appointments and the qualification for such rank shall be as prescribed. Whenever the Militia is called out on active service during an emergency, the Governor-in-Council may appoint officers to a [illegible] to that of major-general."

We note that the Ontario government, in its list of "bills to be considered" has the following question: "Has the attention of the Government been called to the mutilation and trimming by the Bell Telephone Company and the Seymour Power Company of trees growing on the highways?" Now The Times asked several of their representatives to ascertain whether complaints had been received here of such mutilation as is evidently suggested by the bill. After speaking to over twenty people, whose trees are crossed by the Bell Company's wires, the answer was, unanimously, that the Bell Telephone Co. employes take the greatest care not to injure trees in any way. Of course a great company like the Bell has to contend with "kickers." That part of humanity is always in evidence.

The people of the East Ward, as represented by a number of prominent residents of that part of the city are evidently opposed strongly to the site chosen for the new school there. At the meeting held with Mr. W. Scott in the chair, opinions were freely expressed. The main contention was that children could not climb the hill during the winter months. It was asserted also that the heating would be very expensive and that this spot selected would be cold in winter and hot in summer. Objection was also taken to the proximity to the lift lock. Judging by the class of men who held this indignation meeting, the Board of Education will probably consider the matter of the site before taking final action.

BOUGHT THE HARVESTER

Will Be Taken to Europe for Some Speed Contests

The announcement that the Chicago millionaire C. K. G. Billings had bought "The Harvester," 2.01, the world's champion trotting stallion, caused no great amount of surprise to horsemen, as it was known that the executors for the estate of the late August Uihlein, who owned the great horse, were desirous of disposing of him by private sale, and Mr. Billings is one of the few turfmen able to pay the price such a horse is worth. Although the sale price has not been made public, it is understood to be considerably in excess of $50,000 which fully demonstrates that it pays to raise champions. It is Mr. Billings' intention to take The Harvester to Europe along with Uhlan, 1.58¾, Lou Dillon, 1.58½, etc., to show the people across the pond what America has accomplished in the way of breeding light harness horses.

The Harvester was bred at Walnut Hall Farm, near Lexington, Ky., and was sold when a two-year-old, only halter broken, in the winter of 1907-08, to the late August Uihlein, of Milwaukee, Wis., one of the pioneer patrons and breeders of the trotter, who bought him upon the advice of the sagacious Splan. He was at once turned over to the accomplished Geers, who has handled him ever since, no other hand ever having pulled a line over him. In his three-year-old form he took a record of 2.08 3-4, which he reduced to 2.06 3-4 as a four year-old, and as a five-year old, to 2.01, as above narrated.

THE FIRST DERBY

And an Occasion When Herbert Spencer was Present

The first Derby was run nearly 132 years ago, on May 4, 1780, when Sir Charles Bunbury's Diomed beat Major Kelley's famous Eclipse and seven others. The stakes were 1,025 guineas, or $5,125. It was only a mile race and proved so small an attraction to the sporting fraternity that it was found necessary to fortify the Epsom program with a cock fight. Public interest in the matter was so slight that The Public Advertiser, though it found room to record the breakdown of a one-horse shay on the road home from Epsom, had not even a corner to spare for an account of the race itself. Nowadays people go to Epsom in search of sport, but our forefathers were wont to look for health in the little Surrey town—and what is more they found it. For Epsom wells were famous before Epsom races, were thought of, and royal visits were common. Discovered in the reign of Elizabeth, the wells soon became famous, and Epsom grew from a country village to a gay and brilliant town, with absolutely the last word in luxurious hotels at that day. Pepys, of course, visited them and tasted the water—four pints was his allowance for a taste. By 1810 the wells were deserted, but the Derby had then been in existence 30 years, so a continuance of the fame of Epsom was assured. Epsom Downs attract every year for Derby Day many people who have not the slightest sympathy for the turf. Perhaps the strangest of all these alien race-goers was Herbert Spencer, who was once wickedly persuaded by his friend, the late Sir Francis Galton, to go to the Derby with an Oxford clerical don. "They were," records Sir Francis in his volume of memoirs, "as incongruous a pair as could easily be devised, but they enjoyed each other's company." "All went well," except that Spencer would not be roused to enthusiasm by the races. He said that "the crowd of men on the grass looked disagreeable, like flies upon a plate, and that the whole event was just what he had imagined the Derby to be."

Rabbi's Wit.

Dr. Adler, the late Chief Rabbi, was gifted with a ready wit. He was once seated next to a cardinal, with whom he was on friendly terms.

"When shall I have the pleasure of seeing you eat ham?" asked the cardinal.

"At your eminence's wedding," was the prompt reply.

"You are the prince of beggars," one of the Rothschilds said to him on one occasion. "I am a beggar of princes," was the neat reply.

KING GEORGE AND THE BABY

Pretty Incident That Occurred Long Time Ago in Australia

A charming story of King George's kindness of heart has just been related by the Rev. Henry Howard, at a children's festival at Adelaide, Australia.

The occasion was the King's first visit to Australia as a cadet, with his brother, the late Duke of Clarence. In the course of this visit the two Princes went to Melbourne by coach from Mount Gambier.

The young Princes sat on the box seat during the long and dreary drive. The driver told them all about the kangaroo and the wallaby, and explained things they had never seen before, and his hearers were greatly interested. He mentioned that he had a little two-months-old girl in his home near to Casterton, and Prince George expressed a desire to see the baby.

The coach was, therefore, pulled up at the rural home, and the infant having been shown to the Prince, he took it in his arms and kissed it. Having handed the baby back to her mother, Prince George took a sovereign from his pocket, and asked the coachman to give it to the girl when she grew older, and to tell her that Prince George had presented it to her.

Twenty-one years later Prince George, as Duke of York, was again in Australia. Having ascertained that the old coachman was alive, he sent a message that he was to come to Melbourne. The old man readily accepted, and found that his fare had been paid. The Duke met him at Government House, and immediately asked after the little girl.

The old man's eyes dimmed with tears and his lips quivered as he said that the child had died. The Royal visitor was distressed by the news, but consoled the friend of his boyhood, and insisted that he should remain for a week at Government House as his guest.

During that week, amid all the engagements for the Commonwealth festivities, the Duke of York, for one hour every day, gave his time to the old coachman.

BUFFALO BULLS IN BATTLE

Deposed Ruler of Herd Tries Conclusions Again and is Killed.

Two bulls, monarchs of the buffalo herd at City Park zoo at Denver, engaged in mortal combat. One was killed. The other is now king with a dozen subjects to pay him homage. [illegible] were in captivity, tried conclusions a year ago, when Pablo, imported from Montana and 9 years old, was bested by Colorado, a home product of the same size and pugnacity, after an all night contest full of gore and fierceness.

Loss of prestige did not set well with Pablo. He was never the same. Pulled from his throne in a night, he sulked and bided his time, just like the jealous ruler expatriated but ever mindful and determined to win back his throne.

Just how these two massive animals started their battle no one knows, save the others of the herd, and they are dumb. When Animal Keeper Hill made his usual inspection of his wards, lying in one corner of the buffalo lot he found Colorado, horned horribly and dead.

For fifty feet the earth had been ploughed up violently. It was also blood soaked. More than 100 feet away stood Pablo, docile, fatigued his mane clogged with gore and dirt, his horns discolored with Colorado's life blood. The dozen other members of the herd were gathered about the hay stack, eating as if nothing had occurred.

Like man, the buffalo must have his king. The difference is that the latter must win his throne by sheer force of strength. Hereditary does not go among people of the plains. Since the herd was brought to City Park zoo a score of years ago the rulership has gone to him that wrested it from his predecessor.

CANADA'S APPETITE FOR DAIRY PRODUCE

The value of the home market to the dairy farmer in Canada is emphasized by Mr. J. A. Ruddick, the Dominion Dairy Commissioner, in the following statement contained in one of his reviews of the dairy industry for 1911:—

"Canada's home consumption of dairy produce, it is needless to say, continues to increase, but few people seem to realise the extent of this increase. The increase cannot be less than $2,000,000 every year including milk and all its products. This means that our home market absorbs of the dairy production, $20,000,000 more than it did 10 years ago. The total home trade cannot be far from $80,000,000 a year, which means that our home market is by far the most important one for the dairy farmer."

PRECOCIOUS BABY.

A university professor, who has greatly endeared himself to his students on account of his kind-heartedness, has one particular failing—that of absent-mindedness.

He visited his married nephew a few days ago and had listened to the young wife's praise of her firstborn.

The gentleman felt that he must say something to give the impression that he was interested.

"Can the dear little fellow walk?" he inquired quietly.

"Walk!" shouted the mother. "Why, he has been walking for five months!"

"Dear me!" exclaimed the professor, lapsing again into abstraction. "What a long way he must have got!"

AN ARCTIC NIGHT

A Dark Curtain That Shuts Out Warmth and Light, and Depresses

We were at the foot of Humbold Glacier when the sun bade us a final adieu for a long winter night, not to appear again for many months to come. As though to leave us with pleasant memory of his visit, his going was in an effulgence of glory, and, reluctant to go, he lingered for a little while below the horizon, lighting the sky with a mass of marvellous coloring—red, purple and orange, reaching upward from the white earth into the deep blue of the high heavens. For a time a prolonged twilight remained, but that, too, was presently lost behind the dark curtain that shut from our world all warmth and light.

No words can adequately describe the awful pall of the Arctic night. It is unreal and terrible. Even the moonlight is unnatural, casting on the snow and ice, the wind-swept rocks, and the people themselves, a shade of ghastly, indefinable greenish yellow. Shifting shadows flit among moving ice masses like wraiths of departed spirits. A death-like silence prevails, to be broken only by the startling and unexpected crackling of a glacier with a sound of mighty thunder clap, or the smashing together of great ice floes with a report like heavy cannon.

In spite of one, depression takes possession of the soul—a hopeless kind of unreasoning depression. Intense and severe as the cold may be, any active man can stand it without serious suffering, when a little experience teaches how, for that acts only on the physical being, and can be guarded against; but the prolonged sunless night has a direct effect on the human mind which only exercise and diversion can counteract.—From "Hunting From the Eskimos," by Harry Whitney.

Light Water Craft

A Parisian inventor has devised a craft for getting over the water, which is so light and compact that it can be folded up and packed into a box no bigger than an ordinary suit-case. The case part unfolds and joins together to form the main framework or hull of the boat, which is of the catamaran order. The two cigar-shaped floats are made of waterproof canvas. When packed up they occupy little space, and when in use they are blown up with a bicycle pump. The framework is fastened between them by means of ribs and straps, and when you have fixed a three-jointed, double-bladed paddle together and put a folding seat in place you are all ready to set out on your marine travels.

The Man at Fault

While angling the other day a full-size man was pulled overboard by a 12-lb. flounder, and narrowly escaped drowning. In fixing the blame a newspaper gravely points out that it should be clearly seen the man was at fault rather than the fish, for he could have let go, but the fish couldn't.

HON. WALTER SCOTT

Sketch of the Career of a Typical Western Canadian

Like other prominent Canadian politicians, the Hon. Walter Scott entered politics by way of journalism. Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself gained much of his facile power of expression during the year in which he edited Le Defricheur. Alexander Mackenzie, the only other Liberal Prime Minister that Canada ever had, was also an editor, while the Hon. W. S. Fielding grew politically wise while wielding the editorial pen of the Halifax Chronicle.

A very humble position introduced Mr. Scott to journalistic life, for it was none other than that of printer's devil. The young "devil" rose quickly. He was soon at the "case," and a year or two later saw him mechanical foreman. With mechanical foremanship he combined leader writing, for in those days there were no nice distinctions between the different departments of Western newspapers. Ten years after "hitting" the West, Mr. Scott was editor and proprietor of two newspapers. There is cause for gratification in the fact that men like Mr. Scott are constantly rising from the ranks to give States and Provinces and nations just laws and good government. Upon this fact the world depends for its guides and leaders. The old idea that a single class, an hereditary, or patrician class of the community could supply a succession of competent law-givers has hopelessly broken down.

HON. WALTER SCOTT

Mr. Scott grew up as the son of pioneer farmers in Old Ontario. His father died when he was a baby, and for that reason Mr. Scott had to work perhaps a little harder than other boys. He milked and ploughed and did every common task incidental to the raising of stock and the growing of grain. In the summer time he went with the other children barefooted [illegible] autumn, when the mornings were chilly, he learned the trick of warming his feet on the patches where the cows had been laying.

The spring of 1885 saw him, a gaunt lad of seventeen, pack up his traps and set out for the Canadian West. He felt in his bones that he was not destined to spend his life upon the farm. He got off the train at Portage La Prairie, one of the small towns west of Winnipeg, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, which was then pushing through the Rockies to the Pacific Coast. For five months he drove a tradesman's cart, and then, following a true instinct, he entered the office of the Manitoba Liberal, and became a printer's devil. The proprietor evidently thought him a bright lad, for about a year afterwards the two went together farther west, and started a new paper in Regina, then the capital of the North-West Praries. The next fifteen years were spent by Mr. Scott in Regina, and intermittently in the neighboring town of Moose Jaw, in active newspaper work. He did everything there was to do about a newspaper. He often wrote a leading article and set it up in type himself. It is one of his boasts that he is still a union printer. The years brought their return. In 1894 Mr. Scott bought the Moose Jaw Times, and the following year the Regina Leader, both of which are to-day prominent among the daily newspapers of Western Canada.

RULES OF GREAT WORTH

Before going to bed that night the discouraged girl had committed to memory these rules for being a good clerk which the older woman had prepared in the form of an acrostic, daintily colored and framed:—

Make light of hardships, forget annoyances, and keep cheerful.

Avoid quarrels, close intimacies and gossip.

Keep alert, interested, attentive and progressive.

Induce customers to buy by being pleasant, obliging and helpful.

Neglect nothing that will make you valuable to your employers.

Gain the good-will of your fellow-workers, and keep it.

Give honest work and loyalty to your firm, it will not go unrewarded.

Omit laziness, rudeness, freshness and superiority in dealing with customers.

Obey orders, stick to rules, and don't be a firebrand.

Determine to succeed and live up to that determination.

So well did the clerk live up to her rules that not only the end of the month found her in her place, but she had conquered the unfriendliness of her mates and had won notice from her superiors by her courteous, obliging manner and her growing favor with customers.

AN EYE TO ECONOMY.

She: "I'm living on nothing but brown bread and cold water to improve my complexion."

He: "How long do you think you can keep it up?"

She: "Oh, indefinitely, I guess."

He: "Then let us get married."

HARD LUCK.

The little fellow was crying bitterly by the roadside, and the good, kind lady stopped and patted him gently on the head.

"Why, my little man, and what's the matter?"

"Matter, mum? 'Ere 'ave I been a-playing truant all day, and I've just remembered the holidays began yesterday!"

DO EGGS SHOW THEIR NATIONALITY?

Experts Say Place of Origin Can be Told by Appearance.

To the average man at the breakfast table one egg is much the same as another, and it would be difficult to tell where each egg came from after an obliging hen had laid it.

It is, however, possible to tell even the nationality of an egg, according to certain experts in an amusing case at Preston, Lancashire. Messrs. Howard Brothers, of that town, summoned by the Board of Agriculture, were alleged to have sold eggs falsely labelled as of Irish origin.

Egg experts let the court into some of the secret ways of telling the nationality to which eggs gave allegiance. For some unfortunate reason bad eggs cannot be identified as to their country of origin. In other respects they are too easily "identified."

George Michael Hyams, of Liverpool, egg expert, said the eggs in question were Russian, and between four and five weeks old.

Mr. Riley (for the defence): Do you believe you can distinguish not only between Russian and Irish, but between Russian, Irish, Dutch and Danish eggs?—Yes.

Counsel handed a number of eggs to the witness, who described them as "foreign," "Irish," "bad altogether," etc.

John George Parkinson, produce merchant, of Liverpool, was of opinion that the eggs came from the south Russia. The shell of a Russian egg was harder than that of eggs from any other country, and the appearance was smooth and glossy.

Eighty-five per cent. of the Russian eggs imported were unfertile. About 90 per cent. of Irish eggs which arrived in England were unfertile, but though he kept the eggs in a temperature of 70 degrees for fourteen days there were no signs of incubation. Neither did they burst or go rotten. The shell of a Russian egg was thicker and harder than that of an Irish egg, and that was why it would keep longer.

For the defence Bartholomew Condon, an Irish egg exporter, said that during last year he had supplied the defendants with a million eggs. In his opinion the nationality of an egg could not be told.

The defendants' shopman denied that there was any label, "New laid best Irish" displayed on the day in question, or that he had ever sold foreign eggs as Irish.

The Bench in the end dismissed the case.

$250,000,000 INDUSTRY

The Great Rubber Enterprises of Ceylon and Malaya

At the present time it is estimated that the vast rubber industries in Ceylon, Malaya, and other places in the East are responsible for the employ[illegible] the enterprise of one man—i. e., Mr. H. A. Wickham, who, on behalf of what is known as the Middle Eastern rubber industry, was recently presented with a cheque for a thousand pounds and a certificate for an annuity on account of the great services he has rendered in this particular field of commerce.

It was Mr. Wickham who, in 1876, brought from Brazil to Kew Gardens the seeds from which have sprung the vast rubber forests of the East. He was commissioned by the India Office to introduce rubber from Brazil into Ceylon; the difficulty was how to do it. He went to the Topagos Plateau on the Amazon, a remote locality, seized the opportunity of chartering a steamer which happened to be there, hastily collected, with the aid of the Indians, his baskets of seeds from the deep forests, and got them to the coast. As the Brazilian Government would have confiscated the seeds, Mr. Wickham was obliged to smuggle them aboard—70,000 seeds being packed in a few crates.

The seeds would not survive the journey direct to Ceylon, so they were taken first to London. They arrived at Kew Gardens during the night, and were planted out at once. They were too perishable to risk delay until the morning. Seven thousand rubber plants grew from the seeds, and 1,700 of these were sent in miniature hothouses to Ceylon. There they grew into large trees—12 feet in girth—and gave seeds of their own.

Such was the remarkable beginning of an industry now responsible for the employment of $250,000,000 capital in the East.

A RAW RECRUIT.

He was a raw recruit, just enrolled in a crack cavalry regiment, and paying his first visit to the riding-school.

"'Ere's yer horse," said the instructor.

The recruit advanced, took the bridle gingerly, and examined his mount with great care.

"What's it got this strap round it for?" he asked, pointing to the girth.

"Well," explained the instructor, solemnly, "you see, all our horses 'ave a keen sense of humor, an' as they sometimes 'ave sudden fits of laughter when they see the recruits, we put bands around 'em to keep 'em from burstin' their sides!"

MARRIED VERY YOUNG.

An amusing incident happened some time ago in one of the Paris courts of justice. A vain, haughty woman was called as a witness, when the magistrate inquired her age.

"Twenty-five last August," promptly replied the lady.

The next witness was a young man, who at once acknowledged that he was twenty-seven years of age.

"Are you related to the last witness?" queried the magistrate.

"Yes; I'm her son," he replied.

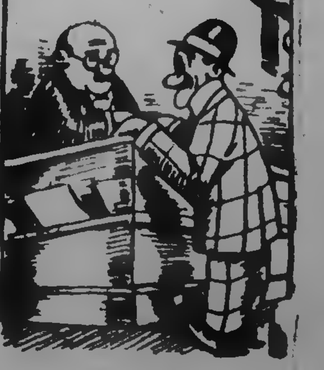
"Ah!" mused the magistrate, "your mother must have married very young."

EXPLAINED.

Two ladies, previously unacquainted, were conversing at a reception. After a few conventional remarks, the younger exclaimed:

"I cannot think what has upset that tall, blond man over there. He was so attentive a little while ago, but he won't look at me now."

"Perhaps," said the other, "he saw me come in. He's my husband."



TOO WILLING

"How does that watch, I sold you, work?"

"Very creditably. Some days it puts in as many as thirty-eight hours, it's a very willing worker."

WOMEN STEEPLEJACKS

Instances of Where They Have Climbed to Perilous Heights

Lady Constance Foljambe, whose failure to put in an appearance at St. Peter's, Eaton Square, where she was due to be married to the vicar of Whitwell-on-the-Hill, Yorkshire, created such a sensation, is an interpid steeple-climber. In September, 1909, she, accompanied by two lady friends, climbed the spire of Whitwell Church, which was then undergoing repair.

In order to take some unique photographs, the sale of which was for the benefit of the church funds, the daughter of a well-known Leicester steeplejack accomplished the hazardous feat of climbing the steeple of St. Mark's Church, which is 200 feet high. When at the top she daringly walked round the narrow, unprotected staging, whence she took some fine views.

The steeple of All Saints', Hereford, which rises to the height of 260 feet, was two years back the scene of a daring exploit on the part of the par tof the daughter of one of the churchwardens. Accompanied by the professional steeplejack, who was engaged upon some repairs, she ascended to the summit, the feat being watched by an immense crowd of townsfolk and farmers from the neighboring villages and farms, who had come into the town to attend the Wednesday market.

Equally daring was a Stoke Newington lady, who, in February, 1870, scaled the spire of St. Mary's Church, the summit of which is 245 feet above the pavement. The last part of the journey was especially dangerous, as it had to be accomplished by means of a couple of unprotected ladders, leading directly to the weathercock, which the lady, to signalize the achievement of her task, sent spinning round.

In 1781, shortly before it was rebuilt, the spire of St. Mary's Church, Leicester, was ascended by a steeplejack named Wright, accompanied by his wife, as expert a climber as himself. The woman, dressed for the occasion in male attire, rendered her husband efficient assistance in the repairs that he had in hand, and so greatly was her pluck admired that a number of the townsmen entertained her to a supper at the principal inn, when she was presented with a purse containing five guineas.

Two years after this same woman undertook, in the absence of her husband through illness, to ascend the spire of Trinity Church, Coventry, which stood in need of slight repair. She accomplished her task to the entire satisfaction of her employers. In more recent years the wife of a Bradford steeplejack has not only frequently accompanied her husband on his ascents, but at times has, unaided completed work which he had in hand. She owed her ability to her father, who, himself a steeplejack, had taught her to climb from early girlhood.

During the rebuilding of the spire of Wakefield Cathedral, in the early years of the eighteenth century, a woman disguised in male attire, was among the most zealous of the workers, ascending to perilous heights and positions with the utmost intrepidity. Having met with an accident, her sex, until then unsuspected, was disclosed, and she was claimed by her relations, well-to-do people, whom, in the pure spirit of adventure, she had left in utter ignorance as to her whereabouts.

Mme. Saqui, the funambulist, whose performance at Vauxhall drew all the town, made, in 1813, an ascent of the church spire at Harfleur. Her feat would seem to have partaken of the nature of "steeple-flying," for having successfully made her way to the summit, where she beat a drum and blew a trumpet which she had taken up with her, she descended by gliding down a rope to the street below.

Previous to Mme. Saqui's appearance, another woman athlete, named Rayner, had toured through England, alternating her performances on the tight-rope with acrobatic displays on church steeples. Among other spires [illegible] field Cathedral, in the ascent of which she was accompanied by a younger sister. On arriving at the summit the couple played on various instruments, drank a glass of wine to the health of the spectators below, and fired off a gun. They then made a safe descent amid considerable applause.

After Forty Years

A remarkable meeting took place at Stuart town, in the Wellington district, between a man named Flowers and his son, who had never seen each other, though the son is forty years of age. Mr. Flowers, senior, left America for Australia forty years ago; his wife remained behind, intending to follow later, but she died in giving birth to a son, who was cared for by an aunt.

SHORTSTOPS WEAK HITTERS

Shortstops seem to be the weak sisters in the matter of hitting in the American League. Of the thirty-five players who got into the .300 per cent. class last season in the Ban Johnson organization only one was a shortstop. Even the .250 class was too high for the men who play between second and third. Turkes of the Boston club was the leading hitter among the short fielders, with a percentage of .270. Knight of the Highlanders ranked second with .268 and Barry of the Athletics was third with .265.

WILD DUCK PLENTIFUL

Large Quantities in England and the North of Ireland

Wild duck, which have entirely avoided many inland spots where a few are usually seen at this season, have appeared in very great quantities along some of their seaside haunts, especially on the east coasts of England and the north of Ireland.

The pursuers of the strange sport of punt gunning have had remarkable experiences. Slipping along in their punts at dawn they have come upon flocks so great that a single shot from the great swivel gun, which is almost a cannon, has bagged more than the 'longshore sportsman could get in a week. Fifty and sixty have been killed at a shot, though the manoeuvres of the shot may have taken a week or so.

Numbers of duck again have been killed in the more formal, artificial shoots of Lincolnshire, Bedfordshire, and other places where the birds are now bred almost as scientifically as pheasant.

A sportsman's bird that seems to increase in numbers and to widen its range is the golden plover, of which numbers are now to be seen in the poulterers' shops of the West End. These plover, which are held by some to be the best bird that comes to table, are seen frequently all over the country. They have been observed in swarms over grass fields in the home counties, as well as in their more normal haunts among the wild places of the coast.

Another bird that appeared at one moment in great quantity was the brent duck, of which large numbers were shot over the coast of Norfolk from boats. But he is a brave or very hungry man who would dare to face the bird at table. London Daily Mail.

FREAK SURGERY

The Vital Organs of Animals Transplanted by Americans.

Some remarkable experiments on the grafting of limbs on animals to which they did not originally belong, and the transference of vital organs, such as the kidney, from one animal to another, are reported, says the "Standard" from Harvard University. Most of them have been carried out by Dr. Carrel, under the direction of Dr. E. E. Tyzzer.

His first successful grafting—or, at least, the first that he placed on record—was for the benefit of a fox terrier. This he described before the American Philosophical Society. The terrier, owing to an accident, had to have its leg amputated. A small dog that had just died was pressed into service. Its leg was removed, and grafted on to the stump of the leg of the living dog. Arteries, veins, and nerves were connected by suitable means, and the bones were placed in juxtaposition. As the bones knit the other tissues grew together, and the dog remained perfectly healthy.

But this is only a minor triumph in surgery when compared with those which have come later. From the grafting of limbs Dr. Carrel has moved onward step by step until it would appear that he can transplant and replace almost every organ in the body. He says himself:—

"A dog whose abdominal aorta was replaced by a human femoral artery is still alive in a normal state. The thoracic aorta of another animal was replaced about the same time by a large artery that had been kept several months in cold storage, and the operation was a complete success."

In the transplanting of kidneys Dr. Carrel has been attended with the greatest success in the case of cats, and he has said that possibly the results would have been much better in experimenting with dogs if he had used dogs of the same breed. While he has taken organs from one animal and replaced them in another, he has been uniformly fortunate in reversing the kidneys. In this work he has taken a cat, and, removing the kidneys, has replaced the left kidney in the cavity of the right side and the right kidney in the left cavity.

When one thinks of the complex structure of the kidney, with its nerve supply, its three great connecting vessels—vein, artery, and ureter—and its intimate relations with other organs of the body, such operations as these are truly amazing. Their value in the saving and preservation of human life, if such a thing as the renewal of a kidney should be found possible, will be enormous. The removal of a single kidney is a fairly common operation. After it has been performed the patient usually recovers his health, but sometimes in after life the increased demand made on the single remaining kidney may lead to serious trouble.

It is only a month since a wealthy widow, Mrs. Reginald Waldorf, of Philadelphia, offered a small fortune to anyone who would sell her an index finger to be grafted on to the stump whence hers has been removed. It would be curious if such advertisements as this went further, and public requests were made for the supply of kidneys, spleen, or even for a new liver. But it is difficult to see where the organs of which persons only possess one each are to come from.

BANK OF ENGLAND NOTES.

Interesting facts about the inside working of the Bank of England were explained by Mr. Frederick Huth rights of issuing notes, he said, is one of the most important functions of the Bank of England. One rarely sees a dirty Bank of England note. That is because the Bank never reissues a banknote. Even if anyone went into the Bank and demanded a five-pound note in exchange for five sovereigns, and then crossed to another counter and changed the same note back into gold, that note would be destroyed. The system is expensive, but by its means the Bank avoids many of the risks of forgery.

To Look After the Boys.

At an inaugural meeting held in the Y.M.C.A., to find why boys do not attend Sunday school, a committee was formed to investigate composed of Mr. S. Keyes, Mr. John Lang and Mr. John Edgar. They meet on Saturday, and on Tuesday night will hold a meeting at the Y.M.C.A. with the Sunday school superintendents of the city. The committee will divide the city into districts and will determine the number of men required to take the census.

SUCCESSFUL VIOLINISTS

Kubelik Advises Students on How to Master the Strings

In the opinion of Kubelik, the famous violinist, the standard of violin-playing has steadily risen of late years. This is not surprising when one considers the enormous increase in students from all nations, who for years steadily devote hours daily to mastering the intricacies of the instrument. Kubelik, however, not only emphasizes the need of earnest, steady work, under the direction of a good teacher, but that the student should procure as good a violin as possible, care being taken that the tone is pleasant to the ear.

"The tone of a violin greatly depends upon its strings," says Kubelik, "and the proper placing of the bridge and sound-post. The sound-post is the little wooden pillar inside the instrument, situated about a quarter of an inch behind the right foot of the bridge. Should the bridge or the sound-post be only slightly out of place, the finest 'Strad' will sound like a three-dollar fiddle.

Watch the Strings

"I would recommend all possessors of violins to have them examined by an expert, in order that the best results may be obtained. My experience is that most violins can be improved by paying attention to these details.

"I have known students almost driven to despair and loss of weeks of work in the vain endeavor to produce certain notes with a pure tone, not knowing that the difficulty arose from defects of the instrument, probably the bridge or post, being slightly out of place, or the bad quality of strings.

"It is false economy to play too long without changing strings, as a string after being used for a certain time refuses to respond to the student's intention, and time is lost by unnecessarily repeating a phrase.

"Beginners should commence their studies with a competent teacher, as good progress can only be made on a proper foundation, and bad habits, once acquired, are difficult to eradicate. So commence properly.

Concentrate! Concentrate!

"When practising the mind must be entirely concentrated on the work in hand. If the thoughts are allowed to wander, no good result will follow, and consequently it is not advisable to play too long without a rest.

"When the student feels his brain refuse to grip he must stop at once. Each individual should arrange his studies to suit his physique, and on no account continue his exercises when his brain is tired. I do not expect the 'born-tireds' to take advantage of this rule; my advice is intended for diligent students only.

"I strongly advise all students to attend to physical culture, avoiding exercises which tend to stiffen the wrist and interfere with the flexibility of the fingers."

MERCURY AT COBALT

Provincial Officials are Endeavoring to Discover Ore Combinations

The discovery of mercury in the ore at the Nipissing Mines has led to an investigation by experts of the Bureau of Mines to determine in what combinations of mineral bodies it is found, and as to whether it exists in large enough quantities to make the discovery of commercial importance.

Mercury or quicksilver was found in silver ore at the Silver Inlet Mine, famous many years ago. Some time ago Professor Miller, Provincial Geologist, examined ore at Cobalt to find mercury, but without success. Since the discovery at the Nipissing camp investigations have been resumed. In ordinary ore the mercury runs about four pounds to the ton and in purer ore that resists crushing from twenty to forty pounds to the ton.

To Help St. Joseph's Hospital.

On Friday evening a special meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of St. Joseph's Hospital (Mrs. N. T. La-Plante, president, Mrs. J. B. Dunn, hon. President), will be held in the Ladies' Parlour of St. Alphonsus' Lyceum, Simcoe street. The chief function or duty of the Auxiliary is to provide minor equipment for the hospital—linen bandages, etc., etc. The funds for this purpose result from the membership fees of $1.00 per year, so that necessarily the larger the membership the larger the Auxiliary fund. St. Joseph's hospital is maintained entirely by voluntary contributions, apart from the usual Government grant.

RELATED BY MARRIAGE.

As my wife and I, at the window one day,
Stood watching a man with a monkey,
A cart came by, "with a broth of a boy,"
Who was driving a stout little donkey.
To my wife I then spoke, by way of a joke,
"There's a relation of yours in that carriage;"
To which she replied, as the donkey she spied,
"Ah, yes, a relation—by marriage."

AND THEY'RE CALLED "MERE MEN."

"I want some collars for my husband," said a lady in a department store, "but I am afraid I have forgotten the size."

"Thirteen and a half, ma'am?" suggested the clerk.

"That's it. How on earth did you know?"

"Gentlemen who let their wives buy their collars for 'em are almost always about that size, ma'am," explained the observant clerk.

THE SPOKEN WORD.

Pat had but a limited knowledge of the bird kingdom. One day, walking down the street, he noticed a green bird in a cage, talking and singing. Thinking to pet it he stroked its head. The bird turned to Pat quickly, screaming

"Hallo! What do you want?"

Pat shied off like a frightened horse, lifting his hat and bowing politely as he stuttered out.

"Ex-cuse me, s-sir, I thought you was a bird!"

A QUERY IN COLORS

Dullditch had a new Rugby football club, and the players were fifteen of the lustiest, liveliest lads the village could produce.

The day of their first match duly dawned as per programme; but the jerseys failed to turn up from the outfitters.

As a result of this unforeseen tragedy the players took the field in raiment of many hues rivalling the rainbow. The weak November sunlight showed up the weird colouring, making it appear like an artist's paint-bedaubed palette.

Just before half-time two laborers chanced to stop athwart the hedge, and peered over.

"What is it, Bill? asked one, in no little amaze. "Is it a football-match or a bag o' mixed chocolates?"

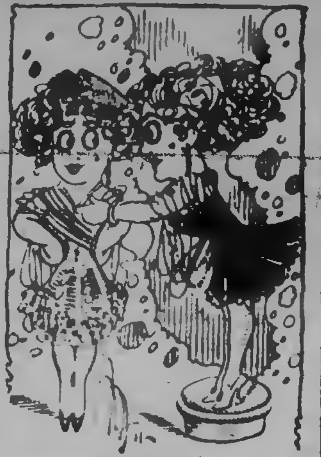
THE TRUTH—THE WHOLE TRUTH

Papa severely: "Did you ask mamma if you could have that apple?"

Three-year-old: "Yes, papa."

Papa: "Be careful now. I shall ask mamma, and if she says you didn't ask her, I shall whip you for telling a story. Did you ask mamma?"

Three-year-old: "Yes, papa, truly" (a pause). "She said I couldn't have it."



DELIGHTED.

Rosie—Mary Smith was married this morning.

Josie—Who's the happy man?

Rosie—Her father.

A GOOD NIGHT'S REST.

A certain family were preparing to take their annual week's holiday, with the exception of their son named John, who had to work this particular week. His parents gave him strict instructions not to get too late for work, as he was a very sound sleeper.

The family had a fine time at the seaside, and got home again about twelve o'clock noon the following Saturday. They were surprised to find the blinds drawn, exactly as they had left them the Saturday previous.

After a deal of knocking and hammering at the door, the bed-room window was slowly opened, and John, rubbing his eyes, called out:

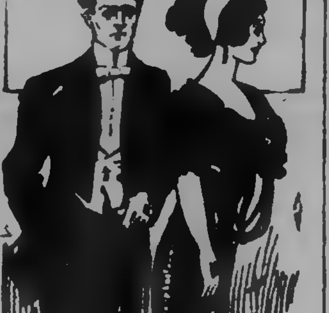
"Hello! What's up? Did you miss the train?"

HIS LONG FALL.

"I see," said Mr. Smart, looking up from his paper, "that a man fell three hundred feet from a chimney, yesterday."

"Was he hurt?" inquired Mrs. Smart.

"Eh? Oh, no," said Mr. Smart sarcastically. "But I believe he complained of a slight headache."



FOXY.

He—How shall I express my sentiments toward you?

She—On paper, please. Then there can be no chance of your wriggling out of it.

WHY HURRY?

The scorching cyclist was on the road to Stratford-on-Avon. He was bent over the handle-bars, and the beads which bespeak the strenuous toiler were trickling off his face.

"Hi, sonny!" he called to a passing youth. "Am I right for Shakespeare's house?"

"Yes, you're right, mister," was the dreamy reply of the leisurely youth; "but you needn't hurry—Shakespeare's dead."

HARDLY.

"Are you a friend of the groom's family?" asked the usher at the church wedding.

"I think not," replied the lady addressed; "I'm the mother of the bride."

THAT LITTLE BIRD.

"Whatever are you doing to the jam cupboard, Teddy?"

"Birdlimin' it."

"What for?"

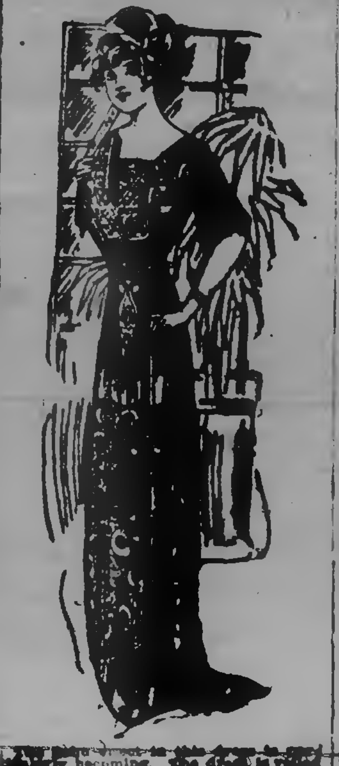
"Why, to catch that little bird wot's always telling muvver when I goes in it."

LOSING FAITH.

"Why doesn't Jimson call in his family doctor? Has he lost faith in him?"

"No; the family doctor has lost faith in Jimson."

SMART EVENING GOWN



The plain front in this dress is particularly becoming. The dress is veiled with ninon and lace, the overskirt finished with fringe.

Fortunes in Tea Cups

Did you ever learn to tell fortunes in teacups? Some of you say: "There's nothing in it. It's just foolishness." But that is a mistake. There is any amount of fun wrapped in the weird, uncanny-looking tea leaves, and now that the long, cold days have come and the tea hour seems the cosiest in the day your popularity will be established by enlivening your little tea-parties by telling your friends' fortunes.

Here is the way to do it. Brew the tea in a teapot without a strainer, or put a spoonful of tea in the cup itself and pour the hot water directly upon it. The tea must all be drunk except a few drops, which serve to keep the leaves in circulation. The cup must be whirled around three times, then turned on the saucer three times. Then begins the fortune-reading.

A lover (either man or woman, because sometimes you have "pink" tea parties) is represented by a number of dots in which one figure stands separate.

Two dots side by side mean an engagement.

An offer of marriage is shown by a figure kneeling in the cup.

A group of dots, three in a row, means that the offer will be accepted. Without them the lover has no chance.

Three large dots in the shape of a parallelogram will bear watching. These mean illness, sad news, or loss of money.

Three large dots in triangular shape mean just the contrary—good news, good fortune and good health.

If you are awaiting a letter, the following signs will tell you just what to expect: Four dots in a square tell of an important letter. A dot within the square or just outside means there is something in the letter which you will be glad to hear or something you want to receive, as money, a check, books, etc., small flakes within the square or near it indicates bad news in the epistle.

A long journey is indicated by a long line of dots extending half way around the cup. A group of dots near the terminus of the journey denotes that you will be greeted by a large circle of friends upon your arrival.

If you wish for something very much, indeed, three small dots in a triangular shape bid you hope the wish is about to come true.

Very large dots in a line warn you that many trials are in store for you. If these are mixed with fine dots, you will encounter disagreeable people.

Tears to be shed for one cause or another are represented by drops of tea in the bottom of the cup.

A clean rim to the cup means a quiet, happy, and prosperous existence.

Look out for the leaf that folds over the rim! This means that you are likely to have a stroke of good luck very soon.

The different shapes of the leaves indicate respectively, men, women and clothes. A long hard leaf shows a man. Small leaves, or even points upon this long leaf, take the form of his silk hat, cane, boots, etc. A woman is shown by a broader leaf or paler shade. She is often distinguished by her wide skirts, her bonnet, parasol, etc.

To ascertain whether or not the man and woman are friends or enemies examine the space about them. If it is filled with tiny dots thickly settled they are enemies. If the space be clear and no dots appear about them they are good friends.

A cross in the teacup means the news of a death.

A group of trees standing separately means that your wish will come true.

And as you become more expert new ideas will come to you. Try it, girls.

Azile Green.

To make breadcrumbs quickly, cut the soft part from a stale loaf, put it into a clean muslin bag, tie the bag at the top, and gently rub it with the hands for a few minutes. The crumbs will then be fine enough for anything.

PLEA FOR BOYS IN OUR HOMES

Foster and Develop the Love of Home Which Often Lies Dormant in Boys' Hearts

It is deplorable that all mothers cannot be made to realize how important the atmosphere of a boy's room becomes to him as he grows from boyhood into manhood. They seem to think that anything is good enough for the boys, providing it is dark enough not to show dirt, and sufficiently substantial to stand the wear and tear to which it will be subjected.

Sometimes the furnishings are not even selected for those admirable qualities, but are taken haphazard from the leftovers as occasion seems to demand, and the consequence is that boys are brought up with the idea that their own room is the one place in the home that is utterly void of that personal touch which goes so far toward making "atmosphere." This thought remains permanently fixed in their minds as one of the disagreeable features of their boyhood.

Boys should have an opportunity to exercise their own judgment and taste to a certain extent, because they can always be guided by a tactful mother, in order to avoid any glaring blunders, and this would undoubtedly afford great opportunities for the development of any special ideas or natural aptitudes they may have in decorating and furnishing that would be a great benefit to them in later years.

So many young men seem to be so utterly devoid of any artistic ideas in regard to decoration or furnishing, and possess only a crude conception of what constitutes good taste in such matters. Generally speaking, that phase of a boy's education is greatly neglected. If his surroundings are all that they should be, then his difficulties in that direction are materially lessened. If the circumstances are not so favorable, however, no amount of time or trouble would be wasted in trying to develop their ideas along those lines. They are quite likely to have pronounced ideas in regard to colors and grouping, and, as they grow older, if not corrected, it generally takes the form of a love for brilliant colors, glitter and gauds, and all the impossible combinations that appeal to the uneducated taste.

Many times one sees a young married couple trying to adjust their widely divergent ideas in regard to the furnishing and decorating of their home. The difficulty would have been avoided if the same attention had been paid to the boy's education in furnishing and decorating during his formative years, as has been given to the girls as a matter of course. Encourage your boys to make a study of good pictures.

Never go into a boy's room and change the position of any articles of furniture to suit your own ideas without first having a consultation with the occupant of the room. There is nothing one can do which will produce a greater feeling of insecurity in regard to one's goods and chattels, than this habit which is so strong in some mothers. Let the boy have the feeling that that particular spot is his own inviolate place, where he is small master of all he surveys. Nearly all boys will respond to the feeling of responsibility by an increased manliness and interest in their home life and the proper care of their furnishings.

If it is at all possible, provide a small iron cot in place of a bed. This should be covered with denim or some of the inexpensive cotton stuffs, and, with several prettily covered pillows thrown carelessly around, the result is always pleasing to the boy.

Let us do anything and everything we can to foster and develop the love of home, which very often lies dormant in our boys' hearts. And at the same time we should cultivate their artistic sense in every possible way, while we are educating them in all the cardinal virtues. It is only by giving them a sense of proprietorship in their homes that we may be able to exert the necessary influences over their future lives that is the fondest desire of parents.

Give the boy his own place of refuge, teach him to keep it tasteful and tidy, and this responsibility will engender habits of neatness that will last him all his life. When mother goes to see her boy, let her always tap at the door and ask if she may come in. This little courtesy will teach him that he is also a full-fledged member of the family, with his own interests and privileges, and the result will be the making of a very satisfactory man.—Charlotte Wharton Ayres.

THE VALUE OF LOVE

It Forgives Wrongs Again and Again and Then Again

If you always think sweet thoughts and dwell on love, then you need never fear anything in this world. Begin to practise love. Love will prevent you from making foes whose evil influences may bar your way in life. Love is the key to success, the royal road into the hearts of all. If you want to get on in the world, learn to be good-tempered and to love. If you "get on" without love, you will never really know what happiness is. Make your resolution to-day. "I will not be easily offended, nor proud, nor conceited. I will never actively resent bad treatment, but I will endeavor to be gentle and patient, and try to do good to those who wrong me." Love is patient, gracious, long-suffering, and forgives wrongs again and again.

NEED OF FRESH AIR

The need of fresh air in the home should not be forgotten. This is not meant to apply merely in a physical sense. Widen the interests of the family by reading, by visiting with your neighbors, by taking a trip, if possible, to one of the great cities. Fill the home with fresh air, and fill the life with fresh interest.

A GOOD WORK BEGUN

What the Standard of Empire, London, England, Says of the Imperial Home Re-Union Association Work Now Being Started in Peterborough.

"This is the kind of work which, more perhaps than any other, deserves the description of Empire-building. This is true patriotism of the most practical and productive order.

"The men who became the guarantors of the fund for assisting British workmen were not moved by desire for gain or a yearning for limelight. They simply wished to be of genuine assistance to their fellow-men. Their ambition, at the highest, was the unselfish aim of strengthening the bonds of Empire by getting the biggest possible infusion of British blood into the population of Winnipeg. To this end, the gentlemen who make up the list of guarantors not only back the scheme financially, but a number of them, selected to act as an advisory board, give time and attention to holding meetings, at which applications are presented and acted upon.

"Within the field of its operations the Imperial Home Re-Union Association strengthens and tightens the bonds of Empire, and draws old country born and Canadian born citizens closer together; gives them a better understanding of each other, and sets up that cordial relationship that should exist between the newcomers and the home people of this great land of opportunity, this home of promises, which are more nearly kept than those of any other land on earth."

Old King Coal was a Merry Old Soul! That monarch, however, would find himself a back number in Peterborough just now! Coal is as scarce as feathers on a whale

A case on the police court list yesterday morning was settled out of court. The claim was against a local company for wages, and to save annoyance, the amount being small, was paid.

WHILE YOU WORK AND WHILE YOU SLEEP.

Wage earners make money only while they work. My lot buyers and gardeners make money while they sleep. Those who have bought from me during the past four years have made by increasing value of lots, more than 50 per cent. per annum on the amount invested. And they are worth from $900 to $1200 to-day, because of having wisely imposed a "must" upon themselves to save a little of what they earned. Come in and let us show you a very easy way to do the same.

Gardens: I know one man who planted 1 acre of onions, and sold his crop for $800 cash. Was this not making money while he slept? We can supply a few acres ploughed to men who would wish to do likewise. Also a larger place with good buildings and orchards suitable for gardens, and a large poultry plant. Immediate possession. Decide at once, and call for all particulars.

Lecture on the Jesuits.

On Sunday night, Dr. W. T. Graham, Toronto, will speak in Park street church on the Jesuits and their teachings. Admission is free, and on so strong a subject there should be a large audience present.

Short Interruption of Car Service.

Oh, You Manitoba Coal.

Now that "money down," cannot buy coal in this city, it is enough to make one bend, if not break, the 10th Commandment, when one reads of a farmer at Binscarth, Man., boring a well and finding a seam of coal, 50 feet below the surface.

Regimental Smoker Postponed.

The smoking concert that was to have been given by Company No. 4 of the 57th Regiment, last night was postponed on account of the address given by Major Holman, Exchange Officer of Australia. The date of its holding will be announced later.

A New Furnishing Store.

Mr. H. Abramson, manager of the Star House Furnishing Co., is in the city superintending the changes and repairs being done at their premises on the northwest corner of George and Hunter streets. The company noted will open a fine new store with a full line of gents' furnishings.

Farmers Want More Help.

English immigrants who have taken places with the farmers of this county seem to be well satisfied with their lot, in the new country of their adoption. Mr. Howson, local immigration officer, seems to have difficulty in making the supply meet the demand of farmers for hired help.

Local Plumbers Get Contract.

As an instance of local enterprise, it might be noted that Messrs. R. G. Sturgeon & Co., the Charlotte street plumbers, have just closed a contract for plumbing and heating a large number of houses in Bowmanville. They already have a number of men at work.

Local Doctor Buys Farm.

Dr. T. P. McCullough, of this city, has purchased the farm of the late Mr. James Wood, near Bailieboro. This sale which was held on Tuesday last realized $3,300 for stock and implements. The doctor paid $7,500 for the farm, which consists of 300 acres and regarded as a fine property.

Red Mill Up-to-date.

Mr. H. Clayton, proprietor of the Red Mill Theatre, is certainly keeping up with the procession. Yesterday he put a new oilcloth in the lobby and carpets in the aisles. Another row of seats has been added at the rear as the authorities will not allow people to stand in the theatre. Yesterday, Mr. Clayton, received a telegram saying that Dangelo, the celebrated Italian singer will be here on Monday.

Board of Trade Trip Off.

Peterborough may or may not send a representative to England, on the proposed trip, under auspices of the associated Boards of Trade of Ontario. In fact, it looks as though the whole affair is off, as Mr. F. J. Morley, secretary of the associated Boards, has notified Mr. V. Eastwood, President of the Peterborough Board to the effect that the proposed trip to the Old Country will altogether likely be postponed. Lack of sufficient guarantors to the scheme is given as the reason.

Death of Former Local Man.

News comes from Vancouver, B.C., that Albert Parish, a former machinist of the Canadian General Electric Co., has been killed there by a scaffold giving way. He was thrown into the water with several hundred pounds of iron above him. Mr. John Sadler, father-in-law of the deceased who resides at 466 Gilmour street, had a letter from him recently. Mr. Parish leaves a wife and child, who reside at 165 Romaine street. Mr. Sadler, on seeing the dispatch containing the sad intelligence, at once wired for particulars.

Want Fair Wage Clause.

On Monday night a committee of the Trades and Labor Council will wait on the City Council to ask that in all contracts for city work, a clause calling for fair wages be included. This question was discussed at a meeting held in the Labor temple Wednesday night. The idea is that when a contractor accepts a contract that he recognize a fair wage agreement, and that in the event of it being broken a penalty be imposed upon him. This petition of the Trades and Labor Council will be significant from the fact that two schools will likely be erected here this summer.

Mr. Stinson Becomes Benedict.

A pretty wedding was held, on Tuesday of last week at the home of Mr. Harry Peters, Percy township, when Miss Jessie, daughter of the late Andrew Peters became the bride of Mr. John Stinson, of Fowlers Corners. Sunburnt Whilst Winter Fishing.

Mr. Tom Eastwood, the genial boniface of Buckhorn, was in the city yesterday. He noted that the roads were pretty bad and the pitch holes fierce. Mr. Eastwood's face was quite disfigured by sunburn. Whilst this seems an extraordinary thing at this time of the year, it is an actual fact. He was out fishing for trout on Gull Lake and the sun burnt his face so that all the skin peeled off. Mr. Eastwood was successful in capturing seventy-five mountain trout, running in weight from one pound to five pounds each. They are caught through a hole cut in the ice. Minnows and chub are used for bait.

Military Address At Armouries.

Last night a good sized gathering of members of the 57th Peterborough Rangers gathered in the recreation room to hear Major Holman of Australia give a well worded and instructive lecture on the system of military training in that far off continent. Col. Clegg of the Regiment, occupied the chair and introduced the distinguished visitor. Major Holman is what is known in military parlance as an "exchange officer." The Canadian Department of Militia and that of Australia, exchange officers, for mutual benefit and education. Major Holman's headquarters are in Ottawa. His address, delivered in a well modulated voice displayed that the bond of Empire actuates the soldiers of the King alike in Canada and Australia.

THE EYE LIKE A CAMERA.
The eye is constructed so wonderfully and ingeniously that the handicraft of man has not as yet been able to construct as delicate an instrument. It is like a camera—the lens to focus, the lid as a shutter, the iris or color as the diaphragm, the thick coatings of the eye-ball as the dark room, the nerve as the sensitive plate, and strange as it may seem, the images are bottom side up exactly as the image in the camera. Now so delicate and sensitive an instrument as the eye should have good care. Let us explain more fully to you how to care for the eyes.

LOCAL AUTOMOBILE OWNERS FORM A PROTECTIVE LEAGUE

Prominent Citizens in Bank of Montreal Chambers Decide to Form Association in Connection With the Ontario League

Last night the automobile owners and those interested in this great modern business, held a meeting in the Bank of Montreal Chambers. The object of this meeting was the formation of a Peterborough Automobile Association or League. There is already an Ontario League, with headquarters in Toronto. A Times representative in conversation yesterday afternoon with one of Peterborough's leading automobile dealers and owners, asked a few pointers regarding the coming meeting. That gentleman explained that a $5.00 fee is charged by the Ontario League. When a local League is formed, those joining it are assessed $5.00 annually. Of this amount the local league retains $2.00 and sends $3.00 to the Ontario Association. Our informant explained that the formation of such a league means the conservation of the laws, as far as it lies in the league's power. On the other hand, should a member of the league be unjustly charged by the police, or should a speed limit change be brought against him, and the latter innocent, the league fights the case of an auto owner, living not a thousand miles from Peterborough, was fined $50, where he seemed to be innocent. Such matters were discussed last night.

Those present at the meeting were: Messrs. A. H. Stratton (in chair), Ald. J. J. Duffus, Chas. Ackerman, F. R. J. MacPherson, B. D. Hall, G. Rackham, Vincent Eastwood, Alex. Miller, Mr. Travers, Mr. Doane, P. Bond, Dr. Halloway, Dr. Hammond, W. H. Denham, Chas. Banks, Dr. Amys, John Brightman, Jas. Maher, Dr. Greer, and Ald. Buller.

Chairman Stratton briefly introduced the reasons for calling the meeting.

Ald. Duffus expressed himself as being heartily in accord with the idea of a local automobile association and would like to see the local branch affiliated with the Ontario Association. Automobile owners would be protected in case of accident, and at the same time insist that the laws governing speed be regarded. This would be in the interests of both owners and the public. He explained how careless individuals brought a bad name on all auto owners or drivers.

Mr. V. Eastwood brought up the subject of good roads and thought automobiles would help that desirable end, which would be a general benefit to the community. Mr. Frank MacPherson spoke next, along similar lines.

Officers Elected.

The following officers were elected:
Hon. Pres.—Dr. Halliday.
President—A. H. Stratton.
Vice-Pres.—R. W. Travers.
Sec.-Treas.—Chas. Ackerman.
Committee—Ald. Duffus, chairman; A. E. Coulthard, Dr. Frederick, W. H. Denham, Vincent Eastwood and E. G. Patterson.

THOUSANDS RETURN TO MINES A WELSH DISTRICT HAS ACCEPTED

London, March 29.—A number of miners went into the pits in various districts to-day. Some 2,000 resumed work in the collieries of Warwickshire and the miners of Lanarkshire are returning in increasing numbers making a stipulation that their wages be paid to-morrow as they and their families are starving.

Balloting Begins.

London, Mar. 29.—Balloting began to-day in all the districts of the United Kingdom on the question of whether the million miners now on strike should return to work pending the decision of the District Boards to be appointed under the Government's minimum wage act in order to settle on the rates of wages in the various centres.

In some cases the result of the balloting will be known this week. As a matter of fact the colliers connected with the Brynkinalls mine at Chirk in Wales have already voted on the question and the proportion of five to two of the men is infavor of resuming. These men have strongly supported the owner of the pit, Donald Craig.

Returning to Work.

The full returns of the balloting will not be officially announced until April 4th and it will probably be after Easter before all the miners again return to work. From now on, however, it is expected that greater numbers will resume each day.

The total cost of the strike to the miners unions to date has been $5,216,250 and the balance left in the union treasuries now amounts to only $4,750,000, most of which is invested in securities which will not bring in their full value under forced sale.

WANT IRELAND SET FREE

The address of the Hon. James J. Guerin, ex-Mayor of Montreal, to the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, in the Astor House, New York, on Monday, the 18th inst., was the feature of a notable occasion. The following extract is indicative of the note struck by the orator on that occasion:

"On such a night as this what a flood of thought presents itself to the mind of the Irishman? The glories and the sufferings of the past, the proud achievements of the present, the noble aspirations of the future. In our past we glorify. Whether in joy or suffering, our people have always been true to the highest ideals of principle. Their sufferings have been great, but when considered beside the lofty aspirations which prompted the victims, we are consoled by the knowledge that virtue is its own reward, and that often the crown of the martyr was their portion. Our dead did more to fan the flame of patriotism into an ardent fire in the hearts of every one of us than anything else. For freedom they suffered, for freedom they died. That the fetters might fall from our wrists was the motive of our blessed dead. That Erin should take her place in the vanguard of nations was the ambition of every true Irishman at all times. That she might be governed by her own sons and her destiny worked out by them was the object of every true-hearted Gael."

FIRED SHOTS AT A BURGLAR AND CHASED HIM IN TAXI

time Mr. Ball fully believed it to be a revolver, but later this morning he was less certain, and admitted that it might possibly have been a bottle seized from a pile which lay within reach of the robber's hand. A still more wicked growl accompanied this act of the burglar, and a heavy threatening voice snarled out

"Oh, you will? You'll shoot will you?"

As the weapon was pointed directly at Mr. Ball's face, and as the clerk's revolver was aimed for ever the crouching safebreaker's head, the clerk chose discretion instead of fireworks.

Toronto, [illegible] how a husky burglar was [illegible] forced his way through a cordon of citizens and finally disappeared in the muggy five o'clock twilight, left the neighborhood of Berkeley and Queen streets at the fever pitch this morning.

It was Mr. F. Theodore Ball, drug clerk employed in the Geo. Marshall drug store at 310 Queen street east who was awakened just at the uncertain daylight by hearing the creaking of a door. He saw crouching in front of the safe, a dark figure. Mr. Ball immediately thrust his revolver around the corner of the doorjam and shouted:

"Get out of that or I will shoot!" Though only one burglar was known to leave the building, Mr. Ball when seen this morning was under the impression that there were two men, fully armed.

The burglar's [illegible] of his face, and at the end of the hand was a glistening pointed object like the muzzle of a pistol. At the

ATTENTION OF PARLIAMENT IS CALLED TO FRENCH LITERATURE

Ottawa, Mar. 29.—Mr. E. N. Rhodes brought up the subject of certain Liberal campaign literature which is being issued from Ottawa.

Mr. Rhodes pointed out that an office is maintained in Ottawa, some 20 persons being employed in sending out campaign matter.

He then produced a copy of a leaflet written in French, which has ben circulated throughout Quebec. Translated, it was as follows:

NAVAL ACT:

SCHOOLS.

Has the Naval Service Act Been Repealed?

NO.

For the past two years the people of the Province of Quebec have been promised that if they elected 20 Conservative members, the Naval Act would be repealed at the very first next session.

What are the facts?

On the 21st of September last, 27 Conservative members were elected in the Province of Quebec.

On the 6th of October the Conservative Government came into power. The first session of the twelfth Parliament opened on the 17th day of November, it closes at Easter.

The Naval Service Act has not been repealed.

Schools.

All the Conservatives or Nationalist candidates, during the last campaign, have blamed Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Liberals upon their attitude regarding Separate schools.

According to them, should Mr. Borden and Mr. Monk be given the power not only would the latter repair the injustices committed by the late Government, but, moreover, they would specially devote themselves to grant entire justice to the Catholic minority in Keewatin when that district would become annexed to Manitoba.

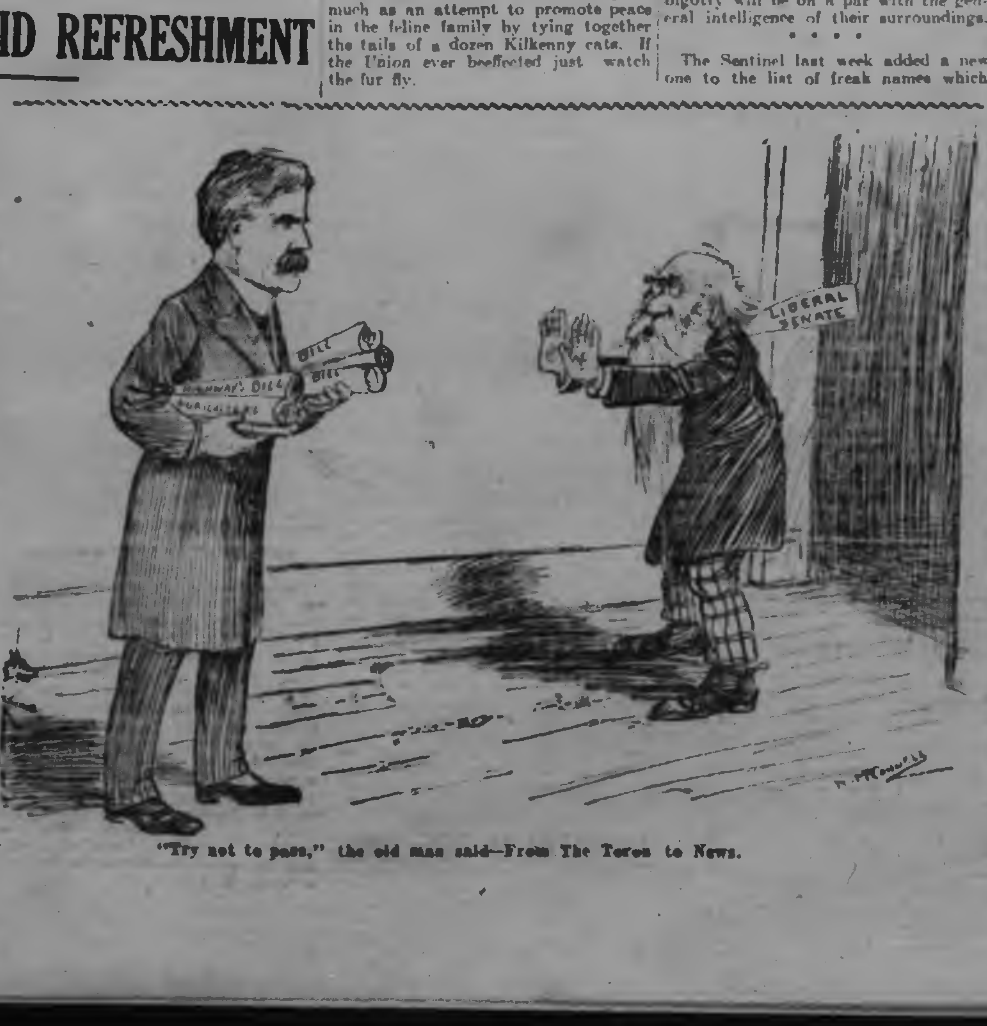
MINERS BANQUET INTERRUPTED BY SEIZURE OF LIQUID REFRESHMENT

Cobalt, Ont., Mar. 29.—A crimp has been put in the big banquet at Porcupine to-morrow night. A carload of champagne and other liquors was sent up for the celebration. Acting on instructions from Provincial Chief Rogers, License Inspector Flackwell and Provincial Constable McKay left here to seize the car in order to prevent any possible violation of the law. The car was the property of the caterer who was furnishing the banquet, including two quarts of vintage wine for each guest, at a charge of ten dollars per plate. The action was directly in contravention of the law prohibiting the sale of liquor without a license.

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS THROWN INTO THE SEA

New York, Mar. 28.—Fearing to conflict with the Sullivan law governing the possession of firearms, Police Commissioner Waldo announced to-day that the usual yearly sale of firearms and other weapons which fall into the hands of the police would be abandoned this year, and instead the present collection, valued at over $9000, would be dumped into the sea.

Arrangements have been made for a police boat to go out early Thursday morning loaded down with 1500 revolvers, 200 shotguns, 100 rifles, 250 blackjacks and knives of all shapes and sizes, all of which will be thrown overboard.



"Try not to pass," the old man said—From The Toronto News.

THE WEIGHT OF BREAD.

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—I see in the papers that the chief of police in Lindsay has visited places in that town where bread is made and sold. This was done to see if the right weight was put into loaves sold. I think our local police should look after the bread sold in this city. Living is so expensive now that poor people cannot afford to lose even a few ounces of bread, if they pay for it.

Economy.

WHERE WORKMAN'S MONEY GOES

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I happened yesterday to be on the Market Square and, without intending to eavesdrop or listen, heard a conversation that is, to my mind, funny and at the same time contained a moral. A local hotelkeeper remarked that the T. Eaton Co., Toronto, were going to erect a ten storey building. The hotelman continued, "no wonder they can put up such a building. They take their money out of the poor workingman." The man to whom he was speaking retorted, "Well, if they do get their money out of the workingman, they give him groceries, furniture or something in exchange that helps the workingman's family. Say, where do you get your money from and what do you give the workingman for his family?" I only write this as telling one of the most practical temperance stories I have heard.

Temperance.

ADVERTISE PETERBOROUGH.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—As an Englishman will you permit me to make a suggestion to the Aldermen of the city? When I was in London, nine months ago, I had never heard of any city named Peterborough, except Peterborough, England. My idea is to have the city or the Board of Trade send to the Canadian Mail of London, photographs and literature descriptive of this city and its nearby summer resorts. There are thousands of Englishmen in London in a tentative condition. They are restless and want a change. Shall it be South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, Canada? [illegible] London's millions, but similar and other people all over England would only grasp the possibilities open in Canada, but particularly in Peterborough, this city would reap a rich harvest on the advertising crop. It is worth consideration.

SATAN REPROVING SIN

The Catholic Register Hands Out a Bunch of Hot Stuff.

The organ of the Roman Catholic Church in Toronto this week hands out another dose of personal abuse of Protestant ministers. Instead of returning good for evil, as the true followers of the meek and lowly Nazarene are taught to do, our contemporary takes the opposite course, and indulges in abuse of the Protestant clergy. We print below a few extracts from its columns:

Hincks says that Protestant blood is mere skim-milk. It must be even poorer than that or it would not long endure Hincks.

• • • •

Saturday Night has this to its credit. It is the only Toronto paper that has had the courage to read a little lecture to the pulpit bigots.

• • • •

The mourners will please gather around and take a last look at the corpse of the Jesuit Oath. C. O. Johnston is being hoisted to Hamilton.

• • • •

The present attempt to bring about Church Union amongst non-Catholics in Canada reminds us of nothing so much as an attempt to promote peace in the feline family by tying together the tails of a dozen Kilkenny cats. If the Union ever beeffected just watch the fur fly.

We notice that it was not the fighting Orange regiments to whom shamrocks were distributed on St. Patrick's Day. There are no Orange regiments. "The Orangeys," as Dooley said on one occasion, "do all their fightin' where the bottle is bein' passed up an' down the bar."

• • • •

The Merchant Report and the legislation which will be passed as a result of it ought to convince our Ontario Catholics that they have made a great mistake in not establishing Separate Schools in communities where Catholics are strong enough to have schools of this character. "Teaching Catechism" will not then be against the law.

• • • •

The (Protestants) are looking for arguments and not for abuse or the outrageous falsehoods which are uttered from Protestant pulpits as Gospel truths. With confidence that truth is mighty and will prevail they are looking forward hopefully to the hour when bored, wearied and self-respecting non-Catholics will rise in their wrath and drive these pulpit jackals back to the merited obscurity of the backwoods, where their ignorance and bigotry will be on a par with the general intelligence of their surroundings.

The Sentinel last week added a new one to the list of freak names which now stand out so prominently in the latest campaign against the Church. It is that of Professor Funk, whose euphonistic cognomen fits him for a leading place in the gallery of immortals, already made famous by such pulpit lights as Stauffer, Batty, Hincks Crummy, Farthing, Stobo, Pogue, Odlum, and the guardian angel of the whole lot, our own illustrious Hocken.

C. SCRIVER SECURES CONTRACT FOR REMOVAL OF GARBAGE

The Fees to be Collected Will Net the City a Balance of Over $300—Fees to be Collected From Parties Served Quarterly in Advance—This Will Be one of the Sanitary Inspector's Duties—Garbage By law Will be Recommended to Council as Satisfactory.

The City's Property Committee met last night. There were present Mayor W. H. Bradburn, chairman Ald. Geo. Duncan, and Aldermen Morgan, Graham, Brown and Johnston.

The Removal of Garbage.

There was but one tender to hand for the removal and disposal of garbage and that from Mr. Chas. Scriver, who offered to do the work at $2,750 a year.

Moved by Ald. Graham, seconded by Ald. Morgan,—That Mr. Scriver's tender be accepted.—Carried.

Factories and schools, and other institutions exempt from taxes will not come within the provisions of the garbage by-law.

For private residences, 15c a month.

For stores within the fire limits, 35c a month.

For stores not within the fire limits [illegible]

For offices and rooms not used for meals, 10c a month.

Estimated Revenue.

The estimated number of places within the designated area to be served this year, together with the amounts to be collected from same, is as follows:

	Per Month	Per Year
1130 Residences, at 15c a month	$169.50	$2,034.00
35 Hotels, fruit stores and restaurants, at 45c a month	15.75	189.00
222 Stores, at say 25c a month	55.50	666.00

	$254.65	$3,055.80

A Credit Balance.

In accordance with the foregoing estimate, the fees to be collected from the 1600 places from which garbage, refuse, etc., will be collected this year will net the city a credit balance of about $300 over and above the contract price of $2,750 for removing same.

To Collect Quarterly.

The fees will be collected quarterly in advance from the parties from whose premises garbage, refuse, etc., is collected. The Sanitary Inspector will assume this duty.

The garbage by-law was here read and approved of and will be recommended to Council for acceptance.

The chairman was authorized to procure such books, and stationery as may be required for the Sanitary Inspector's use.

Ungava Exploration Company

Off For The New Gold Fields

The purpose of this organization is to explore the practically unknown mineral resources of Ungava. The Company is in possession of information as to the location of rich placer diggings in that country, and is equipping an expedition to reach the gold fields about the middle of June. The Company is purchasing a schooner of about one hundred tons. The vessel will be outfitted with all necessary machinery for placer mining, and provisioned for one year. The complement of men will be ten in number, comprising experienced placer miners, who have had long association with placer operations in Alaska. The leader of the party is a man of wide knowledge of this kind of mining, having spent seven years in the Yukon and Nome. Each man of the expedition will have an equal interest in the results of the findings. No wages will be paid and they will sign up for one year, agreeing to turn all discoveries into the Company. Hence, it will be seen the confidence these men have in the outcome of their voyage into this rich, but unexplored country of Ungava. One of the parties is a man who was employed by one of the big trading companies of the North for nine years, during which time he made some startling placer discoveries, and it is to these fields the expedition will go first.

To those who are at all familiar with the vast wealth that has been, and is being, taken from the Alaska gold fields, the possibilities of this Company will make a strong appeal.

Placer diggings, unlike any other kind of mining, means almost immediate return, and it is not at all unlikely that this Company will produce big returns before the end of the present year. The man who will pilot the expedition, and who spent nine years in Ungava and Labrador, positively states that he got pannings as high as 80 cents to the pan, besides discovering big gold-bearing quartz ledges and immense deposits of iron ore. Thus it will be seen that the possibilities of the Company are practically unlimited.

The Company is working under a Dominion charter, which is very broad and comprehensive in its scope. It does not limit the activities of the Company to mining, but permits its embarking in almost all branches of commercial industry that might grow out of its explorations in Ungava and Labrador.

This may, indeed, be the nucleus of a great and wealthy concern, whose assets in a few years may represent sums which to mention at this present writing would sound like madness. However, this vast North Country is now coming into its own, and undoubtedly large fortunes will be the reward of those intrepid pioneers who commercialize its teeming natural resources: Gold, silver, copper, iron, coal—all the cardinal elements of commerce.

SUMMARY

FIRST. It has been known for years that Ungava contains great areas of rich mineral deposits.

SECOND. We believe we will be the first expedition to reach the Eldorado, although there are some fourteen private expeditions going in this spring.

THIRD. Our men are experienced prospectors and placer miners, and their only hope of remuneration is their interest in what they find.

FOURTH. There is no guesswork about going directly to the right place, as one of the parties spent nine years in the country and knows just where to go.

A small block of the stock is offered for public subscription at 10c per share.

MASCOTS ASSIST IN PRIZE FIGHTS

Most Champion Fighters Have Mascots in Which They Place Their Confidence of Success

Baseball players are notoriously superstitious, but they can't hold a candle to the box-fighters. There is hardly a fighter of note who has not some charm or talisman to which he pins his faith. There are of course exceptions to the rule, but Johnny Kilbane, the new featherweight king, is not one of them.

Kilbane's mascot is none other than John Kilbane, Jr., fondly termed by his father "Jack." This mascot has bright blue eyes, a roguish little mouth, dimples in his cheeks and a slight, very slight, amount of brownish hair on the top of his head.

In his earliest ring battles in his home town, Cleveland, Kilbane entered the ring with the remembrance fresh in his mind of a parting kiss on the cheek of little Jack. Later, when Kilbane became a more important personage, it was not always possible to take Jack around the country with him, but he never let an opportunity pass to send some word to the youngster just before he entered the ring. On the eve of his fight with Abe Attell in Los Angeles, Kilbane wired to the youngster in the arms of his mother in Cleveland. "Papa is going to win for little Jack and will be champion to morrow." That prediction came true.

Notable instances of boxers with mascots in both past and present are Bob Fitzsimmons, Stanley Ketchel, "Knockout" Brown, Terry McGovern, Pedlar Palmer, Bill Land and Freddy Welsh.

One of the most popular mascots a boxer ever had was the kangaroo's foot which was the asset of Fitzsimmons. In the usual course of events "Lanky Bob" was a man of iron nerves but it is a safe bet that if he had happened to lose his kangaroo's foot on the day of the contest, he would have refused to enter the ring. He would tuck it into the silken scarf which he wore around his waist and then enter the ring without a qualm or quake.

Needless to say he attributed all his success within the hempen square to this particular mascot. The fiery Cornishman also possessed a live bear which used to be his faithful companion in his early days, during his long walks which are part and parcel of practically every boxer's training.

The old-time English featherweight star, Pedlar Palmer, had a mascot of a more useful kind. It was nothing less than the green trunks he wore. The marvellous little battling machine used to regard these trunks with an air of awe and many were the comments that would be passed upon their shabby appearance when he entered the ring. But Pedlar was like Eva Tanguay and he didn't care; he had never heard the referee give a decision in his opponent's favor while he wore them; consequently where Pedlar went, these trunks went too.

But at last there came the final day in 1899, when Palmer was knocked out in the first round by "Terrible Terry" McGovern. It was the last time the old green trunks were worn, after having garbed their owner in eight years of championship fights.

Stanley Ketchel had a mascot during the most successful days of his career. He is known as "Little Toby" and was a little hunchback whom the late middleweight champion met in New York. He liked the lad and his superstitions about hunchbacks being lucky led him to engage the little fellow as a second for all his fights. "Little Toby" was in Ketchel's corner when he beat Papke, Kelly, the Sullivan twins and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien. Finally there was some kind of a muss and Ketchel detached "Little Toby" from his retinue. A month later Ketchel was shot dead out in Missouri.

Dan Morgan, manager of "Knockout" Brown the New York Lightweight thought he saw superstitious virtues in "Little Toby" and engaged him as a second for Brown. The Manhattan boy has had remarkable success ever since and "Little Toby" still does duty in his corner.

Freddy Walsh, the British lightweight has a charming mascot in the person of his sister. She is present at the majority of his fights, and Freddy will allow no one else to prepare his meals, as he asserts she is the one person in the world who can get up a vegetarian dinner properly.

Abe Attel, for years carried a buckeye or horse chestnut in his pocket, believing it brought him good fortune. Whether he lost it before the Kilbane battle has ont yet been reported.

One of the most important exceptions—the most important to the rule of mascots among boxers, is Jack Johnson. The big black has nothing for a talisman except his fists. But we venture the opinion that they serve him in a practical manner as would a whole flock of bear cubs, Kangeroo's feet, green trunks, horse chestnuts and hunchbacks.

FAVORABLE FOR PALZER

Of the new "white hope" list Al Palzer is the only one who looks to be pointed for the championship. This fellow is improving all the time. He can hit as hard as any heavyweight, and when he gets a little more experience he will likely beat any white man who at present is in the list of the hopefuls.

BIG SALARY NECESSARY

Hugh Jennings, manager of the Detroit Tigers, in a talk with Cornell men, says no college man should go into baseball unless he can be sure of a $3,000 salary. Jennings says that in ten years a man loses his speed and then he has to fall back on his bank account. If he hasn't a good salary he finds he hasn't any money and has no means of earning a livelihood.

CHILD WHO EXAGGERATES

Punishment is No Remedy in Such Cases

The child, under eight years of age who "exaggerates" facts [illegible] untruths is fairly common. Parents are often greatly worried over this tendency, and fear that such a child will have an ugly streak in their growing characters. But the trait is mental and not moral, and usually it is the brightest children who are prone to exaggeration. [illegible] They are not telling the truth. They come with a tale of which part is fact and part fancy, but it's all equally "real" to their active imaginations. Punishment is no remedy in such cases. The only way is good humoredly to inquire what did really happen, and to laugh pleasantly at the obvious fabrications. In this way a child learns to be secretly ashamed of his "exaggerations," and soon tries to avoid making statements which lay him open to ridicule, even of the most good humored kind. On the other hand, pretending to believe his "tall tales" is the surest way to encourage him in concocting fictions which appear to interest the hearer.

Conscious fibbing is quite distinct from the habit of "exaggeration." Most children can be cured of fibbing if put "on their honor" systematically.

AFTER MARRIAGE

What a Five Years' Wife Says About Love, and How to Keep It

"Don't expect too much. Remember a man is but human, after all, and it is as hard for him to be the best kind of man as it is for you to be the best kind of woman; but when you expect him to be the best kind of angel, it puts him in an impossible position.

"He will be continually irritated by realizing that you are expecting more of him than he can give, and you will be irritated by his perfectly natural falling short of your hopes.

"Show a man that you take an interest in the home. Not because it is a house and you are a woman, but because it is his house, and you are his wife, and determine to make him just as happy and comfortable as you can.

"A great deal has been said and written about dressing to please one's husband. That is all very good and right, but it is not nearly so important an asset in keeping his love as that you should love him with your whole heart.

"If you do that, all the other things which will please him will follow as a matter of course; and quite naturally caring for yourself and your appearance will be early in the list."

A FATHER'S DUTY

He Should Spend "The Children's Hour" with the Children

Specially fortunate are the children who can nowadays claim their hour. So many fathers waste their evenings with politics, and meetings, or at the club, while the exigencies of winning the family bread often deprive others from getting an intimate knowledge of their children in the hour of play. Really, in a great many homes, the children never realize more than one parent—the mother. There should be a children's hour in every home—a time set apart for the little ones. It would be well, too, if the father devoted that hour to his children, thus affording relief to the mother. Her hours are usually so very fully occupied with meals and mending that she has little time to romp and tell tales, or to hear patiently all that the children have to tell.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

LITTLE NELL

"God bless dadda, mamma, George, Elsie, an'—an' the wee dog ablow the bed," and then there was a long pause.

The little boy raised his head from his mother's lap and showed a very red face.

"What wee dog, John?" asked mamma Fulton.

John looked round, but Elsie and George had left the kitchen. He tried to speak, but instead of words came tears.

Mamma Fulton took his hand, raised him up, and led him to the room. A moment later she called, "Dadda, come here a minute."

Dadda Fulton laid down his paper, and walked to the room.

"Just see what's under the bed," said Mamma Fulton.

He went down on his knees and looked under the boy's bed. There was a little black heap near the wall. He crawled under the bed, took hold of it, and dragged it into the light.

"Who brought this here?" he asked, somewhat sternly.

All the children were now crying. George was the eldest—he was a plump little fellow of nine—and the others looked to him to reply.

"Oh, dad, it was lyin' doon in the close; it couldna walk, and some big boys were tormentin' it, so we were gi'ein' it a wee rest—jist till the mornin'."

Dadda looked closely at the little terrier, with its coat and legs all splashed with mud, and saw that one of its paws was stained with blood. He lifted up the dog tenderly, carried it to the kitchen, and placed it on the rug before the fire. He gave it some food, and then it lay down as if it could keep awake no longer.

The children were satisfied, and went to bed happy.

The little dog was very lame, and was allowed to stay with the Fultons until it could run about with comfort.

Nell, as the children named her, was given a good bath in the washhouse. She lost her torn and tattered look, and became trim and smart. She and the children were soon fast friends. They loved to gather round the fire and play on the hearthrug.

As the days passed Dadda and Mamma Fulton began to look seriously at Nell. They were very poor, and had no money for a dog license, so they had to make up their minds to send Nell away. They often talked of the matter when the children were asleep without being able to decide what to do.

"I hate tae disappoint the weans," said Dadda Fulton, "but Nell must go."

It was Saturday afternoon. The dinner dishes had been washed and put away. George, Elsie, and John were given their weekly halfpennies and sent out to spend them. Nell was not allowed to go with them, so she curled herself up in front of the fire and blinked at the dancing flames.

Dadda Fulton put on his cap, took her in his arms, and went out. When he reached the closemouth he looked about to see if the children were near. Ah, there they were on the other side of the street looking at the good things in the window of a sweet-shop and wanting [illegible]

He hurried down the street and was soon out of sight. He walked on for [illegible] Cross. Then he put Nell down near King William's Statue and ran away.

Nell did not waste a minute, but followed him at once. Dadda Fulton tried to slip into the underground railway station, but Nell was too sharp for him. She soon caught up to him and trotted by his side.

The Cross was very busy. Men and women were standing about or jostling each other on the pavement. Cars, vans, lorries, and barrows were passing from every corner.

Dadda Fulton tried to get away from Nell in the crowd, but she kept too close to him. At last, feeling like one who has done something very wrong, he jumped on a car going east and hurried upstairs. When he reached the top he turned and saw poor Nell standing at the Cross and gazing after the car as if she did not know what to do. She was such a forlorn-looking little creature that Dadda Fulton felt very miserable at having deserted her.

He was very quiet that afternoon as he sat in his wooden armchair with his feet on the fender and a newspaper in his hand.

Mamma Fulton had gone out to buy the Sunday dinner.

Suddenly there was a great noise on the stair. He rose and opened the door. In rushed the three children—Elsie crying, John spluttering with excitement, and George carrying Nell—poor, dirty, battered Nell.

"What's this?" asked Dadda Fulton.

"Oh, dadda," began Elsie—

"Elsie was nearly rin ower," cried John.

"Ay, but Nell saved her," said George, with a smile and a pat for the little dog.

"When the children were quieted, the whole story was told.

Elsi had been crossing the street, careless of the horse and van coming rapidly towards her. She would have been knocked down had not a little dog given a bark and jumped at the horse's nose. The horse had turned aside and Elsie was saved, but Nell's forelegs were badly crushed.

Brave little Nell! Her glistening eyes showed the terrible pain she was suffering.

It took a long time to put her right again. At first Dadda Fulton had little hope of being able to save her. But she was saved, although she was never as sound in her limbs as before the accident. However, though lame and not beautiful, to Elsie, George, and John she was the dearest little doggie in all Glasgow.

As a decoration for her bravery, a nice blue ribbon was tied around her neck, and this she wore to the end of her days.

There was now no thought of putting her away. A license was bought, and Nell became one of the family.

An English judge has expressed surprise that political clubs provide facilities for playing cards'

THE FIRST CARPET-MAKING

Carpet-making, as a modern industry, was first developed in France. That country had large factories and a monopoly in Europe of the art of carpet weaving when a rush-strewn floor was the rule even in the Royal palaces of Britain. But the edict of Nantes, that great disperser of French artisans and artitry, caused many of the carpet craftsmen to cross the Channel. They settled at Bristol, Axminster, and other places in the southwest of England. From there the secrets of the industry spread to Glasgow, Kidderminster, and the towns of Yorkshire. These places are still the great carpet-weaving centres of Great Britain.

A MARVEL AT DANCING

Princess Radziwill Was in Forty-Four Dances in Five Hours.

Princess Albert Radziwill, who was Miss Dorothy Deacon, and who, since her reconciliation with her mother-in-law, has become a society star of the first magnitude, is in evidence at nearly every important function. The young princess has astonished people by her grace and endurance in dancing. Her friends have nick named her "Betka," and the society journals chronicle the beauty of "Donna Betka" Radziwill and her grace in dancing.

At Princess George Radziwill's ball this week "Donna Betka" went through forty-four dances, round and square, between 10 p.m. and 3 a.m., after which she appeared at an afternoon function without the least trace of fatigue, and announced that she would be quite ready to repeat the performance that evening.

STOPPING THE CRITICS

How Rev. Mr. Sams Stopped Objections to His Decisions

Talking about getting [illegible] the people, the following telegram appearing in the latest Australian papers, [illegible], Queensland, is interesting:—

At a boxing tournament in aid of the hospital, which a number of ladies attended, the contestants in the middleweight division were Sandy Thompson and Jack Miles. At the end of four rounds the judges disagreed, and the referee, Rev. Hulton Sams, who is well-known in Northern Queensland as the "fighting parson," gave the decision as a draw.

A good deal of boo-hooing followed. Rev. Mr. Sams invited anyone who disagreed with the verdict to step into the ring with him. This quieted the audience.

Rev. Hulton Sams was referee for the amateur boxing tournament recently, and official positions were held by two other clerics. Rev. Father Lane was timekeeper and Rev. C. Hicks, head of the Bush Brotherhood, was ten-second check. The reverend gentlemen proved efficient ringside officials, and carried their duties to the satisfaction of the contestants and the crowd.

TAKING NO CHANCES

"Johnny," said the teacher, "this is the third time I have had to punish you this week. Why are you so naughty?"

"Because," answered the incorrigible youngster, "grandpa says the good die young, and I ain't taking any chances."

A MILLINERY THOUGHT

"They say that when an ostrich is surprised he hides his head in the sand."

"I wish to thunder he'd everlastingly hide his tail there," observed the man who had just settled a heavy millinery bill.

JUST BEFORE THE BATTLE

Johnny—"Tisn't any."

Teacher—"Ah, but it must be."

Johnny—"Maybe yours is, because you talk through it, but the only part of speech I've got is my mouth."

FROM GENERATION TO GENERATION.

William had just returned from college, resplendent in loud-checked trousers, silk hosiery, a fancy waistcoat, a necktie that spoke for itself. He entered the library where his father was reading. The old gentleman looked up and surveyed his son. The longer he looked the more disgusted he became.

"Son," he finally blurted out, "you look like a silly fool!"

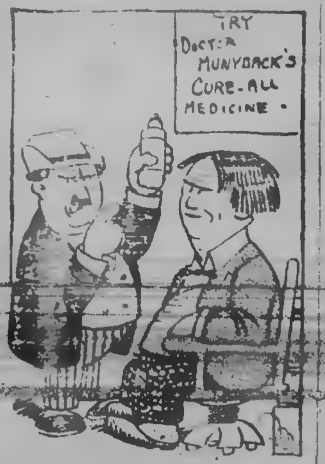
Later the old major who lived next door came in and greeted the boy heartily. "William," he said, with undisguised admiration, "you look exactly like your father did twenty-five years ago when he came back from school."

"Yes," replied William, with a smile. "So father was just telling me."

HE KNEW.

"The Malays have a queer marriage custom," remarked the traveller. "The groom holds his nose against a small cylindrical object. I couldn't quite make out what it was——"

"A grindstone, probably," interposed Mr. Grouch.



A MILLION MORE

Medicine Man: —"Well, probably you haven't tried everything else."

ACCORDING TO HIS CUSTOM.

At a restaurant one night a young American—a barber—fell in with an Englishman. The letter was berating the Yankees for doing all manner of business in their shops and not following the better English plan of sticking to one branch. The next day he swaggered into the barber's shop to be shaved. The barber gave his face an extra good soaping and left him, at the same time seating himself to read. The Englishman kept quiet for a few minutes, when, seeing his attendant reading, he blurted out: "Why don't you shave me, sir?"

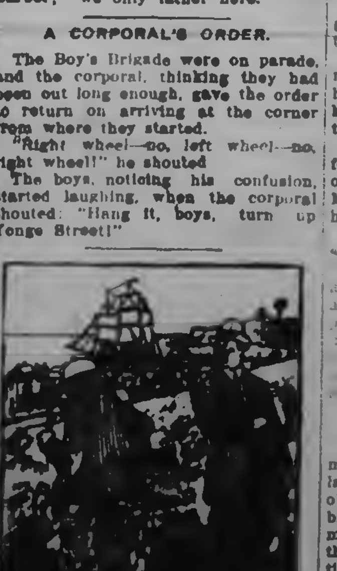
"You will have to go up the street for your shave," quietly replied the barber; "we only lather here."

A CORPORAL'S ORDER.

The Boy's Brigade were on parade, and the corporal, thinking they had been out long enough, gave the order to return on arriving at the corner from where they started.

"Right wheel—no, left wheel—no, right wheel!" he shouted.

The boys, noticing his confusion, started laughing, when the corporal shouted: "Hang it, boys, turn up Yonge Street!"



BARGAIN DAY

"Why are you in such a hurry?"

"Promised to meet my wife at three o'clock down at the corner."

GROOMS LEFT AT THE ALTAR

Strange Instances of Interuptions Which Cancelled the Marriage Ceremony

A recent society wedding sensation, where the bride failed to appear at the altar at the eleventh hour, is not without parallel. Only a short time ago a lady on arriving near the church to be married ordered her coachman to drive her home again. Although astonished at this extraordinary request for the bridegroom was actually waiting in the church, he complied with his mistress's orders. It transpired afterwards that she had merely turned back because the crowd which had gathered to cheer her frightened her away.

In Bristol, some years ago, a marriage failed to take place at the last moment, in the most dramatic circumstances. The bride had been previously engaged. For some reason or other the engagement was broken off, and her fiance sailed for Canada. After some time she became engaged to a local insurance agent. All arrangements were made, and the happy couple were to be married on an Easter Sunday. A large number of people were assembled to witness the ceremony which was just about to begin when the first lover appeared on the scene. The bride fainted, and on regaining her senses she refused to be married to the insurance agent. Since then she has become the wife of her former lover, who has taken her to his homestead in Canada.

On the morning that another happy pair were to be married the bridegroom, who had a moustache and beard, determined to be clean shaven for the ceremony. Why he made up his mind to do such a curious thing on his wedding morn is not known. However, when he was shaved his friends all congratulated him upon his improved appearance. The ceremony was timed for eleven o'clock, and punctually to the moment he appeared at the church. When the bride saw him, however, she had a fit of hysterics, and it was not till some hours too late that she recovered her composure. She then announced that she would not marry her lover in any circumstances, declaring that he was betrayed by his mouth, previously hidden by his moustache and beard, and that he looked to her to be cruel!

Many will remember the sensation caused twelve years ago by the stopping of a fashionable wedding at the very last moment. The bridegroom was an exceedingly well-known figure in the world of sport, and the bride was the widow of a wealthy man. The curious part about it was that the lady was the only one who believed in her lover. Everyone else knew that his reputation was far from spotless, but they could not, nevertheless, convince the charming widow. Everything was ready for the ceremony. The church had been profusely decorated with flowers, and many well-known and prominent people had taken their places.

The dramatic moment came when the couple met at the altar. The bride noticed that her intended husband was wearing a particularly valuable diamond tie-pin. Suddenly she cried out: "Take me home! Take me home! I cannot say anything more now!" To the consternation of all was stopped. So overcome was the bride that she fainted and had to be carried to her carriage. Later it transpired that this identical pin had been stolen some months before from the widow's rooms.—TIT BITS.

HORSES

Crushed oats are easier digested, and therefore more profitable than whole oats.

The driver's aim should be to manipulate the reins with a light but firm and steady hand.

A roll after a hard day's work is greatly appreciated by the horse. It takes the place of extra feed.

The value of salting the work horse regularly is often underestimated by horsemen. It is a good practice to keep the material before them at all times.

Remember that sudden changes of food may cause colic. New hay, new oats, green corn, etc., are often used. Make the change gradually, and no harm will result.

A horse that is extremely tired should not be given a heavy feed until he has had a little rest. Some feeders act on the supposition that a large amount of feed is what is needed to replace the lost energy. It must be remembered, however, that a horse so [illegible] cannot digest food as well [illegible] is fresh, and, therefore, should be fed accordingly.

TIGHT COLLARS

A well-known doctor considers it remarkable that no one seems to have laid stress on the fact that such slight obstacles to the free circulation of the blood through the vessels of the brain may adversely influence the health of those who are in the habit of wearing tightly-fitting neck clothes.

The fact appears to be well known to veterinary surgeons, who tell us that neck constriction through badly fitting harness is a causative factor in "staggers" in horses. It seems to be equally well known that dogs suffer a great deal through having to wear tightly fitting collars. Is it too much, then, he asks, to argue that those of us who wear our own collars too tightly buttoned may find that practice some explanation of symptoms ascribed to other causes?

Farmers Want More Help.

English immigrants who have taken places with the farmers of this county seem to be well satisfied with their lot, in the new country of their adoption. Mr. Howson, local immigration officer, seems to have difficulty in making the supply meet the demand of farmers for hired help.

On Sunday night, Dr. W. T. Graham, Toronto, will speak in Park street church on the Jesuits and their teachings. Admission is free, and on so strong a subject there should be a large audience present.

MINOR LEAGUE FOR ELEVEN YEARS

Doc Wiseman Not Good Enough to go Higher; too Good to go Back

It is not unusual for a big league player to remain with the same team for eight, nine, ten or eleven years, but instances of a minor league sticking to the same club for eleven seasons are limited to one, just one. Doc Wiseman the nashville outfielder, is the possessor of this unique record. Wiseman started in Nashville in 1900 and has remained there ever since, being given his release recently.

It is doubtful if Wisemans record will ever be duplicated, for it is more than unusual to find a player who for eleven years is not good enough to go higher and yet too good to go back. Ten seasons, anyway, without showing signs of deterioration.

The records show that in the eleven years Wiseman was in 1,401 games, of which the largest number played in a single season was 142 each in 1907 and 1910. In only one year, the first, did he fail to take part in less than 100 games, 96 being the total Doc had a repuation for his regularity missing a game only through injuries.

He went to bat some 5,000 times. The figures as to the exact number cannot be had, as the "at bats" in 1900 are omitted by the guide. However, in ten seasons he was up exactly 4,724 times. The year 1902 excepted, the runs made by him total 661, the largest number of which were made in 1901, when he crossed the plate 91 times. Fifty-one, in 1906, was the lowest he secured in a single season.

CHEAP BALLOONING

Voyage above Clouds can be Made to Last Six or Eight Days

Ballooning is about to undergo almost a revolution, owing to the facility which the use of liquid fuel gives to the hot-air balloon, or Montgolfiere. In France a Montgolfiere Society has been formed, and an aerostat has been devised with which ascents can be made at a cost of about $1. A balloon of 50,000 cubic feet capacity is equipped in the neck with a petrol stove, the heat from which can be regulated by a tap. Inflation costs about 62 cents in petrol, and with this a short trip can be made, or a longer voyage by carrying extra fuel. Mr. Gaudron has now announced the completion of designs for a combined gas and hot-air balloon—not at all, by the way, on the lines of the foolish experiment in 1785, by which Pilatre de Rosier and Romain lost their lives.

Mr. Gaudron's scheme involves the employment of an ordinary balloon provided with a balloonet, the latter for inflation by hot air from the liquid fuel stove. With this arrangement it should be easy to make a voyage last six or eight days.

HIS BEDROOM DOOR OPENS AT WHISTLE

There is in London a man who surely must combine the two characteristics of laziness and invention to a remarkable degree. It is his custom to have his breakfast in bed, and, burdened with the trouble of getting out for the purpose of unlocking his bedroom door, he has invented a door which opens to his whistle. He has accomplished this somewhat remarkable feat by means of a simple electromagnet which draws the bolt when a current passes through it, a platinum point, and a piano wire attuned to a certain note. When this note or one of its octaves, is sounded the wire vibrates in response, and this vibration brings it in contact with the platinum point. The circuit is thus completed, and a sensitive relay is brought into operation.

WHERE PROS. ARE NUMEROUS

No wonder they have champion oarsmen in Australia. The professionals are sufficiently numerous there to justify the formation of a professional scullers' league. The organization meeting was attended by three ex-champions of the world—William Beach George Towns and Peter Kemp—besides many other lesser lights. It does not always work out that way, though, England has a hundred entries in a professional handicap, but only one man approaching the first class.

MRS. RICHARD ARNST

Even the most nearly perfect of human machines may get out of order and champion sculler Richard Arnst recently had to go to a Sydney hospital for two weeks. The nurse to minister to his wants was Miss Amy Williams, and she is now Mrs. Richard Arnst.

Death of Former Local Man.

News comes from Vancouver, B.C., that Albert Parish, a former machinist of the Canadian General Electric Co., has been killed there by a scaffold giving way. He was thrown into the water with several hundred pounds of iron above him. Mr. John Sadler, father-in-law of the deceased who resides at 466 Gilmour street, had a letter from him recently. Mr. Parish leaves a wife and child, who reside at 165 Romaine street. Mr. Sadler, on seeing the dispatch containing the sad intelligence, at once wired for particulars.

A FAMOUS AIRMAN

Much That Was Pathetic in Gilmour's Death and Funeral

Graham Gilmour, the famous London airman who was killed by falling from a height of [illegible] feet left a letter dated several months previously. This he had entrusted to a friend requesting that should he be killed at any time that at his funeral there should be no bell tolled, no mourning, and no moaning. If any flowers, they were to be colored, and his body was to be taken away on a four-wheeled farmer's cart or on a motor lorry. He desired to be buried with his mother and father at Mickleham Church. The letter concluded: "I want everyone to be merry and bright, for I don't believe in moaning." The body was therefore conveyed on a motor lorry. It is doubtful, however, whether the last sad ceremony could be described as "merry and bright," as he desired it to be.

Mr. J. Radley, the aviator, fitted up the chassis of his own car as a hearse, draping it in purple, and upon this the coffin, covered with a purple pall, was conveyed from the mortuary at Richmond by way of Kingston to the quiet little village of Mickleham, near Dorking, twelve miles away.

Mr. Radley himself drove the vehicle, and six motor-cars followed, conveying friends of Mr. Gilmour. Numerous wreaths were sent, all consisting of colored flowers, including daffodils, red roses, lilacs, tulips, hyancinths, and mimosa. One wreath bore the inscription, "His last long flight."

There was a touching incident just before the service, an old lady placing beside the grave a wreath bearing the inscription, "In sorrowful memory of one whose youthful spirit and kindly word cheered a day in an old woman's lonely life."

The body was buried in the grave containing the remains of Mr. Gilmour's mother and father.

BALL PLAYERS WITH AUTOS

The Chicago Cubs Have More Motors Than Other Teams

The Chicago Cubs own more automobiles than any other aggregation of ball players in the American or National Leagues. Chance's men have been joining the ranks of the auto enthusiasts one at a time until about half the team are classed as gasoline bugs.

Chance was one of the very first men playing baseball to own an automobile. Then one at a time his players followed in his footsteps, and the other day Joe Tinker purchased a new car at the Kansas City Auto Show.

Ty Cobb is another enthusiast, although he manages to win some sort of a machine every year by leading the world in batting.

The New York Club stands next to the Chicago team as auto owners, and now that the Athletics have won a couple of pennants and two world's championships, which meant a lot of extra dough for every member of the team, watch Mack's aggregation of stars develop the gasoline bug.

It is estimated that over two hundred ball players own automobiles at the present time, and every year from twenty-five to fifty more converts are made.

MANLY SPORTS

Prof. Morson Says That They Should be Encouraged

Prof. Morson, Toronto, in dismissing the appeal against Magistrate Denison's decision imposing a fine on the National Sporting Club for promoting a prize fight said:

"I express no opinion upon the merits of the case as it is now unnecessary. I desire to say, however, that while I may be opposed to what are prize fights, in fact, I am much in sympathy with and desire to encourage all manly sports which include sparring matches, according to well-known rules and which are nothing more than exhibitions of skill and endurance.

"I do not think any honest, manly sport, because it is a little rough, should, on that account be stopped, nor do I think a sparring match, because it happens also to be a little rough, should on that acount be characterized as a prize fight.

"The late Lord Justice Bramwell in Rex. vs. Bradshaw, 14 Criminal Cases 83, says: 'I have no doubt that the game was in any circumstances a rough one, but am unwilling to decry the manly sports of this country all of which are no doubt attended with more or less danger.'"

HELPFUL HINTS

Household Information Which May Come in Handy

Get a nice thick piece of lean steak cover it with good olive oil, and let it remain in the oil for an hour before cooking. This will make it tender, and the oil forms a coating, thus keeping in all the juice. The same method applies to cutlets.

Removing Inkstains

To remove ink from colored materials, dip the stained part in warm milk that has been boiled, and rub it lightly with the finger. As the milk becomes inked, change it, and continue the process till the stain fades away, then rinse the fabric, dry it quickly, and smooth it with a warm iron.

When Boiling Greens

If some hot water is poured over the greens before putting into the saucepan they will boil much quicker and look much greener. A little bicarbonate of soda used instead of washing soda will keep the greens a better color and make them much more tender.

A Time-Saving Hint

Where the family washing is large, much time, labor and fuel can be saved if this method is followed: First shake out all bath towels, and spread evenly on the table; then hand and roller towels; next the pillow covers. Fold the bed sheets, place them over all, and then cover with the ironing sheet. Commence ironing all the underwear, tablecloths, and handkerchiefs—all except the starched clothes. Then remove ironing sheets and all the linen underneath will be as smooth as if put through the mangle. Fold same, and place on clothes horse to air.

Blanket Washing

Take half a cupful of pure ammonia, half a cupful of turpentine, and pour into a vessel that will hold two quarts of water; then cut up a small piece of soap about the size of a walnut—not more—or else the solution will be too stiff when cold. Then pour on two quarts of boiling water. When the liquid is cool, bottle off, and keep the bottle tightly corked. Be careful when pouring on the water, as the fumes are very strong. When washing the blankets add half a cupful of this mixture to each tub of water, and you will be more than pleased at the result. The blankets will come up quite soft and fluffy, and if this is carefully carried out they will never shrink.

Hints on Renovating

Light colored velvets may be cleaned by rubbing with benzoin or paraffin oil.

Chiffon can be washed in tepid water in which has been dissolved a small piece of Castile soap.

White silk should be washed in lukewarm water, rolled in a cloth, and ironed quite damp.

Where money is an object, it is a wise plan for everyone to know as much as possible about the art of renovating.

Crepe should be wound round a bottle, and steamed over boiling water.

Ribbon should be well brushed, damped, and ironed between folds of tissue paper.

Chip hats should be first well brushed, then cleaned by rubbing with equal quantities of oil and ink.

White felt hats, if white, may be cleaned by rubbing with oatmeal.

For instance, velvet may be made as good as new by the following process: Place a damp cloth over a hot iron, and draw the back of the velvet over the cloth. When the creases are all out, remove the cloth, and dry by rubbing the back of the velvet over the iron.

HANDY FRUIT CORER

Extracts Centre of Apple or Pear at One Quick Stroke

A simple and effective device for extracting stones and cores from fruit has been designed by a Virginian man and will probably become a popular kitchen utensil. At first glance it resembles the top of a spade handle broken off. A single sheet of metal is rolled into a tube, tapering towards the bottom and with a pair of arms extending above, joined at their tops to a wooden handle between. The lower end of the tube has two sharp lips projecting opposite each other. To core an apple or pear the fruit is placed on the table, stem up, and the cutter thrust down through the centre. It is then pulled out again, bringing with it the centre of the fruit with the seeds and the hard substances that are so unpleasant to encounter in baked or stewed fruit. The same operation will remove stones from fruits that are not easily split in two, as are peaches, and cleaned in that way.

MACHINE OIL

Should any machine oil get on the material you are sewing, tack a piece of cotton-wool over the spot at once, and leave it for a short time. The cotton-wool absorbs the oil, and no trace of the stain will be left.

Want Fair Wage Clause.

On Monday night a committee of the Trades and Labor Council will wait on the City Council to ask that in all contracts for city work, a clause calling for fair wages be included. This question was discussed at a meeting held in the Labor temple Wednesday night. The idea is that when a contractor accepts a contract that he recognize a fair wage agreement, and that in the event of it being broken a penalty be imposed upon him. This petition of the Trades and Labor Council will be significant from the fact that two schools will likely be erected here this summer.

WOMAN'S DRESS CENTURIES AGO

Modern Garb Not as Absurd as It Was in the Elizabethan Century

Absurd as some of our modern fashions may be they cannot equal in absurdity those of a century ago.

For instance, in 1794, the heavy tax that was placed upon hair-powder brought the Georgian wigs into disfavor, and women being forced to wear merely their own hair adopted a hundred extravagant modes of dressing it. One of the most ridiculous was that of wearing very enormous feathers. These feathers were so high that it was impossible to wear them in carriages with tops, and The Times, commenting caustically upon an accident, stated that "a young lady, only ten feet high, was overset yesterday in a gale of wind, and the upper mast of her feather blown upon Hamstead Hill."

At this period, the distinguishing characteristic of the dress for nearly twenty years was the high waist—so high that gowns were made all in one. They had no sleeves, merely shoulder straps elaborately embroidered, while a cape or collarette was donned when the wearer went out of doors. In 1801 the scanty skirts became a little fuller, but the next year they were scantier than before and very short. The "Titus" or Roman style of hairdressing had come in and many women had their hair cut close to the head. With arms and neck bare, skirts reaching only half way below the knee, and short hair, the fashionable dames must have cut a sorry figure.

Immediately upon the heels of this Roman craze came a reaction in favor of Stuart ruffs and caps, and sleeves suddenly reappeared, so long as to completely hide the hands. The famous Spencer made its debut, and the Capote or greatcoat, Queen Charlotte's favorite dress, became very popular. It was like a man's coat, having a velvet collar. A passion for imitating man's dress then burst forth. A portrait of a lady of this period in driving dress is eloquent of the follies committed in the name of fashion. She is wearing a box coat and cape, a round white beaver hat, a white cravat, and Hessian boots; the coat is open, showing the costume beneath—a cambric dress cut as low at the neck as our evening dress, and fitting close to the body without any fullness in such a manner as to disclose the lines of the figure. At this time the thin gowns were even damped in order that they should cling more closely to their wearers as they dried, and the lighter the clothing the more it was admired.

In 1809 the turban came into prominence. It was a curiously shaped cap, fitting closely over the forehead, over which was wound many yards of silk of eastern manufacture. A jewelled aigrette or a feather was negligently placed amongst the folds.

About 1812, brocades, silks and satins came into daily use, and dresses began [illegible]. In 1828 the famous gigot sleeves made their appearance. Some of them were so large as to require almost as much material as the dress itself.

The first bonnets came into style about 1820. They completely enshrouded the face, being tied with broad ribbons under the chin. Then they became enormously large, covered with tufts of marabout feathers, and well meriting the name "majestic monuments of millinery." The hair, too, was massively arranged, interwoven with ribbons, and of a fantastic height. After this phase came the hideous mode of straining the hair away from the face so tightly that it was impossible to close one's eyes, whilst a long ringlet fell down the sides of the face, corresponding in size to the pendant earrings then worn.

In the matter of colors our grandmothers were totally ignorant of the "art shades." Primary colors in all their crudity were the delight of their hearts, and greens and yellows of aggressive density were worn together, read feathers sometimes being added to these. The more inharmonious the whole effect, the greater the success of the costume. Naturally, a vulgar display of jewellery accompanied the lack of taste in color. For nearly fifty years the topaz was the favorite precious stone.

"Oblivion is not to be hired"; yet from the annals of our ancestresses women may learn much—among other things, the real proportion of dress in everyday life, and the ludicrous folly of excess therein.—Amelia Sedley.

PIVOT OF THE HOUSEHOLD

Make Home Attractive for the Boys and Girls

It is a most common complaint amongst parents that their children, as soon as they arrive at years of independence, drift away from their homes, or that the boys and girls never seem to be happy at home, but always want to be out. They usually blame the children for lack of parental affection instead of turning their thoughts inward to solve the problem. It never seems to occur to some parents that they have not made such a pleasant place that their children find their greatest happiness within it. Young people of both sexes have a great natural craving for happiness and recreation, but they are too often sacrificed at the altar of parental comfort.

The idea that the comfort of the parents is the pivot on which the household should revolve has been the cause of more discontented and restless sons and daughters than anything else, and has led to many hasty, ill-considered youthful marriages.—Mrs. Bull.

A USEFUL HINT

When beating eggs, if a whisk is not handy, try using three forks instead of one. They are just as easy to hold as one, and the eggs can be beaten in about a third of the time.

Port Hope Council met a few days ago to consider a milk by-law. No wonder, with Lake Ontario so handy!

The plans of the new school, as submitted to the Board by Mr. F. Bartlett, architect, show a noble building of two stories, with twelve rooms.

There is a grey hound at the police station and the owner cannot be found. It has a white head. The owner may have the animal by identifying it.

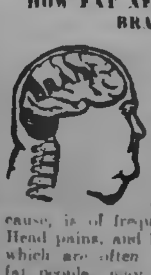
THE NEXT MOVE IN EUROPE.

The kaiser seems to have accepted the Churchill speech with good grace, although he was reported to the contrary. However, the horizon is not quite clear. It is held by some diplomatists that Germany is bent on avenging her [illegible] occo, and that [illegible] soon as the melting snows protect her rear, by rendering the Polish roads impassable to Russia. And even if Germany will hold her hand we are told the Balkans will assuredly set a light to the train. There, too, the disappearance of the snow from the hills will let loose the dogs of war and the pent-up passions of people who are hungering to dismember the Turkish empire, weakened as it now is, and pre-occupied by the Italian war. And if once that move is made, Austria immediately becomes involved; if Austria, then Russia and Italy; if these, England, France and Germany as well, because of their alliances or because their vital interests are engaged. In the case of the Balkan states the economic factor as a restraining influence against an outbreak of hostilities does not count. That is one of the fundamental elements of the situation. Turkey is a pre-economic state, and most [illegible] of the other Balkan communities are the same. The population still lives almost exclusively on the soil; there are no industries to speak of, railways are few, machinery is hardly employed, credit—save in a few towns and then chiefly among foreigners—is almost unknown. War, though it may be conducted with great barbarity, is a comparatively simple operation, which need not ruin the country even if it is defeated.

The Balkan people are easily moved to acts of violence, and are little restrained by consideration of possible material loss, because they have little to lose but their lives. And, as Bacon said, men prefer danger to labor.

DANGERS OF FAT

HOW FAT AFFECTS THE BRAIN



Just how fat affects and finally destroys the brain is not exactly known; however, degeneration, and final collapse of brain tissue, due to this cause, is of frequent occurrence. Head pains, and head heaviness, which are often experienced by fat people, may indicate that this degenerating process is imminent. The return of this fatty tissue to normal brain substance, may and probably will result if the overproduction of fat is stopped in other parts of the body. Thousands of fat people have depended entirely for reductions to normal weight, upon Marmola Prescription Tablets, which are made after the exact formula of the famous liquid Marmola Prescription. While taking these tablets for the reduction of fat, no dieting nor exercise are necessary, as a reduction of 10 to 16 oz. a day is accomplished by prevention as well as elimination of fat. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold at all druggists or the Marmola Co., 1192 Farmer Bldg. Detroit, Mich., at the uniform price of 75c. for a large case. They remove the fat already formed, prevent its reforming, clear the complexion and tone up the entire system.

Editorial Notes

An Act under consideration by the Toronto house, is based upon sound and common sense argument, viz:—That the House is of the opinion that a thorough system of good roads in this Province would increase the value of farm lands, lessen the cost of transportation, improve marketing facilities increase the comfort and convenience of farm life, and greatly promote the general progress and prosperity of the Province.

Hon. Col. Sam Hughes is out with a new and radical change suggested regarding the Canadian Militia. He advocates having the various municipalities bear the cost of maintaining the soldiers of their locality, instead of the Federal government paying the bill. Should his suggestion be adopted there would be a shrinkage in the battallions, troops, batteries and regiments, and a reduction of gold braid when the people had to meet a direct tax.

When Bonar Law became leader of the Opposition in the British House of Commons it was stated in his newspaper biographies that he was a Canadian and educated at Hamilton. The mushy Hamilton press immediately proceeded to make great capital out of this and dilated on the fame achieved by Hamilton's favorite son, keeping it up bravely until it transpired that, although a Canadian, Bonar Law had been educated at Hamilton, a small town near Glasgow, Scotland. One cannot help pitying Hamilton, Ont.

There is a prevalent opinion that a Free Mason has never been executed. [illegible] a Free Mason, had the task of sentencing a brother Free Mason, Fred H. Seddon to death for murdering an elderly spinster. Seddon's wife was charged with the same offence, but was acquitted. In passing sentence, as the prisoner had given a Masonic sign, and declared his innocence, the judge remarked: "I see that we both belong to the same brotherhood which makes my duty all the more painful, but freemasonry condemns crime."

Calgary Eyeopener: If a married man fails to meet a pecuniary obligation, all he has to do is to explain that his wife has just come through a severe illness, and what with doctor's bills, drug store bills, and the trained nurse, he has had a severe strain on his pocket-book, but everything is all right now and all he needs is a little more time to build up again, etc., etc. And when your married man goes in for assimilating a horde of creditors, the creditors finally discover that his property is all in his wife's name. This marriage stunt certainly has its uses, if worked properly.

The Methodists in Rome seem to be prospering. The Rev. Bertrand M. Tipple, president of the Methodist Episcopal College of Rome, says: "In our Methodist College for young men in Rome, we have not room for one more matriculant. Literally every foot of space is occupied. We are praying daily that God will give us a new building. We could have a thousand of the finest boys of the New Italy, if we had the accommodation for them." And yet the Roman Church still dreams of the restoration of its temporal power! Oh, when we come to think of it, does it really dream of it, or only try to make folks think it does?

The Ontario Government is considering a change in Provincial health conditions. The proposed act reads:—"That the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may divide the Province into not more than ten Health Districts, and may appoint a legally qualified medical practitioner to be known as the District Officer of Health for each such District, but a city, having a population of 50,000 or over, according to the last census of Canada, shall not be included in any such District. That every District Officer of Health shall be paid an annual salary not exceeding $2,500 and an allowance of $——— for expenses, and such salary and allowance shall be payable in the first instance out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund. That the Council of every county forming part of a health district shall annually on or before the 1st day of February pay to the Treasurer of Ontario such proportion of the salary and allowance of the District Officer of Health based upon the population of the County according to the last census of Canada and exclusive of the population of any city or separated town within the county as may be certified by the Chief Officer.

TORTURED FOR NEARLY 2 YEARS

MRS. POULIN FOUND RELIEF IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Rheumatism, Backache, and Headaches Were Her Portion But Now She is a New Woman.

McCREARY, Man., March 29—(Special)—"Four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made a new person of me." The speaker is Mrs. Oliver Poulin, of this place, and her numerous friends here fully verify her statement.

"For nearly two years," Mrs. Poulin continues, "rheumatism tortured me. My back and head also ached. My eyes were puffed and swollen. I am sixty-[illegible] years of age and you can see I was a pretty sick woman. But Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me."

[illegible] down, and sick all over? Dodd's Kidney Pills [illegible]. How? Simply by curing the kidneys. The diseased kidneys were the cause of all the trouble. They were failing to strain the impurities out of the blood, and the result was disease all over the body. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured the kidneys, the impurities were strained out of the blood. The result was pure blood and good health all over the body. The cause of the disease had been removed.

APSLEY

There are not many changes taking place in our district but once in a while an old resident decides to leave for new pastures. Geo. A. Bullied who has been a very successful farmer of Chandos for over thirty years has sold his farm stock, implements, &c., and removed to Coe Hill to take charge of that large and commodious hotel near the station, which he has leased for a term of years, and as soon as he makes the necessary repairs the travelling public will be assured of first class accommodation. George and his family will be missed by every one and all join in wishing him success in his new enterprise. Mr. Peter Johnston has leased Mr. Bullied's farm and will move there in a few days.

Thomas and John Coones have gone to the North-West, intending to spend the summer there, and if the country suits will buy or pre-empt homesteads. Their sister, Miss Annie Coones, accompanied them as far as Lakefield where she will visit her aunt for a few weeks.

Reeve Tucker gave the young people a dance last Monday evening. All report a good time, but that is what they always have when William gives a dance. They must certainly have enjoyed themselves as it was daylight when those from the village got home.

We were pleased to see Ernie again with his commercial travellers, J. G. Hardill representing T. Kennear & Co. and S. G. Taylor representing Kingan Hardware Co. They came one day in advance of their usual date as the weather began at last to show signs of spring. Ernie thought it advisable to do so as if it should rain the roads would become very bad. Mr. Hardill has been making regular trips to Apsley for the past six years, and in that time has never missed one, and was only one-half a day late on one of those trips, and that time we never expected he would make through on account of the drifts, but he did. In those six years he has worked up a splendid business here for his firm and has made many friends in this locality. The merchants always look forward with pleasure for his coming and hope he will visit them for many years to come. Mr. Taylor has not been long on this route but is working up a nice trade here for his firm and no doubt in his next trip will book good orders.

The crows, harbingers of spring, are out in number, yet one bird was hovering around here all winter, and kept busy too—"the Stork"—No race suicide in this country.

Lumbering among the jobbers is done and Jerry and assistant have finished measuring. All report a good, profitable winter despite the deep snow. Settlement at an early date.

CANADA DOES NOT PRODUCE ENOUGH

Problem at the Bottom of the High Cost of living—Too Much Wheat and Land Speculation

"The Globe," Toronto, early in February published an interesting interview with an expert on the question of the high cost of living. The interview in part was as follows:—

"Prices have already reached a dizzy height. But they have not yet done climbing. The people, at such a time as this, are apt to talk about the extortionist practices of the butcher, the grocer, the baker and the other purveyors of our daily substance. It is one of the foibles of human nature to blame the man next to you when in physical distress, but the present condition of the commodity markets is the effect of a cause that lies farther back than the store or the wholesale house with which you are doing business. The high cost of our food can only be due to one thing—namely, a lack of supplies. This is a greater explanation, based on the general law of supply and demand, but it contains the reason why food is so expensive in Ontario, and, in fact, in all Canada."

"The production of food has obviously failed to keep pace with consumption. Many commodities, which Canada used to export in large quantities are now being consumed entirely at home. Some phases of the foreign trade threaten to pass into complete oblivion, for, although the total value of all agricultural products exported increased from $27,516,609 in 1900 to $80,000,000 last year, the exports of cattle barely held their own, sheep exports showed a huge decrease, while the shipments of butter, after increasing from $5,122,156 in 1900 to $7,075,539 in 1906, fell off to less than two millions in each of the past three years. Eighty millions dollars' worth of the total output of dairy produce, which is estimated at a hundred million dollars a year, is being consumed at home.

"Canada's exports of cheese are about [illegible] ten or twelve years ago. The net in[illegible] products, then, is explained by the growing export of grain and flour trade. Exports of wheat in its raw state increased by $36,000,000 from 1900 to 1909, while exports of wheat flour increased by $6,000,000."

HALF BILLION BUSHELS OF WHEAT IN TEN YEARS

Prediction of a Financial Writer Regarding the Harvest of the Prairie Provinces.

The Monetary Times, of Toronto, in a recent statistical article on the wheat producing capacity of Western Canada, undertakes to predict that the three prairie provinces will produce a wheat harvest of over half a billion bushels in the next ten years. The writer of the article, Mr. Fred W. Field in making his calculations says:

"In estimating the probable increase, there are many important factors of which cognizance must be taken. In Manitoba it is said that there is still unoccupied land suitable for cultivation to the extent of over 20,000,000 acres. This will be increased when the area of the province is enlarged. In Saskatchewan, of an area of over 155,000,000 acres of wheat land, there are about 15,000,000 acres of unbroken prairie. Of the 162,000,000 acres in Alberta, it is estimated that 100,000,000 are fit for cultivation, while only about 2 per cent. are under cultivation. This estimate does not include the large area of excellent land in the Peace River country. There is less than 10 per cent. of the Western arable lands under cultivation, so that the field for labor in wheat growing is, comparatively speaking, unlimited.

In 1914, we shall have two more transcontinental railways, which will open much new land for settlement. The improvement in farmig implements will mean the tilling of greater acreage in less time. These factors should compensate somewhat for the probability that mixed farming in the West will be engaged in more than hitherto, with consequently less attention to wheat, and for the fact that constant wheat growing makes the soil poorer. Assuming, after allowing for these factors, that the ratio of increase in the next ten years will be as great as in the past ten years, there will be in 1920 in the three Western provinces wheat acreage of 34,231,000 acres and a wheat crop of 513,000,000 bushels. The accompanying chart gives an ideal of the estimated increase, which allows only a yield of per acre of 15 bushels. The average wheat yield per acre in the West during the past four years was 19.71 bushels. Accepting that figure as the yield of 1920, the 34,231,000 acres should yield 675,466,910 bushels."

BRAINS IN THE HAND.

What's that you have in your hand?" asked Mrs. Gimlet, of her husband, as he brought home a roll of manuscript.

"Brains, madam," retorted Mr. Gimlet, pompously. "Are you surprised at the fact?"

"Not in the least," she replied. "I know you didn't carry them in your head."

NEW COOK'S PUDDING.

Wife: "This pudding is a sample of the new cook's work. What do you think of it?"

Husband: "I'd call it mediocre."

Wife: "No, dear; it's tapioca."

FATHER AND DONKEY.

Small Boy: "Can't I have a ride on a donkey?"

Mother: "No, darling. Father says not."

Mother (to father): "Oh, for goodness' sake, Bill, give him a ride on your back to keep him quiet."

WHAT $10 WILL DO

Somewhere—"sometime"—when you've saved enough for a "start" your dream is to cut loose from the business grind and own something, some property, a something that people MUST have and which you can sell for far more than you paid for it, and thus start on the road to independence.

Now speaking man to man, at your present rate of progress will you ever do it? Not if you let present opportunity slip, and later try to catch up with rising prices. We want to help you, want to show you that you can do all you dreamed of doing, and you'll do it NOW.

It's hard to save, as we all find out, when you haven't a bulls-eye big and black, right in front of you, where you can record each added splash on the target. We have the target for you, the best investment target that is to-day before the public; we refer to the controlling commercial centre of the Peace River Country—namely GROUARD.

GROUARD situated at the western end of Lesser Slave Lake, Alberta, where rail and water meet.

Behind it there are millions of acres of Peace River farm lands. RAILROADS ARE BUILDING TO GROUARD. The Canadian Northern Railway, and the Edmonton Dunvegan and British Columbia Railways, both with BONDS OF CONSTRUCTION GUARANTEED BY THE ALBERTA GOVERNMENT. Would the railway companies build, would the Government guarantee, if Grouard and the country surrounding it were not important, were not going to make good?

Another Railway Company—The Pacific and Hudson Bay, have taken part of our subdivision for their TERMINALS AT GROUARD, and are under agreement to erect same ON THIS PROPERTY, and no other, in GROUARD.

Think of it: THREE railroads heading for Grouard.

Banks have established at Grouard. Would they be there if no business was to be done? FOLLOW THEIR LEAD IN YOUR INVESTMENTS, AND YOU WILL BENEFIT.

Ten dollars paid down starts you on the road to prosperity. It is all that is required as a first payment on either a business or a residential lot.

Read our easy terms of payment for the balance. Acquire a valuable property and start on the road to independence. If you don't someone else will, and take the profit and benefit.

You Cannot Lose--Our Guarantee Protects You

WAINWRIGHT, the main central divisional point on the Grand Trunk Pacific, will be one of the big cities of Canada, for the following reasons:

It is almost exactly midway between the terminals on the Great Lakes at Fort William and Port Arthur, and the terminals on the Pacific Coast at Prince Rupert---the pivot where all train crews will operate from, where the big pay roll will be the divisional point from which most of the mid-western branch lines will radiate.

At present there are 422 miles of branch lines under construction and 350 miles chartered.

WAINWRIGHT will be to the Grand Trunk Pacific what Moose Jaw is to the Canadian Pacific Railway, and it will be more, because it is the centre of one of the finest agricultural districts in the world.

Wainwright Is Already Famous

There would be no hesitation about investments in Western towns if you could not lose. Well, you cannot lose in Wainwright. "Our guaranteed protection," [illegible] appears in every contract. These lots for business purposes, and with track frontage, from $125 to $175 each; residential lots priced from $75 to $100 each.

Prices of Lots

Prices of lots, $75, $100, $125, $150, $175. Cash payment one-quarter, balance $7.50 monthly. No Interest. No Taxes.

WAINWRIGHT

Alberta, is one of the famous young cities of the West, that have been created by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. [illegible] midway between Fort William and Prince Rupert, and it will be the most important junction pivot in that whole stretch of 2,200 miles of railway.

WAINWRIGHT

is not only a divisional point on the Grand Trunk Pacific, but it is also an important railway junction. A line of the Canadian Northern Railway has been surveyed and is on the programme of immediate construction, crossing the Grand Trunk at Wainwright, and branch lines of both these roads will radiate from this point.

WAINWRIGHT

is now the second largest shipping point for cattle in the Province of Alberta. The town is the centre of one of the largest grazing, stock-raising and farming districts of the whole West. Wainwright grain yield for 1907 increased 400 per cent. over 1910. Wainwright, then, in the near future, will not only be to the Grand Trunk Pacific what Moose Jaw is to the Canadian Pacific, but it will also be, on its own account, the centre of larger and better producing district.

WAINWRIGHT

is already famous. It has the National Buffalo Park, an institution which alone will make the town the mecca of thousands of visitors each year, and make its name known in every home and hamlet of the whole Dominion in years to come, because in this park will be found the only remaining herd of wild buffalo in existence. Wainwright is less than three years old. It's a thriving, bustling little city now, with good improvements and unexcelled natural resources, including valuable coal deposits.

SIX MILLION GERMS FOUND ON ONE FLY

Dr. Gordon Hewitt of Ottawa Tells of Dangers of Common Pest

"The House Fly and its Relation to Public Health," was the subject of an address by Dr. G. Hewitt, the prominent entomologist of Ottawa. Had a large number of pictures thrown on the canvas to illustrate the different points of his discourse. By the aid of these he showed the hairy nature of the fly's legs abdomen, which, he explained, could not fail to collect filth and bacteria wherever they were met with. Photos of culture plates were shown over which flies had passed, and large colonies of typhoid, tubercular and other bacteria had subsequently formed. Far more germs find lodging inside of a fly than without, and, according to Dr. Hewitt, these may be taken in by the fly or the egg may have become innoculated by the usually filthy substance in which it is deposited. After a few hours the maggot emerges, already infected, nor does it recover when passing through the pupa stage. And so you have your fly born innoculated. Throughout the various transitions from the laying of the eggs till the full-fledged flies are ready to propagate no more than nine or ten days transpire in hot weather. Now a fly deposits from 120 to 150 eggs at a time, and repeats this performance six or eight times during the season. A fly captured in a living-room was allowed to stroll over a culture plate. Thirty colonies of six different species of germs developed. Another captured in a dining-room walking over a culture plate gave rise to 46 colonies of seven varieties, and yet another found in the flies' Elysium, the putrefying garbage heap, deposited in the plate the nucleus of 116 colonies of ten varieties. Over 6,000,000 germs have been found on onefly. Some of the pictures graphically set forth the facility with which the fly passes from the garbage can, stable refuse, excretia, and sputa of the victims of typhoid and tuberculosis, to the kitchen, the dining-room, and the nursery with attending deleterious results. Primarily the cause is untreated or unprotected filth, for without these the fly could not propagate. Effective cures must then deal with these. To banish the fly, the putrifying garbage heap, the exposed manure piles, and various other breeding places must be treated, destroyed or enclosed.

Summer diarrhoea, the most copious source of infantile mortality in summer, is due in no small degree to fly contamination. According to Dr. Hewitt the annihilation of the fly is of the utmost importance. We can succeed, he states, in the same way as the United States Government did in banishing yellow fever by abolishing the mosquitos by destruction of the breeding places.

Headaches Over the Eyes Mean Frontal Catarrh

APT TO GET INTO EARS, CAUSING DEAFNESS, OR TO REACH THE LUNGS AND END IN CONSUMPTION.

You Can Cure Catarrh in Any Stage by Breathing the Healing, Balsamic Fumes of Catarrhozone, and Here is Proof.

Mr. Uric Berault, a young gentleman who has lived for years in Sweetsburg, Que., inherited catarrh from his mother. The disease spread through his system till he was a physical wreck.

"As a child," said Mr. Berault, "I was prone to an ulceration of the mucous lining of the throat and nasal passages.

"I grew pale and emaciated, lost all desire for food, and got into such a dreadful condition that my friends said that Catarrh was fairly eating me up.

"Every organ of my body seemed affected, and the doctor said it was the first stage of consumption. He advised Catarrhozone and I inhaled it ten minutes at a time every few hours, and was rewarded in a few days by a wonderful improvement.

"Catarrhozone pleased me and the doctor so well that I used it continually, and took Ferrozone Tablets after each meal to build up my strength. In about three weeks I was quite recovered, and the doctor says no remedy but Catarrhozone could work such a miracle.

"Everyone in town knows I was just about dead with catarrh, and my cure is an evidence of what Catarrhozone can do. It is a pleasure to recommend Catarrhozone."

Two months' treatment, large size, price $1, and guaranteed. Small size, 50c., all reliable dealers or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont. Beware of dangerous substitutes and imitations for "Catarrhozone."

DARING ANIMAL OPERATIONS

Remarkable Dental and Surgical Operations in Zoos.

The great feat performed by Professor Woolridge at the London Zoo setting the fractured jaws of the famous nine-yards-long python is a reminder of the remarkable progress made in operating upon animals.

There are now quite a number of pet dogs and cats with artificial eyes and legs; and a short time ago a cat, having swallowed a small hatpin, was placed under the X-rays, and, the pin having been located, was soon skilfully drawn. Professor Garre a few years ago removed the kidney of a dog and sewed it in the same animal's neck; and later he sewed the kidney of a dog in the body of another canine. The experiement was quite successful.

Perhaps the greatest dental operation on record was performed upon an elephant in the city of Mexco. The aching tooth was 12 in. long and 14 in. in diameter at the root. After the animal had been securely fastened with chains, his mouth was prised open, and a quantity of cocaine applied to deaden the pain. When this was done, a hole was bored through the tooth, and an iron bar inserted. Then a rope was twisted around the bar, and four horses were attached thereto to drag the offending molar out.

Help came. It came in the bulky shape of the dog's owner, who hurried out of the house to the scene of battle.

"Naughty little Towser! Down! down!" she exclaimed. "I do hope he hasn't bitten you?"

"No; I've kept him off giving him your suet," replied the lad, tearfully, "but you're just in time to save the beef."

BALL IN CANADA IN THE LONG AGO

The Development of the Game Since 1867 When it Had a Very Crude Beginning

Charlie Maddock, the veteran catcher of the Guelph Maple Leafs, has given his reminiscences of the base ball game in Canada. He says in part:

"If my memory serves me correctly, 1867 saw the crude efforts of the exponents illustrating the game as propounded by National League rules, which had been in vogue across the border for some years.

From its inception the game found many devotees and soon became popular among all classes. By steady practice the members soon became crystalized into able exponents of this sport, which has held its own through all the succeeding years. The rules at the beginning were so crude that it made it difficult for umpires to give correct and satisfying decisions. For instance, there was what was called a fair foul rule, by hitting the ball on the foul line or inside and rolling anywhere back of first or third bases was a fair ball; if a base runner got hit by a batted ball, or if he interfered with a fielder infielding the ball, it was left to the direction of the umpire as to whether the base runner did it intentionally or not. The bound on the field, either fair or foul, was out, and it was amusing to see the fielders instead of making the catch playing the bound and when the ball hit some obstacle on the uneven ground it more often than not bounded to one side or over their heads, a home run resulting. Those days you could call for high or low ball—the latter between the knee and the waist, and the former between the waist and shoulder. Filling the position of catcher, I had the opportunity of pulling off plays that are foreign to the game to-day.

Catching without gloves, masks, or protectors, the foul bound and trapping balls was a prolific source of plays. Behind the plate fouls hitting your body could be picked up on the short bound, retiring the batter, and triple and double plays were possible by trapping the third strike and playing the ball around the bases.

Fielder's gloves were unthought of in those days, and the balls were much livelier, with double the rubber, and the seams were much coarser, making it much harder on the hands.

Scores naturally were larger, under hand pitching, rough grounds and the lively ball chiefly contributing to this result. The latter end of the sixties I can remember several games where over 100 runs made by the winning team. It was not many years before the throw was introduced, the arm not to be raised above the level of the shoulder. By that rule [illegible] most [illegible] could be attained. Some of our most effective pitchers to-day adopt the underhand delivery. The distance then was 45 feet from the plate to pitcher's box.

The first tournament we attended was held in London about 1870, between first and second class clubs. Many cubs were entered from all parts of Canada in both classes. The first club we played was Ingersoll, defeating them 76 to 24. We then played Woodstock, which was much closer and a better contested game, finally resulting in our favor by the score of 13 to 8. A notable instance of uncertainty of the game happened in Kingston on one of our annual visits. The game was a close and exciting one, replete with fine pitching and magnificent fielding right up to the closing inning, when the score stood 2 to 0 in our favor. With two down and a man on fist in the ninth, the next batter up hit a slow grounder to Jones, our short stop. Allowing the ball to pass him, Smith, the left fielder, ran in and got the ball making a wild throw to the plate, and before I could recover both runs had scored, making two all. Playing on till the twelfth, our opponents succeeded in scoring, defeating us by 3 to 2. On another occasion we were defeated by the St. Lawrence Club of Kingston, the only instance in my recollection. We were ahead by a good margin on the sixth, when a thunderstorm came up, making the ball difficult to throw. Our opponents' scored six runs, ultimately winning the game.

On leaving the grounds to reach our conveyances, we were usually chased by the hoodlums, throwing mud and stones, which we naturally resented, and a comical remark made by our first base man, Nat Cross, I have never forgotten. A whole-souled big Irishman, a blacksmith, hailing from the Royal City, and afterwards a member of the Toronto police force for about two years. It was commonly reported that he was let go because he never made an arrest, which was sufficient cause for dismissal. Suffer-under defeat and the highly improper ovation tendered us, he rose to the occasion by offering to make a novel wager by exclaiming, "Be jabers, boys, I have no money on me, but I will bet yes a year in the penitentiary we can beat ye to-morrow.

NEW SIGHTING DEVICE

A new sighting device has been invented which promises to make every soldier a dead shot—if he doesn't forget the essential principle in the heat of the battle. By an ingenious application of a well-known law of mathematics the soldier has simply to estimate the apparent height of the objec he desires to hit, and to fire at an imaginary point below the ground. The theory of the device is geometrically sound and scientifically infallible, since the sight is so arranged that when the shot leaves the barrel and reaches its vortex it attains a height just double that of the target, and, in scientific language, "the negative aim creates an angle below the ground line which automatically subtracts from the angle of elevation."

HIGHER RENTS BUT HIGHER WAGES TOO

Conditions in America Much More Favorable to Wage Earner Than in England

In proposing to make changes in Canada's fiscal system, it will always be necessary for the advocates of free trade or a reduced tariff to convince the people absolutely that the change will not interfere detrimentally with existing conditions. For one thing, the workingman must be assured that tariff reduction will not deprive him of any of the comforts or advantages he now enjoys. The present well-being of the working classes is certain. Their continued prosperity under a condition of free trade is a matter of doubt. To propose then, that Canada should experiment and fin out what would result from cutting down the tariff, is a line of action that she cannot afford to take. She must be sure of her ground before taking steps in that direction.

Free Trade England vs. America

It can be proved conclusively that in countries under a system of free trade, the industrial classes are worse off than they are in countries where protection is acorded to industry. Thanks to the careful investigations of the British Board of Trade, it is possible to demonstrate that the artisans of the United Kingdoms, taken in the aggregate, are not in the enjoyment of such comforts and advantages as are the artisans of America. England is a typically free trade country and the United States, as typically protectionist one and because the habits, customs and standard of living of the people of both are akin to those of Canada, it follows that a comparison of the conditions prevalent in the two countries will have a direct bearing on the situation in the Dominion.

An Exhaustive Enquiry

The British Board of Trade last year conducted an enquiry into the question of wages and cost of living among the industrial classes of America and included in the report is a valuable comparison of the figures for the United States with those for the United Kingdom and Wales as secured in 1905 and revised to date.

In order to make the enquiry as complete and accurate as possible, statistics were secured from twenty-eight cities scattered throughout the industrial states of the East. Further, to make comparisons possible, three classes of industry were selected for investigation the building trades, the engineering, trades and the printing trades because these three of all others are common to practically all countries.

Smaller Wages in England

Without entering into the details of the finding, it was shown that in the building trades, weekly wages in the United States exceeded those paid in the United Kingdom by a ratio of 243 to 100; in the engineering trades by 213 to 100; and in the printing trades by 246 to 100, or combining all three, the American workman is shown to receive more than 2½ times the money for his work that his British competitor receives. The investigators found further that the proportion of unskilled or semi-skilled labor is greater in America, while what is termed unemployable labor is greater in England.

Rents Higher in America

Passing on to the important question of rents, the basis of comparison was found in houses containing the same number of rooms. Four-roomed dwellings were the only ones found in every city investigated both in England and America. Five-roomed houses were general; three-roomed houses predominated in England; six-roomed houses in America. The investigators found that the American houses, while less permanent in construction as a rule, much roomier and more convenient and they noted that the standerd was improving markedly. For three-roomed dwellings, the rent paid in America exceeded that paid in England by 98 per cent.; for four-roomed houses by 107 per cent.; for five-roomed houses by 120 per cent. and for six-roomed houses by 118 per cent., a mean of 109 per cent. Taken on a basis of rooms, the weekly rent per room in America averages 65 cents as compared with 30 cents in England.

Comparative Costs of Food

In order to institute a comparison that would be instructive it was figured out just what a week's food supply of an average British working man's family would cost in the United States. To compare the purchases of average families in both countries on any other basis would be impossible, because of the different kinds and quantities of food consumed. On this basis is was found that the cost of the average British workingman's at the predominant prices of the two countries would be as 100 to 138, one hundred being the British standard. That is to say, he would have to pay 38% more for identically the same food in America. Conversely were average United States workman to purchase his usual supplies in England, he would get them for twenty per cent. less.

Summing up all these results it may be said that while the cost of food and rent in America is 52% greater than in England, yet wages, being 130% higher, more than off-set the higher cost of living. Further, the margin of income over and above food and rent is so great as to make possible a command of the necessaries and conveniences and more luxuries of life that is both ominally and really greater than that enjoyed by the corresponding class in England.

Sunburnt Whilst Winter Fishing.

Mr. Tom Eastwood, the genial boniface of Buckhorn, was in the city yesterday. He noted that the roads were pretty bad and the pitch holes fierce. Mr. Fastwood's face was quite disfigured by sunburn. Whilst this seems an extraordinary thing at this time of the year, it is an actual fact. He was out fishing for trout on Gull Lake and the sun burnt his face so that all the skin peeled off. Mr. Eastwood was successful in capturing seventy-five mountain trout, running in weight from one pound to five pounds each. They are caught through a hole cut in the ice. Minnows and chub are used for bait.

SUCCESSFUL VIOLINISTS

Kubelik Advises Students on How to Master the Strings

In the opinion of Kubelik, the famous violinist, the standard of violin-playing has steadily risen of late years, which is not surprising when one considers the enormous increase in students from all nations, who for years steadily devote hours daily to mastering the intricacies of the instrument.

Kubelik, however, not only emphasizes the need of earnest, steady work, under the direction of a good teacher, but that the student should procure as good a violin as possible, care being taken that the tone is pleasant to the ear.

"The tone of a violin greatly depends upon its strings," says Kubelik, "and the proper placing of the bridge and sound-post. The sound-post is the little wooden pillar inside the instrument, situated about a quarter of an inch behind the right foot of the bridge. Should the bridge or the sound-post be only slightly out of place, the finest 'Strad' will sound like a three-dollar fiddle.

Watch the Strings

"I would recommend all possessors of violins to have them examined by an expert in order that the best results may be obtained. My experience is that most violins can be improved by paying attention to these details.

"I have known students almost driven to despair and loss of weeks of work in the vain endeavor to produce certain notes with a pure tone, not knowing that the difficulty arose from defects of the instrument, probably the bridge or post, being slightly out of place, or the bad quality of strings.

"It is false economy to play too long without changing strings, as a string after being used for a certain time refuses to respond to the student's intention, and time is lost by unnecessarily repeating a phrase.

"Beginners should commence their studies with a competent teacher, as good progress can only be made on a proper foundation, and bad habits, once acquired, are difficult to eradicate. So commence properly.

Concentrate! Concentrate!

"When practising the mind must be entirely concentrated on the work in hand. If the thoughts are allowed to wander, no good result will follow, and consequently it is not advisable to play too long without a rest.

"When the student feels his brain refuse to grip he must stop at once. Each individual should arrange his studies to suit his physique, and on no account continue his exercises when his brain is tired. I do not expect the 'born-tireds' to take advantage of this rule; my advice is intended for diligent students only.

"I strongly advise all students to attend to physical culture, avoiding exercises which tend to stiffen the wrist and interfere with the flexibility of the fingers."

MERCURY AT COBALT

Provincial Officials are Endeavoring to Discover Ore Combinations

The discovery of mercury in the ore at the Nipissing Mines has led to an investigation by experts of the Bureau of Mines to determine in what combinations of mineral bodies it is found, and as to whether it exists in large enough quantities to make the discovery of commercial importance.

Mercury or quicksilver was found in silver ore at the Silver Inlet Mine, famous many years ago. Some time ago Professor Miller, Provincial Geologist, examined ore at Cobalt to find mercury, but without success. Since the discovery at the Nipissing camp investigations have been resumed. In ordinary ore the mercury runs about four pounds to the ton and in purer ore that resists crushing from twenty to forty pounds to the ton.

Board of Trade Trip Off.

Peterborough may or may not send a representative to England, on the proposed trip, under auspices of the associated Boards of Trade of Ontario. In fact, it looks as though the whole affair is off, as Mr. F. J. Morley, secretary of the associated Boards, has notified Mr. V. Eastwood, President of the Peterborough Board to the effect that the proposed trip to the Old Country will altogether likely be postponed. Lack of sufficient guarantors to the scheme is given as the reason.

WILD DUCK PLENTIFUL

Large Quantities in England and the North of Ireland

Wild duck, which have entirely avoided many inland spots where a few are usually seen at this season, have appeared in very great quantities along some of their seaside haunts, especially on the east coasts of England and the north of Ireland.

The pursuers of the strange sport of punt gunning have had remarkable experiences. Slipping along in their punts at dawn they have come upon flocks so great that a single shot from the great swivel gun, which is almost a cannon, has bagged more than the 'longshore sportsman could get in a week. Fifty and sixty have been killed at a shot, though the manoeuvres of the shot may have taken a week or so.

Numbers of duck again have been killed in the more formal, artificial shoots of Lincolnshire, Bedfordshire, and other places where the birds are now bred almost as scientifically as pheasant.

A sportsman's bird that seems to increase in numbers and to widen its range is the golden plover, of which numbers are now to be seen in the poulterers' shops of the West End. These plover, which are held by some to be the best bird that comes to table, are seen frequently all over the country. They have been observed in swarms over grass fields in the home counties, as well as in their more normal haunts among the wild places of the coast.

Another bird that appeared at one moment in great quantity was the black duck, of which large numbers were shot over the coast of Norfolk from boats. But he is a brave or very hungry man who would dare to face the bird at table.—London Daily Mail.

FREAK SURGERY

The Vital Organs of Animals Transplanted by Americans.

Some remarkable experiments on the grafting of limbs on animals to which they did not originally belong, and the transference of vital organs, such as the kidney, from one animal to another, are reported, says the "Standard" from Harvard University. Most of them have been carried out by Dr. Carrel, under the direction of Dr. E. E. Tyzzer.

His first successful grafting—or, at any rate, the first that he placed on record—was for the benefit of a fox terrier. This he described before the American Philosophical Society. The terrier, owing to an accident, had to have its leg amputated A small dog that had just died was pressed into service. Its leg was removed, and grafted on to the stump of the leg of the living dog. Arteries, veins, and nerves were connected by suitable means, and the bones were placed in juxtaposition. As the bones knit the other tissues grew together, and the [illegible] perfectly [illegible].

But this is only a minor triumph in surgery when compared with those which have come later. From the grafting of limbs Dr. Carrel has moved onward step by step until it would appear that he can transplant and replace almost every organ in the body. He says himself:—

"A dog whose abdominal aorta was replaced by a human femoral artery is still alive in a normal state. The thoracic aorta of another animal was replaced about the same time by a large artery that had been kept several months in cold storage, and the operation was a complete sucess."

In the transplanting of kidneys Dr. Carrel has been attended with the greatest success in the case of cats, and he has said that possibly the results would have been much better in experimenting with dogs if he had used dogs of the same breed. While he has taken organs from one animal and replaced them in another, he has been uniformly fortunate in reversing the kidneys. In this work he has taken a cat, and, removing the kidneys, has replaced the left kidney in the cavity of the right side and the right kidney in the left cavity.

When one thinks of the complex structure of the kidney, with its nerve supply, its three great connecting vessels—vein, artery, and ureter—and its intimate relations with other organs of the body, such operations as these are truly amazing. Their value in the saving and preservation of human life, if such a thing as the renewal of a kidney should be found possible, will be enormous. The removal of a single kidney is a fairly common operation. After it has been performed the patient usually recovers his health, but sometimes in after life the increased demand made on the single remaining kidney may lead to serious trouble.

It is only a month since a wealthy widow, Mrs. Reginald Waldorf, of Philadelphia, offered a small fortune to anyone who would sell her an index finger to be grafted on to the stump whence hers has been removed. It would be curious if such advertisements as this went further, and public requests were made for the supply of kidneys, spleen, or even for a new liver. But it is difficult to see where the organs of which persons only possess one each are to come from.

BANK OF ENGLAND NOTES.

Interesting facts about the inside working of the Bank of England were explained by Mr. Frederick Huth rights of issuing notes, he said, is one of the most important functions of the Bank of England. One rarely sees a dirty Bank of England note. That is because the Bank never reissues a banknote. Even if anyone went into the Bank and demanded a five-pound note in exchange for five sovereigns, and then crossed to another counter and changed the same note back into gold, that note would be destroyed. The system is expensive, but by its means the Bank avoids many of the risks of forgery.

THE SOCIALIST PROPAGANDA.

Not long ago Victor Berger, the only Socialist in the U. S. Congress, was asked how he accounted for the strength of Socialism in Milwaukee. This was the answer: "We put nine-tenths of our income into literature, and every Sunday morning, fifty-two times a year, there are three hundred of our men out at five o'clock putting polyglot pamphlets into the homes of the people. For the Poles we have Polish literature, for the Germans we have pamphlets in German, and so in all the races that make up the population of our city." This helps to explain the rapid growth of the Socialist vote. In reference to this The Christian Guardian says that another fact also should be noted, that before any one can join the order he must certify that he is a reader of the Socialist newspaper. Can the Methodist church not learn something from the Socialist propaganda? Is it not a fact that Methodism is weak just at this point? Our pulpits are ably manned, but they reach, in the main, only those who attend church. What are we doing to reach the non-church goers? Is there not room here for a Methodist and Christian propaganda which would reach tens of thousands of those who never attend church? Surely this field, now largely neglected, would abundantly repay cultivation!

The Ontario Government's estimate of this city's population in 1910 was 12,812; during that year there were 420 births, 197 marriages and 290 deaths.

A QUERY IN COLORS

Dulditch had a new Rugby football club, and the players were fifteen of the lustiest, liveliest lads the village could produce.

The day of their first match duly dawned as per programme; but the jerseys failed to turn up from the outfitters.

As a result of this unforeseen tragedy the players took the field in raiment of many hues rivalling the rainbow. The weak November sunlight showed up the weird colouring, making it appear like an artist's paint-bedaubed palette.

Just before half-time two laborers chanced to stop athwart the hedge, and peered over.

"What is it, Bill?" asked one, in no little amaze. "Is it a football-match of a bag o' mixed chocolates?"

THE TRUTH—THE WHOLE TRUTH

Papa severely: "Did you ask Mamma if you could have that apple?"

Three-year-old: "Yes, papa."

Papa: "Be careful now. I shall ask mamma, and if she says you didn't ask her, I shall whip you for telling a story. Did you ask mamma?"

Three-year-old: "Yes, papa, truly" (a pause). "She said I couldn't have it."

DELIGHTED.

Rosie—Mary Smith was married this morning.

Josie—Who's the happy man?

Rosie—Her father.

A GOOD NIGHT'S REST.

A certain family were preparing to take their annual week's holiday, with the exception of their son named John, who had to work this particular week. His parents gave him strict instructions not to get too late for work, as he was a very sound sleeper.

The family had a fine time at the seaside, and got home again about twelve o'clock noon the following Saturday. They were surprised to find the blinds drawn, exactly as they had left them the Saturday previous.

After a deal of knocking and hammering at the door, the bed-room window was slowly opened, and John, rubbing his eyes, called out:

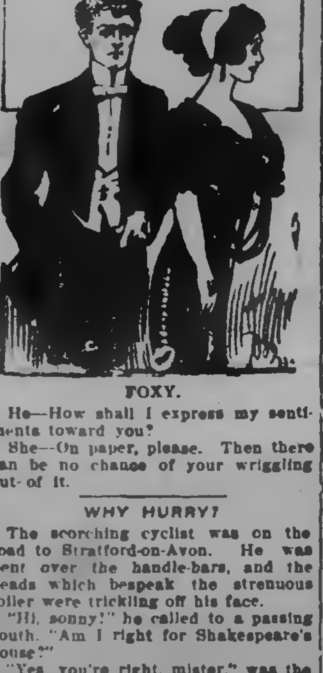
"Hello! What's up? Did you miss the train?"

HIS LONG FALL.

"I see," said Mr. Smart, looking up from his paper, "that a man fell three hundred feet from a chimney, yesterday."

"Was he hurt?" inquired Mrs. Smart.

"Eh? Oh, no," said Mr. Smart sarcastically. "But I believe he complained of a slight headache."



FOXY.

He—How shall I express my sentiments toward you?

She—On paper, please. Then there can be no chance of your wriggling out of it.

WHY HURRY?

The scorching cyclist was on the road to Stratford-on-Avon. He was bent over the handle-bars, and the beads which bespeak the strenuous toiler were trickling off his face.

"Hi, sonny!" he called to a passing youth. "Am I right for Shakespeare's house?"

"Yes, you're right, mister," was the dreamy reply of the leisurely youth; "but you needn't hurry—Shakespeare's dead."

HARDLY.

"Are you a friend of the groom's family?" asked the usher at the church wedding.

"I think not," replied the lady addressed; "I'm the mother of the bride."

THAT LITTLE BIRD.

"Whatever are you doing to the jam cupboard, Teddy?"

"Birdlimin' it."

"What for?"

"Why, to catch that little bird wot's always telling muvver when I goes in it."

LOSING FAITH.

"Why doesn't Jimson call in his family doctor? Has he lost faith in him?"

"No; the family doctor has lost faith in Jimson."

It is understood that the Gordon Davies Co., of Toronto, will open up a store in the premises recently occupied by Mr. S. A. Oke, adjoining the Union Bank.

The Ontario Government has just issued its "Blue Book" relating to births, deaths and marriages for the year ending Dec. 31st, 1910. The County of Peterborough is, therein estimated to have a population of 36,983. There were 930 births, 315 marriages and 500 deaths.

Fortunes in Tea Cups

Did you ever learn to tell fortunes in teacups? Some of you say: "There's nothing in it. It's just foolishness." But that is a mistake. There is any amount of fun wrapped in the weird, uncanny-looking tea leaves, and now that the long, cold days have come and the tea hour seems the cosiest in the day your popularity will be established by enlivening your little tea-parties by telling your friends' fortunes.

Here is the way to do it. Brew the tea in a teapot without a strainer, or put a spoonful of tea in the cup itself and pour the hot water directly upon it. The tea must all be drunk except a few drops, which serve to keep the leaves in circulation. The cup must be whirled around three times, then turned on the saucer three times. Then begins the fortune-reading.

A lover (either man or woman, because sometimes you have "pink" tea parties) is represented by a number of dots in which one figure stands separate.

Two dots side by side mean an engagement.

An offer of marriage is shown by a figure kneeling in the cup.

A group of dots, three in a row, means that the offer will be accepted. Without them the lover has no chance.

Three large dots in the shape of a parallelogram will bear watching. These mean illness, sad news, or loss of money.

Three large dots in triangular shape mean just the contrary—good news, good fortune and good health.

If you are awaiting a letter, the following signs will tell you just what to expect: Four dots in a square tell of an important letter. A dot within the square or just outside means there is something in the letter which you will be glad to hear or something you want to receive, as money, a check, books, etc., small flakes within the square or near it indicates bad news in the epistle.

A long journey is indicated by a long line of dots extending half way around the cup. A group of dots near the terminus of the journey denotes that you will be greeted by a large circle of friends upon your arrival.

If you wish for something very much, indeed, three small dots in a triangular shape bid you hope the wish is about to come true.

Very large dots in a line warn you that many trials are in store for you. If these are mixed with fine dots, you will encounter disagreeable people.

Tears to be shed for one cause or another are represented by drops of tea in the bottom of the cup.

A clean rim to the cup means a quiet, happy, and prosperous existence.

Look out for the leaf that folds over the rim! This means that you are likely to have a stroke of good luck very soon.

The different shapes of the leaves indicate respectively, men, women, and clothes. A long hard leaf shows a man. Small leaves, or even points upon this long leaf, take the form of his silk hat, cane, boots, etc. A woman is shown by a broader leaf or paler shade. She is often distinguished by her wide skirts, her bonnet, parasol, etc.

To ascertain whether or not the man and woman are friends or enemies examine the space about them. If it is filled with tiny dots thickly settled they are enemies. If the space be clear and no dots appear about them they are good friends.

A cross in the teacup means the news of a death.

A group of trees standing separately means that your wish will come true.

And as you become more expert new ideas will come to you. Try it, girls.

To make breadcrumbs quickly, cut the soft part from a stale loaf, put it into a clean muslin bag, tie the bag at the top, and gently rub it with the hands for a few minutes. The crumbs will then be fine enough for anything.

PLEA FOR BOYS IN OUR HOMES

Foster and Develop the Love of Home Which Often Lies Dormant in Boys' Hearts

It is deplorable that all mothers cannot be made to realize how important the atmosphere of a boy's room becomes to him as he grows from boyhood into manhood. They seem to think that anything is good enough for the boys, providing it is dark enough not to show dirt, and sufficiently substantial to stand the wear and tear to which it will be subjected.

Sometimes the furnishings are not even selected for those admirable qualities, but are taken haphazard from the leftovers as occasion seems to demand, and the consequence is that boys are brought up with the idea that their own room is the one place in the home that is utterly void of that personal touch which goes so far toward making "atmosphere." This thought remains permanently fixed in their minds as one of the disagreeable features of their boyhood.

Boys should have an opportunity to exercise their own judgment and taste to a certain extent, because they can always be guided by a tactful mother in order to avoid any glaring blunders, and this would undoubtedly afford great opportunities for the development of any special ideas or natural aptness they may have in decorating and furnishing that would be a great benefit to them in later years.

So many young men seem to be so utterly devoid of any artistic ideas in regard to decoration or furnishing, and possess only a crude conception of what constitutes good taste in such matters. Generally speaking, that phase of a boy's education is greatly neglected. If his surroundings are all that they should be, then his difficulties in that direction are materially lessened. If the circumstances are not so favorable, however, no amount of time or trouble would be wasted in trying to develop their ideas along those lines. They are quite likely to have pronounced ideas in regard to colors and grouping, and, as they grow older, if not corrected, it generally takes the form of a love for brilliant colors, glitter and gauds, and all the impossible combinations that appeal to the uneducated taste.

Many times one sees a young married couple trying to adjust their widely divergent ideas in regard to the furnishing and decorating of their home. The difficulty would have been avoided if the same attention had been paid to the boy's education in furnishing and decorating during his formative years, as has been given to the girl's as a matter of course. Encourage your boys to make a study of good pictures.

Never go into a boy's room and change the position of any articles of furniture to suit your own ideas without first having a consultation with the occupant of the room. There is nothing one can do which will produce a greater feeling of insecurity in regard to one's goods and chattels, than this habit which is so strong in some [illegible] ing that that particular spot is his own inviolate place, where he is small master of all he surveys. Nearly all boys will respond to the feeling of responsibility by an increased manliness and interest in their home life and the proper care of their furnishings.

If it is at all possible, provide a small iron cot in place of a bed. This should be covered with denim or some of the inexpensive cotton stuffs, and, with several prettily covered pillows thrown carelessly around, the result is always pleasing to the boy.

Let us do anything and everything we can to foster and develop the love of home, which very often lies dormant in our boys' hearts. And at the same time we should cultivate their artistic sense in every possible way, while we are educating them in all the cardinal virtues. It is only by giving them a sense of proprietorship in their homes that we may be able to exert the necessary influences over their future lives that is the fondest desire of parents.

Give the boy his own place of refuge, teach him to keep it tasteful and tidy, and this responsibility will engender habits of neatness that will last him all his life. When mother goes to see her boy, let her always tap at the door and ask if she may come in. This little courtesy will teach him that he is also a full-fledged member of the family, with his own interests and privileges, and the result will be the making of a very satisfactory man.—Charlotte Wharton Ayres.

THE VALUE OF LOVE

It Forgives Wrongs Again and Again and Then Again

If you always think sweet thoughts and dwell on love, then you need never fear anything in this world. Begin to practise love. Love will prevent you from making foes whose evil influences may bar your way in life. Love is the key to success, the royal road into the hearts of all. If you want to get on in the world, learn to be good-tempered and to love. If you "get on" without love, you will never really know what happiness is. Make your resolution to-day. "I will not be easily offended, nor proud, nor conceited. I will never actively resent bad treatment, but I will endeavor to be gentle and patient, and try to do good to those who wrong me." Love is patient, gracious, long-suffering, and forgives wrongs again and again.

NEED OF FRESH AIR

The need of fresh air in the home should not be forgotten. This is not meant to apply merely in a physical sense. Widen the interests of the family by reading, by visiting with your neighbors, by taking a trip, if possible, to one of the great cities. Fill the home with fresh air, and fill the life with fresh interest.

DECREASE IN RURAL POPULATION.

A special report on area and population just issued by the Census Office and including details of the township population in 1901 and 1911 settles the facts as to decrease of rural population in old Ontario. In the forty-three counties south of Georgian Bay, that is, in all Ontario excepting Muskoka, Parry Sound, Algoma, Nipissing Thunder Bay and Rainy River, the township population has fallen off in the past ten years 90,885. That is the township decrease, including those living on farms and in unincorporated villages and hamlets. The actual decrease of rural population was much greater because of the considerable but unascertainable overflow of urban population into the townships adjacent to Toronto, Hamilton, London, Brantford, Welland, Windsor, Niagara Falls and other rapidly growing urban municipalities. The rural population of old Ontario fell off at least ten thousand a year during the past ten years.

WHILE YOU WORK AND WHILE YOU SLEEP.

Wage earners make money only while they work. My lot buyers and gardeners make money while they sleep. Those who have bought from me during the past four years have made by increasing value of lots, more than 50 per cent. per annum on the amount invested. And they are worth from $900 to $1900 to-day, because of having wisely imposed a "must" upon themselves to save a little of what they earned. Come in and let us show you a very easy way to do the same.

Gardens: I know one man who planted 1 acre of onions, and sold his crop for $900 cash. Was this not making money while he slept? Mr. Rutherford has two of these orders, one obtained by purchase and the other earned by active service.

Will Improve Baseball Grounds.

At a meeting of the Peterborough Baseball Club, Limited, arrangements were made for the use of Riverside Park for the season. The club has also been given the option of using the park in 1913 and 1914 on the same terms as this year. While the details have not been definitely decided upon, it is altogether likely that a stand will be erected at the northwest corner of the grounds, where the present club house is situated.

Old Citizen Seriously Ill.

Mr. John Benson, one of Peterborough's oldest citizens, a brother-in-law of Mr. Brock, the local jeweller, is dangerously ill. Mr. Brock yesterday evening informed a Times representative that Mr. Benson's demise, owing to his age of about 71 years was expected yesterday. Mr. Benson, who has lived here all his life, used to reside in the house now occupied by Mr. Richard Hall.

A Local Mistake About Gas.

A local citizens yesterday remarked to a Times representative, "I cannot see where Peterborough would suffer so much, in the summer month if the hard (or anthracite) coal miners strike. Why, all we would have to do would be to turn on the gas." Our reporter replied, "Mr. No-all (that's not his name) are you aware that the gas the people of Peterborough have is made from hard coal and steam combined?" Explanations were in order, and the l.c. went to order as many hundred weight (tons not available) as he could procure.

Last night Court Peterborough, No. 29, Canadian Order of Foresters held a meeting in their hall on Simcoe street, which was largely attended. This meeting had been called for the evening of April 5th, but as that happened to be Good Friday, it was feared a number might not be present. At last night's session, Mr. Hugh Robertson, High Chief Ranger, occupied the chair. After routine business was over, the election of six representatives to be sent to the High Court, held in Hamilton, in the second week in June was proceeded with. Arrangements are being made to have a thorough booming of the Canadian Forestry in this city. The meeting then adjourned until the 19th April.

Death of Mr. Parrish Confirmed.

We noted in these columns yesterday, that word had been received here of the death of Mr. Albert Parrish in British Columbia. Mr. John Sadler, of this city, yesterday received a telegram confirming the sad intelligence. Mr. Parrish leaves a bride of twelve months and also an infant child, who resides on Romaine street. Deceased was a machinist by trade and three weeks ago left Peterborough for False Creek, Vancouver, where he secured employment in a mill. It was here that he met his death. The remains will be laid to rest in Vancouver pending the arrival of Mr. Frank Sadler of this city, brother-in-law of the deceased, who left yesterday for the scene of the tragedy. The late Mr. Parrish was a resident of Peterborough for about eight years and was employed at the C.G.E. as a die setter.

Y.W.C.A. Gymnasium Exhibition at Collegiate Institute.

Yesterday evening a good sized audience [illegible] Institute assembly hall. The occasion being the Y.W.C.A. Gymnasium Closing Exhibition. A most instructive and interesting programme was presented. Without making any invidious comparisons, possibly the feature of the evening was the vocal music of Miss Jean Fletcher Ratcliffe, St. Catherines' beautiful soprano singer. Judging by the applause, the song and frolic of the little tots, dressed as Teddy Bears, was highly appreciated. The Swedish Folk Dances by the Seniors was a symphony in motion. The wooden Doll Drill, when the seniors acted the part of stiff-legged and armed dolls, was also capitally presented. However, the whole entertainment was clever and reflected great credit on Miss Ivy Coventry, the physical instructress. The junior class in the Sailor Drill and song, and the intermediate class in their Japanese parasol drill received a hearty greeting. Miss Margarite Burnett gave a violin solo that demonstrated the young lady has a polished technique and the soul of music. Miss Janet Quinn very ably acted as accompanist.

TEARS AS CLEANSERS

Tears have their use, apart from the crying aspect. The eye requires to be kept clear and clean, and tears perform this duty. A striking example of this is shown when the eye is hurt. PSALMS [illegible]

Miss Oldunn suspecting her latest servant of regaling her beau upon cold beef from the pantry, called Betty and inquired whether she did not hear someone downstairs.

"Oh, no, madam," replied the girl readily, "it was only me singing a psalm to amuse myself."

"You may amuse yourself, Betty," replied the maiden lady, "with psalms; but let's have no hims, Betty, no hims, mind you; I have a great objection to hims."

Betty curtsied and withdrew, seriously thinking.

THE EYE LIKE A CAMERA.

The eye is constructed so wonderfully and ingeniously that the handicraft of man has not as yet been able to construct as delicate an instrument. It is like a camera—the lens to focus, the lid as a shutter, the iris or color as the diaphragm, the thick coatings of the eye-ball as the dark room, the nerve as the sensitive plate, and strange as it may seem, the images are bottom side up exactly as the image in the camera. Now so delicate and sensitive an instrument as the eye should have good care. Let us explain more fully to you how to care for the eyes.

ADVERTISED FOR MAN TO THRASH WIFE BEATER AND ONE APPLIED

Seattle, Wash., Mar. 30.—"Wanted—A man to thrash wife beater. Ten dollars reward. Easy work.

(Signed) "Mrs. R. B. Gillies,
116 Nob Hill Ake."

In answer to this advertisement eight men applied for the job. One of them, a husky youth, said it would be a pleasure to do the work for $5. Mrs. Gillies engaged him.

When Robt. Bent Gillier, aged 53, formerly a waterfront broker returned home late in the afternoon, Mrs. Gillies and the youth were waiting for him. Mrs. Gillies telling the story to-day, said the young man's work was so excellent that she compelled him to take the full $10 fee.

The couple have been married ten years. Mrs. Gillies had complained to the Mayor, Chief of Police and prosecuting Attorney without satisfactory results, she said.

BUILDING INSPECTOR CALLED MAN COWARD AND THEN BEAT HIM UP

Calgary, Mar. 30.—After calling him a coward, City Building Inspector Richard Harrison, in the City Commissioner's Office, in the presence of the Mayor and two commissioners at the city hall, yesterday violently attacked Ald. A. J. Samis, punching him on the face and head.

Ald. Samis sat in a chair and crouched behind his hands, covering his face with his hands and hat. He made no effort to defend himself. After punching the Alderman, Harrison left the Commissioner's office and returned in a few minutes and tendered his resignation to the commission, asking it to take effect as soon as a successor could be appointed. Just before leaving the office, after tendering his resignation, Harrison turned to Samis, who was still sitting in the office, and told him if he would come out in the lane he would beat his head off.

Mayor Mitchell, immediately after the assault was committed notified Building Inspector Harrison that he was suspended from office, and afterwards sent to the City Council a recommendation for the dismissal of the Building Inspector.

OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE RACE WILL BE ROWED AGAIN TODAY

Putney, Eng., Mar. 30.—The annual eight-oared rowing contest between crews representing Oxford and Cambridge Universities, which started this morning at Putney Bridge was declared "no race" after both the shells had become waterlogged. Ideal weather prevailed for the race. Oxford won on the toss and chose the Surrey shore. The race started at 11.40 o'clock. Cambridge abandoned the race at Harrodstores. The Oxford boat was sunk off Chiswick Eyot. The Oxford crew righted their boat and completed the course.

WHY ULSTER OPPOSES HOME RULE

The Literary Digest Says That a Civil War Will Assuredly Result

The Literary Digest in a recent issue, says that though no riot broke out when Winston Churchill braved the Orangemen of Ulster and spoke for Home Rule in the city of its foes, yet many who know the ardent nature of the people freely predict that when Home Rule comes, and the Catholic majority in Ireland begin to make laws for the Presbyterian minority, broken heads will be common enough. The prediction may be wrong; Catholic and Protestant may surprise each other by their sweet reasonableness and moderation; but just at present there are extreme Presbyterians who aver that any serious attempt to impose Catholic rule on the Orangemen of Belfast will provoke a religious war, always the bitterest of internecine struggles. One of these prophets is Mr. L. Cope Cornford, whose words in the National Review (London) are worth quoting as an example of alarmist feeling in North Ireland. Here is what he says:

"The real evil, as every Irishman knows to his bitter cost, is that religious intolerance is habitually and rigidly exercised against Roman Catholics by the Roman Catholic priesthood. The Irish Roman Catholic is the slave of the priest. That he should be taught this religious dogma or that, is another affair with which no one need interfere. But the priest claims all. He claims the body and the soul and the goods of his people, and enforces his claim with threats of grievous physical ill in this world and the fires of purgatory in the next. No man can marry with permission of the priest. If he takes to wife a Protestant, the Church, under the Ne Temere decree, declares the marriage null and void, and the children of it are denounced as bastards. No man can buy or sell or hold a farm but by leave of the priest. No man dare vote but as the priest directs. No man can save a penny more than the priest will spare him, unless the poor wretch hoards in secret. There is not an honest man who knows what Ireland is to-day who will not vouch for the absolute truth of every one of these statements.

"Now, if Ireland were wholly Roman Catholic, to confer Home Rule upon her would be virtually to confer the power of civil governance upon the Roman Catholic priesthood, but as about one-fourth of the population is Protestant, the effect of granting Home Rule to Ireland would be to place the Protestant minority at the mercy of a Roman Catholic majority. Hence the outbreak of civil war will instantly follow upon the institution of an Irish Government. Amid the shadow-dance of politics, the vacillations, whisperings intrigues, boasting, complaints, false promises and confusions that have stupefied the browbeaten British public, there has been at least one real thing, and its name is Ulster. There are (let us say) two hundred thousand or so resolute men in Northeast Ulster who have made a last stand against the betrayal by consent which has been so smoothly proceeding during the last five years."

MR. BAILEY'S GOOD ADVICE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—When the emigrants are brought out they won't require houses; they can use—tents, which can be erected on a hill, where they will be able to get out without getting so wet, as it is impossible to avoid in some parts of the city. The police officials, instead of holding up respectable citizens, if they ever do go away from the hotels, might have a look at the streets.

COLLAPSE OF TOWER

Nauen, Germany, Mar. 30.—A terrific storm caused the collapse this morning of the great skeleton tower 656 feet high, belonging to the German wireless station here. There were no casualties.

The tower was recently doubled in height, and apart from the Eiffel tower in Paris, was the highest steel skeleton tower in the world. A new plant was recently provided at the station by means of which it was expected that communication would be made with the stations in America.

NEW WITNESS DISCOVERED IN THE BERGER MURDER MYSTERY

Toronto, Mar. 30.—As a result of the investigation which the detectives are pursuing into the murder mystery in the Ward, when Rebecca Berger was fatally shot by an unknown assassin, several new witnesses will be heard at the adjourned coroner's inquiry at the Morgue on Tuesday.

It is said that their evidence will differ materially from that of Mrs. Cohen, the landlady at the house at 160 Chestnut street, who is at present held by the authorities as a witness.

To the police, Mrs. Cohen positively stated that there had been no row in the house previous to the tragedy.

Contradicted by Others.

This will be contradicted by the witnesses, both of whom are near neighbors, who, it is said, will state that they heard the sounds of a scuffle some little time before the shooting took place.

According to the information received this morning, the Cohen woman was on hand when this fracas occurred, and is alleged to have shouted out in Yiddish: "If I had a club I would brain him."

It is believed that the murderer had an altercation with his victim prior to the tragedy, the dispute arising over money.

The description of the murderer is very meagre. He is said to have been a man about 5 feet 5 inches in height, and looked like an Italian.

FENIAN RAID VETERANS ON THE PETERBOROUGH LISTS

Those Still Alive Are Entitled to the $100 Grant of the Dominion Government

Hon. Col. Sam. Hughes, since his appointment to the important portfolio of Minister of Militia, has recognized, as a soldier, what is due to a soldier. His recent action in giving a grant of $100.00 to each of the Fenian Raid Veterans will meet with universal approval throughout all Canada. The men, or those of them now alive, who left their homes to repel the Yankee invaders will now get a tangible, if small, recognition of their services. Peterborough has a number of these veterans. It will be remembered that on March 6th, 1900, medals were presented here by Hon. Mr. Borden to Fenian Raid Veterans. Those of the Peterborough Veterans' Association receiving medals were: Messrs. A. P. Poussette, Q.C., now living in Toronto, J. B. McWilliams and J. D. Collins. On the senior officers of the local com [illegible] Rogers, now in British Columbia.

Among the local veterans then on the list, which death has sadly shortened were Messrs. W. McNeil, H. Nesbitt, Jos. Peacock, T. Rutherford, John Sawers, G. Stenton, R. W. Thompson, J. Alexander, W. Le Pas, N.W., April 1.—Mgr. Charlebois, Bishop of Keewatin, presided at a meeting in the convention attended by many prominent Catholics in the Northwest. After discussing the school situation they organized an association to be known as the Catholic Committee to Provide Separate Schools. Delegates were sent at once to Ottawa to lodge a protest.

GIRL GIVES CARBOLIC ACID FOR CASTOR OIL

Hartford, Mar. 30.—Five minutes after he had asked his niece to bring him a bottle of castor oil Edward F. Burns, thirty-four years old, was writhing in the agonies of carbolic acid poisoning, and half an hour later he died.

Nellie Burns, seventeen years old, who gave the poison to her uncle, apparently mistook carbolic acid for castor oil, because of the similarity of the first part of the labels. In his hurry to take the medicine Burns poured out the contents of the bottle handed him without lighting a light to look at the label.

When his screams aroused the rest of the household they found his lips seared and though the automobile police ambulance arrived quickly he died on the way to the hospital.

SMALL BOY HIT BY CAR

Toronto, Mar. 30.—Frank Taylor, a little boy of about six or eight years of age, was knocked down by a Harbord street car at the corner of Harbord and Ossington about 9.30 this morning.

The little fellow was dragged along by the fender before the car came to a standstill. His injuries, as far as could be seen, however, were bruises about the body and a few cuts. The motorman of the car says that the boy attempted to cross the road and then hesitated, the fender of the car striking him.

After being attended by a doctor, the lad was taken to his home in Ossington avenue.

FISH FRY WILL BE SENT HERE

Local Member Arranges With Marine Department

WILL BRING TOURISTS

Local Member Arranges With Marine Department—Will Bring Tourists—Our Northern Lakes and the River Otonabee to Have Game Fish Fry Deposited Therein From Year to Year.

Our beautiful chain of lakes on the Kawartha system is the means of bringing many tourists here, and tourists mean money spent. Unfortunately of late years, the bass and maskinonge in Stony Lake, Clear Lake, Rice Lake, Deer Bay, Lovesick Lake and the Otonabee River have shown marked signs of being greatly fished out. This would eventually mean a marked decrease in the number of tourists here as well as of the pleasure enjoyed by local sportsmen. Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has fortunately arranged with the Dominion Fish Hatcheries through the Department of Marine and Fisheries to have fish fry deposited, from year to year, as far as possible in the lakes north of Peterborough, and in the river Otonabee. This re-stocking of our local waters will mean a big thing for the community.

DEFYING THE ROMAN CHURCH

Quebec Government is Reported to Have Rejected Demands of Heirarchy

Montreal, April 1.—It is being whispered [illegible] political circles here that the Liberal [illegible] definitely told the Roman Catholic hierarchy that it will have nothing to do with the proposition said to have been made to it to act as the instrument of the Church.

The statement is made that the Gouin Administration was squarely confronted with the alternatives of accepting the authority of the bishops or of going down to defeat at the hands of the ultramontaines at the forthcoming general election.

A meeting of the Cabinet is said to have been held, at which, after long discussion, it was decided to keep the Government from the tutelage of Rome, and to play the game of politics entirely apart from religion. Sir Lomer Gouin, it is declared, then told the representative of the ultramontaine element that the Government would have nothing to do with their proposition, and while expressing the hope that the Church authorities would reconsider their position, and decide not to interfere with the State matters, practically dared them to do their worst, declaring that he had faith enough in the spirit of the people to feel justified in adopting the same course as Sir Wilfrid Laurier had adopted in his relations with the Church.

As a result of the firmness displayed by the Premier, many influential Conservatives are throwing their whole weight on the side of the Liberal Government, and it is an open secret already that a certain titled Montreal financier, who is a man of great political influence in Quebec district, is using every means at his disposal to counteract the influence of Armande Lavergne, M.P.P., in that region.

Sentenced Boy to Three Years

Montreal, Mar. 30.—"No such term should ever have been given," said Mr. Justice Lavergne in quashing the three year sentence imposed on Louis Rosenberger, a young boy, for stealing three newspapers valued at six cents.

MURDERER MAKES ESCAPE FROM PENITENTIARY AT KINGSTON

Kingston, Mar. 30.—Penitentiary guards and constables are scouring the district for a life sentence prisoner named Chartrand, who escaped from his cell in the insane ward at two o'clock this morning after sawing through three sets of bars. The prison staff are amazed at his escape for it must have taken him a long time to prepare the bars for snapping off. Five years ago Chartrand escaped in the same way, and declared when caught, two weeks afterwards, at Mallorytown, that he would get away again. He is a murderer, but was held irresponsible, and sentenced to life imprisonment. There are too few guards at the penitentiary, the staff being under ordinary strength at present. The Warden has offered a reward of $5 for his apprehension.

CALLED MEMBER OF COMMITTEE BY NAME SPECTACLED JACKASS

Ottawa, Mar. 30.—There was a pretty row in Public Accounts Committee this morning when D. D. McKenzie, Cape Breton, told E. N. Rhodes that he would not sit down for "any spectacled jackass." Every member of the Committee who wore spectacles objected. McKenzie claimed that he was not referring to Rhodes, but to Hugh Clark, of Bruce who had not opened his mouth. McKenzie finally apologized.

The row developed during the hearing of testimony from W. Morrison, of Montreal, one of the directors of who testified he knew nothing about the Diamond Light and Heating Co., where the $42,000 given to Miller for alleged influencing of politicians to get business went to.

R. C. Miller, president of the company, failed to answer his summons and will be reported to the House.

WERE APPROPRIATIONS DENIED ON ACCOUNT OF LIBERAL MEMBER

Toronto, Mar. 30.—Mr. Z. Mageau, who industriously represents his riding of Sturgeon Falls in the Legislature, stood before the House yesterday afternoon, his whole attitude expressed by a large question mark.

Mr. Mageau wanted to know. He wanted to know why, as he claimed, Sturgeon Falls had received in the estimates no grants for bridges, while the neighboring districts of Nipissing, Parry Sound and Sudbury were counted in the estimates. He wanted to know whether the lack of appropriations was because his people had sent down a Liberal member in protest to the policy of the Government.

WOMEN CHAUFFEURS FOR CHICAGO, BECAUSE

The Men Are Impertinent, Overcharge for Their Own Benifit, Are Reckless in Driving and Inattentive to the Company's Interests

Chicago, Ill., Mar. 30.—The "chauffeuse" is what Chicago will have in the coming by and by when twenty women are preparing to pass city examinations will be employed by the biggest taxicab company in the city. John Hertz, manager of the Shaw taxi concern, said that one young woman, Miss Julia Sullivan, who has been working in the shops for a month preparing herself, will be the first chauffeuse to go to work.

He expressed confidence that the innovation will eliminate many of the objections to the man-driven cars Among these are:

Impertinence to customers.

Overcharging for their own benefit.

Recklessness and fast driving.

Inattention to the company's interests.

"We are having a hard time with auto drivers," said Mr. Hertz, "We are not going to employ women entirely. All the night driving will still be done by men, but our idea is to station women at the big department stores and hotels, where the majority of customers are women."

Miss Sullivan said she could hardly wait until she was a licensed chauffeur.

"This line of work is something new for women in this country, but it will become common within a few years," she said. "It is a fine healthy outdoor life. The pay is also much better than most women can earn in most other lines. I have been studying hard in the last month and I know every piece of mechanism."

After the women are licensed they will be given lessons in repair in the shops.

BIG OCEAN PIER BURNED

Atlantic City, N.J., Mar. 30.—Young's Ocean Pier, one of the biggest features along the sea front of this resort, was destroyed by fire today. One of the firemen who fell through a roof, was seriously injured.

The pier was 2,500 feet long. The whole structure, with the exception of about 150 feet at the shore end, was completely destroyed. The loss is estimated at $250,000 and is only partially covered by insurance. The fire was one of the most spectacular in this city in years, and created tremendous excitement among guests of the many hotels in the vicinity. Fortunately the wind was off shore, and prevented the flames from creeping toward the board walk and spreading to the big hotels and other buildings that form a solid line along the ocean front.

The flames were discovered shortly after midnight, or about an hour after a vaudeville performance in the theatre on the pier came to a close. The fire started in one of the dressing rooms, and was probably caused by a lighted cigarette or crossed electric light wires.

THE WEATHER.

Not much change in temperature.

SNATCHED A WATCH

Nine Months' Term for Man Who Broke Windows

Toronto, Mar. 30.—When Arthur Jones went to visit a friend staying in the house of A. J. Rattery, he snatched a watch from a seven-year-old boy. He was later taken by Acting Detective Wickett at a hotel spending the proceeds of the sale. A fully loaded pistol was found in his possession, so Magistrate Kingsford remarked: "A dangerous man. You will be put out of the way for six months."

Joseph Costigan's conduct appeared to warrant a long term. For the second time within two months he has hurled bricks through windows. The sufferer this time was Wm. Wright, hotelman, at 393 King east.

"Nine months."

"I'll break somebody's nose when I come out," Costigan threw back.

A MODEL HUSBAND.

He had been married just a year, and one day strolled into his office grinning all over his face and whistling.

"What is the matter with you?" asked his colleague.

"Matter? Why when I left home this morning my wife said: 'Dear, you are a model husband.'"

"Well, that is not much of a compliment," said his partner.

"I should like to know why not?" stated the young husband.

"Well, take my advice, and look up the English Dictionary, and note what the word 'Model' means."

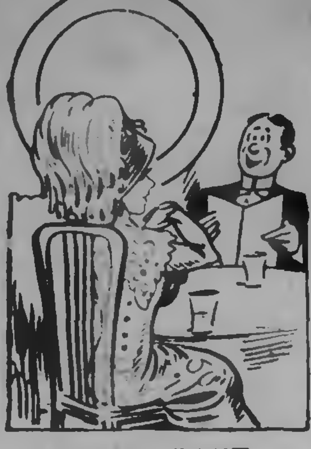
The young husband did so, and this is what came to his gaze, and dampened his feelings:

"Model, a small pattern, a miniature of something on a larger scale."

INSULTING.

Lawyer: "What! You a doctor? Why, you couldn't cure a ham!"

Doctor: "And you, sir, you could not try a case of cheese!"



NOT THE ONLY ONE.

She—But suppose I sue you for breach of promise?

He—You'd better not or you'll get crushed in the mob!

TOO MANY COLLECTIONS

A Scot, paying a visit to London, was taken by his nephew to a service in St. Paul's Cathedral. He had no acquaintance with the Liturgy of the Church of England. He picked up a prayer-book and became very interested, but as he turned over the leaves his face became clouded with a look of intense anxiety.

He placed the prayer-book carefully down, looked cautiously round, picked up his hat, and crept stealthily to the door.

His nephew followed him, and said. "Are you ill, uncle? What is the matter?"

The uncle replied. "No, but it is enough to make any man ill, the number of collections made in this kirk!"

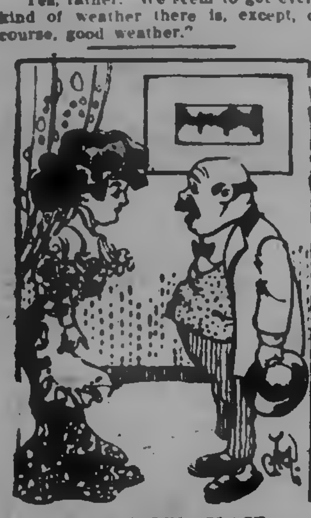
"Collections?" said the nephew in surprise. "If there is any at all there [illegible]"

"Well," replied the uncle, "[illegible] in the book. There's naething but 'collect' and a bit of prayer, then 'collect' again, and say I to masel, 'I'll bide here until all these collections are taken, I'll no has a bawbee left in ma pocket.'"

CHANGEABLE CLIMATE

"The English climate is rather changeable."

"Yes, rather. We seem to get every kind of weather there is, except, of course, good weather."



HIS STOPPING PLACE.

"Is Mr. Staylate at home?"

"Yes, sir; you'll find him at the

A TIP TO BUSINESSLIKE FARMERS

A motor-car had just reached a nice level stretch of road, and the man in the goggles was preparing for a scorch, when an honest-eyed old farmer stepped from the hillside, and held up his hand.

"Reckon you was jest going to slip along tidy fast," he said.

The motorist seemed angry for having been stopped, and wanted to know why he had stopped him. The old farmer replied:

"Look through these 'ere glasses of mine, and then perhaps you will change your mind."

The motorist looked through the glasses, and beheld a policeman on the branch of a tree.

"Great Scott!" he said; "it's nothing but a police-trap. Thanks, old friend." And the clink of coins was heard.

A minute later he went crawling past the tree at six miles per hour, gotten gains, remarked:

"That idea of carting the scarecrow from the pea-field and fixing it to the tree wern't so bad."

IN THE DARK.

"Before I propose, Miss Plainer, I must know if you have anything in the bank?"

"Yes, Mr. Hunter. I have a sweetheart there; he's the manager. We are to be married next month."

Mrs. H. I. Fairweather's Recovery.

Mrs. H. I. Fairweather, daughter of Mr. R. B. Rogers, C.E., who is visiting at Sussex, N.B., and who has been ill, is convalescent. Her baby, who has been ill, is also better, and is to be christened next Sunday. In view of Mrs. Fairweather's recent bereavement by the sad drowning of her husband, her many friends here will be particularly rejoiced to hear of her convalescence.

THE WOODBINE

A $10,000 Plate With 100 Entries is Predicted ere Long

Entries for the King's Plate this year will probably run about the same in number as last year, but there is every reason to anticipate next season the beginning of an increase that will bring the number of nominations to a hundred before many years have passed. Now that two-year-old winners are eligible and the value of the Plate is mounting, and the position of the turf in Canada becoming unassailable, we may look for a $10,000 Plate, with a hundred entries. I have already come across several men who have no horses, but who are in the market for Province-bred yearlings, which they would race next season, and put in the Plate the following year. The value of horses foaled in Canada is bound to be vastly added to by the enlarged opportunities offered them. Coming back to the race to be run on the 18th of May—not far away, in spite of all the snow now on the ground—two owners who were not interested last year are likely to figure largely in the outcome. Up at Barrie the Dyment stable shelters four or five elegibles, from which Trainer John Nixon will probably make Heresy and Tropaeolium his choice. Either one would be good enough for most owners to have in the Plate. The other owner not altogether a new-comer to the guineas, but one whose first serious attempt is now being made, is Mr. Charles Crew of the Half-way House, on the Kingston Road. His jacket will be carried by the three-year-old filly Amberite, by Martimas-Lyddite. A full sister to Shimonese and Powderman, she is better furnished and more forward than either of these at the same age. Her work last fall was perhaps not as fast as anticipated, but it was not her limit, and she was always master of her workmate. The very useful Kilo, which won the Quebec King's Plate for Mr. Kenneth Dawes, and followed that up by a vitcory in a selling race from which he went to the Crew stable. One would expect to find Amberite in the Valley Farm stable, and the fact that she is not is one evidence of the bona fides of the annual public sales of the Valley Farm stock. The filly was bid up to $1,000 for the racing stable, which was, and is, quite distinct from breeding interest, and there Col. Hendrie stopped. That was the limit, but Charlie Crew was willing to go still higher. He bid 1,050, and became the owner of a very likely winner of a richer King's Plate than any yet run. It will not be an unpopular victory, you may be sure, if the King's uncle has this year to present the guineas to a man who had pluck enough to pay the record price for a Province-bred yearling—The Globe.
